

USDA COMMITTEE SAYS STATE CANNOT BE CALLED DROUGHT DISASTER AREA

The Delaware U.S.D.A. Drought Committee, while admitting that farm crops will be short in the state this year, decided that Delaware cannot be called a drought disaster area.

After attempting to assess the accumulative effects of the drought to date, their conclusion, based upon farmer polls and crop estimates, was that the hay crop in the state will be 22,500 tons short or about 33 per cent. The corn crop will be 760,000 bushels short or about 12 per cent, and pastures were the hardest hit of the feed crops and there has been a loss of 2,250,000 cow days of grazing. New Castle County was by far the hardest hit by the drought and dairymen have been on a winter feeding schedule for the past six to eight weeks.

The committee consisted of Paul W. Mitchell, chairman, Newark, representing the Agricultural Stabilization Committee; Ralph R. Peters, Baltimore, Farmers Home Administration; Carroll Short of Middletown, representing the Delaware State Bankers Association; J. C. Rhodes of Middletown, the farmer member; Col. D. Preston Lee, Newark, director of Civil Defense and G. M. Worrlow, dean of the School of Agriculture, University of Delaware.

The committee will recommend to the Secretary of Agriculture that emergency credit be made available through the Farmers Home Administration to those farmers who cannot obtain credit locally for the purchase of hay, feed grains and other feedstuffs necessary to maintain their normal production pattern.

Carroll Short reported on the survey he had made on the drought conditions on 16 farms in the Middletown area. Hardest hit are dairy farmers where hay, silage and pasture crops are short. Mr. Short said all dairy farmers he contacted were now feeding hay and silage to supplement pastures, which were completely dried up. He pointed out that most farmers were forced to use second cuttings of clover and alfalfa hay as pasture and that there was little stubble hay worth harvesting. Having harvested less hay than usual and being forced to use much of this limited supply during the summer, many dairymen said they would be forced to buy hay for winter feeding, according to Mr. Short.

J. C. Rhodes said his corn crop had been cut about one-third by the dry weather and his sweet corn crop by one-half. He plans to bale his sweet corn fodder and has planted rye for fall pasture in an effort to supplement the short hay crop. Mr. Rhodes also plans to cut the soybeans he had planted for seed and use them as hay and some of the corn planted for grain will be needed for silage because the fodder is unusually short.

Dean George M. Worrlow commented that there is no reason for a panic about hay shortages, as nationwide there has been a plentiful hay crop. However, he did urge that farmers arrange now for adequate supplies of hay to meet their winter needs while prices are still reasonable.

Chairman Paul Mitchell pointed out that there are still available some ACP funds to carry out vegetative cover and pasture improvement practices this fall.

Professor C. E. Phillips, extension agronomist, and E. H. Schabinger, county agricultural agent sat in with the committee and had the following self-help recommendations for farmers suffering from drought conditions. These suggestions will vary depending upon conditions and feed needs on individual farms.

1. Some farmers have already planted corn that may not mature to the point where it can be profitably harvested for grain. This corn may be used for silage or it may be fed at the present time by cutting it and feeding it loose in the pasture. Farmers should not become panicky and ensile corn now before it has reached its full value as silage.

2. Get land ready now for seeding fall small grain crops. (Continued on back page)

New Anti-Cancer Weapon

This high-sensitivity gamma ray detector is being used to help fight cancer. Originally developed for "logging" oil wells, the device has been used by more than 15 cancer centers throughout the country.

The detector is here being used on a cancer patient under radioactive iodine treatment. The electronic counting device in the background measures gamma ray intensity through the probe-type detector in the doctor's hand. The cup-type detector at left of the "counter" measures radioactivity of body fluid of patients undergoing examination and treatment by the use of radioactive isotopes.

A truck was stolen, gasoline was reported stolen from a car, and the driver of another stolen car intercepted here Monday night.

The pickup truck of Leslie Kemp, was stolen from in front of his home at 20 Short St., and has not been recovered at this time.

Patrolman C. J. Jarrell, of Harrington, said the man, driving the car was Robert Sewell, of Lewes, had run into the rear of the car of Nelson Maxfield, of Harrington, at Commerce and Milby Streets, Maxfield, Patrolman Jarrell said, was getting ready to turn into Milby Street, where he lived, when the accident took place.

The Gorman car did not stop, however, and Maxfield pursued it, overtaking it a mile from town. He persuaded the driver to accompany him to the local police. As the man espied Patrolman Jarrell, however, he ran back of Irene's Restaurant and escaped.

The car was picked up by town police.

The Gorman car suffered a damaged front fender, while the Maxfield car had a damaged trunk lid, bumper, and tail-light. Gorman is being held in Sussex County jail, Georgetown, under $2000 bond for grand larceny.

G. O. P. Convention Names Candidates

At the Republican State Convention in Dover Wednesday the following candidates were named to participate in the November election:

For U. S. Senator—U. S. Rep. Herbert B. Warburton, of Wilmington.

For U. S. Representative—Mrs. Lillian Martin, Milford.

For attorney-general—Chief Deputy Atty.-Gen. Vincent A. Theisen.

For insurance commissioner—Former State Rep. Leon F. Trivitts, of Cannon.

For auditor of accounts—G. Edgar Townsend, the incumbent, of Wyoming.

For state treasurer—Jesse A. Harmon, of Dover.

The 1954 Republican platform was also brought out at the convention. It called for a study of county government, followed by appropriate action to "place all the county officers on adequate salaries and abolish the personal retention by them of fees."

The chief officers affected by such legislation would be the sheriff's and county treasurer's. Under the fee system, the income runs relatively high, particularly in New Castle County, and there has been agitation in the past to remove that system.

Also in its county government plank, the platform calls for study to improve county accounting and to consolidate, reorganize or eliminate offices where possible. A possibility under the latter, as an example, could be the clerk of the peace office—once the biggest county office—which had much of its former work taken over by the prothonotary's office.

10 Arrested In Denton Area Liquor Raids

Caroline County authorities Sunday launched a crackdown on illegal liquor sales and promptly filled the Denton jail to overflowing with 20 persons arrested in the Denton area.

A score of police officials from the Denton county, state, and federal levels of government participated in the pre-dawn raids led by Robert N. Lucke of the new state alcoholic enforcement unit.

The crackdown was requested by James A. Wise, state's attorney for Caroline County, who went along on the raids. Seized along with the prisoners were some 450 quarts of whiskey and beer.

All of the persons arrested Sunday were charged with selling beer, wine, and whiskey in violation of the county's "damp" liquor laws which require packaged alcoholic drinks to be sold only through county dispensary stores.

Most of the customers, officials explained, were migratory workers busy this time of the year with the area's vegetable crop.

Among those arrested Sunday was Elias (Easy) Jones, 45, who was taken into custody near Black Cat, Del. Jones waived extradition and was turned over to Maryland authorities.

It was later learned that he had been driving in front of his house and saw the raid. He kept driving. Officials charged Jones with illegal sales at a place only three blocks from the Denton jail.

