

Referendum Tomorrow on Bond Issue to Build Field House

A referendum will be held tomorrow afternoon when electors of Harrington Special School District go to the polls to vote on an $80,000 bond issue needed, with other funds, to build a field house.

The polls will open at 1 p. m., Eastern Standard Time, and remain open until 8 p. m., at the Harrington High School.

The state will provide $120,000 if the local school district will supply the $80,000 estimated to be necessary to build the structure.

"The district is in the fortunate position of being able to furnish the needed sum without raising the tax rate," said J. C. Messner, superintendent of Harrington schools. He explained this would be possible because the assessment had increased from $4,840,684.50, in 1952, to $5,198,500.87 this year, thus giving the district increased revenue.

The field house will have a playing floor, two offices for athletic and health program coaches, two locker rooms for girls, two locker rooms for boys, a shower room for girls, a shower room for boys, a heating room and heating plant, a drying room and equipment storage room, all of which are to be properly and adequately equipped in accordance with a plan or program approved by the State Board of Education.

The field house would complete the school district's current building program. The first part, a building designed primarily for pupils of the elementary grades and costing around $522,500, is about completed.

Lions to Back Bond Issue For Field House

The Harrington Lions Club had the local school board as its guest for Monday nights regular meeting. Much discussion of the school's present athletic program took place.

Our school has failed to keep pace during the last several years, and at present no competitive sports program is carried on except for some inter-class games.

The Lions Club believes that competition with other schools in all sports should be inaugurated as soon as facilities are available, and are willing to do their share to make them so. We know that many scholarships are available from the leading colleges for sports, that members of teams make invaluable contacts by being contestants, and that a better knowledge of dealing with their fellow man is gained sooner on the athletic field than elsewhere. Also the top money earning people in this country today is in the sports world. Let's give our boys and girls an even break.

The school board announced that our athletic program would be broadened as soon as facilities become available. To this end, they said a field house is possible, without any increase in taxes, if the people of our community so desire. The state has made available $120,000 and the district needs to raise $80,000. A referendum will be held Sat., Oct. 3, from 1 to 8, at the school house to vote on this bond issue. The Lions Club agrees that the community should support this program and make available the facilities we need for public meetings and athletic events. We don't want Harrington to have any better than other communities; let's make it equal to the others.

Y., son of the president, informing her that her husband was well and soon would be home. Mr. and Mrs. Eisenhower are on their way to Ft. Benning, Ga.

Mrs. Satterfield expects her husband home the first of November. He will be aide to General Jenkins on his way home from Korea.

Frederica Man Shot and Killed Resisting Arrest

A 32-year-old Frederica man, wanted on a charge of assault with a pistol, and believed to have been armed with the gun as he wrestled with a state trooper, was shot and killed by the officer Sunday morning.

The shooting occurred about 5:20 a. m., outside the home of Robert Williams, the farm and cannery worker for whom the two troopers had a warrant. Williams was pronounced dead on arrival at the Kent General Hospital. He had been shot twice during the tussle, one bullet striking him in the hip and the fatal shot entering the small of the back and moving upward, penetrating a lung and the heart.

Armed with a warrant for Williams' arrest, one trooper knocked on the front door and, hearing a commotion inside the house, thought the wanted man was attempting to escape. The trooper entered through the front door, while his partner guarded the rear of the two-story dwelling.

Fled Up Stairway

Williams, state police at Dover reported, fled up a stairway to the second floor and, when he disregarded the trooper's order to halt, the policeman fired a shot over the fleeing man's head. Williams, police reported, continued and plunged through a window and onto a shed roof, from where he leaped to the ground.

The troopers, before going to Williams' home, had been warned that the man was considered dangerous and was known to be in possession of a .32 calibre revolver earlier, it was explained. This, plus the shot fired inside the house and the fact that Williams was escaping, led the trooper in the rear of the home to pose the possibility in his mind that his fellow-trooper had been shot.

Grappled With Officer

He grappled with Williams in the semi-darkness of the early morning hours and, still unaware of whether the sought man had a pistol, shot Williams. The latter was removed to the hospital in the Dover ambulance.

Williams, it turned out, did not have the pistol at the time. The sequence of events leading up to the shooting started Saturday night in Williams' home where the latter started an argument with Edward McKinley, 43, also of Frederica. Both are farm and cannery workers.

McKinley, state police reported, did not respond to the argument as he had seen Williams with a gun. Instead, McKinley departed and went to the home of James Moore, also in Frederica. He stayed at Moore's home until about 1 a. m. Sunday.

As he was leaving this residence, McKinley later told state police, Williams was waiting outside with a .32 calibre automatic pistol in his hand. McKinley said Williams struck him in the face with the gun, knocking him to the ground unconscious. McKinley was removed to the Kent General Hospital in a taxicab for treatment and signed an assault warrant for Williams' arrest before Magistrate C. R. Dempsey of Dover.

Accompanied by McKinley, the two troopers went to Williams' home, arriving about 5:20 a. m.

Williams, it was explained, lived in a house with two other men and a woman. He came here from North Carolina about three years ago.

Had Record

State police at Dover said the dead man had a long criminal record, having been arrested for such law violations as burglary, drunkenness, as a disorderly person, illegal possession of whiskey, assault and battery, and assault with a deadly weapon.

They said the investigation among Frederica residents disclosed that he had a continuous record of assault and battery and, during May, was shot in the leg by another Frederica resident who was acting in self defense.

Hi-Lo's Forbes Races Five 2-Minute Miles

Harness horses probably will register a record number of miles in two minutes or faster this season.

The trotters and pacers have collected 30 "miracle miles" to date and are well ahead of last year's record-breaking pace.

In 1952, 28 horses posted 49 two-minute miles, an all-time high. The 28 represented less than one quarter of one percent of all the horses racing last year.

At the same date a year ago, only 16 two-minute miles were on the books.

The 1953 total will be swelled considerably during the annual Lexington, Ky., Trots Sept. 30-Oct. 10. The Trots annually produce a flock of two-minute performers. More will join the select circle during the meeting at Hollywood Park, Inglewood, Cal., Oct. 9-Dec. 5.

Leader among the "two-minute milers" this season is the pacer Hi-Lo's Forbes who has five to his credit, two over half mile tracks, and the other over a three quarter mile track.

Hi-Lo's Forbes, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Earl Wagner, Landover Hills, Md., is slated to attack Billy Direct's world record of 1:55 at Lexington.

Two other horses have turned the two-minute trick more than twice this year. They are Mighty Sun, an aged pacer owned by Sol Camp, Shafter, Cal., and Keystone, 3-year-old pacer belonging to George Tipling, Cleveland, O. Each has three "charmed circle" trips.

Four horses have scored doubles. They are Direct Rhythm, Rush Hour, owned by movie actor Charles Coburn; Irish Hal and Tassel Hanover, all pacers.

Those who accomplished the feat once are the pacers Countess Vivian, Diana Streak, Waybill, H. D. Hanover, Marvel Way, Express Hal, Evalina Hanover, Prince Adios and Wilmington's Star, and the trotters Earl's Song and Kashaplenty.

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION EXTENDS DEADLINE

The Civil Service Commission has extended the deadline to Oct. 6 for filing applications in the examination for postmaster. The time limit was extended because the number of applications received so far has not been sufficient for adequate competition.

Applicants must have several years of experience which has demonstrated their ability to effectively supervise and manage a business organization of the size of the post office. They must also show they can deal effectively with the general public. The applicants will also take a written test.

Application forms and additional information are available at the postoffice. Application forms must be received by the U. S. Civil Service Commission, Washington, 25, D. C. on or before the deadline date.

Members of the Amato Stable

Billy's Lady

Billy's Lady is a member of the stable of Johnny Amato, who winters and trains here and who will participate in the fall meet. The pacer, a three-year-old, belongs to Shriner Manufacturing Company, of Taneytown, Md. She cost her owners $17,000 last year at the Harrisburg sale. The filly has made a tidy sum for her owners this year. She had a mark of 2:03.4, as a two-year-old, and is by True Chief, 1:59.3, out of Billy Girl, by Billy Direct.

Ichabod Crain

Also in the Amato stable is another Shriner purchase, Ichabod Crain, a 4-year-old stallion with a mark of 2:04.1 as a two-year-old. He is by True Chief, 1:59.3, out of Miss Jeanne Crain.

2-Minute Mile in Race by Two-year-old Possibility

A 2:00 mile by a two-year-old in a race is a strong possibility this fall.

In 1944 a new goal was reached in the sport of Harness Racing when Titan Hanover, a two-year-old Trotter, secured a record of just 2:00 by the time record route at Lexington. No other two-year-olds has ever trotted or paced as fast since. This year, weather and track conditions permitting, it seems likely that the 2:00 goal for two-year-olds in a race may be reached. It may be at Lexington whose famous, "Red Mile" has scored more world's record performances and more 2:00 miles than any other track. Or it might be at some earlier meeting.

The most likely place would be at Lexington opening day when The Two Gait Farm Trophy is down for decision. This race has a guaranteed value of $10,000.00 but will certainly be worth a considerably larger figure. Forty-six of the best bred two-year-old pacers were kept good on the second payment.

Never in the history of the sport have there been as many fast two-year-old pacers in one season as in 1953. Most of the fastest of these youngsters are in the list of eligibles to the Two Gait.

These include Parker Boyd 2, 2:01; Meadow Pace 2, 2:01; Dale Frost 2, 2:01 1-5; Excellent Chief 2, 2:01 2-5; Queen's Adios 2, 2:02 2-5; Scotch Byrd 2, 2:03 1-5; Frisco Byrd 2, 2:04; Navy Counsel 2, 2:04; and Maestro Pick 2, 2:04. The above records may show some material changes by the time this matter gets into print and there may be others to show up by the time the race is paced.

The two-year-old trotters have not shown in such numbers as have the pacers. The real two-year-old trotting star of the year is Newport Dream 2:01 3-5. His record lowered the record of Lusty Song of 2:02 1-5 and puts him in striking distance of the 2:00 mile of Titan Hanover in 1944.

The Almahurst Stake for Free for all Pacers, feature all aged event of the late trotting season has become known as the "Million Dollar Race". The value is not as large as many other races but it does have named a "Bakers Dozen" of the best and fastest pacers in the country. The "Million Dollar" part comes from the large earnings of the horses named. The thirteen horses named had won $911,334 at the close of 1952. It is entirely possible that these figures have increased daily since the season started. Fastest records do not change as often in the Free for All brigade as in the slow classes.

