

Carvel Leadership Needed in '52 Says McDowell

But It Will Be Democrats' Job To Sell Him on The Idea, McDowell Tells Victory Meet

Governor Elbert N. Carvel may not have any political ambitions for 1952, according to a speech made by Secretary of State Harris B. McDowell, Democratic state chairman, at a meeting of the Kent County Democratic Club Monday night in the courthouse at Dover.

"I don't believe he has any political ambitions for 1952," Mr. McDowell said, adding that the governor was not too happy about his health and the burdens of the gubernatorial office. In fact, an ear ailment and the rainy weather had prevented the governor from attending Monday night's meeting.

However, there was no definite indication that the governor would be out of the political arena in the next election. "It will be our job to sell him on our need for his leadership in 1952," Mr. McDowell told the audience of some 200 persons. The secretary of state earlier had declared that the Republicans were starting propaganda to discredit the governor because they knew he could defeat them in 1952.

The meeting was a victory meeting for Kent County Democrats who had their greatest victory since 1932, in the recent election. At the start of his speech, Mr. McDowell praised the successful efforts of Kent County Democrats in the recent election. "You have shown by sheer, hard work what can be done. You have shown the way."

Continuing, the Democratic state chairman vehemently orated: "I don't believe we are going to be anything the next two years but Democrats. We have nothing to gain from Wednesday Democrats or by appeasing Republicans."

In almost every election district from White Clay hundred, in New Castle County, to Delmar, the Democrats made gains, though they didn't win all districts, Mr. McDowell said.

As the reason for the poor showing of the Democrats in New Castle County, in contrast to their success in the other counties, Mr. McDowell cited lack of organization, the Korean war, increased cost of living, and increased federal income taxes.

The tax increase hit the payroll of factory workers about a week before election. "They were tax conscious as they went to the polls," he explained.

Continuing, Mr. McDowell commented that some of the nation's greatest Democratic leaders went down to defeat, but he added that factors may change by 1952. "Who can prophesy what they will be," he said. "We did not suffer a decisive defeat in the state and the Republican party has no mandate from the people," he declared.

"Bridges" The Subject of Bishop McKinstry

The completion of the bridge across the Delaware will change the economic status of the state, Bishop McKinstry of the Delaware Diocese, told a group of Harrington and Milford Rotarians at the Wonder Bar Tuesday evening.

"Coming down to Harrington this afternoon I saw this bridge and if I could have looked farther, I would have seen another bridge rising above Chesapeake Bay. Whether we like the idea of these bridges or not (and some people do not like them) they will change our whole economic set-up. The Wilmington Chamber of Commerce (and Chambers of Commerce are likely to be optimistic) believes that within twenty or twenty-five years the population of Delaware will increase thirty-five percent."

The word bridge is not mentioned in the Old Testament or the New. The Egyptian, the Hebrew, the Phoenician knew nothing of bridges. People were afraid to erect them. One school of thought was 'if God had intended that rivers should be bridged, he would have made bridges.' Another was that the people believed that each large river was ruled by a river god and if bridges were made floods would destroy the country the following spring. Many people looked across the huge rivers and said: 'We do not know the people on the other side of the river—but we do not like them or trust them. The river is our protection against them. Build a bridge across the river and they will come pouring in upon us, maybe to conquer us.'

"We laugh at such silly ideas, at such stupidity—but before we laugh may I remind you that we are doing the same thing today? We don't trust other people, other nations, and they don't trust us. We do not want them to come here and upset our way of life. "Our forefathers came over here to establish a democracy. We have established a republic, but not a democracy. On the battlefield in World War II, where men of different racial strains fought together and died for each other, this distrust was forgotten, but with the end of the war, we were brought to the same school of thought."

Woodrow Wilson was not the first to attempt to build a bridge across the chasm between confusion and understanding, said the speaker. The Greek States had the same idea and for a while it succeeded. After a while Greece lost her place in the sun—but the dream did not die. It flourished for a time under the Caesars. Then its light became dim—but the ideal did not die. Charlemagne and Constantine carried its flame for a time, but there was always a 'Machiavelli, ready to stab you in the back with words or knives, much like the communists of today; but always, though for a time obscured, the ideal does not die—will never die. We have gone a long way in our pursuit of this ideal, and we can never turn back.

J. Harvey Burgess was program chairman of the evening and introduced the speaker. President Cliff Miller presided and Sam Williams led the singing.

Our first stop in Dover was made at Christ Episcopal Church. Inside the church we saw the stained glass window, which was designed by James H. Hogan of London and bequeathed to the church by the will of the late United States Senator Willard Saulsbury in the year 1928. Outside of the church we saw Caesar Rodney's monument. He was one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, a statesman and a soldier.