Owens Forest To Have New Picnic Area

A picnic area is being laid out in the Owens State Forest on the Greenwood-Ellendale Road, near Owens Station, State Forester W. S. Taber has advised.

He explained the cleanup work has been done in the tract, known as the State Federation of Women's Club Forest by reason of the fact that it was purchased in part by funds furnished by that organization.

At first, the picnic facilities will be limited in extent but can be added to later if patronage of them warrant. The tables will be constructed of timber from the forest except for the top planks.

Use of picnic areas in Sussex County has grown to a vast extent this summer, Mr. Taber reported. He said that often the picnic facilities at the Ellendale State Forest, along U. S. 113, south of Milford, are crowded to the limit and late comers appeal to the forest ranger for directions to another spot.

Directed to the picnic site in the Redden forest, about two miles west of U. S. 113, north of Georgetown, the overflow from Ellendale has increased the popularity and use of the Redden grounds, which is somewhat concealed from the nine-foot road from Bridgeville to Redden.

Both the Redden and Ellendale forests are in the same general location, with the Ellendale tract lying north of the other, while the Owens tract is west and to the north of the Ellendale forest.

Fulton J. Downing will be the Republican candidate for representative in the Ninth Representative District, it was disclosed Friday afternoon when the deadline was reached for filing nomination petitions.

Mr. Downing, a former member of the Board of Education and a local lumber and supply dealer, will oppose the Democratic candidate Leon Donovan, the incumbent, in the general election in November.

Only one candidate had filed for a nomination for a county-wide office to be voted for at the Republican county primary election Aug. 28. Henry J. Ridgely, secretary of the Republican County Committee, said the County Committee would select candidates for the vacancies.

The candidate for the county-wide office will be Henry H. Gibbs, of Camden, who seeks nomination for Recorder of Deeds. Gibbs became the first Negro to become a candidate for a county-wide office in Kent County. His Democratic opponent will be Roy Honey, former Dover businessman, and state boat inspector.

Republican candidates for the various nominations for district offices were filed as follows: For Levy Court Commissioner, First Levy Court District, Wilmer T. Derrickson, of Dover; Third Levy Court District, Harry H. Jones, of near Rising Sun, with no candidate, as yet, from the Second Levy Court District.

Every year about this time, the fashion centers of the world voice their style predictions for the coming seasons and display the newest apparel created by their designers. The images within so many crystal balls come to life and set the style trends for women the world over. From a glimpse at this year's fabulous designs, we see a definite trend towards the handmade look. All style centers are advocating the rise of knitted, crocheted or embroidered apparel.

WORLD-WIDE FASHIONS
The handmade look encircles the fashion globe and makes its appearance in America as well as England, in Italy and Paris as well as Egypt. Stunning blouses and dresses in crochet are seen in American and London style collections. Lacy, cocktail frocks in cotton or wool crochet are featured with bell-like skirts or full flares. In sportswear, the American designers are favoring heavy, cable-knitted sweaters. Paris is showing bulky, knitted jackets and sweaters that are made with the simple knit and purl stitches, but the thickness of the yarn gives them added interest. In Italy, one of the newest style centers of the world, it is the knitted dress that excels.

Although embroidery designs are gaining favor all over as an adornment on sportswear and dressy apparel, Egypt's budding fashion industry is promoting the most lavish hand embroidery on their lounging outfits and evening wear. This whole trend is important in that it opens exciting, new vistas for all needleworkers.

ENGLISH IMPORT IN CROCHET

Straight from merry England comes this charming blouse, crocheted of white cotton. The British flair for simplicity and smart design is seen in the figure-moulding bodice. It features a dainty, patterned stitch of openwork design, and solid crochet on the sleeve bands and demure collar. You may obtain the directions for crocheting this English import in sizes 12, 14 and 16, by writing to the Needlework Department of this paper. Please send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for SWEET AND LOVELY, Leaflet No. P.C. 8062.

MORE TRIPS TO BE MADE TO PEA PATCH ISLAND

An old treasure was rediscovered recently and from all accounts Fort Delaware on Pea Patch Island in the Delaware River just across from Delaware City bids fair to become one of the state's greatest future attractions.

By popular demand, arrangements have been made by the Delaware State Park Commission and the Fort Delaware Society to open the island to the public for at least two more Sundays and probably three in September so that tourists and historians may explore the old ruins.

Through the efforts of these two organizations, Fort Delaware was made available to the public for the first time in many years on three weekends in July and August. More than 4500 interested visitors from an area covering ten states made the 20-minute trip by small boat to Pea Patch from Delaware City and spent hours exploring its moat, dungeons, ramparts, former gun emplacements and storage rooms.

Because of the scores of requests received following the last trip Sun. Aug. 8, it has been announced that boats will again leave Delaware City from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. Sun. Sept. 12 and Sept. 19. There will be a 50-cent fee for the boat ride but there is no admission charge to the island. If demands persist, the trips will be extended to Sun., Sept. 26.

Pea Patch Island is a tract of 178 acres in the Delaware River, of which about 50 acres is fast land. A wooden fort was built on the island as early as 1813, but was followed by a stone fort in 1821. This served until 1832 when it was destroyed by fire.

Work on the present fort began in 1843. It was not completed until 1859, just two years before the War Between the States. During that conflict it served as a prison for many Confederate soldiers, some of very high military rank.

The island was originally deeded by the state to the federal government. Several years ago, following World War II, it was declared surplus property and returned to Delaware, whereupon it was assigned to the State Park Commission for development.

Small appropriations have been granted by the last two General Assemblies to start improvements. A full-time caretaker is now employed and an effort is being made to conquer the heavy vegetation with which part of the island is covered. Because of its extreme popularity through this series of weekend trips, when the public was able to see the great possibilities of developing this spot into a state park and picnic grove, Fort Delaware Society is hopeful that representations can be made to the next General Assembly which will cause it to be more liberal with an appropriation. If that is possible, the Park Commission will be in a

JOURNAL RECEIVES NEW HONOR

The Harrington Journal received a singular honor this week when its editor was made a member of the Editorial Page Committee for 1954-55 of the National Editorial Association, a group of 5200 American newspapers.

The appointment came from Ed M. Anderson, of Brevard, N. C., who is president of the association.

As we grow older, we realize one does not have to be big to be recognized. It was only recently that The Journal received a certificate of merit from Gov. Caleb Boggs for its activities in civil defense. It was the only newspaper outside of Wilmington to get the award.

Judging by the way the members of Dover Airforce Base have been killed in automobile accidents of late, the fly-boys lose more personnel from this type of accident than they will in airplane accidents.

BARLOW AND HIS BUTTERBEANS

Some people couldn't tell a story, regardless of how good it was. Conversely, others can make almost any story appealing because of the ingenuity and personality of the raconteur. Zack Wells fits in the latter category, and so did Bill Barlow, who died suddenly last week.

A story we heard Bill tell a couple times recently revolved around butterbeans, a vegetable seen in almost every Delaware garden, despite the arduous work of punching the holes in the ground for the poles.

Just when butterbeans had scarcely broken the ground with their arrow-shaped leaves, Bill appeared in a local bank and casually remarked, "My butterbeans are that high," as he held his hand even with the level of the teller's counter.

