"He's Ready"

"He's ready" is one of the idioms we have heard only in Delaware. Maybe it is used elsewhere; we do not know. Anyway, its meanings are varied and conflicting and as intricate as rabbit trails in a briar patch. Traversing a maze of wild honeysuckle vines and possum briars would be infinitely easier than ascertaining the multitude of definitions of "he's ready."

There is, however, one characteristic of all definitions of this jet-propelled simile: the speaker usually utters it with the inference it is a term of praise, despite the fact he may not approve of the person or action which prompted the statement.

For example, when it was mentioned an individual had been drunk for several days, a local barber beamed, "he's ready." Had he been praising a hot catcher on the town's baseball team, he would have used the same term and in the same manner. Referring to a Harringtonian, who works night and day and who is always figuring out an angle to make a buck, a fellow said, "He's ready."

Foreigners have difficulty in learning the English language because a word or term may have a variety of meanings. This has seldom been the case in our experience with several European tongues. Our term, "Okay, or O.K.," is an instance, meaning the affirmative or approval. But its meanings are hardly as varied as those of "he's ready," or "he's a ready bird."

Let a fellow get caught stealing chickens and "he's ready," someone says. Let him knock a homerun in a baseball game, and "he's ready." Let him steal second when it is occupied by another runner and "he's a ready bird," says a fan in the bleachers.

Probably a definition of this simile is that a person is ready to do anything or nothing. We suppose a person ready to do nothing isn't ready, in the fullest sense of the word. Nevertheless, one hears, "he's a ready bird," when referring to a person who does nothing.

He who steals his mother-in-law's false teeth at Thanksgiving is "a ready bird."

Harry Maag Dies

Harry Maag, Dover sporting goods dealer and sportsman, died shortly after 2 a.m. Tuesday in Jefferson Hospital, Philadelphia. He was 39.
Graduated from Dover High School in 1933, Mr. Maag became associated with a brother, Albert, in the operation of a sporting goods store which bears the family name.
When Albert died five years ago, Harry continued to operate the store in partnership with another brother, Frank, of Dover, who survives him.
Well known in sporting circles, and the owner of several pointers and setters, Mr. Maag made annual trips to southern states during the hunting seasons.
A World War II Army veteran, he was a member of Dover's Walter L. Fox Post No. 2, American Legion.
In addition to his brother, Mr. Maag is survived by five sisters, the Misses Elizabeth, Lucy and Helen Maag, and Mrs. Carrie Hayes and Mrs. Anna Knight. All are Dover residents.
In April Mr. Maag was the defendant in a New Castle County Superior Court civil suit in which Arlington P. Bullock, Dover grocer,

4-H COUNTY DAIRY JUDGING WINNERS ANNOUNCED

Announcement was made today by Delmar Young, extension dairyman, University of Delaware, of the winners in the Kent County Dairy Judging Contest held Thurs., July 9, on three farms in the county. There were 35 contestants representing seven 4-H Clubs in the county.
The winning club was the Houston Cardinal 4-H Club with a score of 1795. Leaders of this club are Mr. and Mrs. John Eisenbrey and Mrs. Martha Benson. Second place team was the Smyrna Bucking Bronco 4-H Club with a score of 1780. Third place team was the Vernon Honey Bee 4-H Club with a score of 1760. The high individual scorer was Gene Short, the leader of the Smyrna Bucking Bronco 4-H Club, with a score of 625 out of a possible 800. Placing second was Johnnie Benson, Houston; and third was Marvin Davis, Milford. The Ayrshire classes were set up and judged at the farm of Alvin Allen, Camden; Jersey classes were judged at Joe Moore's farm, North of Dover.

The eight high individuals will judge at the state contest held at the Kent and Sussex Fair. The winning team receives a gold cup. This award had been won twice previously by the Vernon Honey Bee Club which placed third this year.

SEARCH FOR DISEASE RESISTANT CANTALOUPES

"What's in a cantaloupe?" might bring the same blank expression from most people as the question "How is a duck?" An exception is Professor L.R. Detjen, of the University of Delaware.