Last year the eligibles included Good Time 1:57 4-5, leading money winning Harness Horse, who scored a hard earned victory over his old rival, Dudley Hanover, whose record is also 1:57 4-5. The two heats were paced in 1:58 and 1:58 1-5. Good Time's name is not included in the list this year. He was retired to the stud at the close of the 1952 season.

The leading money winner of the 1953 group is Dudley Hanover with $180,057.00 to his credit. This is no small sum by any means, but still a long way from the sum amassed by Good Time of $318,792.00. Had he been named again, the sum total of earnings of eligibles when named would be well over the $1,000,000. mark. The horses and their earnings at the close of 1952 follow:

Adios Abbe	$41,744
Dudley Hanover	180,057
Irish Hal	115,153
Prince Jay	104,295
Royal Blackstone	101,570
Shamrock Sally	101,399
Direct Rhythm	42,732
H. D. Hanover	36,127
Malcolm Hanover	29,066
Red Sails	28,705
Sampson Hanover	92,300
Solicitor	28,177
Wilmington's Star

Harness racing has recently been called, and very properly so, "America's Fastest Growing Sport". Some figures released by the United States Trotting Association show a remarkable growth. Figuring from the money angle, they show that total purses increased from $1,617,025.95 in 1939 to $16,052,773.31. This growth has been gradual. Each successive year has shown a larger figure than the preceding one. The number of horses starting increased from 3,773 in 1943 to 11,927. Again there was a gradual increase each succeeding year.

Active memberships have shown a decided increase. These include drivers licenses and range from 5,531 in 1945 to 9,776 in 1952. Track memberships have varied during this time.

In 1945 there were 485. In 1952 there were 501. This was due in part at least to the shortage of horses at some of the Fairs that were attracted to the extended race meets with greater earning capacities and less shipping. Registrations of horses went from 24-18 in 1946 to 4379 in 1951. The figures show a remarkable growth in harness racing and interest in this truly American sport.

The Transylvania feature all aged event for trotters each season will occupy the boards at Lexington's Trots Thursday, October 8, second week of the meeting. It will share with The Kentucky Futurity the honor of being the feature of the entire Lexington meeting. The Transylvania was inaugurated in 1889 when it was won by the handsome grey gelding, Jack, 2:12. Jack hailed from Michigan and was able to win the Kentucky classic without having to beat 2:15. He was driven by Budd Doble, in some respects the most remarkable of all trotting horse drivers.

The Transylvania was originally for 2:20 Trotters. At that time a horse with a record of 2:20 was considered a very fast horse. The class for the race was gradually reduced until it became a Free for All event. Though being a Free for All event for many years past, it was not until 1950 that a horse was able to win it twice. This honor went to the Illinois bred and owned gelding, Pronto Don. He followed this up by winning the event a third time in 1952, something no other trotter has approached. Pronto Don is headed for another try at the race this fall, he being one of the ten trotters named for the event.

The record for the stake is 1:59 1-4 by Rosalind 1:56 3-4 world's champion trotting mare displaced Greyhound's mile in 2:00. The Colonel's Lady came close in 1946 when she won in 1:59 1-2. Pronto Don scored another 2:00 mile in his 1950 victory.

The Kentucky Futurity nearly always furnishes a good race. The same should be true again this year even though Kimberly Kid on his present showing will likely be a decided favorite. Kimberly Kid was good last fall at Lexington and won a couple of races for himself and connections. He trotted a good race in The Hambletonian even though fifth was in position when the smoke of the three heat battle cleared. Since that time he has won a series of seven straight races and has shown himself to be a "Worthy Son of a Noble Sire", Volomite.

Of the twenty-three colts and fillies that started in The Hambletonian, all of the more prominent ones are eligible to the Kentucky Futurity except the winner, Helicopter. While racing well, this filly has not lived up to her Hambletonian showing since that great race.

Morse Hanover, 3, 2:01 3-5, winner of second money and of the fastest heat in The Hambletonian, is eligible to the Kentucky Futurity as are also Singing Sword third and Elby Hanover fourth. Fifth place was the portion of Kimberly Kid in The Hambletonian that now holds the place of favoritism. Newport Star 3, 2:03; Newport Mascot 3, 2:03 4-5; and Newport Express 3, 2:05, are the representatives of Octave Blake that started in The Hambletonian as favorite. This was due largely to the performances of Newport Star 3, 2:03 that had trotted a series of brilliant races prior to the big Goshen race.

The handsome colt, Victory's First, will be representative of Castleton. The good filly, Earl's Song 3, 2:00, that has been handling Helicopter right along in their engagements, is ineligible. She was not bred at Castleton but bought for a broodmare proposition.

A 35-year-old Felton man shot and killed his wife, then committed suicide, state police reported Friday night.

Police said the bodies of Marion Robert Reed and his 37-year-old wife, Mabel Mildred Reed, were found in their car on the Masten's Corner-Hopkins Cemetery road, about a half mile north of the former place.

The car was parked beside the road in the first woods north of Masten's.

Reed, police said, fired three .45 calibre bullets into his wife's chest, she returned the gun on himself, firing once into his own chest.

No reason could be given for the act. Police said there was a possibility of jealousy, adding that Mrs. Reed had been reported seeking a divorce.

Reed was employed as a wiper on a Sun Oil Company tanker operating out of Chester. He had been paid two days previously and had $60 on him at the time of his death. His wife was employed at the DuPont Company nylon plant at Seaford.

The bodies were found by Reed's step-son-in-law, Morris Dill, who was returning from taking Dolly Reed, a daughter of the couple, to school. Dill lives at Masten's Corner. He discovered the bodies when he returned from Felton by a route different from that which he customarily took, searching for Mr. and Mrs. Reed after they had been missing during the night.

The Reeds had been living with Mrs. Reed's mother, Mrs. Caddie Draper, at Felton, but early Thursday night were visiting Mr. and Mrs. Dill. Mrs. Dill is a daughter of Mrs. Reed by a previous marriage, police said.

Mrs. Dill told police her mother left about 7:30 p. m., explaining she wanted to go home and dress to go out for the evening. It is believed the Reeds instead went out for a ride and then headed back toward Masten's Corner. The automobile was headed south in the direction of the Dill home when found.

Dill said he spotted the car parked on a dirt road, and went to investigate. As he drove alongside, he said, he saw his mother-in-law's body slumped in the front seat. He hurried home and called the state police at Bridgeville. Dr. Hewitt Smith pronounced the couple dead.

Mr. and Mrs. Reed had been under treatment for nervous ailments, a physician said.

Until recently, the Reeds lived in Harrington at 97 West St. Both worked at the DuPont plant at that time.

Note Found In Pocket

Police said a note was found in Reed's pocket. A .45 calibre pistol, with four bullets fired, was recovered on the floor of the car.

The note listed five friends of Reed's who, he said, he wanted as pallbearers. He also had written that he wanted Mrs. Dill to have his refrigerator and his personal property.

Mrs. Dill told police that Reed had asked her for an envelope while at her home, explaining that he wanted to write a letter.

Mrs. Reed is also survived by her father, Lacy Franklin Draper of Greensboro; two children by a former marriage, Charles Allen Wright and Doris May Wright of Felton; two sisters, Mrs. Paul Breeding, Denton, Md., and Mrs. Carvil Dill, Greensboro.

Mr. Reed is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver B. Reed, of Goldsboro; two sisters, Mrs. Geneva Picotto, Oglesby, Ill., and Mrs. Doris K. Larimore, Felton; three brothers, Millard H. and Harvey Reed, of Cambridge, Md., and Oliver W. Reed, Goldsboro, a half-brother, James B. Reed, Clayton, and a half-sister, Mrs. Lucy Whitman, of Townsend.

Double Service Monday

A double funeral service was held at the Rawlings Funeral Home, Greensboro, Monday afternoon. The Rev. Roy Kirwan, pastor of Trinity Methodist Church at Goldsboro officiated.

Interment was in the Greensboro Cemetery.

Odessa Day to Be Held Sunday, October 11

For the fourth consecutive year citizens of Odessa will display the colonial charms of their homes and revered buildings when Odessa Day is held on Sunday, Oct. 11.

Mrs. Jesse Loven, chairman, said today that the tour of some 15 homes and buildings will be held under the auspices of the Community Center Assn. and the funds derived will be devoted to community improvements.

Mrs. Loven pointed out that this quaint village dates from 1759 when the hamlet was known as Appoquinimik Landing. In 1821 a toll bridge over the Appoquinimik Creek was built and operated by Richard Cantwell, son of Edward Cantwell, to whom the land had been deeded after its confiscation from the English.

Known as Cantwell's Bridge, the community prospered and by 1825 six large granaries stood on the banks of the creek. More than 400,000 bushels of grain were shipped by water to coastal points annually. In 1885 the community adopted the name of Odessa, after the great Russian grain port.

Colonial charm is visible in buildings which date from the early 18th century, all well preserved and many completely furnished in accordance with that period.

The Oct. 11 observance and tour will begin with services in Old Drawyers Church at 11 a. m. This church organized its first organization in 1708, worshipping in a frame building. The present church, beautifully preserved, was begun in 1773 and remodeled in 1833.

Governor J. Caleb Boggs will attend the service and extend the state's official greeting. The sermon will be preached by the Rev. Edwin Thomas of St. Paul's Methodist Church, Odessa, Mrs. Loven said.

It is expected that a record attendance will be attracted since this is the first time that the observance and tour has been scheduled in the fall, following the vacation season.

Community leaders who are aiding in arranging the day's affair include Mrs. Harry Roberts, vice-chairman; Mrs. Stanley Townsend, secretary; Jesse Loven, treasurer; George Kelley, publicity; Mrs. Frances Finley, hostess; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Loss, tickets; Mrs. Raymond Wallace and Mrs. Leonard Hampson, costumes; Mrs. Charles Andrews, posters; Mrs. Clyde Newton and Gordon McChesney, banners; Mrs. Fred Haas and Mrs. William Wollerton, publicity pamphlets.

Boy Scouts will man an information booth and will serve as guides for visitors, escorting them to the various homes and buildings.

The committees on movies and baby sitters are arranging to entertain children while parents make the tour. This innovation proved quite popular last year, officials said.

On display for the first time this year will be the January House, dating back from 1722, and recently refurbished by H.

Rodney Sharp. Of special interest will be the exhibition of two Duncan Beard Clocks at "Fairview," home of Mr. and Mrs. George Kelley, and the Corbit House. Duncan Beard was an 18th century clockmaker who gained quite a bit of fame in the area.

