Tucker Named "Millionaire For Day" As Moose Home Is Dedicated Here Sunday

Railroad News

Some time ago we were bemoaning the fact that so many railroaders were interested in the race track while there were no horsemen interested in the welfare of the railroad. Now we find the photo finish specialist, George Ryall, more interested in locomotives than horse racing. He is an ardent builder of model railroads, locomotives and cars and is an official of the Baltimore Model Railroad Club. Two of George's locomotives, a GG-1 electric and a D-16 steam model are on display in the windows of the local railroad office where they are creating considerable interest.

Witnesses of the fatal grade crossing accident at Hallwood, Va., last Monday say the driver, Mrs. Byrd, had stopped before starting across the tracks, observing the flasher lights blinking on and off then started across in front of the train which was traveling at 70 miles per hour. They say her car stalled on the crossing and she got out but seemed to become too hysterical to move.

We can only use our imagination to visualize the harrowing experience of Engineer Ed North, an and Fireman Everett Ellis in those few seconds ahead of the crash and bringing their train to an emergency stop immediately after.

This is just another instance where disregard for visual warning might have been overcome had there been gates at the crossing.

Tones Change with Times
One of the most important selling factors for all lines of furniture these days is the finish. In the top-notch traditional lines, mahogany has an amber tone, especially in the crotch veneers. Satiwood colors have been seen in a few lines. Cherry has taken on a less red and more brown hue in the traditional styles and, in the very modern, has adapted a tawny hue.

Early Closing Events Filled at Ocean Downs

Ocean Downs Raceway, at Ocean City, has been swamped by a record 365 entries for the 14 early closing events which will highlight the 20-night meet starting Aug. 5, it was announced recently.

For the first time in Ocean Downs history, every event filled. Officials regard the unprecedented nominations for the six $1500 events and eight $2,000 events as the stamp of approval from horsemen throughout the nation for this year's early closing schedule.

Highest number of nominations for a single event were the 56 entries received for the $1500 New Jersey Pace Aug. 13 Next highest was the $1500 Maryland Trot on Aug. 8, which drew no less than 47 nominees.

The Governor's Cup Pace for a $2,000 purse, which this year replaces the President's Cup race as the 16-class-pacing headliner, lured 13 crack sidewheelers, topped by stars such as Captain Pointer (2:02 3/5), Shamrock Thoughts (2:03 4/5), Blue Steel (2:04), Nancy Sue (2:04 4/5) and Bert York (2:04 3/5). Bert York is the star of the 14-horse stable handled by veteran trainer driver Olin Davies, of Clayton.

The fast-class trot this year will be the $2100 Shamrock Farms event Wed. Aug. 20. Thirteen swift trotters will compete for the prize in this one, including David Spencer, lightning last member of the select circle of America's 31 active two-minute pacers; Jenko Hanover (2:02), Jeb Stuart (2:06), Jim Gallon (2:05), and Marjorie Mac (2:07).

The other $2100 events also filled nicely. The $2100 California, Aug. 15, will feature 17 speedsters on the lateral gait, par amount among them being intangible (2:03 3/5), Nancy Sue (2:04 4/5), and Peg Jones (2:05 1-5) who was triumphant at the seashore track in several feature events last season.

The President's Cup Pace, this year to be a 2-year-old event, has attracted 21 promising kindergarten sidewheelers. The 2-year-old trot will be the Sammy Adams Memorial which has 18 nominees.

Manchurian Fields Base for Commies' Plane Build-up Try

WASHINGTON, D.C.—What lies behind North Korea's border with Manchuria, along which U.S. and Red planes have been clashing in the biggest jet battles of aviation history?

From the borders of Soviet Siberia southwest in a mighty arc across Manchuria and around the Yellow Sea lie more major airfields than in all the rest of China put together.

Mao Tse-tung's so-called "privileged sanctuary" is criss-crossed with runways laid down by Japan's Kwantung Army in long years when the banners of the Rising Sun floated over puppet Manchukuo. What condition these fields might be in to receive a reported 3,000-plane build-up of Chinese air power is uncertain. But for months indications have come from Korea that Red China is hard at work improving such bases and building new airfields in Manchuria. Events have made plain that at least some of these installations are operational for jet aircraft.

