The Harrington Journal
Harrington, Del.
Hi, Editor:

Sorry I haven't renewed this subscription but I held off hoping that I could renew in late February or early March, but due to my heavy work load and the building of my new warehouse at this time, I had to forsake the trip.

The Roofers' Convention will be held in Cincinnati, O., in January 1955, and probably in Harrington in February, 1955.

Things in the Territory seem to be rolling at a merry pace. The general public does not seem too excited about statehood, but the committees are managing to keep it in the news, on radio, and on television most of the time. Sometimes after reading the paper, I don't think we will get statehood which, as far as I am concerned, doesn't make the least bit of difference. I have been here for over 20 years under the Territory Government and I think I have been treated fairly.

With the renewal of my subscription, I will help you increase your circulation by paying for two one-year subscriptions for brothers Joe and Earl.

Joe C. Laws, P. O. Box 428, Aquadilla, Puerto Rico, and Earl Laws, 607 Hughes Avenue, N. Cape May, N. J.

Give the balance of the money order as a donation towards the new fire truck.

Respectfully submitted,
Merritt T. Laws

Senator Gore's Speech

ration. This is the "turn back faction." In this group you will find Humphrey, Wilson, Weeks and Dodge.

Some people call it the Republican "team." It's hard for me to decide whether it's one or two teams! At least they do not play the same game. Dr. Jeckyll does not seem to know what Mr. Hyde is up to. Or maybe they do.

In either event, it often places the president and his administration in contradictory positions.

The "talk good" faction seems to have full play in presenting the liberal side of the administration's split personality. In preparation of the president for his press conferences and in speech writing, they go to town.

In his press conferences, I believe we see a truer reflection of the real personality of the man, Dwight D. Eisenhower. In these he reacts generously and tolerantly to almost any given set of circumstances. In these, he looks good even to a Democrat—better, in fact, to Democrats than to Republicans. At the very least, we can be sure that his attentions are good.

But the Eisenhower administration is something else. It does not reflect the warm geniality of the president; it looks more like Humphrey, Wilson, Weeks and Dodge.

Thus, our Executive leadership is one of split personality.

Perhaps this will help us understand a statement the President made at a Press conference the other day. One of the reporters wanted to know if he was a liberal or a conservative. According to the papers, the President replied that he was a liberal where people are concerned but conservative with material things.

Now I have been trying to decide just what that statement meant. It is hard for me to understand how one can be liberal in the treatment of human problems while withholding the material things necessary to solve or alleviate those problems.

If we could clearly understand the meaning of this statement, it might help us understand the paradoxes and solve the riddles of the State of the Union and the budget messages.

When the President had finished delivering his State of the Union message before a joint session of Congress last January I looked around and saw some pretty glum faces on Republican Senators. In fact, one of them said to me in confidence, "We did not defeat the New Deal, we got it." Another said, "He was in the middle of the road, all right, half way between the New Deal and the Fair Deal."

Even some Democrats were beaming. One of my colleagues remarked to me that the President had just given approval of a liberal New Deal type program.

And, indeed, his message did sound quite liberal. Many Democrats found little in it to quarrel about.

But in about three weeks the budget came up in Congress. Then the tax bill began to unfold. Humphreys, Wilson, Weeks, and Dodge had had a field day. The budget and the tax bill were just what the Old Guard had been hoping for. To the Democrats who had been pleased with the State of the Union message, it was a rude awakening.

The budget fell far short of supporting the program the President had outlined in his campaign, in his State of the Union message, in his special messages, and in his press conferences.

For example, in his State of the Union message, the President spoke movingly of his "concern for the human problems of our citizens," of his desire for "banishment of destitution and cushioning the shock of personal disaster."

When the budget came to Congress, the recommended appropriation for public assistance was $32 million less than was appropriated for last year. The public health service had been cut $6 million.

The gap between the preaching and the practice is wide.

As he outlined his program to the Congress, the President had this to say on conservation:

"I recommend enactment of legislation to strengthen agricultural conservation and upstream flood prevention work, and to achieve a better balance with major flood control structures in the downstream areas."