Also on view to the public with complete interior tours will be the Community House, dating from 1844; the Lore House, 1740; Maily House, 1770; David Wilson House, a Georgian colonial structure built in 1769; William Corbit House, 1772; The Old Inn, 1822; Friends Meeting House, a small brick building only 20 feet square built by David Wilson in 1783, and the Cyrus Polk House.

The St. Anne's Parish House in Middletown, which is now in a stage of repair and redecoration, will also be listed on the tour.

More Herbs For The Home Garden

Dill is one of the easiest herbs to grow. It is a good feeder and does best in good soil. The flowers occur in clusters, similar to that of other members of the carrot family, to which it belongs. Plants grow to 3 feet or more in height. If one desires to produce seed it usually takes one year for vegetative growth and seed is produced the second year. In the Maryland climate it may be treated as an annual. Sow seed broadcast as early in the spring as the ground may be worked. Thin if too crowded. All the tiny flowers in the cluster do not open at once. As soon as seed have formed from the oldest flowers, clip off several inches of the tips of the stems of branches, with flowers and seed attached. The principal use is in the making of pickles, when layers of the dill are placed in the jars with the pickles. Some use the tender leaves in salads. Dill vinegar may be made by packing the cut tips in jars, covering with vinegar and allowing to stand several months.

Mints propagate readily by cuttings and divisions and the plants spread by runners and rootstocks. Culture is relatively simple. A rich, moist loam is considered ideal, especially if there is partial shade. In the fall the old growth should be cut close to the ground and in the spring rich soil sifted over the bed in order to give the runners a chance to root and produce new plants. If the bed is transplanted every 3 or 4 years it is prevented from becoming ragged and weeds are eliminated.

Among the true mints are peppermint, spearmint, pennyroyal, lemon mint and white woolly mint. The first two are the ones most generally grown but they all contain essential oils, which makes the leaves and young shoots valuable in flavoring soups, stews, sauces, jellies and beverages. Sprigs of mint add much to the flavor of tea, both hot and iced, and are fine with peas and with new potatoes. White woolly mint and lemon mint are very decorative and are used for ornamental purposes in plantings around the home. Pennyroyal makes a good ground clover.

Mustard is an annual plant of wide distribution. Several related species and varieties supply the mustard seed of commerce. These seeds differ slightly in size and range in color from pale yellow to black, differing in color only in their seed coats. When the seed coats are completely removed, the flour of any of them may be used for prepared mustard and other seasoning preparations. The yellow seed, whole, is often used in pickling, especially in sweet mixed pickles. A few plants will furnish all the seed needed for home use. In Maryland seed may be sown in fall or early spring. The fall-seeded crop will be ready to harvest the following July and the spring-seeded the following August or September. Seed shatters severely when mature, so it must be harvested when fully ripe but when pods are still closed. Place on sheets of cheese cloth to dry for several days, after which seed may be easily rubbed out by hand and chaff (pods) removed by fanning.

Parsley is a plant whose uses are well known, for salads, garnishes, etc. It is one of our oldest culinary plants, there being two general kinds, plain-leaved and curly-leaved. While really a biennial it is grown as an annual. The seed is slow to germinate. When sown in the open ground it is recommended to sow some quick germinating seed, like radish, to mark the rows. In harvesting, if the outside leaves are cut off the central portion of the plant will keep on growing and producing new leaves. Plants may be taken up and potted in the fall and cared for as are other house plants. Or a supply for the average family may be grown in a window box in a sunny window.

In this series of articles on herb gardening only a few of the better known and most generally grown herbs have been discussed. Once you start growing this very interesting group of plants, your interest will increase. In a short while new seed catalogs will be issued. Look over the list of herbs offered and try as many as you have room for. You will enjoy the experience of growing them and making attractive dishes more pleasing by their use.

berberg, president, Maryland State Fair and Agricultural Society; Wilson A. Heaps, president, Maryland Farm Bureau; Inez A. Flook, president, Associated Women, Maryland Farm Bureau; Herbert P. ### KENT FARM AGENT DIES

William E. Tarbell, Kent County agricultural agent for the Extension Service of the University of Delaware, died Sunday morning at the Veterans Administration Hospital, Elsemere. He had been ill for several months.

A native of Maine and a Navy veteran of World War I, Mr. Tarbell was a graduate of the University of Maryland and taught in that state, and for two years at Caesar Rodney High School, Camden-Wyoming. He was an instructor in vocational agriculture.

Mr. Tarbell joined the extension service in 1944 and served as Kent County agent until his recent illness. He was a member of Union Lodge No. 7, A. F. and A. M., the Fruitland Grange, Camden; the official board of Wesley Methodist Church, Dover, and a former member of the Dover Kiwanis Club.

Survivors include his wife, Mrs. Marion Tarbell; a daughter, Mrs. James Byrne, Arlington, Va.; a son, John W. Tarbell, of Dover.

Services were conducted from the Wesley Methodist Church, Dover, Wednesday, with the Rev. Dr. John A. Trader, pastor officiating.

Interment was in North Anson, Me.

Mr. Tarbell instituted many new programs while serving as county agent in Kent County. He was instrumental in setting up a second circuit for dairy herd improvement work, helped to establish the Kent County Unit of the Delaware Artificial Breeders' Association, the local poultry association of Harrington, and has conducted for the past several years the Greener Pastures program, Corn Yield program, the Ten-Ton Tomato Club. He has been most active in organizing the tax ditch program in Kent County.

Mr. Tarbell was to have received the Distinguished Service Award by the National Association of County Agricultural Agents at its annual convention in Philadelphia in October.

BOX-ELDER BUGS APPEARING EARLIER THAN USUAL

Box-elder bugs seem to be appearing earlier than usual this year, according to County Agent William E. Tarbell.

Tarbell says this pest has invaded homes in southern Delaware. Spraying with chlordane as directed on the container is an effective spray. The best solution to the problem is to destroy the female box-elder trees and to plant other shade trees to replace them.

The box-elder bug is reddish in the immature stage, with black wing-pads. It feeds on box-elder by sucking out the plant juices from the tender shoots and seed pods. Often they collect in large clusters of hundreds and sometimes thousands of insects. Spray or burn them with a paper torch, when they are clustered.

When the insects are full grown, they are mainly black with three prominent red stripes on the back. They often migrate into houses for a warm place to spend fall and winter, and are troublesome as a nuisance rather than for any damage they do. When disturbed, they give off an unpleasant odor.

In the home a vacuum sweeper hose is a convenient way to pick them up. A good fly spray or 1 tablespoon of drest in one quart of water, will kill or knock them out so they can be swept up.

KEEP FARM PONDS CLEAN WITH LITTLE EXPENSE

Folks owning farm ponds want to keep them in good shape for fish, game and recreation, states George K. Vapaa, associate county agent. What's more, ponds can be kept free from scum and unwanted plant growth with very little effort or expense.

One application of a mixture of one pound of copper sulfate in 100 gallons of water sprayed over floating scum will give good control. Make sure to apply the copper sulfate solution only on the surface covered by scum.

If cat-tails, rushes and willows crowd the margin of the pond, sickle down the cat-tails, then spray them and all the brush with 2, 4D and 2, 4, 5-T.

These recommendations are based on farm pond research carried on at New York's Cornell University. A pond built at the Geneva Experiment Station four years ago was stocked with bass and bluegills. When inroads of slime and floating scum and brush around the edges threatened to interfere with the usefulness of the pond, the above control measures were found effective, without harming the fish.

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

One for the Books!

Noticed the Missus had a red ribbon tied around her finger at breakfast one morning last week. "What's that for?" I asked. "Your memory slipping?"

"It's not for me," she answers, "it's to remind you, and everybody else who asks what it's for, to contribute to the Woman's Club Library Fund. We need $200 and we figured we'd get more help if we could get people to ask us about it."

Well, as it turned out, the red ribbon worked just fine. The ladies are having the library all fixed up—and there's enough money for some new books, too.

From where I sit, it would be a fine thing if we had some sort of private reminder when we forget the rights of our neighbors. Like when we start telling them what we think is best. I may like a travel book and a temperate glass of beer while you prefer a cup of tea with your historical novel. Let's both remember not to "put the finger" on the other!

Like the microscope... This FEEDING PLAN for High Egg Output is Adjustable!

Just as the microscope is adjusted to focus on the object examined, so you adjust the Beacon Feeding Plan to "focus" it on the special requirements of your layers. The age, breed, season, level of egg production of your layers are all taken into consideration. From the simple chart we supply, you adjust three Beacon Feeds to these requirements.

It's a sensible plan—easy to use—and it has a record of success behind it.

SCHOOL NEWS

Senior Personality

Maxine Rebecca Phillippi
Maxine Rebecca Phillippi, better known to classmates as Maxine, was born on July 9, 1935, at Mountain City, Tenn. She has attended Harrington school for ten years. Other schools in which she has studied are Coatesville, Pa., and Mount Holly, N. J.

Her hobby, which is a very interesting one, is collecting old coins. Besides going to school, she works as a salesgirl at the Harrington 5 and 10c Store.

After graduation, she plans to be an English teacher. The college of her choice is the Eastern Nazarene College of Boston, Mass. Good luck, Maxine.

Record Attendance for H.H.S.
Harrington Special School District comes through again. Mrs. Elizabeth O. King delivered the Honor Attendance Banner to the Harrington School which had the high for the 1952-53 term in western Sussex and southern Kent counties.

The competing schools rated as follows: Seaford, 94.5; Laurel, 94.2; Harrington, 95. Harrington stands 1.8 above Seaford and 1.7 above Laurel. The scores are close. This indicates that competition is keen for the reward and, of necessity, parents, pupils, and teachers of the Harrington Schools must cooperate to maintain the lead and be in line for next year's award.

Twenty landmark books have been added to the library. These books tell about important people and events in the development of the United States. A bulletin board display has been arranged this week by Joyce Austin and Myrtle Annett.

Kent Home Doings

By Charlotte L. Swanson
Kent County Home
Demonstration Agent

One problem that faces most homemakers today is preparing inexpensive meals that are attractive and appetizing. Many Home Demonstration Clubs in Kent County will be discussing "Less Expensive Meals" in either October or November.