From there we went to the Kent County Courthouse. We were invited to go to the courtroom where Judge Terry spoke to us. He explained how the judges conducted a trial and duties of the jury. Judge Terry invited us to return when the court was in session.

We visited the Kent County jail. We made a tour through the cells and the cafeteria and went out to the whipping post. We also saw the cat o' nine tails whip used for the lashings.

After eating, we went in the Legislative Hall. We visited the House of Representatives, Senate chambers, offices, and committee rooms that occupy the first floor. The governor's suite and offices of the secretary of state are on the second floor. Secretary of State Harris B. McDowell spoke to us. In the governor's parlor hang two paintings by Thomas Sully; one of Commodore Thomas MacDonough, hero of the Battle of Lake Champlain, and the other of Commodore Jacob Jones, distinguished in the War 1812.

In the old State House we saw the bronze tablets with engraved names of Delaware's governors. Paintings by one of the Delaware artists, Stanley M. Authers, hang in the State Law Library on the first floor and in the rooms of the State Bureau of Vital Statistics on the second floor. They are: "The Troops Leaving Dover Green," "The First Day of Peace" and "The Crusaders." The offices of the State Board of Health, State Board of Education, the State Highway Department, Corporation Law Administrative offices are located in the State House.

In the Hall of Records we saw Delaware's charter granted to Penn in 1682 by Charles II, the King of England, for a period of ten thousand years. Also, on exhibition was the order by Wm. Penn for the laying out of the town of Dover.

Our last visit was made at the Administration Building of the Game and Fish Commission where we heard a lecture on "Conservation of Wildlife."

For Mr. O'Neal's Family

Words cannot comfort you, for words cannot Bring back his voice, his footstep in the hall,
But winging through the darkness
a bright thought
Will sometimes stay the tears that sadly fall.

He who will never have to bear
the load
Of suffering that causes you to reel
And almost fall, is on a sunny road.
He cannot know the sorrow that you feel.

Between you is the twilight veil of death,
But he is on the side where gladness is,
Upon the rose you see his dewey breath.
He is part of eternal harmonies.

He lights the stairs when night falls in the sky.
He has a thousand lovely tasks
to do,
For heaven must be tended. By and by
He will stand at the door to welcome you.

In this imperfect world, where you must live,
Who knows what tragedies he might endure?
Now with God's hand in his, although you grieve,
You know his happiness is deep and sure.
A neighbor.

NOTE: We met at the Polls, on this Election Day, Tuesday, November 7, 1950, and, I shall never forget, the good laughs we all had together. Remember, Mrs. O'Neal?

Miss Rachel Killen, of Wilmington, spent the weekend with her mother, Mrs. M. Evelyn Killen.

Albert Thistlewood, Sr., of near Harrington, died Friday night of apoplexy.

The first death in Kent County during the gunning season was that of Clifford Holden, aged about 16 years. Holden and Carroll Kemp were at the Killen farm, between Petersburg and Sandtown when by some means Kemp's gun was discharged, wounding Holden in the stomach.

Four hundred and sixty-six cases of choice assorted liquors valued at $45,000 were seized early Wednesday night by Lt. Ray Ingram and Sgt. S. G. Powell of the State Highway Police on two five-ton trucks which they had stopped at Felton. The two officers seized the liquor and trucks after having trailed the vehicles for nearly 15 miles along little traveled dirt roads. Drivers were H. K. Thurber Forbs and Ray P. Roberts, of Dover. Trucks were owned by Elwood K. Artis, of Dover and Wyoming. Liquor was in potato bags. It was believed that the liquor was brought up the Delaware Bay and then up the Mispillion River and landed and then stored in an old abandoned farm house on the property known as the John Kane farm. The police believed the cargo was enroute to Baltimore or Washington. They had been on the look-out for rum runners.

St. James Parish Church, at Tracy's Landing, Md., was the scene of a beautiful wedding Saturday, Nov. 15, when Miss Florence Ellen Owens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Owain Owens, of Annapolis, became the bride of Elwood Gruwell, of Harrington.

Earl Sylvester, who has been connected with the Burris Transportation Company the past two years, is now manager of the Delmarva Ice Cream Company, of Dover.

A car driven by J. E. Warren was demolished when struck by a train Wednesday night. Mr. and Mrs. Warren were considerably bruised, but sustained no serious injury.

Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Slaughter and children, Gene, Lois and Sandra, of Ridgely, were dinner guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Emory Webb and daughter, Eileen, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Vaughan Warren had as their dinner guests Sunday their aunt, Mrs. Amanda B. Lofland.

Mr. and Mrs. John Phillips entertained the following guests to a family dinner Sunday afternoon: Mrs. Phillip's daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Gene Davidson and sons, Gene and Ronald, and Mr. Phillip's son, Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Phillips and son, John, all of Milford.