In departing, he was accosted at the door by two women who asked, "Mr. Barlow, how high did you say your butterbeans were?"

Mr. Barlow raised his hand a couple feet or more off the floor and replied, "I said they were that high." And then he added, "They're in pots on a bench."

J. HARVEY BURGESS AND JEFF DAVIS

On our Sunday visits to J. Harvey Burgess, former publisher of this newspaper, who has been in Delaware Hospital, Wilmington, several months, we have listened for hours to his numerous tales of the present and days gone by. We have thought these stories should get into print and will proceed, henceforth, to publish them. Following is one he told us Sunday of Jeff Davis, several times governor of Arkansas and United States Senator at the turn of the century.

Davis came from the old school of Southern politicians. He was a learned man, a brilliant politician, and an excellent orator.

Campaigning in a small town, on a hot day, he would remove his coat, revealing a pair of patched pants held up by a single galling and a nail. He would ask for a handkerchief and when a nice, white linen one was given him, he would hand it back and say he wanted a farmer's handkerchief, a bandanna.

He campaigned for governor with Hal Norwood, who was seeking the attorney-general's post. He wore old clothes but in Little Rock, the state capital, he was Beau Brummel. In the backwoods, he passed a country store displaying home-woven socks. "How many pairs of those socks do you have? I'll take them all. These manufactured socks scratch my feet," he would say.

Jeff Davis was a master of English yet, when he ate at the cabin of some rustic, he would say, "Pass some more of that potlicker, madam. It's the best I ever et."

When the campaigners desired to stay overnight, they picked the humblest of cabins. In one such instance, they encountered a home with eight children, the parents, and one bed. The head of the family said they were welcome to remain overnight and use the single bed.

The campaigners remonstrated, but the head of the family explained the following system:

The two youngest children were to be put to bed first and, when they had fallen asleep, they were to be put on the floor. Then the next youngest were to use the bed until they had fallen asleep when they would be put on the floor, etc.

Then the parents would take over the bed. This night, however, Jeff Davis and Hal Norwood were given the bed after the children had fallen asleep and had been deposited on the floor.

In the early morning, Norwood awoke and, stretching out his hand, felt the floor. "Wake up, Jeff, he shouted, "They've put us on the floor."

AMERICA'S GREATEST HOG THIEF

Mr. Burgess also told one Sunday about "America's greatest hog thief." He was an old darkie named Sam. He could steal a hog anywhere, anytime, and no one had ever caught him.

A planter, having butchered ten hogs, said to Sam: "You're the greatest hog thief in the country?" "Yas suh, I is," replied Sam. The planter then told how he had helped Sam in times of stress, even to paying for a specialist to treat his ailing daughter. He then made this plea: "I know I can't stop you from stealing these hogs, so I'll make you this offer. I'll take the first five hogs and you can have the other five, or you can take the first five hogs and I'll take the other five."

The old darkie studied a moment and replied, "Youse been powerful good to me boss and I'll take your offer, but Ise going to lose a lot of meat on this deal."

Confederate General Price took a number of horses belonging to the Pilot Knob Company at Arcadia, Mo. Two went lame and were given to a farmer. They were branded "P.K." and this led to the farmer's arrest. A St. Louis lawyer, with stovepipe hat, came down to prosecute the farmer who was defended by a country lawyer. The rustic won the case, when he remarked that "nob" was not spelled with a "K" and added that "P. K." stood for "Price's Kavelry."

Monkey Flower Wears Many Colors

Scarlet Monkey Flower (Mimulus cardinalis)

The best known of the monkey flowers are blue. Some however are yellow, some white and a few like our subject may be red. The scarlet monkey flower is both red and yellow with, the yellow for the most part on the outside of tube. Were it not for the color anyone who would recognize the common monkey flower of the East would name the scarlet kind as a monkey flower.

As is often the case with attractive wild flowers the scarlet monkey flower is sometimes grown in gardens as an ornamental. With a slight attention to protection in winter it may survive in climates comparable to that of Massachusetts. It grows wild from Oregon to Lower California and east through Utah and Arizona. Like its eastern counterpart it is found in wet places and therefore is to be expected along the edges of water courses.

The scarlet monkey flower is a perennial but may bloom the first year if grown from seeds. Its weak, erect stems may reach a height of 4 feet but the height is usually much lower than this maximum. Naturally it gets support from surrounding vegetation. The plant is slightly sticky and provided with fine hairs. The leaves are opposite, from 1 to 4 1/2 inches long, with sharply toothed margins and without petioles. Prominent longitudinal veins further characterize the leaves of this plant as is shown in the accompanying illustration.

The flowers appear from April through October in the natural range of the species. The fruits are capsules that may be 3/4 of an inch in length and the fine seeds are shed through the upper end. A yellow flowered specimen of the scarlet monkey flower has been found near Lake Mead, Mohave County, Arizona.

While the scarlet monkey flower will grow exposed to the sun it usually does better in the shade. In the southern part of its range, in Arizona and even into parts

Drouth Measurers Recommended for Beef Producers

Beef cattle producers in Maryland's drought-stricken areas can't go along on a "business-as-usual" basis this fall and winter, for the simple reason that they didn't grow as much feed this year as they usually do.

"Naturally, these folks are worried over their feed supply," says University of Maryland extension livestock specialist, Boyd Whittle. "But I hope none of them get panicky and do something they will regret later."

He offers these recommendations:

(1) Don't sell good cows from the herd. Many calf-producing states are being forced to liquidate cow herds due to years of continued drought. Prospects for cow herd owners who have stayed in the business will be good in future years.

(2) Go ahead with rather close culling of herd. Cull the least valuable animals first. Start with breeding cows, culling poor milkers, old cows and those which have been producing poor calves for one reason or another. Go to the two-year-olds next for culling leave yearling until last. Do everything possible to provide adequate feed for all calves.

Poor producing cows cannot be carried over with high priced feed and expect to return a profit.

(3) Feed a balanced ration to help stretch out the hay and other roughage on hand. A pound of linseed or cottonseed meal per head fed daily to cattle will add to fuller utilization of low quality roughages. Barley and oats are good buys in grain feeds now. If the grain supplies on the farm are short, buy enough to take care of feeding needs.

Don't Seed Weeds And Diseases, Says Plant Pathologist

A farmer is apt to plant weeds, poor seeds and diseases if he seeds grain that has been cleaned and treated.

Dr. L. O. Weaver, University of Maryland extension plant pathologist, says that cleaning removes weed seeds, cracked grain and shriveled grain.

Treatment with a fungicide kills fungus spores on the seed surface, and fumes from the chemical kill organisms in the seed coat.

New improved Ceresan or Ceresan M, used at the rate of a half an ounce per bushel will prevent covered smut and black loose smut on barley, and stinking smut or seedling blight of heat. Smut of oats is also controlled by seed treatment. Barley should be treated at least three days before planting. Wheat should be treated at least one day before planting.