A leader training meeting on this topic was held Monday, Sept. 21, at Viola Community Hall. Miss M. Gertrude Holloway, nutrition specialist, taught the class and made several low-cost dishes which will probably be repeated often. These are the women who attended and who will later present this program to their clubs: Mrs. Bertha P. Donovan, Milford; Mrs. Emma M. Bennett, Milford; Mrs. C. N. Stephenson, Upper Montclair, N. J.; Mrs. Anna M. Paden, Dover; Mrs. Harry Rumer, Dover; Mrs. Catherine Wilson, Dover; Mrs. Margaret L. Kennedy, Dover; Mrs. Franklin Lynch, Milford; Mrs. Robert Mercer, Milford; Mrs. Minnie Tarburton, Dover; Mrs. Ralph Clendaniel, Dover; Mrs. Albert Steele, Felton; Mrs. Charles D. Thompson, Harrington; Mrs. Preston H. Anthony, Harrington; Mrs. Herbert Denney, Harrington; Mrs. Byron McKnatt, Harrington; Mrs. Donald L. Kinney, Viola; Katherine H. Coade, Viola; Mrs. William Potter, Smyrna; Mrs. Townsend Vaughn, Clayton.

Miss Holloway pointed out that meals should taste good and look good, provide adequate amounts of food nutrients, supply the necessary calories to meet the needs of the family members, and fit the family budget for time, energy, and money. The discussion centered around these points. Many good ideas for planning, purchasing, preparing, and serving less expensive meals were given by those who attended, and everyone went home with lots of new suggestions for themselves and their clubs.

"SLOW DOWN AT SUNDOWN"
Repeating the slogan that has become the watchword of the Delaware Safety Council's Night Traffic Hazard's program, J. James Ashton, manager, warns Delaware motorists that speed and darkness are a deadly combination. The program is being conducted in co-operation with the National Safety Council.

"By speed, I don't mean 50 or 60 miles per hour—or even 40," Mr. Ashton explained. "I mean a speed that's too fast for driving conditions. And dusk or darkness are conditions that call for traveling at a much lower speed than you would travel on the same road in daylight."

Mr. Ashton warned that many motorists are taken unaware by the earlier dusk of October and the changeover from daylight saving to standard time. These motorists drive by the clock and do not slacken their speed as darkness creeps up.

"Obviously," Mr. Ashton said, "a car going at a low speed can stop in a shorter distance than one going faster. This is a vital point in the night driving picture. In dusk or darkness a driver can't see as far ahead as he can in daylight. In fact, on a very dark road he can see only the length of his headlight beam. For safety's sake, then, he should travel at a speed that will make it possible for him to stop within the distance covered by this beam."

Mr. Ashton also advises motorists to have their cars checked regularly, since split-second response is a must for night driving. "And, of course," he said, "alertness is doubly important at night. Pedestrians, cyclists, and other motorists are all more difficult to see at night. If the motorist is on the look-out he's more likely to see them in time to avoid an accident."

"I'd also like to say a word about wearing sun glasses when driving at night. That word is 'Don't.' Sun glasses cut down on visibility and that's bad."

EASIER HOUSECLEANING IF YOU PLAN AHEAD

Housecleaning need not be a time of weary bones and frayed tempers. In fact, cleaning chores will almost take care of themselves when you follow the advice of Miss Louise R. Whitcomb, extension home management specialist at the University of Delaware.

The secret of painless housecleaning, says the specialist, lies in planning ahead and spacing cleaning jobs throughout the year to avoid spring and fall upheavals. First, decide what jobs should be done daily, weekly, monthly, or seasonally. Each week, in addition to routine cleaning, do one or two extra jobs.

Enlist family cooperation in hanging up clothes and keeping personal belongings in order. Family members can be trained to clean the bathroom after using, clean shoes before entering house, put trash in wastebasket, ets, and many other "picking up" tasks.

Every house should have a cleaning closet for tools and supplies—preferably a closet on each floor. Place hooks so that brooms and mops hang free of the floor, and arrange supplies so that any one item can be removed without disturbing others. Provide shelf space for cans and jars.

A cleaning kit or lined basket is a wonderful step-saver. Use it to carry together small pieces of equipment and supplies such as dust cloths, sponge, whisk broom, furniture polish, soap solution and cleaning fluids.

Harrington Ain't A One-Hoss Town

And A Tale Of Two Dogs

By J. Harvey Burgess

If you ever plan to visit Harrington, Delaware, and are not able to talk harness horses at least twenty hours of each twenty-four, I advise you to take an interpreter along. Without an interpreter, no one will understand a word you utter. Any language save hoss language is considered clumsy dialect.

Harness racing in Harrington is not an obsession, a phobia, a mania. It is nothing short of sheer madness.

It all began away back yonder, probably about 75 years ago. A man had stolen a moonshine still down in Kentucky. Hard pressed by officials, he sold the still at a reduced price to a man from Vermont, stole the fastest horse in all Kentucky and made his escape. He settled in the then backwoods hamlet of Clark's Corner, the present Harrington.

That horse became the father of many children, and all of them were fast. In later years, when Bowers Beach, on nearby Delaware Bay, developed as a fishing and fighting resort, the great day of the year was Big Thursday, in August. People with grudges would delay settlement until Big Thursday, when they would go to Bowers Beach to fight. So much blood was shed at Bowers in those days that the waters of the bay took on a dark red tinge and it almost ruined shad fishing by bringing in schools of shark.

Harringtonians harnessed the descendants of the Kentucky thoroughbred and raced from that town to Bowers to see and engage in the fighting, the one making the fastest time to Bowers being awarded all the oysters he could carry home, as well as a basket of butter beans. The horses always managed to get back to Harrington.

A young Harrington mother came rushing out to the front porch to greet her husband, who was returning from work. "I believe," she cried excitedly, "that baby is trying to talk. He's asleep, so be careful not to wake him." They tip-toed into the room and stood by the cradle. Baby smiled in his sleep and murmured, "Horsey." They named the kid "Jehosaphat!"

This last Christmas two of Harrington's largest stores advertised in that great moral and religious weekly, the Harrington Journal, that they would exchange all presents found to be not satisfactory. On the next shopping day after Christmas, exactly 637 youngsters were waiting when the stores opened. They were there with air rifles, dolls, tricycles, etc., wanting to exchange them for hobby horses.

Public pressure is responsible for the fact that the Harrington Schools have 12 Art teachers, and most of their time is devoted to teaching the kids how to draw pictures of horses. The little cusses swap these pictures with each other—and cheat like the dickens!

Several years ago a teacher, conducting examinations, gave a kid a perfect mark when in answer to her request, "Name the capital of the United States," he replied, "Hanover, Pa." The school board called a hasty meeting and fired the teacher, for the correct answer should have been "Lexington, Ky."

One citizen of Harrington has a unique hobby—he likes to visit in places where famous songs were written. He went to Findlay, O., because that's where Tell Taylor wrote "Down by the Old Mill Stream," and from there to Logan, W. Va., where Clarence Dunne English wrote "Don't You Remember Sweet Alice, Ben Bolt," and then he went far out of his way to visit Delaware, O., because he thought that was where "The Little Brown Jug" was written.

Even the restaurants in Harrington have symbolic names. One is called Horsemen's Restaurant, one the Feed Trough, another the Bridle Bit, still another the Manger, while one is the Oat Bin, and one, given almost wholly to the nocturnal trade, is called The Nightmare.

On my first morning in Harrington, I went into one of these restaurants and the waitress brought me a heaping dish of Quaker Oats. When I meekly reminded her that I had not ordered any Quaker Oats, she sneered, "You must be one of these displaced persons. What DO you want?" In subdued voice I asked for a menu. She adjusted her harness and went off at about a two-twenty trot, came pacing back with a far-away look in her eyes and gave me a racing program. Not wishing to embarrass her—or myself—by calling her attention to the mistake, I ordered a glass of milk. She was prompt in bringing the milk—with a generous helping of horse-radish on the side.

I did manage to get a peek at a menu on a nearby table. There, in bold letters, was "Hors d'oeuvre," followed, of course, by "A La Carte."

A fellow at a nearby table was discussing the food: "Cuisine's the best in town." A native stepped up, slapped $500 down on the table and said: "That says he's not the best in town. Bet we got a hundred here that can beat him. Never heard of that hoss, anyway."

I went into a barber shop and asked for a shave. The barber lathered my face, strapped his razor on a horse collar and asked: "Straight across the board or twice around the track?" After the shave—and it was a good shave—he even trimmed my fetlocks—he began brushing my hair. The brush seemed to dig into my scalp, and I glanced at him in the mirror. He was currying me.

There is a literary and historical side to Harrington, but it, too, runs to hosses. The librarian tells me that the most popular books are "David Harum" and "Black Beauty," although Walt Whitman's "Blades of Grass" is read by some. Rosa Bonheur is the favorite painter and the favorite military heroes are Light Horse Harry Lee and Napoleon's Grand Marshal Ney. Their favorite writers are Sir H. Rider Haggard, Irvin S. Cobb and John Hay. The greatest tragedy in history, they believe, was the sinking of the Maine.

Many hosses are quartered although few are drawn, at Harrington the year 'round, and each year a local organization entertains the horsemen at a banquet. I was invited to speak at one of these banquets. They sang only two songs that evening, "The Old Grey Mare Ain't What She Uster Be—Many Long Years Ago" and "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot." Three local elocutionists gave readings: Shepherd's "The Black Horse and His Rider," Elbert Hubbard's version of General Lew Wallace's "The Ben Hur Chariot Race," and Tennyson's "Charge of The Light Brigade." All of us wore tuxedos that evening, but I almost died of mortification, because, of the more than 300 present, I was the only one ineptly dressed. I wore a gate-ajar collar—and the rest of them wore blind bridles.

Contrary to the general belief, these horsemen are not heavy drinkers. If they can get it, they prefer Hostetters Bitters. If that is not available, most of them ask for beer—but they don't just ask for beer—they insist on draft beer. One hard-licker drinker came into a hotel one morning and said to the new assistant bartender: "Give me a Long Shot." The puzzled young fellow poured him a drink of the usual size and the patron yelled, "You're on the wrong track," whereupon the head bartender came up and said to his assistant: "He's a regular customer. When he orders a long shot, pour him two drinks. He comes in here about the same time each morning for his daily double."

Harrington had two of the outstanding physicians of the state. They were busy night and day. They did more work than five physicians should do—but not any more. Fourteen veterinarians moved into town. So horse-conscious, or unconscious is the average Harrington hoss lover, when he becomes ill, he would rather have ministrations of a horse doctor than to have a private room in the Mayo Clinic. In disgust, one of these regular physicians went on a prolonged visit, and the other began to monkey with politics.