The new budget, however, recommended an appropriation for the 1955 agriculture conservation program which is $4 million less than the amount appropriated for last year. Soil conservation was cut $4.4 million, flood control $2 million, reclamation construction work was cut $56 million, and $44 million had been chopped off funds for river and harbor construction projects.

In his special message on agriculture, he said that "During 1954 the Secretary of Agriculture will give further special attention to the problems peculiar to small farmers." But 10 days later the budget recommended a cut for the agency primarily concerned with helping small farmers, the Farmers Home Administration. FHA loan funds are cut $20 million. This cut will come out of production and subsistence loans, the very funds designed by Congress to help small farmers from one crop to another. In addition, the budget cut the agency's administrative funds by $4.48 million.

In his State of the Union message, the President said that "The nation as a whole is not preparing teachers or building schools fast enough to keep up with the increase in our population." He spoke of our youth being seriously neglected in this respect. His listeners got the idea he meant to do something about the problem and I have no doubt that he had such good intentions. But when the budget came over, the school construction appropriation recommended for 1955 was cut $155 million below the appropriation for fiscal 1953.

With our school population growing by leaps and bounds, one who listened to the President's message would have expected more funds for the school lunch program but the budget carried a $15 million cut in school lunch funds.

In his State of the Union message the President spoke with pride of the creation of the new cabinet department of Health, Education and Welfare. He said it "symbolized the government's permanent concern with the human problems of our citizens." But the budget for this department which was set up to deal with human problems has been cut $200 million. Now a symbol is fine, but I am wondering whether a symbol will solve as many human problems as $200 million would solve.

On February 3, the President held a press conference. The Washington Evening Star began its story on that press conference this way:

"President Eisenhower today asserted his belief that the prosperity of this country lies in the prosperity of the masses and not simply in the welfare of just a few corporations."

In the column just adjoining this story was another story about the testimony of Federal Reserve Board Chairman William McChesney Martin Jr. before a Congressional committee. It started this way:

"The chairman of the Federal Reserve Board said today that in the interest of economic stability he considered it more important to give tax relief to business than to individual income tax payers."

The contradiction is inescapable. The President calls for relief of the masses, while a top money advisor of his administration urges relief for business and vested interests. So does the administration's tax bill.

This tax program is a stacked deck. It is stacked against the masses of the people, and unless Congress does some re-shuffling or a masterful job of cutting the deck, all the aces will be dealt to the big Wall Street vested interests. This will be in line with what has always happened when the Republican Party was in power.

The Democrats are proposing a different kind of tax reduction. The Democrats propose to raise the personal exemption for all taxpayers and all dependents of taxpayers from $600 to $800 immediately. If we are to have tax reduction, the right place to start is with the mass of the people giving most benefit to fathers and mothers of large families. This would immediately and directly affect the purchasing power of the American people.

The Democratic tax proposal is in sharp contrast to the Administration's tax bill for which Republican Congress seems eager to vote. The Administration's tax bill is on a different theory. It is based upon the "trickle-down theory"—that is, heap the benefits upon the tables of a few and some of the crumbs left over may trickle down to the other folks. Under this theory and plan, big business and corporate stock holders would get the bulk of the benefit. Even at best, its effect upon our economy would be indirect.

The Republicans are for tax relief for a few. The Democrats support tax relief for all. The Democrats are anxious to stimulate our sagging economy.

If we win the fight in Congress the people will be saved from the consequences of another Republican mistake. If we lose in Congress, we will win before the people in November.

Perhaps nothing concerns a man personally more than the protection of his good name. Nothing is more precious. Last November when the President spoke to the Bnai Brith Anti Defamation League in Washington he seemed to be saying that the protection of one's good name is a priceless right. He told the league "There must be no weakening of the code by which we have lived, of the right to meet our accuser face to face."

But what about the plight of the hapless 2400 so-called security risks which the Administration says it has kicked out of the Government. Apparently these people didn't even have the right to know they were accused, much less know who had accused them or face their accusers.

So far, the Administration has refused to give a realistic breakdown on these so-called security firings. It has now been discovered that not all were fired. Some resigned of their own accord without knowing they were under suspect. Under present circumstances, there is a cloud hanging over every employee who has left the Federal Government service in recent months. Each must be wondering whether he is one of those classed as a security risk and branded by administration and Republican Party spokesmen as a spy, a traitor, a subversive, or a communist. So far the Administration has done nothing about giving those accused the right to face their accusers.