North Korea's airfields—what few the Japanese built among the tumbled mountains—have been pounded by United Nations planes since the Korean fighting began.

North of the ridges which pile to 8,000-foot peaks along the Manchurian border, however, is the flat, broad valley of the Sungari River, one of the richest agricultural areas on earth, rising gradually to the treeless plateau of western Manchuria.

Westward across the Yellow Sea from Korea and south of China's Great Wall stretches another plain along the East China coast, through which wander the Yellow and Yangtze Rivers. There, too, the Shantung peninsula points like an outstretched tongue straight at Korea, closer to Seoul than any U.S. airfield in Japan.

A new National Geographic Society map of Asia, published in March, shows principal airports at 26 Manchurian and Chinese cities, all of which are closer to the heart of Korea than Tokyo. Among them are Shanghai, Nanking, Tsingtao, Tientsin and Peiping itself. At the end of World War II, there were more than 40 military airfields in Manchuria alone.

Count Defies Ancient Curse, Hunts for Hidden Treasure

NEW YORK, N.Y.—A descendant of the Dukes of Burgundy is seeking the fabulous treasure of the Templars in an old French castle in the valley of Beaujolais.

According to history, Great Master Jacques de Molay of the Order of the Temple pronounced a curse on the board as he was being burned at the stake by Philip the Fair, the French king who wanted the bullion.

Phillip and a churchman associated with him perished within the year and no further attempt to locate the wealth was risked until the end of the 15th century.

Then Louis XI imprisoned the Lord of Arigny and after torture learned that the gold was concealed in his castle. Louis died immediately after he had signed the search warrant. His daughter, Anne, who ruled as regent during the infancy of her brother, Charles VII, ordered the search continued.

But when the diggers began work in the subterranean hallway of Arigny castle, the foremost workman suddenly screamed. His fellows found him dead. The other diggers refused to proceed.

Centuries passed. In 1900, Count Pierre de Rosemont, owner then of the square towered fortress, discovered the entrance to underground galleries. One of his servants entered and was promptly killed by two enormous stones that fell on him.

Two years later, however, two farmers from the neighborhood offered to search for the treasure. Before they even entered the castle they were found dead, their skulls bashed in.

Now the present owner of the castle is resuming the treasure hunt.

Dog, an Heiress, Loses Bequest of $40 a Month

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—Dixie, a pet bulldog is just a plain dog again. A court has ruled that she is no longer an heiress.

After a long legal fight, the court ruled that $4,500 willed Dixie by her late owner, Gerald S. Richberg, must go to "next of kin". Richberg's brother, J. K. Richbourg of Bishopville, S. C., and Mrs. Eddie R. Gamble of Charleston, S. C., a niece, contested the will. They argued that Dixie was the property of her master and that property could not inherit property.

Dixie was to have received $40 a month from the bequest. She was still in the custody of Miss Frances Cochran, a step-granddaughter of Richberg, and apparently unperturbed.

Army Rescuers Hold Marine Pilot Until Ransom Paid

WITH THE FIRST MARINE AIR WING IN KOREA—Pilots of a Leatherneck "Devilcat" squadron paid a rare price for the return of one of their comrades.

The "ransom" was 100 pounds of steak. And it was paid not to the Reds, but to a hungry and prankish U.S. Army helicopter outfit.

Marine Captain Russell G. Patterson, shot down behind enemy lines in central Korea, was rescued by an Army helicopter.

The 'copter men refused to return him to his home carrier until Captain Patterson's squadron mates came through with the "chow."

Senator Thinks Rainmakers Partly to Blame for Floods

WASHINGTON — Senator Case (R., S. D.) believes that the operations of "rain makers" might have had something to do with the disastrous floods in Kansas and Missouri.

Case reported that artificial rain makers operating in Oregon, Nebraska, Colorado, and the Dakotas "seeded enormous areas with siltic iodide."

The Dakota senator said there is immediate need for a scientific appraisal of rain making in order to "find out who is doing what, and how." Other sections of the country might welcome the efforts (limited of course) of the rain men.

