What Is The Meaning of Underprivileged?

We believe the word, "underprivileged" is being over-worked nowadays in this section of Delaware. Without doubt, its usage is justifiable in many cases, and in these instances we take no issue.

where "underprivileged" meant overprivileged. We have heard, from at least two sources, of a case that sticks out like a sore thumb.

A family with seven children came up here from the South to Maryland. The father worked there nearly three months and then got a job on a Delaware dairy farm. He had trouble putting the milkers on the cows. He was then put to driving a tractor and he burnt out the bearings. Exit.

The family then moved into an abandoned farm house in Delaware, where it had rent free. The father, said to be in his early forties and in good health, was offered quarters in a schoolhouse once used as living quarters. He was to pay for the rent in labor. The previous occupant had an apathy for brew and had littered the yard with beer cans. Our immigrant from the South said he didn't want the building because the yard was dirty.

Meanwhile, the family, in Delaware but a short time, had gotten on relief. Their first checks went for large quantities of ice cream, soda water, and cakes, until the store was requested to honor the checks only with food. The family was particular about its food, too. The mother said her children wouldn't eat potatoes and tomatoes—they had to have confections.

One evening she told a storekeeper's wife she had nothing for supper. The latter offered her a dressed chicken—free. The offer was refused, the woman saying "that chickens were dirty."

When the relief checks had been spent, the immigrants said they would have to have more money. Just before school started, our informant said the relief lady was asked to come down and outfit the kids for school. Home was never like this.

Meanwhile, the head of the family had manifested a decided antipathy to work. Farmers, looking for a hand for a few days work, found the newcomer "had to go somewhere" when they asked him to help clean a ditch bank or do other work. One broiler raiser had this to offer: He offered a home with electric lights and bath. He had work for father and a son. He asked the father to work a few days to see how employer and employe would get along. The offer was not accepted. He would pick tomatoes but only if he would get 15 cents per basket.

There is plenty of work around here for those who want it.

The question arises: How much money is it going to cost the state, you and I, to support this family?

Harrington needs an addition to the police force which will enable it to operate around the clock, seven days a week. It is no news that we do not have such a force now. Ask the hot rods who race around the streets Sunday afternoons.

The Journal's Rural Photo Quiz Page has run its course. Besides creating considerable interest, the feature revealed some facts which should be of considerable interest to our advertisers. For example, more than 69 per cent of the inhabitants of the farms shown in the picture on the page, subscribed to or purchased The Harrington Journal from a newsstand.

Of the remaining less than 31 per cent, some persons read their neighbor's paper, it was revealed in the interviews conducted in this office when the farmers came in to pick up, free, their framed photo and certificates entitling them to free merchandise.

All 26 photos, shown in the 26-week series, were identified. Fourteen persons were subscribers to this newspaper, four purchased the newspaper from newsstands. Five persons subscribed after pictures of their farms appeared, and three did not subscribe.

When the Rural Photo Quiz Page started this year, we told the aerial photographer to pick farms at random in an area of roughly 100 square miles. Neither the photographer nor the editor knew one farm from the other. In fact, we identified only two farms in 26 pictures.

The conclusion, we find, then, is that more than 69 per cent of the farmers in the area covered read The Harrington Journal regularly, with others in the area, reading it from time to time. Not only were these farmers located on local rural routes, but also on those of Farmington, Felton and Houston. We believe this is something our advertisers should know.

"Life Magazine" is merely a New York Mirror or a New York Daily News—with illustrations.

Why do Harrington people spend money in going many miles to see stock car races, when they can see them on the streets here any day without paying a cent?

Judging from the offensive odor of the two or three of its productions we have read, the self-styled "Book of the Month" Club should be the "Book of The Weak."

Nineteen for dinner and only service for twelve was the problem of a spotted Poland China sow belonging to Joe Campbell, of Geep. The sow farrowed 19 pigs Sunday and Mr. Campbell gave away 7 so the remainder all could eat at the first table.—Salem, Ark., Headlight.