Aside from their looking after the horses, these horse doctors have proved to be a valuable addition on the side of law and order. Harrington liquor houses will not sell a drink to a man under the influence of liquor. When a man is soused, he will swear that he is stone sober and asks for just one more little drink. In order to determine whether the man is drunk or sober, the bartender summons a horse doctor and he gives the bird the saliva test.

In an industrial survey made a few years ago by the Wilmington Chamber of Commerce, it was disclosed that Harrington had 547 houses. We believe they counted the hosses and not the houses. That was the easier way, because the hosses were bunched and the houses scattered. However, it couldn't have been very wrong, one way or the other, because hoss and human are proportionately about the same here.

A street preacher makes a good living in Harrington. When he first came here, he used a different text every night, passed the hat—and never took in one cent in two weeks. Then one night he preached on "The Rider of The Pale Horse." He collected $24.13 that night and has used the same sermon ever since, always with good results.

I was sitting in my hotel one night when the sharp staccato of sleet sounded outside. A wild-eyed citizen rushed to the window. "Listen," he yelled, "they're comin' down the home stretch."

One morning a bunch of kids attempted to smash every juke box in town. They considered the juke box a subversive influence because it was playing "Mule Train."

A local man was studying a road map, trying to find the best route between Harrington and the Saratoga race track. He discovered a town with a magic name on the map, and went 200 miles out of the way to get through that little town up between Corning and Ithaca, Horsehead, N. Y.

Harrington has a modern theatre. Its routine is two shows nightly, with three on Saturday—but by public demand, one show was brought back five times, with four shows daily. The title of the picture was "Come to The Stars."

Before Direct Express had shown anything like the form that made him America's pacing champion, a fellow asked me, "What do you think of Fred Greenly's Direct Express?" "I don't know too much about harnessing hosses," I replied, "but what do you think of Victor Hugo's 'Les Miserables'?" "That bum," sneered the fellow, "couldn't pace a mile in 10 minutes."

The horse motif is seen even in the municipal roster. Until recently, the name of the chief of the police was "Morgan. Another policeman's name is printed in the roster as Voss—but that may be a typographical error.

A fellow came into a local bookstore and newsstand. "I have got to raise more grass for my hosses to eat. I can't afford to pay the present prices for feed, and if my hosses are able to race next year, I must raise more grass. You've got books here on just about every subject—certainly you must have one telling how to raise good grass." He glanced around the book shelves and exclaimed, "Here's the very book I want." Without even dismounting, he picked up the book and tossed a quarter to the proprietor. He went his way, holding the cherished book to his bosom. The title of the book was Louis Pasteur.

People move away from Harrington occasionally—the old legend of greener grass in distant pastures—but most of them come back. Four fellows went away and never came back. A few years ago a washout on the railroad between Harrington and Felton was responsible for a train wreck in which three or four men were killed. For one never-to-be forgotten hour the people of Harrington talked about something else than horses. These four citizens, in high dudgeon and GMC trucks, left town for good. They said they didn't want to live among wishy-washy people who couldn't stick to one topic of conversation. They wanted permanency, they said. They have lived ever since in Barnstable, Mass.

Harrington has plenty of Democrats and plenty of Republicans and usually they are at loggerheads over any legislation. Only one bill ever introduced in Congress found the local citizens of both parties against it. They drew up a petition and sent to their representatives in Washington, urging the defeat of the odious bill. It was a bill calling for the harnessing of a river in Arizona. One petitioner summed up their opposition in this terse statement: "We're getting too much competition as it is."

Harrington's favorite big league baseball team, as you may guess, is the Phillies. They have no favorite individual player since Bert Haas and Virgil Stallcup were waived out of the leagues.

Six or seven fellows were candidates for mayor at a recent election. They didn't have any platforms—they just wanted the office. Then another fellow announced for the office. He was practically unknown, but he knew the psychology of Harrington. He uttered only one sentence, but in that one sentence the other candidates read their doom and withdrew from the race, because they knew to continue was hopeless. The election of the late entry was unanimous because he promised the voters that he would give them a stable government.

Do not get the idea that Harrington people have single-track minds. Far from it! Their minds are on all tracks. One night in the lobby of the hotel a schoolteacher quoted a line of poetry about "The Wooden Horse of Troy." "That," said a disgruntled citizen, "must have been the plug I lost $50 on last Tuesday—but it was at Saratoga, not Troy!"

Soliloquy of A Stolen Dog

I wonder if people who steal dogs realize the seriousness of the crime they are committing. I doubt it, for it must be a depraved critter in the guise of a human being who would steal a dog when he considers all angles. He isn't just stealing a dumb animal—he is stealing something endowed with the highest intelligence, affection, sentiment and loyalty. I believe I understand dogs well enough to know just what they would say if we were intelligent enough to understand them, therefore, The Soliloquy of A Stolen Dog:

"The man was friendly. That was what attracted me to him, for I like friendly people. He called me to him and patted the seat in his car—so I jumped in and smothered him with caresses. Even when he closed the door of his car and started driving, I thought nothing of it. The generous fellow liked dogs and was taking me for a drive around the block.

"But he didn't stop. He kept on driving and I became uneasy. I whined in protest, but he patted my head and spoke softly to me. I responded by licking his hand, hoping he would return me home. Then there came the horrible realization that I would never see my home again—that my master had sold me or given me away.

"I do not know how to reckon time, as it is reckoned by man, but that must have been years ago. Since then, in almost every waking hour, and sometimes in my dreams, I have wondered: "Why did my master and my mistress sell me down the river? I loved them, and love them now, as only a dog can love.

"Many, many times, in the dead of night, I tip-toed up to their rooms, reared upon hind legs and placed my paws upon the bed—and stood there, just looking at them sleeping—and loving them. I wanted to know they were safe. I could not let the long hours between night and morning pass without seeing them again.

"The little boy with whom I used to play—what has become of him—has he forgotten me? Does he think that I deserted him? We used to stroll through the woods together and he would gather his arms full of bluebells in the spring. Then I remember the night we went fishing and he caught an eel. How he laughed when I sprang upon that eel, thinking it was a snake.

"The little girl, the tiny tot of three! Although I loved each one better than the world, it seemed I loved that little girl best. She came running to me the first time she saw me, and just for fun, I growled. But she wasn't fooled. She laughed and standing tip-toe placed her chubby arms around my neck. Thus we paraded up and down the yard and I was happier than I shall ever be again. What has become of that little girl? Does she remember me? "My master was justified in selling me or giving me away. He was a good man, a just man, and I'm sure he loved me, but I did something wrong or he would not have given me away."

I do not know what I did that I should not have done—I wish I knew. I study about it, even now, trying to remember the mistake I made. I guess I'll never know, because I'm very old now and my memory is failing—but memory of them will never fail.

"A long time ago I remember hearing someone say that a great Scottish poet had written a poem about Man's Inhumanity to Man Makes Countless Thousands Mourn. Will there ever be a poet great enough to make man understand how much his dog loves him?"

Their Last Song Together

Something out of the ordinary happened down - state once. Twelve fox hounds were auctioned off at public sale—and they brought around $800.00.

These dogs had belonged to the late and loved "Pete" Shaw, Delaware's state auditor, and the auction took place on one of the Shaw farms near Harrington.

For almost fifty years Pete Shaw was Delaware's most ardent fox hunter. A rare judge of dogs, he bought only the best, and these he trained patiently and lovingly. Is it any wonder that fox hunters all over the East wanted Pete's hounds? So many offers were made for them, many of them by close friends of the deceased, that Pete's two sons decided the only equitable way to dispose of them was at public auction.

People came from nearby states to attend this auction, and I went out to interview Jump, aged white hound, the dean of the group and supposed to be the possessor of the sweetest note in Delaware. Jump is highly intelligent and dignified. Give him a pair of spectacles with ribbon attached, and it wouldn't be difficult to visualize him as a philosopher—or a diplomat.

"The saddest day of our lives," said Jump, "was when they told us our beloved master had passed away. Next to that day, this is the saddest, for today we must part. We loved Pete. We would have given our lives for him. He was always kind and gentle with us, and he understood us better than we understood ourselves. The saddest feature of a dog's life is that, try as he may, he can never make his master understand how much he loves him. We believe Pete knew.

"Pete knew more about foxes than all of us put together. You see, for fifty years he had trained dogs. He had some of the most wonderful dogs in all the world, generation after generation of them, and while he taught all of them, from each one he learned something—and that accrued wisdom and experience he tried to give us.

"My days of usefulness are numbered. Too many days, too many nights, too many years, have I chased Sir Reynard. Under another master, I might have been back in the minor leagues, but Pete would have kept me as long as I lived. The younger dogs, at first, thought they knew a lot more than I do, but after a few miserable failures, they came to me for advice. They, bless their hearts, have made my position tenable by dignifying me as their coach.

"Our new masters? Well, since we can't have Pete, we are happy to be with them because, you see, we know them. Many of them hunted with Pete. They are men of tender hearts—as are all dog lovers. Alexander Pope said something about an honest man being the noblest work of God. He might have said the same about dog lovers."

I was touched by old Jump's grasp of philosophy. Looking around, I saw dozens of dogs of various breeds, not foxhunters at all, but just dogs who had come to bid their friends goodbye. Surveying them, the venerable Jump proposed: "In parting, let's have a song."

"That English Setter over there is a mighty good singer," suggested one. "No," said Jump, "he would want to sing something about God Save The King—and we know our king has already been saved."

"That Irish Setter," said Minnie, "has the most beautiful tenor in the world." "No," frowned Jump, "we want to join in with his tenor, but we do not want him to lead or select a song. He would start singing something about the shamrock and the rose, his mother's grave 'neath the green, green grass of I-r-e-l-a-n-d, my I-r-e-l-a-n-d—! That emotional Irish tenor would have us blubbering our hearts out—and this is no time for tears."

"There's Otto Daschund," said another, "and he's a truly great musician."

"Great, yes," replied Jump, "but he knows nothing but Wagner—and this is neither the time nor place for Wagnerian opera. We want to keep our chins up, and if you will pardon my crude attempt at the facetious, we want waggin'—not Wagner! Besides, when Otto opens his mouth to sing, he has to telegraph the music 'way down to his tail, which he uses as a baton, before he starts singing. He'd always be three or four notes behind us. Ah, there's the boy to lead our song. Come over here, Scotty, and sing a song, a song written almost two hundred years ago in the land of your fathers."