Army Water Supply Units Keep Troop Supply Fresh

The water supply units of the United States Army's Eighth Engineer Battalion in Korea, have purified nearly 60,000,000 gallons of water. The units convert contaminated Korean river water into safe drinking water for use by 1st Cavalry Division combatants.

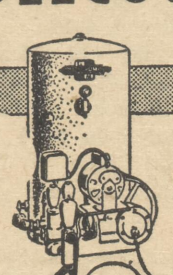

Before the units can begin to function, small reconnaissance patrols locate suitable riverside pumping points; usually about 2,000 yards from the frontlines. The points selected must be protected from enemy artillery fire and accessible to regimental water trucks using the main roads.

It takes approximately 45 minutes to process one cycle of water after the unit is put into operation. The processing, which includes filtering, cleansing, and purification involves the use of assorted chemicals and three separate water tanks in which water is pumped from the river. Thus far, there has been no evidence that the enemy is poisoning water but, as an added precaution, water points are placed at flowing streams because such water is less likely to be affected by poison.

The fifteen 3,000 gallon tanks used in the operation could theoretically turn out 60,000 gallons of water in one 20-hour period.

It's in the Tips

The bristles in nylon brushes must have long, fine tips. By holding the brush up to the light, fanning out the nylon and looking closely at the tips, you can observe these. The way a brush will pick up paint and release it is affected by the tips of the bristles. In other words, they govern the smoothness with which paint can be applied. Because of the wearing qualities of nylon, it is not necessary to obtain a long brush. A good 4-inch brush should not have more than 4 1/2" of bristles extending out of the ferrule.

Give It Time

It is advisable to allow three or four days' drying time between exterior paint coats. Paint dries more rapidly in summer and fall, more slowly in spring and winter.

THE HARRINGTON JOURNAL
Office of Publication, 207 Commerce Street, Harrington, Delaware
Entered as second-class matter August 16, 1946, at the Post Office at Harrington, Delaware, under the Act of March 3, 1879.

It would be nice if someone would come up with a plan for the establishment of quarters for the preservation of old newspapers, maps, deeds, photographs, and other relics of memorabilia of days gone by.

With a widespread knowledge of the existence of a depository, many relics would be deposited there for posterity, instead of being discarded by disinterested persons.

Many old photographs disappear at public sales. A copy of Byles Map of Kent County For 1859 was found by Charles Derrickson in Gaines Alley.

Occasionally, persons bring old newspapers and magazines into The Journal office because they know we are interested in publishing articles about them.

Recently, Fred Nelson Melvin and Keith Burgess, our singing mailman, found some old newspapers and magazines in the attic of a house on the Lewis, or Al Ross farm, near Vernon.

A copy of "The Delineator," a women's magazine, of July, 1910, is worthy of more than passing interest. The first thing that caught our eye was the fact that most illustrations were made from drawings instead of from the customary photos of today.

"The Delineator" was replete with illustrations, in black and white and in colors, of women's fashions, made from drawings. Milady of 1910 wore a hat with ostrich feathers and a veil.

The advertisers of today were often represented in the magazine of 1910. Names of standard brands represented were Kodak, Palmolive, Colgate, Postum, Mennen's, Old Dutch Cleanser, Jell-O, The Equitable Life Assurance Society, Quaker Oats, Coca-Cola, Heinz, Karo, Lifebouy, and Pond's.

Also found in the attic was a copy of "Butterick Fashions" for spring, 1911.

Newspapers found included the following: portions of "The Denton Journal," published by Melvin and Jomson, dated April 23, 1927; June 2, 1928, and Feb. 9, 1929.

The Journal, for Sat., Feb. 9, 1929, carried an article on the death of George E. "Dutch" Swain, of Harrington. In part, it read: "As a young man he took up school teaching as a profession and he was known as an excellent mathematician and a stern disciplinarian."

Another newspaper found was the "Federalsburg Courier." From the Vernon letter in the issue of Fri., June 8, 1928, we note:

Mr. and Mrs. Mortimer Calloway of California are spending some time at Harrington with his brother, Tharp. He formerly resided near here and Mrs. Calloway is his third wife. She is from the West.

Mrs. Pearl Slaughter has resigned as teacher at Maple Grove School and accepted a position at Houston.