Several folks from our town attended the concert Sunday afternoon sponsored by the Milford Community Concert Association held at the High School Auditorium and those who attended were: Mr. and Mrs. Vaughan Warren, Mrs. Amanda Lofland, Mrs. Wilbur Jump, Mrs. Ralph Jump, Sr. and Miss Estella Wright. They were greatly thrilled by the performances of the gaudans. I believe this was the first of three concerts to be given this winter.

The Houston New Century Club will meet Tuesday night, November 28, "Bible" being the subject with Mrs. James V. Harrington and Mrs. Howard J. Thistlewood in charge of the program.

Walter Studte, Sr., who has been in Milford Memorial Hospital for several weeks for treatment, seems to be slightly improved at this time.

John Smith, 82, of Wilmington, spent three days of last week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Minner. Mr. Smith spent the greater portion of his time rabbit hunting, which he thoroughly enjoyed and of course the Minners were very much pleased having him stay with them.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Hudgins, of Matthews, Va., spent last week at the parsonage as guests of the Rev. and Mrs. W. S. Grant. They were parishioners from a former charge.

Boards of Education and Principals Meet

The Boards of Education, along with the principals of each school, of Felton, Frederica, and Harrington met at Harrington, Nov. 20, to discuss problems and issues involved in school district reorganization in Kent County.

A similar meeting involving all schools of Kent County with the exception of Smyrna is scheduled to be held at the Milford School November 29.

It is hoped that these meetings will assist the Kent County Committee on School District Reorganization to present some specific recommendations to the unified legislation committee.

Home Economics Department Reports

An Oriental atmosphere was created in the tenth grade home economics class this week. The class prepared chop suey with all the Chinese trimmings which included eating with chop sticks.

The sevens and eights combined their ideas and rearranged the furniture in the home economics laboratory. Their project also included painting and decorating.

New hair styles among the nines have been created by their classmates. The girls have been shampooing and setting their hair as a project in good grooming.

Grade News

In connection with their study of Industrial Europe, Mrs. Nelson's sixth graders have on display in their room an interesting collection of articles manufactured abroad. This collection includes Handkerchiefs made in England, Ireland, France and Belgium; pocket books from France, Scotland, and England; clocks made in France and Germany; Dutch shoes; French doilies, scarfs, powder and perfume; a Scotch plaid apron and bedroom slippers; and samples of money from England, France, and Germany.

The elementary grades enjoyed the movie, Margie, Wednesday afternoon. This was another of the movies paid for from the money earned through the magazine sales.

State Service includes dental examinations to the first six grades. The dental hygienist is giving sodium chloride treatments to the first, second and sixth grades.

4-H Tractor Program Grows 500 Percent in Two Years

From an enrollment of eleven boys in 1948 to a program with 56 boys and their leaders participating in 1950 is the record of the 4-H Tractor Maintenance Project in Delaware.

Only five years old nationally, the Tractor Maintenance Project has grown by leaps and bounds because it fills an urgent need in today's mechanized agriculture. This announcement came from M. Jean Lee, state 4-H Club specialist, and William A. Calvert, extension agricultural engineer.

Calvert explains that the project is really a three year program. The third year project includes leadership, planning of special events, and advanced technical skills.

says Calvert. "This year we'll have two clubs in each county more if there's the demand. O these clubs, one is a third year club and two are second year clubs. The boys are interested, they're sticking with the program and carrying their projects to completion. If each of the boys at Leaders' Training School, Nov. 9-10, led a club in tractor maintenance we would double our last year's enrollment."

The Tractor Operator's Contests are a big part of the program. There were five last year. Any 4-H boy could enter in the county contest, but to compete in the state contest, the boys must have had some tractor maintenance work.

The program operates through volunteer local leaders and annual leader training short courses, according to Miss Lee. On a national scale, the program is sponsored by the National Committee on Boys and Girl's Club Work and industrial oil companies, with farm implements concerns co-operating. An over-all view shows 39,000 4-H Tractor Maintenance members in 47 states.

17 Fertilizer Grades Could Do Job Of 40, Says Agronomist

A way of reducing the farmer's cost of fertilizer was proposed at the recent Fertilizer Dealers' Short Course, at the University of Delaware, Newark. Claude Phillips, extension agronomist, told the group that seventeen out of the 40 grades of fertilizer sold in Delaware last year could do the fertilizing job needed in Delaware.

"These seventeen grades could supply plant food for the growing of every crop produced on all Delaware farms," says Phillips,

The extra grades only increase the cost of manufacturing and distribution and most are low in plant food content."