A second type of loose smut on barley is not controlled by the dust treatment. Wong Kentucky Winter and other varieties require hot water treatment or seed from sources free of disease. Where loose smut has been a problem, the grower should plant hot water treated seed, or seed one year removed from treatment.

Wheat can also be treated with 50 per cent copper carbonate, at the rate of two ounces per bushel. Treatment will not control rust, mildew or scab head blight. Follow directions on the package for best results. The chemicals can be purchased locally from seedsmen, millers and others.

Dr. Weaver reminds growers that these seed treatment chemicals are poisonous, and should be used with care.

Besides cleaning and chemical treatment, Dr. Weaver advises growers to use disease free seed, rotation and sanitation as other aids in preventing spread of small grain diseases.

Michigan State's first athletic teams in 1899 had divine guidance. The first coach was the Rev. Charles O. Bemis.

The hit that's changing the sales standings puts you way ahead 3 ways

THIS year Buick has done what no other car has done in more than a generation.

This year Buick has moved into the lofty circle of America's three top sales leaders—a circle once dominated only by the so-called "low-price three." For today, Buick is outselling all other cars in the nation except two of these "low-price three." And each new month's sales figures strengthen Buick's new sales leadership.

You can't do better—if you want the best buy for your new-car money—than to look into the soaring success that is Buick today. You'll find this glamorous new-day beauty puts you way ahead in three important ways—that's for sure. So drop in on us—tomorrow at the latest—and see for yourself that Buick is the buy of the year, hands down.

- 1. More new car for your money
Buick prices start close to the lowest—just a few dollars above those of the traditional "low-price three." But those few more dollars for a Buick get you a lot more automobile—more room, more comfort, more V8 power, more ride steadiness, more solid durability—plus the advanced "tomorrow" styling that has taken the country by storm.
- 2. More money for your present car
With our great and growing sales volume, we can offer you a bigger trade-in allowance on your present car when you buy a new Buick. After all, the more new cars we sell, the better deal we can make with you. So you get the benefit of our great success in the form of a higher trade-in allowance.
- 3. More dollars when you trade
Because Buick's broad panoramic windshield has started a whole new styling trend, you can be sure that today's Buick will keep its modern look for years to come. So you are assured of a higher resale figure when you trade it in later on.

Come see for yourself why—Buick Sales are Soaring!

STATE HIGHWAY SYSTEM DIVIDED INTO 'NETWORKS' FOR REPAIRS IF ENEMY RAIDERS EVER STRIKE

(Fifth of A Series)

By D. PRESTON LEE
State Director of Civil Defense

On the wall of the state Civil Defense headquarters in Newark's national guard armory is a rather curious road map of Delaware.

It divides the state into two road networks, the "red" roads and "black" roads. If ever enemy bombers smack Delaware, that map will become the state's official road chart.

Its purpose is very simple. In an emergency, quick action will be needed to restore bombed out highways and bridges. If there is a great deal of destruction, the problem will be what roads to fix first.

The map sets this priority. The "red" network must be kept open for military use and, therefore will get first priority on labor and material. The "black" network, intended chiefly for civilian use, will get second priority. The "red" network will not necessarily be used exclusively by military vehicles. Civilians may travel it, but military and CD traffic will get first priority.

In a wartime disaster, the vital work of keeping Delaware's highways open will be the responsibility of the state highway department, which heads up CD's Engineering and Rescue Service. What's more, the department will be expected to direct the ticklish work of clearing away building rubble, strengthening weakened walls, and possibly, rescuing victims from the debris.

However, as in other phases of CD, local communities will have to bear the brunt of this work in their own areas. They will be expected to have trained units ready to keep streets and roads open, clear rubble and rescue victims.

In an emergency, the 1000 employees of the highway department will tackle the key trouble points. Actually these men are among CD's best trained personnel. "We hold few drills, but we do every day what we would be expected to do in an emergency," explains Donald Robinson, acting administrative assistant to the highway's chief engineer, Mr. Robinson also handles the department's CD planning.

"A bombing," he says "probably would give us far less trouble than a blizzard. The bomb damage would be localized, but a snowstorm may cover the entire state, blocking every road. We would have no trouble getting equipment or all of them—any time of the day or night," says Mr. Robinson. "The same goes for equipment."

But the highway department has neither the skilled men nor equipment to meet as its emergency responsibilities. The rough yet delicate work of patching bombed out bridges, of bolstering weakened building walls, of removing casualties from blast debris—all these are specialized tasks for which the highway department will need help.

"Our regular job is repairing and maintaining roads," explains Mr. Robinson. "We are not equipped to build anything. Normally, we get private contractors to do that sort of work for us."

Thus, in its emergency planning the highway department has been working closely with Delaware's contractors, especially the 52-member Association of General Contractors, Delaware Chapter.

These outfits, with their heavy equipment and highly skilled personnel, will be on call in an emergency, ready to take on any of the intricate jobs that the highway crews are unable to handle.

Some of these contractors have the specialized equipment and men required for the arduous work of extricating casualties from bomb rubble, but the chief responsibility for such rescue work rests with county and local CD organizations.

They are expected to form their own rescue units. Help and advice on this can be gotten from the highway department or from the state CD through the Newark office. The latter is ready to send selected personnel, chosen by local CD organizations, to the federal rescue school at Olney, Maryland. Those who complete the federal course are qualified to teach others the specialized technique of modern rescue work.

HARVEST FOLLOWERS' CHILDREN LOSE MANY SCHOOL ADVANTAGES

By DR. MARTHA M. ELIOT
Chief, Children's Bureau

How many of us realize what life is like for the thousands of children who wander with their parents most of the year, every year, from State to State, so that their parents may harvest the food we eat?

They picked a spot in Potter County, since the greatest impact of the stream of workers would be concentrated there.

Many complicated details, such as financing, had to be worked out. But they managed, by securing funds from public, private, and community sources, as well as a token fee they felt the parents should pay. If this works a hardship on the parents, the State Department of Welfare, helps out.

They picked a house, once a private home, that had been adapted by Schol Board for High School Home Economics projects, to house the center. Then it was full speed ahead to ready things for their young charges.

With time hanging over their heads it was decided they could not attempt to accommodate the 200 children expected this year and do a good job, but that they could take care of 50. Since this was the first day care center of its kind in the State, it was thought with this number they could learn from their mistakes and apply the experience to expanded services the next year.

As to staff, they selected a Director secured through the Board of Home Missions (who had special education and training in child development and migrant day care experience in New York State), an Associate Director who was a youth leader with the American Friends Service Committee, and a dietitian. In addition, there were 10 volunteers, members of the Friends' work program. The neighboring county made available a professional social service case worker for one day a week, the State Department of Health its public health nursing services and all clinic facilities.

On the East Coast the fathers and mothers of these children start in Florida and work their way northward, depending on the harvests, until they reach upper New York State when, well into the fall, they start the trek home again.

A goodly number of them were due in Pennsylvania around July 15 and would remain there until September 15. Fresh from a conference on the subject, in Washington in May, a group of people representatives from State health, education, welfare, and labor departments (named the Governors Interdepartmental Committee on Migrant Workers) and representatives from private organizations (called the Pennsylvania Citizens Committee on Migrant Labor) decided it was time to do something to give the children a better start toward adequate adulthood, as well as a happier, healthier childhood. They decided that there was no time to start like the present.