Only once in our life have we exceeded three minutes in a telephone conversation, and that was around 1930, when we were trying to persuade Hon. Josiah Marvel, the original Josiah Marvel, to come here to speak at our annual chamber of commerce dinner. There is about only one legitimate reason for speaking longer than three minutes—and that is when the other woman on the line has bought a new hat.

The wilting weather of a week ago would seem mild when we recall the hot day in Arizona described by the late Irvin Cobb. "A dog was chasing a rabbit," said Cobb, "and it was so hot, both of them were walking."

Our personal nomination for the most excellent seafood dinner on the shore—that served by the Ocean House, Lewes Beach, on the occasion of the Harrington Rotary Club's Ladies Night.

THE COMMODORE CURSED

A long time ago, When Commodore Vanderbilt was the big railroad boss, he showed his disdain for his customers by saying, "The public be damned!"

The railroads had no competition then, but today, when there is so much competition in transportation, as, indeed, there is in everything, railroad men have reason to regret that brusque utterance of Vanderbilt, for his attitude, reflecting the attitude of so many railroads up to the early twenties, has cost the railroads billions of dollars. About twenty-five years ago, the railroads began to realize the value of public relations, because the very existence of the railroads—indeed the existence of any enterprise—depends upon a friendly and cooperative policy toward the public.

Until recently, Harrington had pretty good bus service, with the buses of two companies coming into town—now we have only one company operating in Harrington proper—the other one goes by the town. You have to go out to Highway 13 to catch it, a distance of probably half a mile from the business section, and more than a mile if you live in certain sections of the town. The Washington and Baltimore buses come through the town, but you can't catch one of them here—you have to go out to the highway, and ride back into and through town.

Is the time element so important to this bus company that its vehicles must play the mountain and Mahomet game? Let's see what it does with the time it "saves" by giving Harrington the run-around. We can tell you what it did with that time—and a lot more time—one day some two or three weeks ago. With several other people, we walked out to the highway to catch the bus. It went up highway 13 to just beyond Blackbird, when it left that highway and went to Middletown. From Middletown it went back to Highway 13 at Odessa; up 13 a few hundred yards and again it turned to the left over a jarring road to Mt. Pleasant, crossed the canal and, wandering around came to a village. On inquiry, we found the name of the village to be Kirkwood, but no one told us the name of the state. Finally, we returned to the highway and continued to Wilmington.

And in all that mysterious mileage meandering the bus picked up only one passenger between Middletown and Wilmington.

Returning several days later, in the evening, we came to a place, believed to be Comegys Corner, turned off there and soon came to Kirkwood again. After crossing the canal, we came to Mt. Pleasant, and could see the reflection of the lights in Middletown. But we didn't go directly to Middletown. We had to ride the washboard back to 13, then down to Odessa—and then back to Middletown. Between Wilmington and Middletown, the bus did not pick up a passenger.

What is this bus company trying to do—make us an isolationist?

Kent Home Doings

By Charlotte L. Swanson
Kent County Home
Demonstration Agent

I have asked Mrs. Francis Roughley, president of the Oak Grove Home Demonstration Club, to write Kent Home Doings this week. I am sure that you will enjoy your visit with Mrs. Roughley, and we will look forward to hearing from other guest columnists in the future.

September is here and though the days are hot and we do not feel like doing anything extra, nevertheless now is the time to get our plants, vines, etc., ready to take into the house for winter.

Many times we wait until late September or October to get our plants started. Then we wonder why we don't have pretty blooming plants for Christmas or even Thanksgiving.

Take slips from begonias, sultanas, coleus, or geraniums now. Put them directly into your containers; pottery, clay pots, tin cans or any container which you have or like. Containers such as tin cans should have holes punched in the bottoms for drainage. Begonias, sultanas and coleus will also root in a glass of water. When they have quite a few long hair roots, they may be transferred to your container filled with carefully prepared soil. I use one part good garden soil; one part well rotted cow manure; one part sand, well mixed.

