Grandstand Concession Sells for $950

Sam Seidel, of Salisbury, bought the grandstand concession for the Kent & Sussex Fair, at auction Saturday afternoon for $950. Other concessions sold at an average approximately $175. The grandstand concession sold higher than it did last year, but other concessions sold lower, possibly a reflection of the economic situation. The latter concessions were sold to Harry Fluerer, of Ocean City; Walter Paskey, Harry Morris, Tony Gerardi, and Vernon Hurd, all of Harrington, and East

The Home of R. H. Stafford & Son in the Twenties

This scene brings back poignant memories of days gone by, before the days of the combine, when the binder was the chief harvesting implement for small grains and barefoot boys got sore feet while walking across the stubblefields to carry jugs of water to thirsty men shocking the grain under a blazing sun. Leaning against the porch post is Henry Stafford, senior member and founder of the R. H. Stafford & Son. On his left, on the binder, is the late Billy Satterfield who worked for Stafford until his (Satterfield's) death. Sitting in the car is Charles "Punkin" Harvey. The man on the wagon is unidentified. So is the setter snoozing in the dirt road.

Sandtown Lovebird Finds Freedom Is Costly

"Missy," the lovebird of Mrs. Ruth Terry, of Wilmington, has found, too late, that even freedom has its bonds.

The month-old pet was recently on a Sunday, sent to Sandtown to the James N. Carroll home where it was kept in the kitchen with an older bird. When someone opened the screen door, the young bird escaped. The older, and wiser, lovebird, stayed where there was plenty of provender.

Carrol spied the errant pet up tree the following day, but could not catch it. Wes Melvin eaught it near his barn, two miles away, Tuesday noon and put it in nours later it was dead.

Having learned to depend on man for its food, it had not learned to forage and had starved in the midst of plenty. Man could take a lesson from this tragedy.

Los Angeles bakers are striking for a 35-hour week. Some of these boys are going to "kill the goose that laid the golden egg."

The population increase in Harrington in ten years is 134. Need we say more?

While we were going 50 miles per hour, on the way to Dover the other day, we passed a truck headed in the same direction.

In a seven-car accident at Greenwood last week, three of the vehicles were trucks and two were police cars. We And over all a sable vulture circles believe it is time police were cracking down on speeding trucks. Get on the highway, anytime, day or night, and one will observe that most trucks break the speed limit. Buses take a lot of privileges, too.

The New Jersey Motor Truck Association is setting an example well worth emulating by truck associations everywhere. The group has a 24-hour safety patrol to report improper driving by truckers and to help all motorists.

Barclay W. Fox, president of the association, explained why the program was launched: "There is a definite feeling against the truck industry because of the driving habits of a very small percentage of truck drivers, many of them from outside New Jersey."

Fox said the drivers will "cooperate at all times with state police, motor vehicle inspectors ,and other law enforcement authorities, offering assistance when desired and controlling emergencies when regular authorities are not immediately available."

They will be equipped with day and night warning signals, first aid kits, blankets, fire extinguishers, flares, and eventually with radios.

"Wunderbar." And, speaking of fire extinguishers, do you remember when automobiles carried them on running-

If the state police want to see some real speeding, let them get on 113 and pick up some of the trucks of a certain poultry processing company in Sussex County. Maryland police should trail some of the trucks of Maryland lines after they disembark at Matapeake from the last ferry in early morning.

WE HAVE THE HOTEL

This column does not agree with an editorial in last week's issue of the Harrington Journal.

The editorial stresses the fact that Dover is trying to promote a new hotel to take care of the ever-increasing travel down the peninsula, and suggests that Harrington beat Dover to the punch by erecting a new hotel on the highway adjacent to our town. Harrington has a hotel on the highway at the entrance to the town, and it is the best hotel between Wilmington and Salisbury. It is spotless and shining and there is no cleaner hotel-or private residence, for that matter-in America today. The Swain Hotel is patronized by many commercial travelers who make it their headquarters while working up and down the shore. They work as far down as the Maryland line, but return here for the night, just as they have been doing for years. They like its neatness and the friendly, homey atmosphere. True, as the editorial states, frequently the hotel is filled to capacity and must turn prospective customers away. This alone attests the excellence of the hostlery, for not many hotels of this size, in towns of this size, can boast of such a generous patronage. When customers are turned away, as they are occasionally, they are sent to tourists' homes on nearby streets and Harrington loses nothing by the transaction.