In June they decided to establish a Day Center and have it in running order by mid-July. It meant working fast—but they made it.

ASBURY METHODIST CHURCH NOTES

The unit of lessons concerning ways in which we grow as Christians will be continued this Sunday by the study of the topic "Christian Giving." Portions of St. Paul's letters to the Corinthians bring out the systematic method of giving which he recommended, and the purpose behind giving: the application of Jesus' teaching to our daily living.

Session of the Church School will begin at 10:00 a. m. with a period of devotion. Study classes for all age groups are held, using graded materials suited to needs of the various groups.

Help us keep our attendance record high during the summer season.

It is not often that ideas ripen into action so quickly and so efficiently, or that many different groups in a State get together to solve a problem with co-operative effort. It marks a new trend, a new feeling of community responsibility.

IRRIGATION PUMPS NEED CUT-OFF SWITCHES, SAYS VAPAA

Irrigation power plants must often operate unattended many hours at a stretch. Hence protective controls are desirable to safeguard the engine against possible severe damage, says County Agent George Vapaa.

Such controls include a high temperature cut-out switch that will shut the plant down when the water cooling system temperature reaches the danger point.

There should be also a cut-out switch in the main oil pressure line feeding the engine lubrication system, so that when pressure goes below effective levels a switch cuts out and the plant shuts down.

A third switch which often considered very desirable is a pressure unit in the pump discharge line. In case there is a line blow-out, or a pump loses its prime, or for any reason fails to function, the engine shuts down for lack of line pressure.

These cut-out switches operate on the ignition system of gasoline engine units. In the case of diesel engines, there are controls designed to actuate the fuel valve and thus shut the plant down.

These safety controls are relatively inexpensive and can often mean the difference between a complete overhaul or a new engine job, to say nothing of the interruptions in the irrigation caused by engine failure.

Hold Your Horses for Safety, Advises Former Mayor Peck

By CHARLES PECK JR.
Lions Deputy District Governor
Speed is the number one killer on the highway today. Deadly uncontrolled speed is nothing more than runaway horsepower, hurtling the vehicle and its occupants to a possible steel-tearing, bone-splintering crash.

Mr. Peck

Horsepower alone doesn't cause the trouble. In fact, that power comes in mighty handy when passing another car, carrying a heavy load, or climbing a steep mountain road. It's the driver who causes nine out of every ten accidents by failing to control horsepower.

Hold your horses out on the open road. We all like to "open up" when we leave the cities and roll out on the country highways. But cold statistics show that highway catastrophes are frequently caused by uncontrolled speed. Rolling over, skidding off the road, and rearend crashes are typical of these serious mishaps that are rapidly increasing in number.

And remember, modern super-expressways have not solved this problem. They have reduced headons and intersection accidents, but they are developing new causes of their own like high speed hypnosis, brought on by steady, droning speed on long, monotonous stretches of road. Too often when Mr. Motorist hits a long, straight stretch he thinks he's another Mr. Indianapolis Speedway. Control that urge to cut loose. You'll live longer; get there just as fast—and you'll save money.

Coccidiosis is a constant threat to broiler and poultry profits. Feeds containing preventive levels of SULFAQUINOXALINE give your flocks the strongest protection against outbreaks.

1. SULFAQUINOXALINE reduces mortality from coccidiosis to 2 per cent or less, sharply reduces stunting. You save up to 2.5 cents per bird on production costs.
2. Exposed birds protected with SQ feather uniformly, without delay, and have better shank color. Market weights as high as 12 per cent above those of unprotected birds have been reported.
3. SQ-protected birds have shown an average of 6 per cent greater feed efficiency.

It all adds up to finer finished broilers and greater profit for you. Used successfully with hundreds of millions of birds, SQ is the only product effective against all dangerous poultry coccidia. Tell your dealer you want feeds containing SULFAQUINOXALINE—the coccidiostat with the widest margin of safety.

225 4-H Members To Attend Camp

The sixth annual Delaware State 4-H camp will be held at Camp Barnes will open Monday and continue to Sept. 4, according to Sam Gwinn, state 4-H leader. Enrollment figures are now completed for the two-week camping period with approximately 225 4-H members and leaders scheduled to attend. The first week of camp will be Aug. 23 to 28 and the second week will be Aug. 30 to Sept. 4.

Camp Barnes, the site of the 4-H camp is located in the southeastern part of Sussex county and is operated by the Delaware Association of Chiefs of Police during the entire summer except for two weeks allotted to 4-H club members in the state.

Four-H camping is a youth development program according to Mr. Gwinn and has become a vital part of the year round 4-H program. The regular daily camp schedule opening with raising in the morning is filled with opportunities to take part in many activities. All of these contribute to the citizenship and leadership development of each individual. Those attending are inspired to build a larger and stronger four-fold development program for the farm youth of our state.

Club leaders and members of the 4-H Order of Links, the honorary 4-H organization in the state, will hold a two-week end camp Aug. 28 and 29. The week end camp will be concluded with the election of officers and the traditional 4-H Link candlelighting ceremony.

An automobile went out of control near Whaleyville, Va., leaped a ditch and came to rest in a tree. Three occupants suffered only minor cuts but the tree had to be cut down to get the car back to earth.

Farmers Urged To Plan Use of Grain Pastures

Some Maryland farmers are setting aside an area of land to be planted to rye, barley or wheat for fall and spring grazing.

University of Maryland agronomists say this is a good practice any year, but is particularly valuable this year because of the dry season.

But they urge farmers not to be so concerned about their immediate need for extra grazing that they neglect to plan for the future use of the land.

"For example," the agronomists tell farmers, "you may have a need on your farm far more orchard grass and ladino for pasture, or for a grass-alfalfa mixture for hay. Small grains planted for grazing are an excellent place to start a new pasture or hay seeding. The grass can be getting a good start at the same time livestock is grazing the grain."

A common practice is to seed hay and pasture mixtures when small grain is mixed for grain production. Actually, small grain planted for grazing is a much better place to start these seedings.

Research in Maryland has shown grain pastures make good growth during the same year the small grain is being grazed. If weather is favorable, grasses and legumes seeded in grain pastures grazed this fall and next spring should provide one-half as much grazing during 1955 as they will after they are fully established.

There are a number of mixtures recommended for varying livestock and soil conditions from which to choose. County agents have these recommendations and will be glad to discuss selection of seedings. In growing these seedings the grass will usually be

Spray Before You Irrigate

Maryland vegetable growers who are using irrigation to increase yields should take added precautions against the spread of disease advises University of Maryland Extension vegetable specialist Andrew A. Duncan.

He says that several of the diseases which infect vegetable crops are spread by splashing drops of water.

Spraying or dusting a fungicide over the top and under the sides of leaves before irrigating places a protective barrier between the leaf tissue and any disease spore that may be splashed around by irrigation water.

Plant pathologists advise that vegetable foliage be protected by fungicides at all times. They warn that irrigation may hasten the spread of cucurbit and tomato diseases especially.