Phillips pointed out that costs of mixing, hauling, and spreading a fertilizer are just as high for a bag of 0-10-10 containing only 20 pounds of plant food, as it is for a bag of 0-14-14 with 28 pounds, or 0-20-20 with 40 pounds.

"And it's the plant food," he said, "that the farmer is interested in. Some farmers, however, still buy their fertilizer on cost per ton rather than cost per pound of actual plant food."

The fertilizer manufacturers and dealers generally agreed with the proposal. Stocking many different grades reduces their capacity and increases their handling costs.

Phillips adds that the Agricultural Extension Service is now revising its fertilizer recommendations on the new basis, and these recommendations will be available in January.

Tri-Purposes Pans Suggested For Homemakers

Utensils which can do triple duty for storing food in the refrigerator, then cooking, and finally serving, save time and energy for the cook, as well as food. According to Mrs. Eleanor Cavanaugh, Kent County home demonstration agent, the usual transferring of food from refrigerator container to cooking pan, and then to serving dish, adds up in time and food lost.

For best economy of refrigerator space, she suggests utensils of the right size to fit the food, and those of square or rectangular shape, without protruding handles or knobs. For those lacking covers, aluminum foil may be pressed over the top and around edges for both storage and cooking. Metal pans generally can take the sudden change in temperature in the move from refrigerator to range. With a few precautions, glass, pottery, or enamelware can also move from hot to cold or vice versa.

Generally, it is safer to put such containers when cold into the oven than on top of the stove. Unless food needs immediate heat, it's a good idea to put the cold utensil in a cold oven and let the two heat up together. If time permits, take the dish from the refrigerator long enough before cooking to take the chill off.

Capons and Caponettes To Be Subject of Poultry Meeting

The poultrymen of Kent County will take up the subject of capons and caponettes in their meeting at 8 p. m. Monday in Caesar Rodney School. Richard W. MacFaddin, chairman of the group, states that the subject is becoming of ever-increasing importance to the poultry industry and has been chosen for the meeting by request of the poultrymen themselves.

The program will include talks on both pellet and past methods of chemical caponization. A representative of the Vineland Poultry Laboratories will discuss the pellet method, and Roy Freeman of Milford will cover the paste method. Two 4-H Club members will give a demonstration of actual surgical caponization as well as a demonstration on the chemical method.

Also on the evening's program will be much-needed information on agricultural labor as covered under the new Social Security Act going into effect January 1. Mr. Roger R. Minker, manager of the Social Security Administration in Wilmington, will appear personally to give facts and to answer questions on the new provisions.

SERVICE CLUBS

Probably a dozen times each year you hear some skeptical person—usually a person who has made no contribution to the community in which he leads a somewhat selfish existence—ask "What good is a service Club?"

Such a question does not deserve an answer—but we'll answer it just the same.

Harrington has some six or seven service clubs, although many of them are not designated as service clubs. Some are men's clubs and some are women's—but the greatest service club in physical contribution in any town is the fire company, and there is a cultural side to almost every one of these organizations.

When any drive for a worth-while cause is to be made, the sponsors do not appeal to individuals. They appeal to the service clubs of the town. With the efforts of the combined clubs with them, any movement will culminate in success; without the efforts of these clubs, no drive can be successful.

Remove the personnel of all these organizations from any town, and there will not be any town—at least any town worthy of the name.

Occasionally you meet a person puffed up with importance. Long ago, from a forgotten source, we read a definition of this type of person: "Egotism is merely an anesthetic nature given a person to ease the pain of being a fool."

A BISHOP—OR A BOOTLEGGER

The Letters to The Editor department of the Wilmington Journal-Every Evening is being flooded with letters protesting that the paper's editorials conflict with its business practices. Television advertising is the topic under discussion. The paper's editorial department criticizes the type of advertising the television people write—and the paper continues to carry the objectionable advertising—so say the letter writers, and they admit that they are puzzled over this condition. They shouldn't be.

If many of the letter writers could place themselves in the editor's uneasy chair—or the publisher's—we believe they would see the weakness of their protest. A merchant, as an example, may be an ardent prohibitionist. He may talk prohibition at every opportunity—and practice it, but he'll sell his wares to anyone who cares to buy, be that person bootlegger or bishop—although he might grant the bishop a small reduction in price. The fact that he sells to them does not mean that he agrees with the bishop's particular type of religion or that he condones the avocation of the bootlegger. We use the word "avocation" instead of "vocation"—because the bootlegger's job is seldom permanent.

Most newspapers will not accept advertising if they believe the would-be advertiser's product has no merit. Several years ago they were drilling for oil down in the Bridgeville section. A professional promoter appeared on the scene and either bought or secured options on quite a bit of land in that section. He came into our office with a series of half-page advertisements and offered to pay for all of them in advance. We refused to accept the advertising because he stressed only one selling point: "Bridgeville. The New Oil Rush Boom Town of America"—and oil had not been discovered there. Come to think about it, it hasn't been discovered yet.