Other newspapers found in the attic include issues of "The Sun," Baltimore, for June 2 and June 10, 1928; "The Fellowship Forum," June 2, 1928, a weekly published in Washington, D. C., and a farm and garden section of "The Philadelphia Record," printed Thurs., April 26, 1928.

The articles from the farm supplement are of especial interest. In brief, here are some items, without benefit of quotation marks:

J. Clifton Green, of Mendenhall, Pa., purchased 779 acres near Centerville, Md., on which to breed and raise muskrats.

Frosts killed hope of good fruit crop in Delaware.

Richard Barclay, of Riverton, N. J., lends his bees to orchardists for pollination purposes.

Mrs. Harold Barker, of Chestertown, Md., raises turkeys. Mrs. Barker lives among the birds in an improvised movable house, equipped with firearms.

Sussex County farmers are thinking about raising English walnuts, almond and pecan trees. John W. Hershey, of Downingtown, Pa., an authority on nut culture, thinks our climate is favorable.

Four hundred mushroom growers in the southern sections of Chester and Delaware counties produced 85 per cent of the cultivated mushrooms raised in the United States.

The real beginning of the sweet potato industry in Delaware was made about 68 years ago by James Elzey, near Laurel.

NO DIVIDING BARRIER.

By Samuel A. Short Jr. Life is no dividing barrier. Whether Friendship, Hate, or Foe.

It is just what you make it. While you're wondering where to go.

There'll be no hardships to bear. If you'll be a firm believer With all dangers you beware, By deceiving the deceiver.

Some may try to spoil you, Till the germs of sickness prevail. Just you always be ever true, Then you should never fail.

Cultivate a growing friendship, Lay prejudices all aside. Kill the Hate with smothered kindness, Let the Lord in you abide.

HUMILITY

J. Harry Wright. O pilgrim why thy struggle for power? Why seek ye for fame and wealth?

E'en though it be the trend of today, Should this be the quest for thyself? Perchance thou wilt not blame others

For purple dreams of fame and gain; Could ye, like many, be building Thy beautiful castles in Spain?

Have ye not heard of riches on earth Greater than gems, land, or gold? Nor heard of the treasures of Heaven

Whose wealth has never been told? Would ye, on earth, such treasures find, O traveller on life's highway? God gives rich gifts to all seekers, When they humbly kneel to pray.

Angus Cattle Numerous Northeast of Harrington

Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Bache, of Canton Farm, St. Michaels, Md., and Editor C. H. Burgess got an insight on the raising of Angus cattle northeast of town Friday afternoon in a tour of some of the herds in the area. Mr. Bache is president of the Eastern Shore Aberdeen-Angus Breeders Association under whose auspices the Baches made the tour.

The first stop was at George W. Cain's Fair View Farms, on the Harrington-Frederica nine-foot road. Mr. Cain has a registered herd of 19 brood cows, 14 calves, and an Elgan Eston 8th bull, with the male coming from Fair Hope Farm at Chestertown, Md. Represented in the herd are a number of females from the Black Watch herd, at Land's End Farm, Queenstown, Md., with other stock from Tulip Forest Farms, Chestertown; Wimberly Farms, Princess Anne, and Alan McGregor and Son at Worton, Md.

The next stop was at Marvel Acres, near Marvels Crossroads, where Bill Taylor has a bull calf, Fair View of Erica, purchased from Mr. Cain. Mr. Taylor was not at home but we saw five registered heifers, bred to an Elgan Eston Quality 4th bull, which were purchased last fall. Three of these females had calves and the entire consignment had been but a short time on a pasture of Ladino, lespedeza, redtop, and orchard grass after wintering in the woods. Bill plans on increasing his herd, by natural growth, to about 30 head.

Down the road a piece from Marvel Acres, near Killen's Pond, we met R. R. Coulbourn who is feeling his way along with a small herd with the intention of expanding it.

Mr. Coulbourn has a Black Watch bull, six cows, four heifers, and three calves. He likes the Black Watch cows because they are heavy milkers. He expects to add 20 to 25 acres of pasture from an adjoining farm he recently purchased from the Simpson estate.