Some of the leading newspapers of the United Stateswe say "some of them" because the Harrington Journal did not receive such an invitation—were asked to name the headlines they would like to print. If we had been asked to join the group, we would have submitted: "Westbrook Pegler Reforms" and "Arthur Godfrey Goes To Work in Livery Stable at Salary of Eight Dollars Per Week."

The jungle is matting the ground and reaching toward the sky on the lot on the north side of Clark Street where it crosses Route 13. We suggest to the City Council that it erect signs on the said lot: "Beware-Lair of The Royal Bengal Tiger."

We were in the Great Smoky Mountains of Tennessee and North Carolina about ten days ago. Descending from an altitude of six thousand feet, we came to the Cherokee Indian Reservation at Cherokee, North Carolina. We were impressed by the soft voices of the people in the restaurant there. No raucous, strident, shrieking voices, but subdued voices, soft as Memnon's lute across the years. Why can't all people talk this way, we pondered. Foghorn voices are responsible for half the jaded nerves of the world. Within a few minutes the voices increased in volume and in about eight or ten minutes, as soon as our ears had shaken off the effects of high altitudes, some fellow was shoutinglater we learned that he was worth $200,000,000—the glories of free enterprise.

Transfer printing on china, she says, was in early use from about 1757 to 1850, whereby designs were engraved on copper and impressions made on tissue paper with prepared paints mixed with oil, and transfered to the pottery.

To The Correspondents

Well, last week we had in 22 letters from 25 correspondents. We believe that is a high batting average in any league.

We would like to get more farm news. Give names and places and mention details. The little things are oftentimes the big

The Colon

Use a colon (1) before a quotation several paragraphs in lengths; (2) before a quotation, however short, when formality is desired; (3) before a series or numbered list of ralted items.

Use a colon between chapter and verse in scriptual references. "Matthew 2:15-13."

Use the colon in giving time, as "7:30 a. m."

In general, use the colon in introducing matter with "the following, as follows," and similar

The Apostrophe

If a noun (either singular or plural) does not end in "s," form its possessive case by adding apostrophe and "s, as in the girl's hat, the children's hats." If a noun ends in "s," form its possessive by adding the apostrophe only, as in "the girls' hats, James' hat, Farmers' Week.'

Observe the use of the apostrophe in "don't, doesn't haven't, I've, 'tis, can't," etc. The apostrophe takes the place of the elided, or omitted, letter or letters. The apostrophe is never used in the possessive pronuon "hers, its, yours, theirs. It's "means it is." Use the aposthrophe in forming the plural of letters, as "the three R's and i's in a font of type." Do not use the apostrophe with figures, as 5s or 3½s, (as in referring to bonds bearing 5 per cent or 5½ per cent interest).

No Late Blight Yet, Says Tarbell

To date no late blight of tomatoes or potatoes has made its appearance in Kent County states William E. Tarbell, county agent. However, this disease has been reported as present in Maryland, Pennsylvania, Virginia, and New Jersey. The presence of the late blight in these states should serve as a warning to Kent County tomato and potato growers that sooner or later it will appear here. All growers should watch their fields closely for the appearance in their fields and should begin spraying or dusting for its con-

The present weather with cool damp nights coupled with warm humid days is ideal for the development of the late blight.

A spray or dust application now before it does appear in the county may be good insurance against the attack latter.

Spray with: Parzate or Dithane Z-78. Two lbs. per 100 gallons of water. Apply at the rate of 75 to 175 gallons per acre depending on