He didn't point to Bridgeville's existing advantages, pleasant, friendly people; good schools, good roads, excellent agricultural surroundings—but wanted to sell them a bee course or a chunk of blue sky.

Many readers—and letter writers—fail to realize that the newspapers, by refusing to accept advertising of this nature, save the readers millions upon millions of dollars yearly.

HORSES ARE HONEST

Harrington horsemen admit—and Harrington being the hottest hoss town in the world, they should know—that there are a few, a very few, crooked drivers. These drivers hold their horses back to keep them from winning. Any good horse has intelligence enough and pride enough to want to win, but after he has been held back time after time, he reasons: "What's the use trying? If I do my very best and put up an honest race, this crook will hold me back just before I get to the wire. It's cheating the customers, but I can't help it. I'll just take it easy, because that's about all I can do."

It's the age-old adages of environment, "Birds of a feather flock together" and "We are judged by companions we keep." Horses can't choose their associates. People can—if they will.

TRUTHFUL JAMES NOT FROM TABLE MOUNTAIN

The greatest baseball game I ever saw was down in Sussex County on the Indian River in August, 1945. They had a couple of mighty fine ball teams down there then, each with a bunch of rabid followers. These two teams were scheduled to play for the championship of the broiler belt, but the game had been postponed several times on account of rains and high tides. Finally, they decided to play, rain or no rain.

Probably one hundred thousand chickens were bet on that ball game. No local man would agree to umpire, so they asked an OPA investigator to officiate. He agreed to get another umpire if one was in sympathy with him, so he had to umpire it alone.

It was raining hard when the game started and the ground was covered with water in no time. It was a pretty clean game till the tide came in and the water got above the players' waists. Then the OPA umpire knew that crooked work was going on, but he couldn't watch all the players at one time. He did put one pitcher out of the game for using the illegal spitball.

When the water was up around the players' shoulders, a slow current drifted from the pitcher's box to the home plate. The pitcher merely wound up, placed the ball in the water and the prettiest floater you ever saw came meandering over home plate.

One player had an average of five stolen bases per game during the season. He could slide half-way across the diamond. He managed to reach first base, dove into the water and when we saw a cloud of dust rising out of the water around second, we knew he had stolen another base. He dove under again, heading for third, but the shortstop and third baseman dived, too, and had him trapped. We could see the bubbles rising here and there and knew that they were chasing him back and forth. Finally the baserunner came to the surface, his face covered with perspiration, and shouted "I made it!" But he was declared out when it was discovered that instead of standing on third base, he was standing on a turtle.

The slowest baserunner in the county scored all the way from first base on a bunt because he was chased all the way home by a water moccasin.

One pitcher, trying to keep the ball above water, threw five consecutive pitches two feet over the catcher's head. "Keep 'em down," the OPA umpire admonished the pitcher, "down to the 1942 level."

Finally, in the seventh inning, the batter dumped one down to ward first. It would have been an easy out, but just as the first baseman reached for the ball a king crab grabbed it and disappeared. Three runners, only their caps showing above the water, came swimming across the plate. There was a wild demonstration when it was discovered that two of the runners had captured a big carp, put a cap on his head and dragged him across the plate between them. The umpire, sensing a riot, called the game on account of wet grounds.

THANKSGIVING DAY NOV. 23, 1950

By Laura C. Walls, Lincoln, Del.

Thanksgiving originated from the Pilgrims, who could not worship God according to the dictates of their own conscience in England. These true Christians, loving God and serving Him were willing to sacrifice their lives, if necessary; thus they came to America for freedom to worship.

After a rough, stormy voyage across the Atlantic in the Mayflower, they landed and later settled at Plymouth in November, 1620. Their first act was to kneel and thank God for a safe voyage, then they cut logs to build their homes and their precious church. Fish, game and nuts kept them in food but by spring half their number had died from sickness and cold, but the next November they had a big feast in the wilderness and called it "Thanksgiving Day." They fervently gave thanks to God for freedom to worship.

Thanksgiving has been observed in our country ever since, especially the feast, but are we thanking our dear Lord for our many blessings? The thought that concerns us most this Thanksgiving is: There will be vacant chairs in many of our homes this year, because our youth have been called into service and are far away from home. May we ask our Heavenly Father to be very near the parents of these dear children who are sacrificing their lives for a lasting peace throughout the world.

May we remember that none of us are useful in this life, unless we lighten the burdens of others.