Little Scotty's eyes were misty as he raised his muzzle to the heavens and began to sing. Suddenly there joined him a high, clear tenor, wild, tempestuous—and yet as soft as the falling petals of a rose. Never in all history has any other race been able to approach the deeply emotional, hauntingly beautiful melodies of the Irish—and they knew it was the voice of the Irish setter, The English Setter, glancing cautiously at his Irish cousin, deliberated for a few seconds, weighing the matter over soberly, carefully, diplomatically, and then deciding it was quite proper, you know, chimed in with a musical second bass. Tojo, Corkscrew, Guy, joined the swelling chorus; Stroller of the husky voice—and Kangaroo. Flirt tried to swing it, but a frown from Jump, and her contralto blended with the others. Brokenhearted little Minnie's voice was a sobbing refrain and into the song old Jump poured his tremendous basso. Over the woods and fields of Kent their voices rang. They were singing their last song together and their heart-beats were the drums: "Should Auld Acquaintance Be Forgot—"

DIRECT EXPRESS

Direct Express was America's pacing champion. He won the American Pacing Derby by defeating the great Jimmy Creed in a thrilling finish at Roosevelt Raceway, New York. Direct Express who was owned by the late Fred Greenly, of Harrington, died in California in March, 1948.)

He died, died in the harness, as all great kings should go; The sun may set in splendor—the gentle afterglow In tones of deathless magic is written on the skies— A waning—yet a promise—that never, never dies. Aristocrat, yet humble; a tempest, yet as mild, As loving, and as tender and as trusting as a child. No swishing flail to urge him—a whisper and caress And gallant heart responded—that was Direct Express!

The Roosevelt Raceway crowded unto its breathing space; The teeming thousands gathered to see the dauntless race! A myriad of colors, the grandeur of the sight— The Sport of Kings, they call it—and Kings WERE Kings that night.

The nation's greatest pacers, and each one at his best— The prize was wealth and homage—and glory at its crest! A space of breathless silence, then tumult rocks the sky— Around that polished oval the straining horses fly. With speed of a tornado obscuring tropics' sun, In sweeps of sheer perfection all horses seem as one. The solid front is breaking, and one who's borst the brist Comes tearing past all others—and Jimmy Creed's in front— In front—and seems the winner, a Mercury of speed— For valiant the fibre and heart of Jimmy Creed! But wait! The frantic thousands are startled from their seats

As out of nowhere flashes a horse who's thund'rous beats of hoof and heart are grandeur—by inches are his gains: "Fred Greenly's horse is coming—Paul Vinyard at the reins!"

Adown the stretch they're fighting as nothing's fought before; Heart beats respond to heart beats, the wild acclaim, the roar;

Spine-tingled thousands shouting, for once again they see An ancien epic's grandeur—the Natchez and the Lee! In ecstasies of madness no mortal can suppress, The hoarsely shrieking thousands proclaim: "Direct Express!"

In good fights, says the Bible, or leastwise I've been told, The fighter's name is written on leaves of shining gold. There is for him a haven beyond this vale of care Where loved ones all may greet him and dwell forever there. Since from the world's first dawning in mystifying fog Man's constant two companions, the noble horse and dog; Then no one dare give credence, save bigot, dunce, or blind, That man, in God's own image, would leave his pals behind.

Theology, religion—a derelict at sea, A-trusting and a-praying for things I hope will be: I see no valets of ophir, with mansions rich and fair, But horseman's dream of heaven, with bluegrass waving there; Where all may meet together in Armageddon's band; Where each may talk his language, but all may understand; Where no one bears the burden of penance or duress— And in brook-gladdened meadows, I see Direct Express!

FEWER GROWERS, MORE POTATOES

More potatoes produced by fewer growers is the trend in Delaware, believes Dr. A. O. Bausman, head of the department of agricultural economics, University of Delaware.

He points out that Delaware growers produced one-third more potatoes in 1950 than in 1945—on fewer farms. In 1950, approximately 2,000 farmers grew 300,000 bushels of potatoes, as compared with 2500 growers and 100,000 bushels in 1945.

"There is a very definite reason for this trend toward concentrating potato production among fewer but larger growers," he explains. "Apparently the larger growers are faster at gaining the essentials of potato production such as land, labor, machinery and 'know how'. This gives the larger growers an advantage in meeting competition from other areas."

During a five-year period, larger producers gained a steady advantage in yields. The average yield per acre of the larger growers in 1950 nearly doubled yields of the smaller producers. Five years earlier, the yields of larger growers were only one-half greater than the smaller growers.

Dr. Bausman believes this trend toward fewer but larger commercial growers will continue in Delaware.

SEED BARLEY NOW FOR BEST RESULTS

Delaware farmers should seed barley about Oct. 10 to 15 for best results. This reminder comes from William H. Mitchell, assistant extension agronomist at the University of Delaware.

If barley is planted too early, it makes excessive fall growth and tends to "smother out"—besides inviting heavier insect and disease growth. If planted too late, barley doesn't get well established before cold weather, and injury may be greater from winter chilling and freezing.

Four years of research work at the University of Delaware Substation have shown the early October seeding to result in six to eight more bushels of grain than does mid-September seeding.

Wong continues to be the most popular variety in Delaware, probably because seed of newer, improved varieties is not yet available in any quantity. Kunbar is a new variety that will be available in limited amounts this fall. Seedsmen indicate that the supply is already short.

The common seeding rate for barley is two bushels per acre. Apply either 400 pounds of a 4-12-12 fertilizer or 300 pounds of 5-15-15, drilling it in with the grain.

If legumes will be seeded in the spring as part of a rotation plan, it is a good idea to apply lime before seeding the grain.

TO FIND JOBS FOR HANDICAPPED PERSONS

In cooperation with joint action of the Congress and the President of the United States in designating the week of Oct. 4-10 as National Employ The Physically Handicapped Week, Gov. J. Caleb Boggs, having recently appointed a State Committee, under the chairmanship of Mason E. Turner, to arrange a suitable program of activity for this time, is asking the people of the State of Delaware to unite in a common effort to locate as many disabled persons as possible in this state and lend every effort in guiding them into suitable employment.

The Vocational Rehabilitation Division of the Delaware State Board for Vocational Education is one of the agencies which has spear-headed this event year after year, and announcement has been made by John G. King, director of vocal rehabilitation for the State of Delaware, that this division will again cooperate with the governor's committee in a strong effort to locate vocationally handicapped persons (civilians and veterans) to ask the cooperation of employers everywhere in registering job openings, and placing as many handicapped persons into suitable employment.

ble employment as possible.

For the week of Oct. 4-10 the Vocational Rehabilitation Division will set up special facilities for registering handicapped persons and taking and fulfilling job orders, and the rehabilitation counselors will give most of their time and effort for this purpose during the national "Employ The Physically Handicapped" Week. Handicapped persons seeking employment can register at the Rehabilitation Center, 11 Concord Avenue, Wilmington, Del., Monday, Oct. 9, from 8:30 a. m. to 4:30 p. m., and the offices of the Delaware State Employment Service in Dover and Georgetown Thursday, Oct. 8, from 9:00 a. m. to 4:30 p. m.

Mr. King emphasized the fact that, when physically disabled persons are prepared for a job which they can do as well as anyone else, they cease to be vocationally handicapped. And, when placed in the proper job these persons are just as capable, just as efficient and just as high in actual production as the non-handicapped group.

The Vocational Rehabilitation Division renders many services in preparing physically handicapped persons for suitable employment. These services include medical and psychological diagnosis, vocational counseling and guidance, medical and surgical treatment, psychiatric treatment, physical and occupational therapy, artificial appliance (such as artificial limbs, artificial eyes, etc.), hospitalization, employment training (on-the-job, tutorial or in school or college) necessary maintenance and transportation for physical restoration or training, tools and equipment necessary for a person's job, oc-

Greenwood

Greenwood is looking much brighter since we have been getting those rains we predicted a week or two earlier. It seems only a week or two ago that we were talking about the first bluebird of spring, and now autumn is upon us and people are already talking of Christmas shopping. The seasons seem to roll faster and faster—it must be this mechanized age we're living in.
Our Greenwood folks certainly do get around. A report of another especially nice trip came in last week too late to write up, but we will tell you about it now. This was a father and son excursion made by Wilbur Hynson and his son, Dicky. They left on Wednesday morning and drove to York, Pa., and saw the sights at the York Fair. Then they went on to Gettysburg and took the guided tour over the battlefield, visited the Jenny Wade House, and enjoyed the view from the observation towers. From there they drove to West Virginia, saw the Luray Caverns, and came back through Washington, D. C. Ruth says two very tired, dirty and hungry little boys arrived home on Saturday night, after a wonderful time of fellowship together. Dicky loves history and has been reading more about what he saw ever since he got home. We'll bet he'll never forget that wonderful period of companionship with his dad either.
Mrs. S. S. Wroten has returned home after a visit with Mr. and Mrs. Philip Rawlins at Hearn's Mill. Her friends were delighted to be able to greet her at church Sunday and to hear that she is steadily improving.
Mr. and Mrs. J. Burton Carter spent Friday evening in Harrington, visiting Mr. and Mrs. Winder Massey. They spent the week-end in Riverside with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Maguigan, and left Tuesday morning for Wilmington where Mr. Carter will enter Veteran's Hospital for further diagnosis of his case.

The J. Burton Carters were recent dinner guests of Miss Florence Carlisle and William Carlisle, Jr. On Thursday evening the Carlises entertained at dinner the Rev. and Mrs. H. E. Conner and son, Miss Lelia Tatman, Mrs. Sallie Tatman and Miss Bess Carlisle.
The Gerald Pearsons telephoned their families here over the weekend that they were in the path of the hurricane and have been evacuated to Montgomery, Ala. Late reports now indicate that the hurricane has broken up, so no doubt the Pearsons are back in their hotel by now.
Mr. and Mrs. J. Burton Case of Harrington were Sunday evening guests of the Jacob Hatfields. Little Ellen Hatfield has been suffering from a virus infection.
The Arnold Hodges of Dover were Monday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Meredith. Little Susan Coulter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bayard Coulter, of Lewes, is spending a week with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. R. Lee Coulter.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Trice had as their guests over the weekend, Mr. and Mrs. Holly Trice, of Chester, Pa. Mrs. Trice also spoke of enjoying the Rally Day service at Greenwood Methodist Church with her son, Donald, Mrs. Labbe and Shirley.
Robert Jester Jr. has entered the freshman class at Wesley College in Dover. He is enjoying his classes and mentioned particularly the excellent French teacher who is a native of France. Both he and the family expressed their approval of having an accredited school so close at home, so that Bob is able to commute if he desires.