Duncan says that most of the newer fungicides stick tightly to the leaves and not easily washed off. He adds that "plant pathologists advise that spraying usually gives better disease control than dusting."

seeded in the fall at the time the small grain is planted, and the legume seeded early next spring.

If there is no need to establish permanent hay or pasture, the agronomists suggest another way to use the land following grazing of small grain next spring. They point out the Sudan grass planted in the spring will help meet pasture needs during the summer.

Some farmers like to devote a limited area to establish a one-year, two-crop rotation of Sudan grass for pasture in the summer and small grain for pasture in late fall and early spring. This approved as a good arrangement if the soil is well drained and is not too subject to injury by trampling from the animals.

New Red Clover Seedings Good Source of Feed

Roughage supplies are short in Maryland this year because of the dry weather. So farmers are looking for any source of feed on the farm that might be used without decreasing feed production next year.

University of Maryland agronomists say red clover which was seeded with grain crops this spring is a good source of feed that a lot of farmers may have overlooked.

The new red clover is growing in grain stubble now. Cutting it for hay or grazing it during late August or early September is one way to gain some additional feed. And, surprising as it may seem, cutting or grazing improves chances for a good hay crop next year.

Research conducted by the agronomists has shown that leaving the small grain stubble and red clover growth, through the fall and winter of the year that the red clover is becoming established is a poor practice in maintaining stands.

These research results show that if enough moisture is available to make a hay cutting, this should be made during the latter part of August in most sections of the state. Hay should not be cut later than the early part of September. The red clover should then be allowed to make some growth before winter.

If the red clover is too short to make a hay crop, some of the growth can be removed by grazing, providing the grazing is discontinued by October. The red clover then has an opportunity to recover growth during the fall.

The agronomists explain that harvesting the new growth, for hay or pasture is better than leav-

Chicks Raised On Farms Total 620 Million

Young chickens raised on farms in 1954 are estimated at 620,847,000—about 2 per cent more than in 1953, but 16 per cent less than the 1943-52 average. This estimate is based on reports as of June 1 obtained through rural mail carriers covering 116,000 farms from all parts of the country and supplemented by later information from crop respondents and commercial hatchery operators.

ing it stand because the presence of grain stubble and clover growth tends to create conditions ideal for weed growth, and insect, rodent, and disease damage to reduce the clover stand during the winter period.

HARRINGTON JUNIORS CLINCH PENNANT

The Harrington 14-16 year old team after having an eight game winning streak broken by Greenwood last week 6-5, bounced back and trounced the Greenwood boys Wednesday evening by a score of 9-4. Even if the local boys should lose all three of their remaining games, they would finish on top. Wednesday's game marked the third win out of four games played with Greenwood. The last home game of the season will be with Frederica on Wednesday, August 25, at the Moose Field.

Hunting Season Opens Sept. 1 On Shore Birds

The opening of the hunting season is just 11 days off, it was revealed last week in a report from Chief Warden Thomas N. Stayton, of the Board of Game and Fish Commissioners. The report announced hunting dates and bag limits for doves, rails and gallinules, deer and squirrels.

Rails and gallinules may be taken from Sept. 1 to Oct. 1. Daily bag limit of sora is 25, with 15 for all others, singly, or in aggregate. Possession limit is 25 for sora, with 30 for all others, singly or in aggregate.

Mourning doves may be taken from Sept. 20 to Oct. 29, with a daily bag limit of eight. Shooting hours are from 12 noon to sunset. Squirrels may be taken statewide from Sept. 15 to Oct. 21, with a daily bag limit of four and a possession limit of eight. Shooting hours are from sunrise to sunset.

Deer may be taken with bow and arrow Jan. 3, 4, 5, and with shotguns, Jan. 7 and 8. Possession is one buck or doe.

The recent rains were a good help to agriculture. Mrs. Clarence Raughley is building a roadside market at her home. Mrs. Raughley spent Sunday in Atlantic City. Watermelons are not quite ripe in this section. They will be ready in about a week or two. Mrs. Annie Porter spent Saturday with Mrs. Ida Johnson, of Milford. Cucumbers are just about gone. Farmers report a good turnover.

Peru has boosted its import duties on synthetic yarns, to aid local manufacturers.

OCEAN SWIM RACES TODAY AND TOMORROW AT REHOBOTH

The tenth annual international ocean swim races at Rehoboth Beach, Delaware, this Friday and Saturday shapes up as the largest event in its ten years' history, according to officials of the Rehoboth Recreation Club, sponsors of the meet.

Entries have been received from the following clubs, all of whom will have competitors in the major scheduled events; New Haven Connecticut Swim Club; Wombat Club, Philadelphia, Pa.; Abington Pa., YMCA; Chapel Hill, N. C. Swim club. Walter Reed Hospital Swim Club, Washington, D. C.; Maple Grove Club of Lancaster, Pa.; Pittsburgh YMCA and possibly the Argentine team which was a participant last week in the National AAU events in Indianapolis. The Rehoboth committee has been in touch with officials there and it is quite possible that they will try the Atlantic Ocean races.

J. R. Houston, Washington, D. C., one of the greatest swimmers in the history of these events, has entered after an absence of two years and will swim in all events. He holds three Rehoboth records. Warren Hoeman, another former winner of Baltimore, Md., will lead the Chapel Hill team. They are composed of North Carolina state swimmers who are making a great effort this year in the swim circuit.

U. OF D. LOSES FRED EMMERSON STAR BASKETBALL COACH

The man who made winning basketball teams the rule rather than the exception is leaving the University of Delaware athletic staff.

According to an announcement made today by Director of Athletics David M. Nelson, Fred Emmerson, varsity basketball coach, has resigned from the Blue Hen ranks to accept a position in the public school system of Maryland. No addition to the staff is expected and Emmerson's successor has not been named. In issuing the statement, Nelson said:

"During the five seasons that he has been at the University, Coach Emmerson has compiled an excellent record. Delaware's basketball has been brought to its highest level in over 30 years under his guidance."

A check of the records proves that this is no careless statement of praise for a departing friend and associate. In his five seasons of coaching at Delaware, Emmerson won 66 games while losing only 41. After an 8-8 campaign in 1949-50, his teams enjoyed three consecutive winning seasons, 14-7, 17-6, and 18-7, a record matched only by the teams from 1918-21.

In 1951-52 and 1952-53, his teams copped the Middle Atlantic States Southern Division Basketball Championship and in 19-501 51 and 1953-54, Emmerson coached squads ranked second in league play.

The 1952-53 five assembled by the old Wake Forest star was considered by many observers the greatest team ever to tread the boards for the Blue and Gold.

With Vernon "Matt" Lamkin at center, Frank White and Dick Evans at forward, and Johnny Loomis, and the great "Skip" Crawford at guard, the Blue Hens not only won the Middle Atlantic championship but captured the consolation trophy in the Hofstra Invitational Tournament and won more games, 18, than any other team in Delaware "U" history.