Detjen not only knows what's in a cantaloupe — he puts it there himself — in a breeding project involving 34 selections from four original varieties, and 3 1-2 acres of land. His work will be shown to the public during Farm Field Day, Aug. 5, at the research station, Georgetown.
Present Delaware melons have a good size, netting, orange flesh and good shipping quality, says Detjen. But too often they lack high eating quality which every one expects. This mediocre flavor is sometimes due to the variety, but more often is faulty maturity. Diseases such as downy mildew Detjen hopes his project will result in a high quality variety, with improved disease resistance. Such a melon would do much to improve lost markets and better prices to Delaware growers. Results would prove useful in other states, too. Constant contact with other experiment stations helps to prevent duplication of extensive projects such as cantaloupe breeding.

The melons on these varied offspring will be maturing around Field Day time. Visitors will be able to compare disease resistance and fruit characteristics. Prof. Detjen will be on hand to explain and answer questions.

Blue Hydrangeas, destitute of perfume, In bouquets as a memorial are you.
A sentiment of flower of beautiful bloom
A memorial of yesteryear so true.
Just your blossoms selected to keep,
Spared through faith and understanding.
Being amply supplied by each fluttering leaf.
By instinct of uncanny commanding.
Every moment with you is pure joy,
Forgetting the fates of others unknown
Tis comfort of love with God's employ,
The beauty of you spiritually shown.
Close to him away from earthly harms,
With sweet thoughts of heavenly things.
You won't be forgotten. Blue Hydrangeas,
But will be cherished with Loving charms.

Freezing Vegetables and Fruits

Many readers of this column have home freezers. Others rent lockers in freezer plants. The latter are usually equipped to prepare the products for freezing, once it is delivered to the plant. There follow directions for preparing garden and farm produce for home freezing.

Lima Bean varieties may be divided into two groups, according to size. For the small (baby) limas, Early Baby Potato, Baby Fordhook and Henderson are good freezers. For large limas (also called potato limas) Fordhook and Concentrated Fordhook are excellent. All these varieties are the dwarf or bush type. For pole limas King of the Garden stands at the head of the list.

Limas should be harvested when only 5 to 10 percent of the beans have changed to white. White beans are overmature, starchy and do not make a satisfactory frozen product. There is progressive reduction of ascorbic acid (vitamin C) as green beans change to a lighter color.

White beans, intermixed with green ones, may be largely separated by brine flotation. If 23 ounces of table salt is completely dissolved in a gallon of water at around 70 degrees F. you will have a 15 percent salt solution. One standard measuring cup of "free-running" salt weighs approximately 10 ounces. Use 3 gallons of this brine in an enameled bucket and add 1 to 2 pounds at a time of thoroughly washed beans. Stir, and allow to settle and skim off floaters with a wire kitchen strainer. Wash the floaters in cold, running water and remove any white or split beans, skins and foreign material by hand picking. Freeze only floaters and cook sinkers for immediate table use.

Blanch baby limas 1-2 minutes, potato limas 2-2 minutes and pole limas 3-2 minutes in actively boiling water. Cool promptly and thoroughly, drain, package and freeze.

Snap beans may also be divided into two general classes, green-podded and wax (yellow) podded. For the green-podded group Giant Stringless Green Pod, Top Crop, Contender, Super-green and Kentucky Wonder (pole) all rank high. Kinghorn Special and Round Pod Kidney Wax are excellent wax beans for freezing. As maturity advances there is a very definite increase in fiber in the walls of the pod. I recommend that the summer crop be harvested before there is any appreciable development of beans in the pod. Larger sized pods may be utilized in the cooler weather of fall.

Three minutes of boiling water is sufficient blanching time for the type of bean just described, for the best color, texture and flavor in the cooked product after freezing. Care should be taken not to overblanch, as this causes an undesirable "sloughing off" of the outer layer of the pod, giving a slimy condition in the cooked pods. Thorough cooling and chilling immediately after blanching is absolutely essential with snap beans, even if necessary to use ice in the second cooling water. Then drain, package and freeze.

Sweet corn is a popular product among home freezers. Among the yellow varieties Seneca Chief cannot be beaten. Golden Cross Bantam, Bantam Evergreen and Aristogold No. 1 are all excellent. Narrow Grain Evergreen, Stowell's Evergreen, Stowell's Evergreen Hybrid 14x5, Country Gentleman and Howling Mob are recommended white varieties.

