Stock Car Racing Ends Sunday At Georgetown

The first afternoon of Sunday stock car racing scheduled for last Sunday afternoon at the Georgetown Speedway was postponed due to the high snow storm that blanketed the East Coast. The program that was originally scheduled for last week will be presented this Sunday afternoon, as the last racing card of the season at Georgetown Speedway.

The first race is scheduled for 2:30 p. m. under the banner of the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing (NASCAR). The afternoon's slate will be topped by a 25-lap feature event, which will be preceded by three 10-lap heats and a 10-lap consolation.

The top battle is expected to be between the first and second place drivers of Georgetown's Modified Division. Only eight points separate first place Buck McCardell, of Conowingo, Md., and second spot Lou Johnson, of New Castle. McCardell, with 536 points, is expected to be driving the Modified Ford Coupe owned by Benjamin's Garage, of Conowingo, while Johnson, with 528 points, will be chauffeuring No. 40 Modified Ford owned by Charles Brown, of Hyattsville, Md.

Many other strong contenders for the Georgetown purse from the Eastern Circuit of NASCAR are also expected to be on hand to furnish plenty of competition to McCardell and Johnson in this final racing program of the season.

GROWERS INVITED TO TOUR TURKEY FARMS

Marketing methods and housing and management practices on three modern turkey farms will be open to inspection Wednesday. A one-day tour to these places has been arranged for all turkey growers and any other persons interested, announces Silas J. McHenry, assistant extension poultryman at the University of Delaware.

Cars will leave the post office building in Georgetown at 8 a.m.; Marker's Hatchery in Dover at 9 a.m.; and the Glasgow-Route 40 intersection at 9:45 a.m. The tour will end before supper time.

Turkey operations to be visited are those of James Rugh near Elkton, Md., Warren Johnson near Nottingham, Pa., and the Spar Hill Farm near Centerville, Del.

Special of the Rugh Farm, says McHenry, are a new freezer for storing birds for retail sales, and central hot water heat for brooding poults. Warren Johnson, with 12,000 White Holland turkeys and 1500 breeders, has a 16-foot square "walk in" freezer and a dressing plant with complete facilities for killing, dressing, packaging and cold storage.

Manager Harold Esrey of Spar Hill farm markets all his birds as frozen eviscerated and this year plans to sell stuffed, roasted turkeys "ready-to-eat." Another feature is an air conditioned hatchery with 45,000 capacity.

The tour is sponsored jointly by the Agricultural Extension Service, State Board of Agriculture and Delaware Poultry Improvement Association.

Arrangements are being handled by Gooden Pepper, Georgetown; Raymond Gordy, Seaford; Fred Greenly, Harrington; Charles Williams, of Bridgeville.

Also helping are county agents William Henderson, Georgetown; George Vapaa, Dover; Edward Schabinger, Newark; Ray Miller, Elkton, Md., and Delaware extension poultrymen Frank Gordy and McHenry.

JAMES F. WILLIAMS SR. RAISES GEESSE

In the fall of the year, when the air begins to get crisp and the geese start flying, many sports-minded men feel a tingling in their veins and have the urge to get out in the goose pits. Geese furnish pleasure to James F. Williams Sr., Chestertown, Md., not only in the fall but all year, because his hobby is raising Canadian Honkers rather than shooting them.

At present there are 44 geese in his flock. In the 32 years he has been raising geese he has acquired a great deal of knowledge about their habits.

During a recent interview, he explained that young geese generally start laying when they are three years old, but occasionally they will lay at two years of age.

Young geese lay four or five eggs per clutch, while older geese lay seven or eight. If a goose isn't allowed to set after laying the first clutch of eggs she will generally lay two clutches per year.

A gander chooses one goose as his mate, and mates only with that one. Two mated geese are usually mated for life; if a goose dies, its mate will then choose another mate. Recently Mr. Williams lost a goose that was 32 years old - during her life she outlived four mates!

The geese feed entirely on pasture, except in the winter months when a small amount of corn is fed. "It is very important," Mr. Williams said, "that a stream of pond be made available to the flock during the summer, because the eggs' hatchability is better when water is available."

Mr. Williams has a permit to buy and sell geese. During the last year, his sales have amounted to $240.

The wings of the tame geese are clipped so that they cannot fly. In the fall and spring, thousands of wild geese are often attracted to the Williams farm by the presence of the tame honkers.

"These geese are wonderful as weather prophets," said Mr. Williams. "Before a storm they always do a lot of fussing."

Mr. and Mrs. Williams have eight children, all married except the youngest son, who lives with his parents.

The Williams' farm, which is 220 acres, now supports a herd of 23 Guernseys and Holsteins. Mr. Williams has shipped milk to the Pet Milk Company for 22 years.

LOCKWOOD'S KEEP PRODUCTION RECORDS

The Ernest Lockwoods, Hazlettville, are working to increase milk production on their farm and produce feed at less cost. During the last two years the daily milk production of each cow has been recorded in their milk book.

"This has been a real eye-opener to us," Mrs. Lockwood says. "Some of the cows that we thought were the best milkers just didn't hold up on their milk."

Not only do they have a good check on the amount of milk given by each cow daily, but they also have a good idea what the milk of each cow tests. "We're having herd tests run about every six months, and we send the poorest testers and producers to the butcher," Mr. Lockwood said.

Dairying is a major enterprise on the 100-acre farm. The farm supports a fine mixed Guernsey-Holstein herd of 18 animals, 14 of which are now being milked. Temporary fence silos have been a "must" on their farm every year since 1943 when their milk was first sent to the Pet Milk Company at Greensboro. They are considering a bunker-type silo this year, because they feel it will cost less to build and will hold more silage. It can be built on top of the ground with either wooden or cinder-block walls.

The Lockwoods have entered the Delaware Greener Pastures Program this year. George Vapaa, associate county agent for Kent County, was instrumental in getting them into such a pasture improvement program, and they are following his recommendations.

The Lockwood's son, Calvin, says, "The main reason for entering this contest was to increase milk production and to do it more economically."

Calvin was active in FFA work while in high school, and in 1946 attained the rank of State Farmer. He was in the Air Force for one year. He likes general farm work and dairying.

Magnolia

Mrs. Bessie Wright has been substitute teaching in the fifth and sixth grades while their regular teacher, Mrs. Albert Robertson, was absent due to illness.

Mrs. Elva McIlvaine has been substituting at Houston in the first and second grades.

The children from ten through the high school age are holding services in the church Sunday evening at 7 o'clock. In commemoration of Armistice Day, their theme will be, "Peace."

Their hope is that enough interest will be shown to warrant services on each Sunday evening, and their ultimate aim is, to organize a MYF. This group is being sponsored by the Womans' Society of Christian Service and the youngest member of the society, Mrs. Betty Appenzeller, is to be their leader. However, due to illness in her family, Mrs. Appenzeller will be unable to take over Sunday evening, and a member of the group will have charge of the service, with a different member having charge each Sunday evening.

CAN YOU TOP THIS?

J. M. Darling, a retired farmer living a half mile from Masten's Corner, says he has learned how to grow soybeans.

A plant of soybeans came up in his lima bean patch, and when he hoed his limas, he hoed the soybean plant. He stuck a pole for the plant to climb and last week he harvested the beans. He picked 1,241 pods from one plant.

Now, can you top that?

Takes Room from Doldrums

A bright color—vermillion, for instance—draws your eye when it's used in the decoration of a room. A dull one, such as a deep tone of red, stays quietly in its place. The brilliant colors which provide positive accents of color are sometimes needed to give life to an otherwise dull room.