Into the bottom of the container put a few pebbles or broken crockery, so that the soil will not become packed, thus causing poor drainage. After the soil mixture is prepared, plant your cuttings carefully. Water well and set in partial shade for several days. Then they may be moved to a porch where they will be protected from strong winds, direct sunlight and frost. Before the nights are very chilly they should be moved into the house and placed near the sunny windows, which you wish them to be for the winter months.

Geraniums really do better started in small pots late in May, but it might be worth a try to start them now. African violets should never be left out of doors at any time. The sun will scorch the leaves and they just won't stand draughts and winds. But now is the time they do best for me, repotted. Loosen the soil around the edge of the pot with a knife. Carefully invert the pot, holding the plant with the other hand. Shake the old soil from the pot. After you have washed the inside thoroughly, place the violet back in the pot. With a large tablespoon or small trowel, gently fill in the soil mixture around the plant. If you get soil on leaves, it may be washed off with a small sprinkling can but must not let the sunlight fall upon them until they become dry again. After you have them repotted, water well with warm water. Never use cold water on violets. They just don't like it. Put them in an east or north window for a few days, away from direct sunlight.

I have tried well rotted woods soil for my violets, but I like the above mentioned mixture. If you wish to start some new plants, just pinch off a leaf with a long stem on it. Put it into a very small pot with about one-half inch of stem above the soil. They root thicker in just plain sand, but must be kept well watered.

Now is also the time to cut some pieces of ivy, philodendron, wandering jew, or similar vines which you may like to bring into the house for winter decoration and enjoyment. I find philodendron does best in pottery, either in water or soil. Ivy and wandering jew do best in clear glass. They do better also placed where they get a little sunshine some time during the day. Philodendron grows either with or without direct sunlight.

During September while grapes are very plentiful, you might like to make some grape sweetmeats or conserve for winter use. Here is an old cherished recipe:

8 lbs. grapes, 2 oranges, 4 lbs. sugar, 1 1/2 lbs. seeded raisins. Squeeze pulp of grape from skins. Cook until soft enough to strain out the seeds. Strain through cheese cloth and bring again to a boiling point. Add sugar, oranges (using pulp and peel sliced fine); raisins. Add skins of grapes. Boil 45 minutes or until similar to thick marmalade. Put into glasses or jars and seal.

DOOMED EVERGREEN SEEDLINGS NOW REACH RECORD PRODUCTION

A few years ago a little-known fungus disease almost wiped out the production of white pine and Douglas fir seedlings in Delaware. Then a scientist from the University of Delaware developed a treatment which now provides a record production of seedlings.

Dr. Robert Cox described his work this week (Tuesday) at the annual meeting of the American Institute of Biological Sciences in Madison, Wis. Using a combined treatment of soil fumigation and foliage spray, Dr. Cox found a double barreled method of protecting conifer seedlings from the time of germination until the seedlings leave the plant bed two to four years later.

The treatment has also increased the growth rate of young evergreens. Being free of parasites, the white pine and Douglas fir seedlings grew as rapidly in two years as they did formerly in three or four years.

Dr. Cox finds the disease is serious in other states. New Jersey, Virginia, and North Carolina report considerable damage from this fungus, Cylindrocladium scoparium. A recent report indicates the disease is also present in Pennsylvania. While the fungus attacks northern conifers such as white and red pine it does not harm southern conifers like the loblolly pine.

In developing the treatment, Dr. Cox first fumigated the seed bed with chloropicrin or formaldehyde two weeks before seeding to reduce the soil population of the fungus. This protected seedlings from phases of the disease known as damping-off and root-rot. By the second year, however, the fungus had gradually built up again in the soil. The disease reached advanced stages of stem canker and needle blight which could kill the plant if left unchecked.

Dr. Cox reasoned that stem canker and needle blight could be controlled by suitable foliage fungicide. He tested several fungicides and found excellent control with Bordeaux mixture, Manzate, Parzate, and ArasanSFX.