Soon after the Eisenhower Administration took office, Administration spokesmen began to view with alarm what they called the depreciation in the buying power of the dollar. They were shocked by the ease with which the ordinary man could go to his bank and borrow money. And the interest rates the ordinary man was paying, well, they were scandalously low. They said they had a plan for making the same number of dollars buy a lot more.

The retiring Democratic administration was aware that some inflationary forces were at work, and to counter these forces the Federal Reserve Board had withdrawn its support from the Government security market. This had the effect of gradually checking the inflationary trend.

But this gradual checking wasn't enough to satisfy Doctors Humphreys and Dodge. They said the patient was very sick, and prescribed a much more drastic cure. They suddenly announced they were going to convert the national debt to long term bonds, which, they said, would make the debt more manageable. In addition, they boosted interest rates 30 per cent on the first billion dollars they tried to refinance. Shortly thereafter pandemonium broke loose. The nation's money market was demoralized. Money became harder to get; businessmen found bankers more reluctant to provide money for inventories or expansion. Banks wanted more security and higher interest rates. The housing industry was hard hit as financing for home construction became almost nonexistent. Interest rates on home loans was increased. The cost of doing business went up.

Finally the Administration was forced to admit that its policies were wrong, that the economic pill it had given the country, despite its sugar coating, had indeed caused a serious financial upset. In fact I am afraid the medicine caused more serious ailments than it cured. For month after month, money became scarcer, but the cost of living continued to climb, establishing a new all-time high for each succeeding month until November. In addition taxpayers of the nation will have to shell out $600 million extra dollars just to pay the increased interest cost on Government borrowing to this coming June 30.

I am still wondering exactly how one can be both liberal and conservative at the same time. Maybe one can be liberal on promises, but conservative on performance.

At least the Eisenhower Administration has one distinction that will live in history. Search the annals of time. Go back and call the roll from Lincoln to Hoover, Grant to Coolidge, Washington to Truman, and you will find that one all-time high record has been set. The candidate for president made more promises before election and his Administration kept fewer after election than any in the history of the United States.

For instance, the farmer was promised better prices. Instead, farm income has been drastically reduced and official records indicate that farm income last year was at a new 10-year low. For years under Democratic Administration, farmers enjoyed prosperity. They had confidence that price support programs would stave off disastrous drops in farm prices and assure them reasonable income for their labors.

Soon after Secretary Benson began to dispense his pessimism, farm prices and farm income took a nosedive. Farmers looked to President Eisenhower. They remembered what he said at Brookings, S. Dak., in October 1952:

"The Republican Party is pledged to sustaining of the 90 percent of parity price support and it is pledged even more than that to helping the farmer obtain his full parity, 100 per cent parity, with the guarantee in the price supports of 90 per cent."

At his press conference the President still speaks glowingly of how good a program Secretary of Agriculture Benson was going to work out. I am not sure that Secretary Benson ever heard of that speech the President made in Brookings. At least, there was a vast difference in what the President said and in what Secretary of Agriculture Benson said. The Secretary of Agriculture said he would use supports merely "to protect farmers from undue disaster." He didn't bother to explain the difference between "due" and "undue" disaster.

I have not found anyone who can explain to me the difference between the man Eisenhower, and the Eisenhower Administration. It is a baffling paradox.

Besides Eisenhower, the man, and the Eisenhower Administration, there's another force at work in Washington—the Republican team in the Congress. And what a team for any man to have to quarterback. Just about the time the President needs some good downfield blocking from his teammates, his blocking backs and all his linemen run off the field and into the stands to tackle an old Democratic alumnus, former quarterback Harry S. Truman.

Democratic members of Congress are willing to accept individual responsibility for an intelligent, progressive government of the country. After all, Democrats are trained in power and leadership. For 20 years our party shouldered the responsibility for government. During that 20 years, Democrats led the United States from a low point of depression, despondency, want and waning hope to the highest point of prosperity at home, and to the highest pinnacle of world power and influence any people on earth has ever known. So acting responsibly is not a new role to Democrats.

