Better Eating . . . Easier Living

DURING the height of the gardening season and at butchering time, no one sets a better table than the American farmer. Fondly remembered garden-fresh corn and peas during the summer, and fresh tender pork at killing time can now be year-round experience in eating enjoyment.

The Southern States 30 cu. ft. Farm Freezer has capacity to handle farm produce for everyday convenience and economy. It will store at one time 1/2 steer, 1 pig, 1 calf, 24 fowl and 200 quarts of fruit and vegetables. And no more canning drudgery. Walk-in style doors for convenience and minimum floor space coverage. Economical operation . . . 30 cu. ft. of freezing space, 30 cu. ft. of insulation. Direct, rapid contact freezing on three upper shelves.

Also available in 15 cu. ft. size. See us now for further details and place your order.

We doubt that the term can be applied to any town in one-horse town.

temper. Retribution will come his way-and right here on moments she spent with you." earth. Recently we were in a town we hadn't visited in fifteen years. We recalled that a loud-mouthed roughneck used to live there, one who openly boasted: "When I get drunk, I don't care what I say to anybody-to ANYBODY!" Through curiosity, we asked about this creature. "Hadn't like a rotten persimmon as Gillilan told me this story, and you heard about him?" replied one of our acquaintances. "He doesn't live here any more-in fact, he doesn't live any- | from the waters dead fish. where any more."

It might be good to limit congressmen and senators to one term, like they do governors in some states—until the party in power changes the system and elects a governor for two consecutive terms. Then, we believe, the lawmakers would be a little more conscientious. Under the present system, as soon as they are elected, many of them devote their time to only one object, getting re-elected.

People in Wilmington keep writing to the papers, com plaining that the representative allotment in Delaware is un just. They can't understand why a densely populated dis trict in Wilmington is permitted only one state senator while a district in Kent or Sussex with probably one-fifth the population of the Wilmington district is permitted the same representation. It does seem unfair-until we remember that Delaware, with a population of something like 300,000, has as many United States Senators as a state with time. a population of 10,000,000.

HAUTEUR

Years ago people managed to get along with each other. They were courteous, they were polite, they were neigh borly.

Then there came the era of high pressure salesmen, the era of sudden fortunes, and Mr. and Mrs. Newrich, with inexperienced fingers, grasped the slippery rungs of the ladders to social prestige. The lorgnette was in the hands where the frying pan used to be.

It was considered polite to snub. Jaded nerves became then, in an equally flourishing hand, registered: "John J McGraw-and Valise!' more jaded. The haughty shrug succeeded the courtly bow.

Aloofness became exclusiveness—and the world was on its POLITICALLY INDEPENDENT? way to perdition.

We spent an unforgettable day down at Ocean City two years ago with Strickland Gillilan, and in our book Strick is the peer of any poet, humorist and after-dinner speaker living today. He told us of his seventeen-year-old daughter, a worshipper of the genius of Rudyard Kipling.

This was, and is, unusual, because Kipling is supposed to be appreciated only by people of mature years.

Strick was preparing to take his family on a trip to England, and he asked Frank Page, of the publishing firm of Doubleday & Page, Kipling's representatives in the United States, for Kipling's address. "Oh, my gosh," or its equivalent, "you've asked me something. If we give that bird's address to anyone, he cancels his contract with us."

Just the same, Gillilan, in some way, managed to wangle the address of the great Kipling, and sent him a letter. It went something like this: "My daughter would like to meet Delaware, but certainly Harrington can never be called a you. She has no parlor tricks. She will not ask you to listen to her recite. She will not read any of her essays or poems. Starry-eyed, she will listen to you and treading on When some rude person offends you, try to keep your air, will cherish as long as life lasts, the memory of the few

-for his daughter's sake, sent another letter. No answer.