The above control program is now in full practice at the State Forest Tree Nursery at Lincoln. Even higher production records for seedlings are expected this year. The control program is being adopted in other states.

GEORGETOWN PROGRAM ANNOUNCED FOR JUNIOR BROILER CONTEST

Future leaders in Delaware's 66-million dollar broiler industry meet in Georgetown Sept. 16 for the finals of the annual junior broiler contest. The program gets under way at 1 p. m. in Jones Memorial Hall.

Awards will be presented by Walter Pyle of Stanton, president of the sponsoring Delaware Poultry Improvement Association. Introductory remarks will be made by J. Edward McIlvaine, chairman of the DPIA education-research committee. W. T. McAllister, extension marketing specialist, will explain how the judges selected the winners.

The first prize is $25 and a trophy from the DPIA. Second prize is $20, third prize $15, and fourth prize $10. Contestants placing 5th through 10th each receive $7.50. Those placing 11th through 20th receive $5.00.

There will also be a contest for judging dressed birds, scheduled for 1:30.

Contestants are reminded to deliver their six best cockerels to the Swift and Company Dressing Plant in Georgetown Monday, Sept. 14, between 3 and 8 p. m. A shipping tag should be attached to the container in which birds are delivered. Contestants may combine loads of chickens for delivery to the plant.

Each contestant must turn in a record sheet of the project. In selecting birds for the contest, they should have the same weight, size and body type. The birds should have broad, well rounded, well fleshed breasts. The backs should be wide, long, and straight. The thighs and drumsticks should be plump and meaty.

PET DAIRY CHATS

James N. Goerger, Felton, has established an efficient dairy enterprise since he began farming in 1949.

Goerger's 40-acre farm, located 1 1/2 miles north of Felton on the Felton-Viola Road, is now supporting a herd of 12 dairy cows. The dairy herd and 600 laying hens provide the main source of income on the Goerger farm, says Pet Dairy Chats.

Particular attention has been paid to the establishment of pastures on the farm. At the present time, eight acres of permanent pasture and 1 1/2 acres of sweet Sudan grass are providing ample green forage for the herd. Goerger has followed the extension service recommendations in his farm operation.

The permanent pasture mixture, consisting of 1 pound of Ladino clover, 7 pounds of orchard grass, 3 pounds of red top, 3 pounds of alsike, and 6 pounds of Reed canary grass per acre, was seeded the last week of August. Prior to seeding, one ton of ground limestone and 500 pounds of 2-12-12 fertilizer per acre were applied.

The permanent pasture is divided into four plots which are grazed in rotation, each plot being grazed for about one week and then allowed to recover for a period of three weeks.

A seven-acre field of Kenland red clover provides the legume hay for the dairy herd. The field has been cut twice this year and another cutting is anticipated.

The cows on the Goerger farm enjoy the very best care; they are milked on clean, lined stable floors, and their udders are washed with chlorine water before milking. These factors probably have much to do with the fact that Mr. Goerger's name appeared on the Quality Honor Roll for 1952.

Goerger is a retired Army officer, and is glad to be settled after many years in the service. He and Mrs. Goerger are happy to be able to rear their four sons on a dairy farm.

Frederica

We were proud of our volunteer firemen Friday evening as they marched for the first time in their new uniforms. Harry McSherry, WDOV announcer, also gave us a boost on his broadcast. They will parade again Saturday, in Wilmington, at the State Convention and will be accompanied by the Ladies Auxiliary. The Fire Company, as well as the town's people, should be very proud of the president of the company. He is never too tired or too busy, it seems, to lend a helping hand.

The W. S. C. S. held its first regular meeting Friday evening in the church social room. The election of officers was held, with the following elected: president, Mrs. Thelma Faulkner; vice-president, Mrs. Mary Burris; secretary, Mrs. Mabel Langrell; treasurer, Mrs. Della Wilson; spiritual life, Mrs. Joanne Rogers.