The Marvel Crossroads farmer also goes in for broilers and Bronze turkeys. He has in 200 poults. When they are large enough they will run in a patch of sunflowers which are just beginning to get their growth.

Tom Robbins, at Laws Church, was not at home but Mrs. Robbins told us something of their herd. They have 20 grade Angus cows, bred to a purebred bull. They also raise purebred Hereford hogs, getting their cue from Bill Eliason, their son-in-law. In the porcine contingent are two boars. Mrs. Robbins says she likes Herefords because they are gentle, are easily fed, and are good bacon hogs.

James Postles, who lives between Frederica and Milford, was not at home, but his wife, a Milford schoolteacher, showed us the herd, probably the largest in this area, since it numbered more than 100 head, cows and calves included. This herd, headed by a Fair Promise bull, was running on a rye pasture. There is an electric fence around the pasture. The cattle also have the run of some woods in which they winter.

The John Forest farm, between Houston and Milford, was visited next but Mr. Forest was not at home. Mr. Forest has a substantial herd of quality stock, including an excellent Black Bardolier bull, a number of fine cows and calves with excellent conformation.

European Flea Beetle Attacks Delaware Crops

The European flea beetle, a newcomer among the insect pests in Delaware, is growing in numbers in our state. This was reported last year in a survey of insects attacking cole crops by Dr. H. E. Milliron of the entomology department, University of Delaware Agricultural Experiment Station. Now he reports that the pest is already doing its destructive work this season.

The beetle was extremely abundant in Delaware on cabbage, cauliflower, and broccoli last year. It was also found on kale, radishes, and turnips.

Milliron recommends DDT for control of this pest during most of the growing season. When harvest time nears, rotenone or T. E. P. should be used, because of their shorter residual effects.

The European flea beetle does its first feeding, and greatest damage, along the margins of outer leaves. Later it feeds on the inner leaf area, and also on the more central leaves of the plants.

"It was probably introduced on the east coast within the past ten years," says Milliron. "It thrived in this climate, feeding on abundant wild mustard, as well as planting of the cole crops. So rapid has been the increase that more intensive control measures are now needed."

Alfalfa Weevil, New Insect In Md., Found Spreading

Alfalfa weevil, first reported in Baltimore and Anne Arundel counties two weeks ago, now has been found in Harford, Howard, Montgomery and Carroll Counties. This infestation is the first to be found east of the Mississippi River, entomologists at the University of Maryland say.

T. L. Bissell, Extension entomologist who found the alfalfa weevils, reports that the insects are most abundant in the vicinity of Long Green and Bel Air, but that they were found on all points visited between the Maryland line, Bel Air, Jessup, Sykesville, Westminster and Union Hills. No weevils were found on the edge of western Carroll County, or in Knoxville in Frederick County.

Both adult weevils and larvae were found. The adult weevil is chestnut brown and is 3/16 of an inch in length. It feeds on the tips and leaves. The larvae are yellow or green grubs and shred the terminal growth of alfalfa. Eggs are deposited on the stems of plants.

Larval feeding was reduced on strips in one alfalfa field that had been sprayed for spittlebug. However, adults were plentiful throughout the field, in both sprayed and unsprayed areas, Bissell says.

The alfalfa weevil is a serious pest in western alfalfa regions. There it is controlled mainly by cultural methods, but emergency spraying is often needed.

The weevil is a strong flier and may spread by that means, the entomologists say. Long-distance movement is usually through transportation of hay or other alfalfa products from infested areas. Since Maryland is a consumer and not an exporter of hay there is little likelihood of other states becoming infested from Maryland.

The State Entomologist, Dr. Ernest N. Cory, of the University of Maryland, in instituting a cooperative survey with the Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine, U. S. D. A., to determine the extent of the infestation.

Diethyl DDT sprays early in the season are effective against the adult weevil. Methoxychlor, parathion or calcium arsenate are used to control the larvae. Parasites of the alfalfa weevil have been found to work effectively in the west, and may be equally important in Maryland.

EFFICIENT DAIRY FARMING

Develop feeding and management practices that will assure efficient preservation and utilization of the feed for high milk yields.