COMMENTARY ON MAKING SALES

"Speaking of salesmen who sell outside their places of business," said Tweedle Tumpkins, "I believe the chief reason for success is making the calls."

"Without doubt," replied George Potroast, a beginning salesman, "If one does not call on a prospect, how can he be sold?"

"Perhaps I didn't explain my point fully," came back Tweedle. "While some orders may be picked up on the telephone or in the mail, the main thing is still to call on the customer. I use the old law of averages. The more calls I make, the more I sell, despite the fact I may not use pressure or have very good arguments. If I make a hundred calls a week, I can depend on so much business."

"Furthermore, I try to call on every prospect, despite the fact I may not have had an order from him for months. I got a big order the other day, after I had called on the prospect, without success, every week for five months."

"And another thing, there are always angles to shoot in selling."

"Speaking of angles," interrupted Potroast, looking as pleased as if he were doused in brown gravy and surrounded by small, cherubic-looking potatoes, "may I tell you of a couple I picked up while selling hosiery, house-to-house, when I was in college?"

"By all means," replied Tweedle, settling back in his chair and lighting his pipe.

"When I was at Penn State (sometimes jocularly referred to as State Penn, since the institution was nearby) I sold hosiery. Occasionally, I would ride with another student salesman, Linn Moore, in his beat-up Model T to Bellefonte, to work. I would solicit, house-to-house, and make a few sales. Linn, however, appeared to be doing nothing. I would see him riding around the street, apparently at ease with the world. At the end of the afternoon, however, he would have more orders than I. He never told me how he did it, but one afternoon I found out: he waited until a match factory finished work, parked his car near the entrance, and took orders from the employes as they came out."

"A thing I found handy, was a recommendation card," continued Potroast. "Such a device, from a customer, shown to a prospect, is sure to enable one to get inside the door."

"Seems to me such a card could be used in other forms of selling," said Tweedle. "I've got a prospect to see now, but before I go I want to get over a point: one can never gauge the success of a salesman by his physical appearance. When I once had charge of a crew, I hired some who were certainly not handsome, but they turned out to be the top men."

"One can never tell a book by its cover," quipped Potroast.

SOME ASPECTS OF POSTAL SERVICE ARE POOR

Some aspects of the postal service are poor, while rates on some kinds of mail have increased. Our relations have been the best with the local postoffice. Furthermore, we have no reason to believe that other Kent County postoffices are not on their toes. But there is a fly in the ointment somewhere.

Our experience has been that the mail leaves a Kent or Sussex County postoffice promptly, but that it takes an unusually long time to reach its destination in enough cases to make us believe that all is not as it should be. Following are some cases:

A subscriber in Viola complained, on several occasions, that it took two days to receive our newspaper. One in Frederica, nine miles away, received a newspaper Tuesday that was mailed early Friday. A letter mailed in Milford between 1 and 2 p. m., reached us the following evening. A letter, mailed at Felton between 7:30 a. m. and 8 a. m. Wednesday, reached us Thursday morning.

We formerly mailed printing to Dover, but two sad experiences caused us to stop this practice. Two orders of rush printing failed to reach the state capital within three days and we had to do them over again.

In conclusion, we would like to say we also had difficulties with the postoffice department before the Republicans came in. Furthermore, we reiterate that we do not believe the fault lies with the individual postoffices. What happens to the mail then, when it is in transit?

CORNPONE AND CAVIAR

By J. HARVEY BURGESS
In a local restaurant Sunday a voice from the inevitable juke box began to shriek "Td Rather Die Young."

"If I had my hoss pistol with me," growled a grim-visaged diner, "Td be glad to accommodate him."

"Ike's Going To Hit Everybody in In Boston" was the headline in a morning paper prior to the President's speech in the bean city a few days ago. But Ike didn't—and we knew he wouldn't—too many Irish up there.

In reply to an item in this column last week about stock car races on the streets of Harrington, "Dory" Collins, manager The Diamond State Tel. Co., sends this bit of information: "You should see State St., Dover, on the rampage. The city should pass an ordinance demanding the reduction in speed to 85 miles perhour."

Dr. Dr. R. O. Bausman, head of the department of agriculture better buy than large eggs at this time of the year. A dozen small eggs, he explains, will weigh approximately 18 ounces. He further says: "When you see eggs labeled 'small,'"—and that brought us to a halt. Through blurred eyes we began to retrace the egg-buying years of our life—and we do not recall that we've ever seen for sale eggs labeled "small." You have to find that out for yourself—after you've purchased them.

Seafood in the Middle West costs slightly more than it does in the East because it's quite a distance from the source of supply. By the same token, beef costs more in the East than it does in the beef-growing West—but it shouldn't cost that much more. One of the finest steak houses in the world is the Erie Cafe, Wells and Erie Ave., in Chicago. Indicative of the excellence of its steaks, Chicago's biggest packers entertain their friends at dinners there. An individual steak, with all the trimmings, costs you $3—but it weighs 2 pounds. Smiling, and surfeited with steak, we left Chicago for Philadelphia, yearning for steamed clams. At Kelley's, in the once Quaker City, the waitress brought us the menu. We ordered clams, but noticed this item: "Sirloin Steak 11 ounces, $3.45." "How is it, lady," we asked the waitress, "that you can get a steak in Chicago, far superior to that you serve here, two pounds for $3—and you ask $3.45 for eleven ounces?" "I do not know," she replied, "but I suppose it's the cost of transportation." This should call for an investigation by the Interstate Commission or some other agency to see why the railroads or express companies charge several dollars per pound for shipping steak from the Middle West. With the exception of William Jennings Bryan's "Crown of Thorns and Cross of Gold" speech, probably the most stirring oration ever delivered in America was the one delivered by the immortal Southern editor, Henry W. Grady, before the New England Society at Boston years ago. That was an austere New England, long before the mass infiltration of the Irish, with their sentiment, shamrocks—and their shillelachs. A smile was as scarce as a seraphim—and yet they stood, shouting, screaming, their cheeks tinas of tears as Grady concluded his masterful oration, "The New South." But there was levity, as well as eloquence, in his speech, for at one point he said he was willing to stake odds against the Georgia Yankee as he squeezes pure olive oil out of cotton seed, and manufactures relics of the battlefield in a one-room shack, against any Connecticut Yankee that ever swapped wooden nutmegs for flannel sausages in the valley of Vermont. When it comes to this type of "dickering," we believe the down-state fish dealers of days gone by were equal to the shrewdest Down-Easterner. We recall one who promised a customer he would have some fish locally known as "spots" for him the next day. The customer was not familiar with salt water fish and he was perfectly satisfied when the fisherman delivered to him a bunch of porgies he had converted into spots by painting a small black spot on the side of each fish. Another fisherman withdrew from the business and opened a shoe-repair shop. A customer had him place rubber heels on his shoes, and the first day the shoes were worn, a gang of cats followed the man, sniffing at his heels. The puzzled fellow stopped, finally examined his shoes only to discover the new "rubber" heels were made of flounders.

Former mayor, E. B. Rash, suggests that during the autumn months, we change the title of his column to "Gingerbread and Sweet Cider." It may be a good idea, but we cannot be sure until we know what gingerbread and sweet cider taste like.

If "corny" means the things we do That make our woes seem lighter; If corny means the kindly deeds

Felton School News

The Felton High School Student Council held its first regular meeting Sept. 25, with president Norma Lee Torbert presiding. Treasurer Dot Lomicky stated that it is now necessary for checks to be made out by the school instead of directly, as before.

Assembly Committee chairman Nancy Torbert reported that the 8-feature, full-length movies had been selected and an assembly calendar was shaping up.

Social Committee chairman, Arthur Henry, announced that the yearly social calendar was nearly completed, as the deadline, Oct. 16, draws near.

Pledge Committee chairman, Stanley Good, reported that he had only one more signature to secure for the Felton High School Creed for this year.

The president appointed the following as reporters of Student Council news to their home rooms: 12th grade, Nancy Torbert; 11th grade, Russell Rash; 10th grade, Gertrude Hurd; 9th grade, Dorsey Hammond and Roy Dill; 8th grade, Shirley Hurd; 7th grade, Katherine Cabbage.

It was decided that the council meetings would be held the last Friday of every month unless otherwise notified.

The date for selecting the cheerleaders will be posted on the bulletin board.

The rotation system of lunching was again brought up but was dropped because of numerous difficulties.

Parliamentary Procedure was read and discussed.

Magenheim, Lessors, and Golconda, as Lessee, and recorded in Book 138 at Page 106, Official Records of Santa Barbara County, California; and Oil and Gas Lease dated December 29, 1928, as amended and modified between Valerio Tomagnazzi and Tilla Tomagnazzi, Lessors, and Golconda, as Lessee, and recorded in Book 168 at Page 519, Official Records of Santa Barbara County, California; and

WHEREAS, a portion of said leases was assigned by Golconda to Barnsdall Oil Company of California, reversionary rights only being retained by Golconda in the event of surrender by Barnsdall of said portion of said leases so assigned, and

WHEREAS, the remainder of the property under said leases was subleased by Golconda, which sublease is now held by Standard Oil Company of California, and

WHEREAS, the sole income of Golconda consists of the proceeds from its operations under said sublease, and

WHEREAS, Golconda is not and never has been an operating company and its continued existence entails considerable administrative expense as well as both Federal and State corporate tax liabilities,

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, That in the judgment of the Board of Directors of Golconda it is deemed advisable and most for the benefit of Golconda that Golconda be dissolved pursuant to the following plan of dissolution:

(a) Golconda and Standard shall terminate the existing sublease and the Golconda shall convey to Standard all of Golconda's right, title and interest in and to said lease, and Golconda shall reserve the right to receive from Standard in consideration for such assignment the amount of the net proceeds of its operations under said leases so assigned, which right is hereinafter referred to as the "overriding royalty."

The aforesaid assignment and reservation shall be executed by Golconda and Standard in a form of agreement entitled "Assignment."

(b) Golconda and Standard shall execute a "Net Proceeds Agreement" wherein is set forth the method of computing the overriding royalty payable to Golconda, which method is similar to the computation of the like percentage now payable under said sublease.

(c) The execution by Standard of the agreements referred to in paragraphs (a) and (b) above is subject to the terms and conditions set forth in those certain contracts from Standard to Golconda, bearing dates of March 30, 1953, and August 6, 1953, respectively, and which letters have been entered in the record of the minutes of this meeting.