Harvest at the milk stage by the thumb nail test. This is when the milky juice spurts forth under pressure, while in the late-milk and early dough stage this spurting does not occur. If advanced beyond the milk stage do not freeze. Sugar converts rapidly to starch at high temperatures, as is well illustrated by an experience of the writer in working on a sweet corn breeding project in Florida some years ago. It was found that sugar decreased appreciably when ears were pulled and transported a half-mile to the laboratory, over what the sugar content was for the lot when analyses were made in a mobile lab. right in the field. So, if there is any one crop where speed of preparation counts for more than with others, this is it.

Corn on the cob is generally an inferior frozen product. Mighty apt to have a "cobby" flavor. Cobs take up a lot of space. Make better use of it.

Blanching may be done before corn is cut from the cob, in boiling water from 10 to 15 minutes according to size of ear. After blanching, chill, cut from the cob, package and freeze. Or the kernels may be cut off before blanching. If this is done, blanch 3 to 5 minutes in live, free flowing steam, using your pressure cooker with escape valve open. Then chill, drain, package and freeze.

Next week—More about freezing vegetables and fruits.

IMPROVED BREEDING SERVICE

Improved breeding service to dairy farmers in Kent County is announced by George Robbins, president of the Kent County Artificial Breeders Cooperative Association. The county has been divided into two sections so that farmers may more readily contact the breeding technicians.

The southern half of the county will be served by two technicians, Joseph Taylor and Van Keater, who also operate dairy farms just south of Harrington. Telephone calls will be received as usual at Taylor's Hardware Store in Harrington, at Mr. Keater's home (Harrington 8450), or at the county agent's office in Dover (Dover 2621). These two men, and a third, have undergone a period of intensive training at the University of Delaware and with the Sussex County technician to become qualified for the work. The purpose of the whole program of course is to improve the quality of our dairy animals through the use of proved sires.

The northern half of the county is being served by Jim Reynolds (Tel. Smyrna 3454). Calls for Jim will also be received at the county agent's office in Dover. Questions concerning service may be directed to any of the seven directors of the co-operative, or any of the people mentioned in this article. Besides George Robbins, the other directors in the county are Ellwood Gruwell of Felton, Edgar Dill of Viola, Henry Kozicki of Clayton, Robert Nelson of Harrington, Francis Thomas of Maryland, and Calvin Everett of Dover.

GROW MORE MELONS ON LESS LAND FOR GREATER PROFITS, GOOD SIZE

How to grow more and better crops on less land—that's a common problem among farmers. There does seem to be an answer for watermelons grown in Delaware.

ware. Experiments at the agricultural research substation, Georgetown, have found that watermelons can be grown closer together than most farmers now raise them.

Delaware farmers usually space watermelon plants 10 by 10 feet apart. In 1951, research at Georgetown found that plants spaced 4 by 10 feet apart produced nearly 24 tons of watermelons per acre. The more common 10 by 10 feet planting produced only about 16 tons per acre.

Melons from the closer spacing were just as large as melons from wider spacing. The extra tonnage produced from the closely spaced plants amounted to $250 per acre. Experimental watermelon plots will be shown at Georgetown during the annual Farm Field Day Aug. 5. Similar studies of squash may also be seen at the research station.

Asparagus Production Tested At Georgetown Research Station

Delaware farmers who grow asparagus will see one of the largest experimental asparagus plots in the United States, at the annual Farm Field Day Aug. 5 at the research substation, Georgetown.

Directed by the Agricultural Experimental Station, University of Delaware, the asparagus fields at Georgetown contain 140 plots, each 25 x 50 feet. The project tests the effects of various farming methods on quality and quantity. Practices include lime and fertilizer applications, row mounding, use of poultry manure, cover crops, and different cutting periods.

Yield data from all of these studies will be available at the Field Day on Aug. 5.

Asparagus growing is on the increase in Delaware. Last year's crop totaled 1250 acres and was sold for over $300,000. And the experiments at Georgetown have helped farmers get much of this acreage into good production.

The 1953 harvest showed that the best treatment to increase and spear size was to mound rows six inches high before cutting started in the spring. A sidedressing of 200 pounds per acre of muriate of potash increased both yield and spear size.

Split applications of fertilizer, in spring and fall, have proved better than fertilizer only in the spring, or after cutting. And a 1-2-3 fertilizer ration was the most desirable of four tested. This would be a mixture such as 5-10-15.

One fertilizer treatment was found to decrease asparagus yields. This was the use of poultry manure. Ten tons of poultry manure per acre produced a lower yield than no fertilizer.