Late Summer Eggs Bring Best Prices

Large late summer eggs usually bring the year's highest prices. County Agent George Vapaa explains that the supply of large eggs becomes less in late summer than in the spring. Fowls nearing the close of their laying year are still laying large eggs. Regular culling reduces flock size as poorer producers are sent to market as poultry meat.

Good management, Mr. Vapaa points out, helps the better layers to keep up their high rate of profitable production. Good housing, ample ventilation over the floor and about the roosting hens at night assure comfort. Lice and mite control helps the hens convert feed into eggs and meat rather than supporting parasites. By watching feed consumption and body weight the poultryman can keep those good layers in health and condition. Ample space at proper feeders promotes greater feed consumption.

Pellets or wet mash, or both, often are used to stimulate appetite and increase total daily feed intake. They are usually fed at noon after the heavy lay of the day is over and when more fowls can get at the feeders. Often one form of feed is supplied in the morning and the other in the afternoon or when convenient to the poultryman.

Artificial lights stimulate the egg producing organs to greater activity. Usually late summer slumps are averted or lessened by turning on the electric lights August 1.

DELAWARE JUNIOR BROILER CONTEST FINALS ANNOUNCED

"Who can grow the best chicks?" This will be announced at the Delaware Junior Broiler Contest finals to be held at Georgetown on Wed., Sept. 22. The contestants will select their six best cockerels for the contest. George Bringham, president of the Delaware Poultry Improvement Association, will present cash awards and certificates of merit of the 20 best entries.

One hundred-thirty boys and girls, 10 to 20, are raising 50 meat-train chickens and keeping records on them. Some of the contestants bought their own chicks. Others had theirs donated by hatcherymen interested in giving 4-H club members and vocational agricultural students a chance to learn to raise a good flock of broilers.

Contestants will receive instructions on how to select their best birds for the contest finals at training sessions scheduled throughout the state as follows: Mon., Sept. 13 at Newark High School; Tues., Sept. 14 at Caesar Rodney High School; and Thurs., Sept. 16 at Georgetown High School. They will deliver their six best cockerels to Swift and Company dressing plant at Georgetown Monday evening, Sept. 20 between 3 and 8 o'clock. The contestants are also taught record keeping techniques and good management practices.

KHAPRA BEETLE FOUND IN U. S. FOR FIRST TIME

The Khapra beetle, unknown on this continent until last November, has been found in grain warehouses in 12 counties in California, Arizona and New Mexico. U. S. Department of Agriculture entomologists say the beetle could become a serious pest of stored grain products in the Southern U. S., and possibly could establish itself in heated mills and warehouses in the north.

Vocational agricultural instructors who have students participating in the program are: Sam Simmons of Alexis I. DuPont School; Darrell Long of Henry C. Conrad School; Frank Mercer, Newark; George Rhodes, Middletown; Aubrey Jeter, L. L. Redding Comprehensive High School; Leonard Hitch, Smyrna; Robert Young, Wm. C. Henry Comprehensive High School; Horace Short, Caesar Rodney School; Melvin Luff, Felton; M. M. Price, Jr., Laurel; John Curtis, Milton; William Jenkins, Lewes; Frank Elliott, Georgetown; George Matthews,

William C. Jason Comprehensive High School; Byron Horner, Millsboro; Thayer Royal, Frankford; and George Butler, Ocean View. Students from Harrington and Seaford are temporarily being supervised by Lyle Mowlds, state supervisor of Vocational agriculture. eorg-f e y XaG:ber Cmar eweb

DON'T MISS THIS POINT worth $1000 to broiler growers

You recall Beacon has been urging growers to give birds more space... 1 sq. ft. per bird. Here's more evidence of how it pays. Even with modest size flocks it can be worth 1/4 lb. extra or $1000 on 17,000 birds.

A Beacon dealer recently visited a broiler area in a distant state. After seeing the conversion and growth attained he came back determined to influence his growers to give a full square foot per bird... to cut down on disease... for quicker weight... FOR MORE TOTAL WEIGHT PER HOUSE even with fewer birds. (see Tom Adams figures below)

We sincerely believe it's in your interest to measure your house... the square footage (length times width) is the number of birds to start. Try it and see how much better your profit.

You'll save chick cost... medication cost... feed cost... and end up with more weight, more profit.

211 lbs. more total weight with 500 fewer birds.

Tom formerly grew 8000 birds where he now starts 2500. On two 3000 bird lots his total weight was 7900 lbs. and 8300 lbs. Then he started 2500 birds in the same house. His total weight was 8511 lbs. 211 lbs. more with 500 fewer birds. Further, his livability was 97%, growing cost per lb. was only $.1944. At 25¢/lb. he made over 6¢ per lb. profit. The additional space per bird pays off.

A Beacon feeder for 9 years, Mr. Adams tried another feed 3 years ago, realizes now that feed efficiency also pays off. He says, "I never had as good weight as with Beacon. I think Beacon is the best feed you can buy."

"The better the feed the less it takes"

... says Mr. J. R. Shay, "We tried a lower priced feed a couple of years ago but our Pocomoke City, Md. lower. We liked Beacon better. Particularly noticeable was a drier house with Beacon. It pays to buy the best quality feed."

Mr. Shay and his son Clifton run an 80 acre farm as well as their flock of White Rock breeders.

"From what I've heard and seen, you can't beat Beacon"

Frank Darley of Pocomoke City is new to the broiler business. He just marketed his second lot, had no previous poultry experience. He says, "Before I decided to raise chickens I made inquiries. I heard Beacon was the best feed. Being new, I felt Beacon Service was good insurance. I observed neighbors and friends using other feeds and decided on Beacon."

"My Dad told me Beacon had a wonderful program and that it couldn't be beat."

THE BEACON MILLING CO., INC. LAUREL, DEL.

"I think 1 sq. ft. per bird will increase weight by a half pound."

says popular dealer-serviceman Norman Nock. His many customers know him for his ability with chickens and the close attention he gives them. He is convinced of the value of more space per bird for its effect on disease and for more weight per house.

Mr. Nock knows that good management demands good feed. He adds, "I have long recognized Beacon as the leading feed. I have fed several others but it costs less to produce with Beacon, birds eat less, feed cost is lower... and feathering is better. Beacon is more efficient than anything else on the market."

"Biggest difference with extra floor space is in disease"

... says Paul Hauck of Girdletree, Md. He too recently cut down on the number of birds per house. Here's what resulted from 15,000 birds: They weighed 2.97 at 9 weeks, 4 days. Conversion was 2.65. There were only 30 culls in the lot. He said, "We've fed Beacon for only 6 months formerly used two other well known feeds. With Beacon we get the same quality and texture in every sack... and I like Beacon's clean new sacks, its a protection from disease. We're getting better results and better service with Beacon."

"Beacon is cheaper in end result, cheaper in total costs... and that's what counts..."

... With Beacon you have more money in your pocket in the end." Mr. Sturgis says, "I've fed Beacon to my own birds for 6 or 7 years but I feed other feed to flocks I'm tending. It doesn't take as much feed with Beacon to grow them quicker. You can make more money with Beacon. I just started giving birds more floor space, too... made more on 4500 than formerly on 5000."