From the Gideon Society, 20,000 strong, doing the marvelous service of placing Bibles in our hotels, I learned the shocking news that seven-eighths of the youth of our country have never read a Bible or been to Sunday School. As this Society sends pocket Testaments to some of the boys in service, I beg of the parents of these lads to send testaments and prayers to your boys this Christmas, for nothing can so comfort a homesick heart as the assurance of God's love and protection.

Seven-eighths of the parents of America never enter a church door or have a Bible in the home! School teachers can reach every child in the land, if granted the privilege by the Board of Education to teach the pupil God's word; but we realize that these teachers, many of whom are ardent Christians, even parents, cannot present this vital subject unless permitted to do so by the State Board of Education.

I, therefore, appeal to the members of the Boards of Education of America to grant to the teachers the privilege to teach the Bible and a knowledge of God to every child in this land for which our boys are fighting.

We are drifting in an age when the Atomic Bomb will sweep the universe and destroy all life unless we work faithfully to Christianize this world of ours, which is the only correct solution to this difficult problem, facing our entire world today.

Felton

The Rev. Frederick Smith, of Baltimore, will be the speaker at a meeting to be held in the Felton Methodist Church Wednesday evening, Nov. 29 at 7:30. The public is cordially invited to come out to hear this prominent speaker.

Letters-- To The Editor

November 16, 1950

Dear Reader:

Research in upland game management is just as necessary as in any other field of science and has as its aims, as does all experimentation, to expand the science, change outmoded thoughts and practices, and improve methods of game management. Research is the right arm of management, they cannot and should not be divorced. Research must precede management and provide improved tools which enables management to more efficiently complete its assigned tasks.

Strange as it may seem man does not know all there is to be known about the animals even though he has lived with them for centuries, but we are learning every year. Man has altered the environment of many upland game animals through his lumbering, agriculture, burning, and grazing and here arose a big need for upland game habitat research; we needed to know what plants or combination of plants would fill the needs of our wildlife. To satisfy the wants of game we needed improved plants to do a more thorough job and to grow in a wide range of situations.

Upland game investigations have given us new planting mixtures, methods of planting, and plant maintenance. Work, observation and experimentation have proved the value of various annual food plants such as corn, soybeans, cowpeas, and clover, yet these must be replenished yearly so research went to work on the problem of securing satisfactory perennial plants such as shrub lespedeza. Proper planting times, soil types required, shade and moisture tolerance, climatic ranges, cultivation and mulching procedures are only a few of the facts pertaining to the wildlife manager's vegetative tools given by investigators. Research has also taught us more concerning the intricate habits, life histories, food habits, and food and cover preferences of all our game birds and animals, not to mention improved census techniques, trapping, banding, and propagation.

Upland game research has worked on the five tools of management, namely restriction of hunting; predator control; refuges; stocking; and habitat improvement. In previous news letters these tools have been treated in detail as to their use in management. Biological research has aided in the information of legislation. For example, a more thorough knowledge of the life history of the mourning dove has altered the shooting season on this bird. Seasons and bag limits of migratory waterfowl are set by the federal government resulting from investigations conducted by state and federal technicians.

Due to research on upland predators much thinking has been changed. Food habits studies have shown the neutral or beneficial effects of some of our hawks and owls. Research has made predator control a more workable tool of management.

Ideas of refuges have been formulated and changed as a result of research. Small refuges have been found impractical for white-tailed deer and turkeys; extensive refuges have proved unsatisfactory for farm-game species; small refuges of swales have proved necessary to the pheasant over some of its range. Investigation has eradicated the piecemeal setting up of refuges, defined the necessity and limitations of certain kinds of refuges.

Follow-up studies from stocking has shown the benefits and failure of this management tool. Too often plantings of rabbits, quail, and pheasants are unsuccessful but in certain areas where game is depleted or eradicated, stocking is part of the necessary management. The turkey in Pennsylvania is a good example of the success of stocking where the habitat was suitable, while in the same state they found the planting of Hungarian partridge a failure and the purchase of quail and out-of-state rabbits expensive and unsuccessful.

Research has brought wildlife management up to its present stage of habitat improvement, has given us improved plants with which to work, and has taught us how to better utilize the gifts of nature food and cover.

Various conservation agencies as U. S. Soil Conservation Service and state game departments have advocated a policy of the best use of every acre of land. Under this policy wildlife is the best use of land not suited to crops or livestock. This is based on common sense and is designed to conserve the soil, aid wildlife, and help the farmer. Experimentation has provided workers with the best type of plants for odd field corners, woodland borders, and severely eroded area. These plants may serve a multiple purpose such as soil erosion control, Christmas tree production, wildlife food and cover, and are necessary if all the upland is to be used to the best advantage.