The certificates of beneficial interest will be issued by the Trustee in exchange for certificates representing Golconda's stock of which one share in the trust for ten shares of Golconda's stock, fractional shares in exchange for fractional shares in Golconda's stock, and (ii) upon surrender of the certificates of the capital stock of Golconda in exchange for certificates of beneficial interest, the Trustee shall cancel and destroy such certificates of capital stock, and the Trustee shall issue certificates of beneficial interest shall represent the interests in the assets of Golconda remaining upon its liquidation and dissolution.

(g) Thereafter, from time to time, the Trustee will distribute to the owners of certificates of beneficial interest on a pro rata basis the overriding royalty proportionate to the number of shares of beneficial interest owned by them. The Gato Ridge Trust, unless otherwise sooner terminated as provided in said instrument of trust, shall be terminated on a date 21 years after the death of the survivor of the directors then holding office as directors of Golconda upon its dissolution.

(h) The President or the Vice President and the Secretary or Treasurer of Golconda are authorized and directed, upon the effective date of this Resolution, to execute the instruments referred to herein, copies of which have been entered in the record of the minutes of this meeting, and to do all other acts or things necessary to implement and to accomplish the dissolution of the Corporation pursuant to the within plan of dissolution.

Caesar Rodney School News

Government Aid Limited To Platter Lunches

Caesar Rodney School students must eat a platter lunch or the cafeteria cannot count them for Federal aid as 'A' lunches according to a recent ruling received by the school.

In the past students have been able to select a lunch meeting government standards from a la carte items at the 'A' lunch special price.

The school cafeteria committee which includes in its membership the cafeteria manager, both homemaking teachers, a representative from the Parent-Teacher Association and the Student Council plus several other faculty members has established the following price list:

Grades one through six—platter lunches, twenty-five cents on a lunch ticket with either plain or chocolate milk; without a lunch ticket, platter lunches with chocolate milk are twenty-eight cents.

In grades seven through 12, platter lunches cost thirty cents each on a lunch ticket. A platter lunch with chocolate milk costs thirty-three cents without a lunch ticket.

High school students receive larger portions of food than the younger pupils.

Lunch tickets are sold in the school office with the student's name and grade being written on each ticket to prevent loss.

Under the recent ruling ticket holders are all served a standard government "A" lunch platter style.

A la carte prices are as follows:

Sandwiches, 5c, 10c, 15c. Salads, soup, vegetables, 10c. Desserts, 10c.

Student Council Assigns Grounds Areas

Keeping the schools lawns and playgrounds free of refuse is one of the functions of the Student Council at Caesar Rodney School.

In this connection, the Grounds Committee, consisting of John Yokoi, Connie Hart, Donald Scott and Robert Will, has issued a new chart indicating the area assigned to each homeroom.

John Foxwell, a student in Advanced Shop, makes up the necessary drawings.

With the help of the Elementary Student Council, weekly checks will be made to see that the grounds are in good order. To make the task easier, additional waste receptacles are being placed in convenient locations.

The bookkeeping instructor will be John J. Ryan, who teaches bookkeeping and other commercial subjects in the day program.

Registrations for both courses are being accepted at the school office. The courses run for ten weeks with a registration fee of three dollars.

Birth Certificate Not Necessary To Social Security

You don't have to have a birth certificate to prove you are 65 when you apply for old-age and survivors insurance payments, according to Myron Milbouer, manager of the Wilmington Social Security office.

"While a birth certificate is the best evidence of a person's age," Mr. Milbouer said, "the fact is that there are persons who were born before birth records were required and who just can't get a birth certificate."

Some of these people have gone to the trouble and expense of getting a delayed birth certificate for social security purposes.

"This is unnecessary," Mr. Harrington said, "since the evidence that is required to obtain a delayed birth certificate can be presented to the social security office without the necessity of getting an official document."

The Social Security Administration recognizes that in many cases, birth certificates cannot be obtained. It will accept a number of other documents as proof of age, such as, baptismal certificates, confirmation records, family Bible records, insurance policies, et cetera.

"Don't postpone claiming your retirement insurance payments just because you do not have documentary evidence to prove you are 65," Mr. Milbouer advises potential claimants. "Anyone who believes he is 65 and otherwise eligible, should call or write to the Social Security Office at 813 West Street, Wilmington, where he will be given every assistance in proving his age."

"For the convenience of local residents, a representative of the Wilmington office is at the Delaware Employment Service office of Dover every Monday and Thursday at 10 a. m. and City Office Building, Milford, the 2nd and 4th Wednesday of each month at 9:30 a. m.," he concluded.

PRR Women's Aid Meets At Rehoboth

Harrington was well represented Wednesday when Mrs. Ringenfelder called the ladies together for a box luncheon at the Veterans' Club House at Rehoboth Beach.

102 women from all points on the division assembled in the spacious club room where entertainment, speaking, group singing and renewing old acquaintances were enjoyed.

After luncheon in the dining room, where coffee, cake and ice cream were served, the ladies posed on the front porch and steps for a group picture, taken by Allan Parsons.

The weather was ideal for this first division affair held on the north end, and the ladies were assured by Mrs. Ringenfelder that it will not be the last.

Rotarians View Festival Film

"When I was a little boy," said Otis Esham, of Parsonsburg, Md., president of the Delmarva Chicken Festival, before the Harrington Rotary Club Tuesday evening, "my parents, although the greatest people in all the world, it seemed to me, were poor. My mother worked in the field, with my father. One day I said to her, 'Mother, when I get older, I'm going to try to make enough money so that you won't have to work in the field.' Her reply: 'That's all right, Otis, just try to make enough money so your wife will not have to work in the field. You'll get along.'"

"Some of our relatives were. I thought, immensely wealthy—because they had bath tubs. I liked to visit them and indulge in the luxury of a bath, without the customary wash-tub baths on Saturday nights."

"I quit school when I was in the eighth grade, because I wanted to make some money. I went into the broiler business—I was not the pioneer, but I was an early broiler grower on the shore—and the first year I cleared $600. That seemed like a fortune to me, and I began to expand. I've been in the broiler business ever since."

Mr. Esham, who has been actively identified with many broiler associations, and has visited many broiler-producing areas, believes there will always be a demand for Delmarva broilers. The normal increase in population alone is his basis for this optimism, with the fact that chicken is of the highest protein content, and, being low in calories, helps maintain the symmetrical contours of the equatorial sector.

Lauding the Delmarva Chicken Festival as an agency for nationwide publicity for the broiler industry, not only here, but elsewhere, the speaker, nevertheless, deplored the fact that as yet there is no way for the city purchaser to know that he is purchasing a Delmarva broiler. There should be a way, and he believes there will be a way in the near future. When you mention Delmarva to the average New Yorker, he thinks you are referring to some mythical place—or some place up around the Delaware Water Gap.

A movie of the recent festival held in Harrington was shown.

Brinton Holloway, chairman of the Delmarva Chicken Festival, was program chairman for the evening.

Select Nation's Outstanding 4-H'ers as Honored Delegates to Club Congress

(Above) Discussion periods are a feature of the Club Congress. All delegates are divided into "huddles" of six, these groups reaching an opinion on various "agreed-disagree" questions. Then the groups reassemble for final deliberation.

CHICAGO—Special—More than 1,200 outstanding rural youth—mostly farm boys and girls—selected by the Extension Service as state, sectional and national winners in the 1953 4-H award programs of projects of agriculture and homemaking.

The youthful delegates will represent more than 27 million active fellow members throughout the United States.

Expenditures of the National Committee on Boys and Girls Club Work, a citizens' group, total approximately $900,000 in grants annually to assist the Cooperative Extension Service in furthering the program, membership and influence of 4-H. The major portion of the grants, which are provided by some 40 industrial organizations, foundations and prominent public-spirited men and women, are used for 4-H merit awards, including medals, savings bonds, trips, college scholarships and leader training.

Among the corporations and foundations providing grants are Allis-Chalmers, American Forest Products Industries, Carnation Co., Firestone Tire, Ford Motor Co. and Ford Tractor Division, General Motors, Hercules Powder, International Harvester, Kellogg Co., Kerr Glass, Mathieson Chemical, Montgomery Ward, Nash-Kelvinator, Sears-Roebuck Foundation, Simplicity Pattern, Spool Cotton, Standard Brands, United States Rubber, and Westinghouse Educational Foundation.

Cooperation is also provided by the Illinois Central, North Western, Rock Island and Milwaukee Railroads, Proctor Electric Co., Spinnery Yarn, Tomi Co., and Wm. Wrigley, Jr., Co. and Cene Astry.

Oil companies collaborating include American Oil, General Petroleum, Pan-Am Southern, Pure Oil, Standard Oil Foundation, Inc. (Chicago), Standard Oil Co. (Kentucky), The Standard Oil Co. (Ohio), Stanolind Oil and Gas, and Utah Oil Refining.

Individual donors include The President of the United States, Mrs. Charles R. Walgreen, Thomas E. Wilson, Edward Ross Wilson and Conrad Hilton.

"So fundamental and significant are the accomplishments of the 4-H Clubs that their principles have been accepted and initiated in more than 30 countries around the world," said G. L. Noble, director of the National Committee. "This is a splendid record," he continued, "considering that at the same time there has been consistent growth and a stronger foundation of sturdy citizenship laid at home. In part this accounts for the growing support of 4-H by our agricultural and industrial leaders."

FARM FIRE PREVENTION AND PROTECTION STUDIED

A farm with no telephone, short water supply, closely spaced buildings, and an impassable lane turning onto a dirt road is in bad shape in case of a building fire. Agricultural economists at the University of Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station found these factors were the most dangerous threats to farm fire protection when they made a study of farm fire prevention and protection on 815 farms in Maryland.

They studied fire protection and prevention measures in 41 areas in the state and found many conditions which contributed to the frequency of farm fires and the extent of the losses due to fires. But they discovered that there were only a few of them that were associated with the majority of farm fires.

If farmers are to receive maximum protection from organized rural fire companies, the economists found that the farm property must: (1) be located on a hard surfaced road; (2) have a farm lane that is passable even in bad weather; (3) have telephone service; (4) possess an adequate water supply; and (5) provide ample space between buildings.

Among the more important factors for fire prevention, the Maryland economists listed such things as fire-proof roofs, proper chimney construction and maintenance, good lightning rod protection and well designed heating equipment.

They pointed out that there are intangible factors which contribute to fire prevention. That is, the attitude of the farmers played a big part in the success of fire prevention.