Roughage feeds (hay, silage, and pasturage) should be used to the utmost in feeding all dairy animals. The better the quality of the roughage, the more the animals will eat and the less grain they will require. It is essential not only to grown an abundance of roughage crops, but also to harvest or graze them while they are in their most nutritious stage and to store the harvested crops in a way that will save a high percentage of the nutrients grown.

THINGS TO DO

Feed all milking cows an abundance of high-quality roughage at all times (pasture, hay, and silage).

Feed grain along with the roughage only when it pays to do so, the amount depending on the price ratio of grain and milk.

Make every effort to provide the protein needed in the dairy ration from home-grown feeds, pasturage, harvested forage, and other concentrates, select them on the basis of cost per pound of digestible nutrients.

To produce high-quality roughage, cut the crop at an early stage of maturity and store as soon as possible to reduce losses of protein and other nutrients. In areas where it is difficult to make good-quality field cured hay, make the crop into silage or barn cured hay.

To provide abundant grazing, supplement permanent pastures with annual grazing crops and crop-rotation pastures.

Graze pastures in rotation so cows will always be feeding on the young growing grass.

When pasturage is too short or too mature to maintain milk flow, supplement the pastures by feeding hay, silage, or grain.

When there is more pasturage than the herd will eat, especially during the early stages of growth, harvest a part for hay or silage.

Maintain yearling heifers on good pasture or harvested forage; and raise heifer calves by feeding plenty of high-quality hay and skim milk, or calf starters, and limited amounts of grain.

Provide plenty of water, salt, and shade to animals on pasture.

Foreign Trip Open For Delaware Farm Youth

A trip to the Southern Hemisphere as part of the International Farm Youth Exchange is now open to young Delawareans. Four H Clubs, Home Demonstration Clubs, and Granges, as well as other organizations throughout Delaware have contributed to make this trip possible.

Application blanks are available in all county 4-H Club offices, and at the Agricultural Extension Service, University of Delaware, Newark. Delaware's representative will have to be a high school graduate, between 20 and 28 years old, and reared on a farm. Ability to speak the language of the host country will help.

The young ambassador will leave the United States in December and return in May with all expenses paid. Mexico, Australia, Brazil, and Chile are among the countries participating in the exchange. While in the foreign land, our delegate will work on farms, and learn to know the farm people.

Late Blight Found On Shipped in Tomato Plants

The fungus which causes late blight of tomatoes has been found on tomato plants shipped from southern states. Cankers were present on the stems and approximately half of the transplants were killed in the field. Spores which are capable of spreading the disease were present. These tomato plants had not been inspected or certified before shipment.

Plant pathologists of the University of Maryland Extension Service urge all importers of tomato plants to insist on inspection and certification of plants in the state of origin. Late blight can be very destructive to tomatoes especially when introduced early at planting time.

KENT FARMERS CAN CONTROL CORN ORER

Kent County farmers can control the European corn borer by taking steps now. Tarbell, County Agent, has listed several control measures.

For good borer control, plant at the right time, use adapted hybrids, apply insecticides if needed, and kill borers who live over the winter in old cornstalks.

The 1951 Delaware loss caused by the corn borer has been estimated at 150,000 bushels by Dr. L. A. Stearns, University of Delaware Entomologist. This would be valued at $289,000.

The best way to kill borers which survive through the winter is to destroy old cornstalks and stubble by plowing them under and covering completely. Spraying or dusting with DDT or ryania at the right time and in the correct way is one of the best ways to kill borers. You can get more complete information by calling on Tarbell at Dover, phone Dover 2621 or 2886.

Apply Fertilizer Two Ways For Best Lima Bean Yields

What's the best way to put fertilizer on lima beans? Should you drill it in before planting, or should it be banded on at planting time?

That's what the plant scientists at the University of Delaware Agricultural experiment station wanted to know. They set up a three-year test near Houston, and here's what they found.

"Banding fertilizer with a two row bean planter was more effective in promoting high yields than drilling fertilizer before seeding," according to E. M. Rahn, who carried on the research.

The best yields in the whole experiment came two ways. One was a combination of drilling and banding 500 pounds of a complete fertilizer was drilled before planting and 250 pounds was banded at planting time. The other successful method was broadcasting five tons of poultry manure before plowing, followed by banding 500 pounds of complete fertilizer at planting.