But for the Republican members of Congress it's a different story. With few exceptions, Republican Senators and House members are either unwilling, unable or insufficiently visioned to accept the responsibility for government that falls upon the party in power. Instead, they are still doing just what they did for the past 20 years—kicking up their heels and coveting all across the pastures like wild jackasses.

The more of the program of the Eisenhower Administration I see unfold, the more I am persuaded that it's time for a change. And the more I see of the performance of Republican Senators and Congressmen, the more certain I am that that change is going to be made at the very next election.

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

Easy Does It—Again!

Ladies Aid Society had their rummage sale the other night—and as soon as the doors opened, "Easy" Roberts was laside.

Without a word, he headed straight for the coat counter, picked out a shabby old tweed jacket, and paid for it. "Easy" told me a little later that buying his jacket back was getting to be a regular habit.

"That's been my favorite smoking jacket for years," he said. "And my wife talks me into giving it away regularly. Then I get to thinking how much I like it and hurry down to buy that jacket back. This is the third time I've done it!"

From where I sit, everyone's entitled to his own likes—whether it's a sports jacket, a baseball team, or the beverage he likes for dinner. For example, the wife likes coffee along with Saturday night spaghetti while I like a glass of beer. We never try to "sell" each other on our personal preferences.

Protect Broiler Finish with SULFAQUINOXALINE

Poultry buyers pay a premium for broilers with top-quality finish—meaty, well-developed birds with good skin color. Make your birds premium earners. Don't let coccidiosis rob you of profits. Use SULFAQUINOXALINE feeds to protect not only against bloody coccidiosis, but also against all damaging intestinal species of coccidia which may strike when your investment is greatest.

SULFAQUINOXALINE can cut your production costs as much as 2.5 cents per bird by drastically reducing mortality and stunting due to coccidiosis.

Experience with hundreds of millions of broilers has proved SQ the safest, most effective anticoccidiosis agent available. It is the only coccidiostat on the market that combats outbreaks due to all dangerous poultry coccidia. Plan to reap those extra profits now. Tell your dealer that you feeds containing SULFAQUINOXALINE. Can be fed right up to market

GIFT SHOP AT MILFORD HOSPITAL CAUSING FAVORABLE COMMENT

The gift shop at Milford Memorial Hospital is causing much favorable comment. Sponsored by the Ladies Auxiliary of the hospital, it is under the able chairmanship of Mrs. Raymond Masten.

Many attractive and inexpensive gift items are carried in the shop and the Easter season is now being anticipated with a large supply of bunnies and toys made of foam rubber.

The gift shop is open daily from 12:30 to 4:30 p. m., and from 6:30 to 8 p. m. It is located on the right, just inside the hospital entrance. Ice cream from the shop has proved a popular purchase and one very welcome to most patients. Cigarettes, candy, chewing gum or magazines are inexpensive, but bring pleasure to anyone confined to bed.

All attendants in the shop volunteer their time and seem to enjoy the hours spent in the shop. Another group of volunteers operate the hospital car which goes throughout the hospital, and is now stocked from the gift shop.

Profits from the operation of the shop will go towards equipping a physiotherapy treatment room at Milford Memorial Hospital. Such treatment will be one of tremendous value to anyone suffering from stiffness or soreness of muscles or limbs. It will help those suffering from arthritis, as well as those trying to get back the use of a broken arm or leg.

At this time Wilmington is the nearest point at which patients may obtain physiotherapy treatment under hospital supervision.

Kent Home Doings

By Charlotte L. Swanson
Kent County Home
Demonstration Agent

Since February, a group of Kent County home demonstration club women have been working diligently at the tailoring project school. Six lessons have passed, with only one remaining, and the suits and coats will be ready to lead the Easter Parade.

Miss Ruth E. Pearce, extension clothing specialist, has been the teacher for the school, showing the latest methods of tailoring developed to save time and turn out a professional-looking suit or coat. Viola Community Hall has been the scene of the school, and sessions have been held almost every week since the first one February 15.

It's always fascinating to see a pattern and a piece of fabric become a well-tailored garment. Only when you see it in the process do you realize the many steps and the important reinforcements or interfacings that make it what it is.