No, research has not answered all our questions or solved all our problems, perhaps it never shall, but if we are to progress the problems must be attacked and this can best be done through research. A program of wildlife conservation is seriously hampered and will soon become stagnated unless stimulated by a research program. In the past research has kept ahead of management but recently in many areas management has received a great impetus and threatens to catch up. This is a healthy situation as long as it only threatens. Like the mechanical rabbit is to the greyhound, research should be one jump ahead of management.

A situation which requires more research is the development of particular food and cover plants which will grow over greater latitudes. The present range of Lespedeza bicolor is somewhat restricted and further work is necessary to extend its use northward. Improved food plants are always a necessity. We need plants which will feed the game during the most critical periods of winter, be available at the time of deep snows and be consistent in its production of food. Multiple purpose plants would simplify the management problems, that is, plants which would furnish both food and cover. Cover plants which remain dense in the winter months are now available but if such a characteristic could be found in a food producing plant an advancement would be given to the game manager.

Further investigation is needed on planting mixtures. Can we grow a special plant with the slower maturing food plants so that food will be available from planting time until the slower growing plants are producing? Where is nesting cover deficient, and what plants are best for this purpose over a wide range? What plants will furnish food and cover in wet sites? What is the food value to upland game species of our native plants? Will multiflora rose be killed out by honeysuckle or will the rose dominate? These are just a few of the questions which at present need more research in order to make the art of game management more efficient.

Delaware along with other state game departments, and the Fish and Wildlife Service are attempting to solve their own problems and those of neighbors in the same latitude. The need of research is evident, a well formulated wildlife program must have research incorporated into the plans and this along with sound management for wise conservation.

Sincerely,
 Conservation Division, Delaware Bd. of Game & Fish Comm.

Delvin Miller, 37-year-old Meadow Lands, Pa., reinsman, monopolized driving honors in almost every department during the harness racing season which ended last week.

Unofficial figures made available today show that Miller won $311,809 in 1950, far more than any other driver has ever earned in a single season. The previous high was $184,108.93 earned by Clint Hodgins last year.

In addition, Miller won 106 heats, probably tops for the nation, and knocked off all four major colt stakes, a Grand Slam performance comparable to any ever executed by Bobby Jones, Babe Ruth or Jim Thorpe.

Driving horses in his own string and for the richly-stocked Hayes Fair Acres Stable of DuQuoin, Ill., Miller romped home first in each of the season's Grand Circuit features for two and three-year old trotters and pacers.

He won the $75,000 Hambletonian with Lusty Song and the $56,000 Little Brown Jug with Dudley Hanover to account for the three-year-old division and then wrapped up the two-year-old section by winning the $41,000 Horseman Stake with Mighty Fine and the $33,000 Fox Stake with Solicitor.

Miller banked $184,809 of his record-breaking total while driving Hayes horses including the major stake winners Lusty Song, Mighty Fine, Pronto Don and Dudley Hanover. The remainder was picked up by horses in his own stable and through catch mounts including one winning ride behind the great trotting mare Proximity.

The World War II veteran also drove the two richest 2-year-olds of all time, Tar Heel and Mighty Fine and posted three world's records during the campaign. His own public stable, made up principally of horses owned by tobacco magnate W. N. Reynolds, Winston-Salem, N. C., won $211,562.26.

Wayne (Curly) Smart, one of the nation's leading reinsmen, has signed a contract to train exclusively for the Castleton Farm of Lexington, Ky. in 1951. A single loop hole will allow the Buckeye pilot to train and drive a pair for his first harness racing patron Joe Neville, Little Brown Jug impresario from Delaware, O.

Smart was the leading percentage driver at Roosevelt Raceway in 1949 and was on top in that department when he left to follow the Grand Circuit in 1950. His biggest victory this season was scored with the Castleton pacer Scottish Pence in the $50,000 Nassau Pace at Roosevelt.

The trotting stallion Phonograph has been sold by the Walnut Hall Farm, Lexington, Ky., and will make future stud seasons at the River View Farm.

The 12th annual Standardbred Sale, conducted through five days and four nights at Harrisburg last week, was the fourth straight million dollar venue staged by the Pennsylvania sales company.

A total of 1,021 horses, more than ever before, went through the auction ring and brought $1,055,120. Topping the sale was the 4-year-old pacer Breeze On which went for $16,350. Highest priced yearling was Empire Hanover, a son of Titan Hanover and a half brother to Rodney and Egan Hanover. He went for $10,500 to Cleo A. Young, Timmons-ville, S. C.

Cows Must Produce 200 Pounds Fat To Make Dairy Farmer A Profit

A dairy cow that produces only 200 pounds of butterfat in a year seldom makes a profit for her owner, says Bill Tarbell, Kent County agricultural agent.

The proof of this statement, he points out, is shown by the production records in dairy herd improvement association herds. In Kent County, there are twenty-five dairy farms with 575 cows enrolled in this DHIA program.