Complete details of the tests are available from the experiment station in Bulletin No. 291, "Drilling vs. Banding of Fertilizer for Lima Beans."

moving eyes

A "moving eye" doesn't actually move out of position unless, that is, you're a flounder. A fully grown flounder has two eyes on one side of his head and none on the other. When he was a baby, he had an eye on each side, like any normal fish, but he took to lying on one side in the sand until one eye slowly traveled around the back of his head and took up a permanent place next to its brother eye.

Testing Project

Further facilities for the study of sea water corrosion are being added to the Harbor Island Station of the Kure Beach corrosion project, near Wilmington, North Carolina. Included in the new facilities will be a full-size salt water evaporator and distillation unit to study the effects of water treatment and design on corrosion and scaling of such units—especially as used on board ship.

Mrs. Doris Clough and children were Sunday visitors among relatives and friends in our village.

Roy Voshell and children, of Wyoming, were with Mr. and Mrs. Milton Kemp for a while on Sunday.

Our minister, Rev. John J. Jones, was barely able to be with us Sunday having been in the Kent General Hospital where an operation was found necessary to remove a piece of thin wire about two inches long that had been driven through his clothing and into his abdomen sufficiently deep as to conceal the wire. The wire was cut off and driven into his body by a power driven rotary lawn mower.

Robert Valdesere Sr. was seriously injured during the weekend by having a tree trap him and break his back besides several very severe bruises. He is now in the Kent General Hospital where a cast has been placed around his body and grave fears are reported as to whether he will have the near normal use of his legs since the ligaments were torn loose in such a wide area. Our prayers and good wishes are with "Bob"; he's one of us.

The corn planters are clicking away around here now while in the adjacent field another tractor prepares the soil for more planting as soon as the first plot is completed.

Hard by the first setting of early tomato plants are showing the row and are now ready to cultivate the first time.

Considerable damage was done to our grain crops in this area by the heavy rainfall during the winter and spring.

Male Fireflies Carry the Torch For Lesser Sex

WASHINGTON, D.C.—The firefly season is in full swing, and welcome to millions of Americans is the gentle, lamptoting beetle which brightens warm summer nights.

East of the Rockies along a wide, populous band centered on the 40th parallel, each year brings a race to see which arrives first—the first day of June or the earliest "lightning bugs."

Millions have marveled at the firefly and its strange, cold light. Few, however, know that those on the wing are males signaling to flightless females among the blades of grass. Flashes by the grounded sex answer the airborne glimmers at intervals precise to the split second. Frederick G. Vosburgh writes in the National Geographic Magazine.

1,500 Species
Like lovers everywhere, Vosburgh observes, fireflies are vulnerable to jest. Shine a small flashlight from aloft in imitation of the male beetle's signal and you may get an answer from a female in her bower. Or, from the grass, flash an answer to an aerial spark at the proper ladylike interval, and down comes the male to your mating beacon—and perhaps a few of his rivals too.

Science knows more than 1,500 species of the firefly-family Lampyridae—each with its own system of signals. The common firefly of the eastern United States flashes at intervals of about six seconds, usually on a short, rising flight. Codes of some other kinds suggest series of dots and dashes.

England knows the glowworm, as the female and larva are called, but its flying males are virtually fireless. The same is true of northern Europe and our own far West. There are fireless species east of the Rockies as well as those that flash. "Fire beetles" that sustain their light for minutes at a time serve as lamps and party jewels in the American Tropics. The Japanese collect fireflies to brighten night festivities.

Sparking in Unison
Rhythmic flashing of firefly legions has been reported by observers in southeast Asia for two centuries. What invisible cheerleader they follow remains their own secret, Vosburgh comments. Scientists give this explanation as to why our own fireflies sometimes flash in unison over a half-acre area:

A male gets a response from a female, and other males near by wink back, taking their cue from her or from the male who found her first. Their lights together are enough to stimulate another female several yards away. Males near her then answer with one accord, a third female responds, and the chain reaction is on.

Firefly light, scientists calculate, has a usual strength of one 400th candlepower. Cold light of this kind can be produced in the laboratory by oxidation of certain chemical substances, but only at a cost that bars it from practical use.