In addition to making one tailored suit or coat, these women are learning principles of tailoring which they will be able to use in making clothes for themselves and families as well. Fitting, preparing fabric, making buttonholes, inserting zippers, putting in sleeves, and many other steps of making coats and suits will be repeated again and again.

In this class it has been especially interesting to see how different coats can look although they are made from the same pattern. Mrs. Arthur Hall, Milford;

Mrs. J. Heyman Roosa, and Mrs. Walter Winkler, Harrington, are making three different versions of the same pattern. Each one chose a fabric and color to complement herself and her wardrobe, and the coats are distinctively different.

The topper is a favorite item, and version of it are being made by Mrs. William T. Hufnal, Dover; Mrs. Robert J. Kirby, Milford, and Mrs. Tilghman Outten, Harrington.

The suit is a perennial favorite for spring and all year around. Among our suits we have all the favorite spring colors for this year, navy blue, powder blue, aqua, beige, and light gray. Miss Helen Comstock, Dover; Mrs. Harold Davis, Milford; Mrs. Charles French, Milford; Mrs. Margaret Kennedy, Dover; Mrs. Ruth Rusky, Smyrna; Mrs. Mildred Sharp, Milford; Mrs. William Sterling, Dover; Mrs. Irene Wooleyhan, Kenton, and Mrs. Paul Zartman, Dover, are all making suits.

When you see their new spring outfits, you will admire them.

HOME CLUBS SUPPORT FAMILY AND HEALTH STUDY

Home demonstration clubs are supporting the family and health study now being conducted throughout the state by the University of Delaware.

The state home demonstration council has agreed that rural people should be acquainted with the purpose and value of this survey, and has recommended that club members assist in preparing their neighbors for possible visits by interviewers.

Mrs. Ernest Waller, Newark, state family life chairman for the 90 clubs, has sent a letter to each club chairman, explaining the survey and asking the members' co-operation.

Masten's

Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Welch and family spent Sunday with Mrs. Minnie Welch.

Mrs. Clarence Jarrell and daughter, Bertha Belle, were in Wilmington Saturday.

Mrs. Mildred Welch and sons, Edgar and David, visited Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Welch Thursday.

Airman Donald Jarrell, who has been stationed at Cheyenne, Wyo., has been visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Jarrell, the last three weeks. He is now stationed at Andrews, Washington, D. C.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Minner and Mrs. Alvira Minner visited Mr. and Mrs. Donald Everett, in Wilmington, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Larimore had a new TV installed last week.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Kates attended the statewide federation of Democratic clubs in Dover, Saturday. They also enjoyed the dinner and had the pleasure of hearing an address by Senator Albert Gore, Tennessee.

Mr. and Mrs. William Kates and daughter, Lillian, of Darby, Pa., visited Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Kates Sunday. They visited James Kates at the Kent General Hospital, Dover.

It should also help in developing programs on health and nutrition for 4-H club boys and girls.

According to the University's supervisors of the survey, a cross section of the state's population will be interviewed — about 1000 persons in all. They will include the age group from 10 to 65 years. Each person selected for an interview will be contacted individually, and all information will be held strictly confidential.

Through the cross-section interviews, the University hopes to learn a great deal about the individual's abilities, talents, attitudes, opinions and interests of the people of Delaware.

Greener Pastures Program

Top-notch pasture land is the goal of Kent County farmers who enroll in the 1954 Greener Pastures Program, sponsored by the Delaware Crop Improvement Association.

Many local farmers already have excellent pastures, reports County agent George K. Vapaa. As graduates of last year's greener pastures program, they are no longer eligible to enter this program, but are busy encouraging their neighbors to follow the same practices that brought them "excellent" rating.

"In view of the price cost situation, it's most important to grow the best possible crops at lower production costs," stresses Vapaa. When a farmer enters the greener pastures program he will benefit by recommendations of the extension agronomist and dairymist, who will visit his pasture during the growing season. There will also be a tour of the 1953 top pastures in Kent County during July.

A county-wide pastures program committee was recently organized to push this activity. With Robert Nelson, of Whiteleysville, as chairman, the committee includes Sam Wise of Camden, and Alvin Allen, of Camden.