The results this year were similar to those observed since the experiments began. The trials started in 1946 and will be finished in 1957.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q—I'm a World War II veteran back on active duty, and my National Service Insurance policy is under waiver. Will I get my insurance dividends all the same?

A—No. National Service Life Insurance policies do not participate in dividends during the period when such premium waiver is in effect.

Q—Will my service at the U. S. Military Academy at West Point count toward my entitlement for Korean GI Bill training?

A—No. The time you spent as a cadet at West Point does not count for training under the Korean GI Bill. The same rule applies to those who attend the U. S. Naval Academy in Annapolis and the U. S. Coast Guard Academy in New London, Connecticut.

Q—I am a disabled World War II veteran, and I've just finished Public Law 16 training. Will VA now find me a job?

A—The law does not give VA responsibility for finding employment for disabled veterans. However, if you wish VA will refer you to an appropriate State or Federal employment agency for this purpose.

Q—what happens if a Korean veteran doesn't apply for GI term insurance within 120 days after his separation from service. Is there any chance of his getting it after that time.

A—No. Under the law you must apply and pay your first premium within 120 days after you leave the service. If you wait longer than that, your chances of getting the insurance are gone for good.

KEEP CHICKENS COOL GIVE THEM AIR

Cross-ventilation is by far the most important factor in keeping chickens cool in hot weather.

That's the advice of Silas McHenry, assistant poultry specialist of the Delaware Agricultural Extension Service.

Staggered windows in the front wall are only one way to have cross-ventilation near the floor as well as near the roof. Frank Tharp's house, near Lewes, is a good example (see picture). The lower windows are opened only during hot weather.

Hinged boards under the eaves in the rear of a house are quite common. Milton Porter, of Lewes, is one of the few who have hinged boards near the floor, for ventilation down where the birds are (see picture). He has 14 inch slots in both front and rear walls of his 24 foot deep house. With cool air coming in at the bottom and going to the top, his house is cool all summer.

Walter Pyle, of Stanton, has two rows of hinged doors, two foot wide, in the rear of his broiler house. When these are open, air circulates freely through the house, and the lifted doors keep driving rains out.

McHenry points to Byard Carman's house at Laurel, as an example of excellent cross-ventilation. It can be opened from ground to roof, both front and rear. On the south side are removable celoglass windows. On the rear wall are 4' by 8' removable panels of asphalt-treated insulation board. These are alternated with panels of imitation glass. The panels, plus the double doors on the end of the house, are removed as needed in the summer. Skylight ventilators help hot air escape through the roof.

Cadet Joshua E. Bullock, son of J. E. Bullock, 39 Center Street, is currently attending Reserve Officers' Training Corps Summer Camp at the Army's Antiaircraft Artillery and Guided Missile Center near El Paso, Tex.

Cadet Bullock, a student at the University of Delaware is one of 1460 senior ROTC cadets from sixty-four colleges and universities in the United States enrolled in the six-week summer antiaircraft artillery training course.

Slim Johnson, just back from a business trip, tells about a hotel he stayed at one night.

"I hit town late and went right to the hotel. There was no clerk at the desk, but there was a sign that said: 'Gone to bed. Rooms $3. Take a key. Pay when you leave. Sleep Well.'"

"Upstairs, the room was real clean, the bed comfortable, and I slept like a log. Came down in the morning—still no clerk. So I left three dollars at the desk and went on. Can you imagine folks that trustful?"

house refrigerator. Of course, the refrigerators today are so much better than the ones of yesterday that yours is almost obsolete. Today the trade-in value is greater than it will be tomorrow, so if you want the latest, drop around and see the new Westinghouse and Philcos. Of course, they defrost themselves.

I know many of you have your own gardens and chickens and beef. It sometimes is very inconvenient to kill a beef for a pound or two of meat, but with a Westinghouse or Philco freezer, all you do is lift the lid or open the door and Aladdin lights the freezer for you to take just as much as you desire without waiting or going to the store as you have your own store. We have these freezers from 8 to 18 cubic foot both chest type and upright. Be wise, economize.

I will be looking for you week after next at the Fair and there you will not see 1953 but 1954 televisions in our booths under the grandstand.

The great Kent & Sussex County Fair is our one organization that Harrington can be proud of and it puts Harrington on the map not just fair week, but year around. Attend it and wear corsets if necessary to keep your sides from splitting at the good entertainment.