In association herds in 1949, for the country as a whole, the cows that averaged 200 pounds of butterfat consumed $131 worth of feed, and returned $121 over feed cost. Thus, says Tarbell, on the basis of the long standing rule that the feed cost represents only half the total cost of keeping a cow, these cows did not "pay their way" by about $10. In fact, the records show that a cow should produce substantially more than 200 pounds of butterfat to make a profit for her owner.

As average production per cow per year increases, so does profit for the dairyman. The DHIA records show that cows producing 359 pounds of butterfat in a year consumed $156 worth of feed and returned $234 over feed cost to their owners. This means a net income of $78 per cow. Cows producing 600 pounds of fat consumed $208 worth of feed and returned $473 over feed cost, or a net income of $265.

Bill Tarbell, whose office is in the Post Office Building, Dover, has more information about the cow testing program in Kent County. His phone number is Dover 2621.

Keep Eggs Clean
Ninety-nine eggs out of every hundred are clean at the instant they are laid. When they reach the market, only about fifty of those same eggs are clean. Why?

According to Charles Marker, poultryman, many layers are not provided with the proper facilities, and the eggs not handled properly after they're laid. The result is a loss in quality, and in profits.

Here are some of the things Marker recommends to reduce the number of dirty eggs:

Allow 3 1/2 to 4 square feet of floor space per bird in the laying house. Overcrowding results in wet litter.

Keep a deep layer of litter on the hen house floor. Stir it frequently, and feed grain in the litter to encourage scratching. Add hydrated lime, one pound for each bird, to help control moisture.

Use drinking fountains that reduce water throwing to a minimum.

Have plenty of nests—one for every five hens. Keep plenty of nesting material in the nests at all time. Replace materials as often as necessary. Lime boxes in front of nests will help.

If hens are not kept in house throughout the winter, keep them in on bad days.

Gather eggs several times a day, and particularly when the litter is wet.

Store eggs in clean surroundings until they are marketed. Keep birds out of droppings which collect under roosts.

Your New Social Security Queries Answered

Questions relating to Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance will be answered in this paper or by mail. Address all queries to Social Security Administration, Custom House, 6th & King Sts., Wilmington, Del.

Q. Are benefits paid automatically upon attainment of age 65 or death?

A. No. A claim must be filed before any insurance payments are made. It is very important to remember this because the law permits monthly payments to go back for only six months from the date on which the claim is filed. The lump sum can be paid only if a claim is filed within two years of the worker's death.

Q. Where are benefit claims filed?

A. The place to make claims for insurance benefits under old age and survivors insurance is the nearest social security office. A person 65 or over, who has been employed in work covered by social security, should go to that office for advice about his insurance status, even though he has not yet retired.

Q. Do those already receiving old-age and survivors insurance benefits have to file new claims to get the larger benefits?

A. No. The law provides that all benefits in effect at the time the law was changed will be raised under the special table of benefit increases. Beneficiaries will receive the larger amounts beginning with the September checks to be issued early in October, 1950.

Let's get down and have a heart to heart talk about television. If you own a television set, then I know you will agree with me from your own findings.

As I said before boys and girls alike put TV sets ahead of bikes, skates or dolls. In the survey, if what hundreds of girls and boys want more for Christmas, far more of them put television sets first on their list than the choice of such perennial favorites as bikes, skates, electric trains and wrist watches.

Of course it isn't much use to ask mother or dad if they would like to have one unless they do not like wrestling, baseball, roller derbies, a circus, vaudeville, church services, singing and many other things both in amusements and entertainment. Best of all is this, a television set will be in use for a good many years not only for one but for all the family which will keep the family intact.

There are a lot of our leading citizens who have television sets and ask them what kind they have and nine out of ten will tell you PHILCO. All right it is judged by them to be the best or they would own some other. Why not take their advice as well as my own. Buy PHILCO famous for quality the world over.

This not only applies to television but radios, combinations, freezers, refrigerators, portables, ranges and air conditioners. Take a look around and see the aerials that are going up, we are waiting for your order. Remember we cannot guarantee delivery on Xmas eve.

We are putting things away daily for different ones who are not going to be disappointed when the jolly old man himself rolls around.

By the way a Westinghouse electric blanket would be mighty nice to cover those cold feet of yours and not only keep them warm but save you bed clothing as well. They are not high and what a wonderful gift and so pretty, my, my, I know you would like to give something nice and useful so why not?

Don't fail to see our new wall paper patterns which we have just filled our bins with and the prices are lower than I expected them to be.

Yes another Thanksgiving is here and we, the most fortunate people on earth, America, are trying to make even the people who are against us our friends.

Talk Peace Not War. When we make a friend, nothing is better.