Frederica School opened on Wednesday. Raymond Hancock, from Milton, will be the new principal; Robert Ernie, 7-8 grades; M. Haight, 6th grade; Mrs. Giltenboth, 5th grade; Mrs. Audria MacFadden, 4th grade; Mrs. Elizabeth Woodrow, 3rd grade; Mrs. Eleanor Donovan, 1st grade.

Tuesday evening Miss Nell Lomprey, of Dover, met with the Bowers and Frederica TB Survey Unit to discuss its organization and preparation for units in each of the communities. The X-ray Unit will be in Frederica Sept. 15-16 from noon until 8 p. m., in front of the Fire House. Posters and information will be available from various chairmen. The unit will be in Bowers Sept. 19 from noon to 8 p. m., by the Postoffice. For any information, call Mrs. Madeline T. Powell, Bowers, Frederica-4651; Frederica, Mrs. Mary S. Johnston, Frederica-4883; Zora Tatman, Frederica-3541.

The town was shocked to hear of the sudden passing of Ralph Jester, aged 64, a lifelong resident of Frederica, Sept. 8. He is survived by his wife, a daughter, Mrs. Naomi Robinson, and a son, Clarence Jester, and several grandchildren. Funeral services will be held at his home today at 2 p. m., with the Rev. Ray Jones officiating. Interment at Barratt's Chapel.

WILLOW GROVE So much has happened around here since Rip Van Winkle started his nap, so let's forget that and take off now. The new Sunday School rooms forming an annex to our church are taking on finished shape from the outside. However, some enterprising(?) person or persons removed eight bundles of shingles from the site before the carpenters could get them nailed down. One surely meets, in absentia, some very small people in the course of a lifetime. The former home of Mr. and Mrs. Karl Kuberich is undergoing some remodeling before the new owners move into it. The new dwelling and storehouse of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Beihl is taking on shape quite rapidly. The building will occupy part of the site of the home of the late John Cooper Dill. One of our old landmarks has recently changed owners. The house built by the late William Gooden in either 1876 or 77, and incidentally still covered by the original hand-made 28" cypress shingles, is now occupied by the new owners, the Schmidts, of We are sorry to see a for sale sign on Mrs. Elizabeth Jones Greenly's property. We think they are good neighbors. Anyone desirous of a little home in a nice quiet village where town taxes are nil, where the dogs bark all night and heavy trucks rumble more every day, please contact owner. This is not an ad, please. It is a pleasure to note that one of our citizens who has suffered a long time from very serious bruises is now convalescing at his home, Wallace C. Taylor. Likewise, is Robert Clough also enjoying his front porch after an operation for double hernia. The very best to both of these gentlemen.

WHEELER'S TELEVISION CENTER NEWS Yes, it has happened again. Wheeler has just received the largest shipment of televisions ever received in Harrington. When you look at the skyline, you might say, "Who in the world is he going to sell them to?" Then, again, what is the make? PHILCO! That is the solution. When you stock Philco, there is no gamble and no cut throats, as they are always in demand and never enough on hand to supply the trade as Xmas approaches. That might be an idea—lay it away now for Xmas by paying a small-down payment. These televisions are all equipped for U. H. F. and not only that, but they are 1954 models, not 1953. Of course, there are table models and consoles, both in mahogany or blond, from 17 inches to 29 inches picture tube. Stop in now while the stock is complete and pick just the one you have always wanted, and of course it will be the best PHILCO. Cool evenings are here and the same old thing—heating problem—is at hand. A home half heated is not very comfortable. To eliminate this trouble, you should have a heater designed to heat the required number of feet. Then, again, the oil it takes is another problem and a costly one, especially if you have a heater of the old style, or we'll say, just another heater. Today we have a heater that is built for saving oil as well as heating, and good looking thrown in. Prices start at $64.95. These heaters can only be appreciated when seen. Come in, see them and let us show you the construction so you too will see how they save oil as well as heat. They also come in different designs. Our wall paper for the fall is here and plenty of it. Yes, there are many new designs and prices are right. If you have a room that needs papering or brightening up, Wheeler's is the place to go. Thousands of rolls to select from.