Farmers growing the best quality pastures will be honored at the awards dinner of the Crop Improvement Association next fall. They will receive certificates and awards.

Any farmer thinking of entering this program is invited to see county agent Vapaa for full particulars.

Some Battery

An appliance dealer in Tupelo, Miss., got an urgent order from a customer who wanted "A battery radio that will play spiritual songs and lots of preaching. Please, I don't want none with lots of jazz. If you got one of that kind, please send it to me."

Faulty Design Explains Waste

Disposal Failure
Failure of individual sewage disposal systems is generally due to faulty design, according to Ray W. Carpenter, Extension agriculture engineer at the University of Maryland.

Carpenter points out that many septic tanks are too small and material cannot stay in them long enough to properly digest. A general recommendation is a minimum of 500 gallons actual work-capacity and an additional 250 or 300 gallons capacity per family member over two.

If disposal lines are in tight soil, they should be bedded in medium-fine gravel and may have to be flanked by drainage tile placed at a lower level.

Another common mistake, according to Carpenter, is burying the disposal tile too deep. Recommended depths vary between 18 and 24 inches, depending on the soil. There is no danger of freezing if the system is continually in use.

If garbage disposal units drain into the septic tank system, the capacity should be increased approximately 20 per cent over normal.

The agricultural engineer says detergents used in wash waters and drained into the tank is not considered detrimental to digestion under normal household conditions. But he adds that the tendency of detergents to keep materials in suspension may result in serious carry-over into the disposal system unless the outtake pipe extends about half-way down in the tank liquid depth.

It is best to discharge water softener salt solutions elsewhere than in the septic tank system, Carpenter cautions.

Mrs. Alfonso Evans, council president, will preside. Greetings will be extended by Dr. Jerome Holland, president of Delaware State College; and Miss Louise Whitcomb, extension home management specialist at the University of Delaware.

EIGHT TEAMS TO PLAY IN MARDEL LEAGUE

Harrington will be one of the eight teams to play in the Mar-Del Baseball League, it was revealed recently at an organizational meeting in Dover.

The other teams, which will participate when the league opens its 14-game schedule May 9, are as follows: Lewes, the pennant winners; Wyoming, play-off winners; Frederica, Henderson, Felton, Viola, and Ridgely. The last-named team is a new entry, replacing Ellendale.

Applications were received from Cheswold, Milford, and Farmington, but the directors voted to keep the league at eight teams. The regular season will end Aug. 3, all games on Sundays. There will be best-of-three semifinal playoffs involving the top four teams, and a best-of-five champion series.

HYBRID SEED CORN

Each kernel of Southern States Hybrid Seed Corn is given Southern States own 3-Way treatment (treated with three different chemicals) for protection against insects, seed and soil borne diseases. You'll profit by using Southern States Adapted Hybrids because they're (1) bred right, (2) produced right, (3) harvested right, (4) dried right, (5) graded right and (6) treated right.

All Southern States Hybrids carry a "Double Guarantee" ... the regular guarantee plus a Replant Agreement.

TEST FOR YOURSELF

Take two samples of hybrid seed corn, one of Southern States and one from some other source. Plant these samples in two containers and hold them between 38° to 49° F. for a week, then bring them to room temperature. When the seeds sprout, count the results in sturdy, young plants. You'll be convinced why it pays to use Southern States 3-Way treated seed.

Joan Shorts

Joan Shorts Is Long On Canning

State honors in the 4-H Canning program for 1953 in Delaware were awarded to Joan Shorts, 15, of Smyrna, who put up 201 quarts of fruits and vegetables and 32 glasses of jelly and jam in her three years in club work. Much of the food preserved was grown in her own 4-H garden. Kerr Glass provided her with a coveted trip to the National Congress in Chicago.

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Homer E. Shorts, helped her until she was able to go on her own. Joan found a pressure cooker made canning and cooking easier. She made crabapple jelly, blackberry and strawberry jam, tomato juice as well as canning such vegetables as beets, corn, peas, asparagus and lima beans. She won many medals and prizes at county and state fairs, wrote news stories, and gave four talks on her 4-H work, two over the radio.

"We believe that the future of America is safe in the hands of youngsters like these."