Rudyard Kipling, great genius though he was, shriveled circling gulls, skimming the waves at Ocean City, plucked

Then I realized why Kipling never became the Poet Poets Laureate-Alfred Tennyson, Alfred Austin and Alfred Noyes. Greater than any of them save Tennyson, Kipof Windsor."

probably the most arrogant man of letters America has produced, the highly conceited yet immeasurably gifted Richard Harding Davis. The greatest war correspondent of his to the old Colonel-probably someone who had beaten him time, as well as one of its outstanding playrights, he was in a hoss race—and the Kernel bolted the convention! hauteur on a hilltop. We were introduced by Clark Mc-Adams in the offices of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. The great Richard Harding Davis glanced at us-and never saw us; the great J. Harvey Burgess glanced at him-and has never been able to see Richard Harding Davis since that I'd vote for a yellow dog if you nominated him on the

However, Davis got his "come-uppance" a few years later when a short, chubby, fighting newspaper man by the name of John McGraw was sent to Washington by the Kansas City Star. McGraw had picked up his pen to register. With pen poised, McGraw was talking to the clerk when Richard Harding Davis, followed by a coffee-colored Filipino valet, entered the hotel. Without saying "By your leave" or 'Pardon me," he took the pen from McGraw's hand and registered, in a flourishing hand, "Richard Harding Davis and Valet."

The diminutive McGraw glanced at the register and

There are millions of independent voters in the United States today-but they do not talk about it. They figure that it's their own business—and they just vote that way.

Many newspapers claim to be independent — and they I would I were beside the sea, are—in the slogans at their mastheads—but not otherwise. It isn't necessary for a newspaper to proclaim it's political With all the things I've got independence. Its readers know its political leanings.

A lot of people, and a lot of newspapers—the vociferous kind in both packages—really believe they are independent. "All shouting is a transitory thing," said Joseph Conrad, and With all the things I've got to do shouters, being emotionally unstable, are switchers. Many people forget heredity, environment and a lot of other elements; they forget that their opinions are tinged, even swayed, by conditions and shifts of fate of whose existence they are not aware. Many, many times, someone who lived long years ago tells you how to vote.

William Jennings Bryan was nominated for the presidency on three occasions. As a prohibition crusader, he was far ahead of Neal Dow or John B. Gough-and much stronger and saner than cracked Carrie Nation. Prohibition units all over the nation endorsed Bryan's candidacy-yet many members of those units voted for Bryan's opponents, No answer came, and Strick, proud Irishman that he is because Bryan was a Democrat. They were prohibitionists -with reservations; they were prohibitionists in a minor degree and Republicans in a major degree.

> "I'll never scratch a Dimmycratic ticket," we've heard fellows yell-but they did scratch Al Smith. They were Democrats-but opposed to Catholocism-and Al was a Catholic.

There's the Irvin S. Cobb story, and it illustrates the Laureate of England. There was a succession of Alfreds as fact that all parties should nominate good men: A typical Kentucky Colonel had proclaimed to the Democratic Convention: "I am a Dimmycrat. Nominate a vellow dog on the ling lost his chance when he wrote a cynical, slurring poem Dimmycratic ticket and I will vote for him." Shouts of about Queen Victoria, to whom he referred as "The Widow enthusiasm greeted the statement and although Irv didn't say so in his story, we can visualize mint juleps being passed As Gillilan told the story, I recalled my experience with around again and can hear the mellow strains of "My Old Kentucky Home."

Later, the convention nominated a man very distasteful

"Listen, Colonel," they remonstrated, "didn't you say you'd vote for a yellow dog if they nominated him on a Democratic ticket?"

"Yes, gentlemen," replied the Colonel, "I did say that Democratic ticket; I did say that I'd vote for a yellow dogbut LOWER than that, I refuse to go."

HOW TO RATE "TOPS"

with your

Party-Line Neighbors

It's easy to win a reputation as a good party-line neighbor. It pays dividends, too ... for when everybody on a party-line cooperates courteously with the others, everyone gets good service!

Two Suggestions: When you start to make a call and find the line in use, hang up gently and give the other person a few minutes to finish his call before you try again. And when, while talking, you realize that your neighbor is waiting to make a call, hang up in a few minutes and free the line.