DELAWARE RIVER BRIDGE BEGINS ITS THIRD YEAR

Delaware Memorial Bridge began its third year of operation on Monday, going ahead at a merry pace, setting new records and looking forward to a banner summer and fall season.

At the same time Charles T. Gallagher Jr., dedicated the management to a further promotion of Delaware's own historic treasures, its recreation spots and its great industrial diversification.

Gallagher announced that beginning next week, the attendants in the Information Center who are charged with "selling Delaware" as well as giving general information to tourists, will visit the state's many tourist attractions in order to better acquaint themselves with these areas.

The four information center attendants are: Mrs. Kathleen Strain, Mrs. June Case, Miss Helen Blackwell and Mrs. Ethel Barnes. Traveling in pairs in a Delaware Memorial Bridge station wagon, the attendants hope to hit every worthwhile spot in the state.

Gallagher also pointed out that he feels the farmers in Kent and Sussex Counties will benefit to a great extent as the bridge is used increasingly to transport fresh fruits and vegetables to the great eastern markets.

"Distribution has always been a factor in the price of commodities," the span official pointed out. "By more efficient means of transportation, distribution costs can be cut, and I believe eventually the farmer will be rewarded more equitably for his products."

To mark the beginning of the fourth year, Gallagher entertained a number of magazine editors and news representatives Monday. Following a tour of the bridge facilities they dined at the Old Court House Tea Room, New Castle, after which they were taken on a specially arranged tour of the historic town.

James Lee Bossmyer, director of the National Association of Travel Agencies, Washington, D. C., summed up the day's outing with these words: "Delawareans can be proud of the great modern facility they have in Delaware Memorial Bridge. They can also be proud of their historical heri-

3 Millions Voted By Senate For Dover Air Base

The Dover Air Force Base will receive a total of $3,337,000 in federal funds under a supplemental appropriation bill given final approval Wednesday in the U. S. Senate, it was pointed out Wednesday night by U. S. Senator J. Allen Frear, Jr.

The senator said the money will be used for hangars, utilities, land acquisition, and other items at the rapidly expanding Dover installation.

At the base, an officer said the land to be acquired apparently refer to two parcels of about 20 acres each which are necessary for the expansion program. One parcel is northwest of the field, toward Dover, while the other is east of the field.

While he had not yet received detailed information on the action of Congress, the officer said some of the other money was probably for a maintenance building to go with a hangar already under construction, under the list of projects previously authorized.

The total previously appropriated for the base, through the current fiscal year, is between $25,000,000 and $30,000,000.

The Dover installation apparently was included in the projects listed in a compromise $1,669,000, 000 appropriations bill on which the Senate completed congressional action. The bill provides supplemental funds for a score of federal agencies during the current fiscal year.

The bill was passed by voice vote and sent to the White House after some protests about individual items.

Senator Estes Kefauver (D-Tenn) objected to the inclusion of funds which the Civil Defense Administration will use to move its headquarters to Battle Creek, Mich. He said the agency should stay in Washington because it needs to maintain close liaison with other government offices.

The House passed the measure by voice vote Tuesday.

The final figure is a compromise between the $1,303,334,628 originally voted by the House and the $2,034,513,749 previously approved by the Senate.

Among the larger items are $796,000,000 for Air Force public works projects, $380,000,000 for stockpiling strategic materials, $75,000,000 for family housing for servicemen, $98,000,000 for Navy public works.

Dover Air Base To Be Improved

Construction of taxiways and improvements to the north-south runway, the warm-up pads, and runway and taxiway lighting systems at the Dover Air Force Base will be under-taken by the Army Corps of Engineers.

Lt. F. P. Koisch, acting U. S. Army district engineer, Philadelphia, announced the invitation for bids will be issued about Aug. 25 and the bids opened on Sept. 24.

The work will consist of the strengthening of the present 7000-foot-long 150-foot-wide north-south runway. The runway will be widened to 200 feet and extended in length to 9600 feet.

Taxiway Improvements

The primary taxiway to be constructed will be 75 feet wide and 9050 feet long with 50-foot-wide shoulders on each side. The warm up pads and adjacent connecting taxiways will be 11,900 square yards in size and 18 inches thick. Adjacent connecting taxiways will be 7000 square yards in area and 19 inches thick.

"Blast paving" of approximately 59,000 square yards will also be undertaken.

Incident to the runway and taxiway paving will be the clearing of 20 acres, removal of 12 buildings, completing 580,000 cubic yards of grading excavation, installation of 2900 linear feet of 60-inch and 72-inch culverts and storm drains, 3400 linear feet of 66-inch and 72-inch concrete corrugated metal pipe culverts, 34,000 linear feet of subdrain pipe, 900 cubic yards of cement drainage structures, and 7400 linear feet of concrete encased underground electrical ducts. In addition there will be installations of 42 electric manholes and 98 drainage pipe manholes, 58,000 pounds of manhole frames and covers and open gratings and 270 acres of grass seeding and fertilization.

New Lighting
A wide variety of new lighting for the runway and taxiways will be installed.

The work is to be completed within 450 calendar days from the time of notice to start.

Plans may be examined at the District engineer's office in Philadelphia, at the New Castle County Airport, Dover Air Force Base, or at the Allied Construction Industries of Delaware, 219 Orange Street.

MORE THAN 600 ATTEND ANNUAL FARM BUREAU PICNIC

A 19-year-old mother and her infant daughter won two contests as the annual picnic of the Delaware Farm Bureau, held Saturday on the farm of Mr. and Mrs. G. Wallace Caulk, near Woodside. More than 600 men, women, and children from all parts of the state attended the outing with candidates for office prominent among the throng.

Mrs. Wallace David of St. Georges won the beauty contest and her daughter, Wendy Lou, was victor in the baby contest for infants three months to one year.

Mrs. David, the wife of a dairy farmer, was the only married woman among the nine contestants. She wore a sport dress.

Judges based their selection on personality, appearance, and general activities of the contestant in the interests of farm people and farming.

3 County Winners

In a contest for the Associated Women of the Farm Bureau three county winners were selected from among 19 contestants on the basis of their activities aiding the general welfare of their community. They are: Sussex, Mrs. Edwin Williams, Seaford; Kent, Mrs. Gladys Mack, Felton; and New Castle, Mrs. Charles Draper, Bear.

Arthur Short of Smyrna won the trap shooting event and Clifford E. Hall of Selbyville, the Democratic candidate for state auditor, was first in the novelty wife calling contest.

A team composed of Sussex played defeated a team made up of Kent and New Castle County men in a baseball game.

Other program features were farm equipment demonstrations with the one on irrigation proving of special interest in the light of drought conditions this summer.

Political Leaders Attend

Among the political leaders and candidates mingling with the crowd were U. S. Senator J. Allen Frear, Jr., who is seeking reelection; U. S. Rep. Herbert B. Warburton, a candidate for the Republican nomination for U. S. senator; Harris B. McDowell, Jr., Democratic candidate for U. S. representative, former Gov. Elbert N. Carvel.

Rye and barley make about the fastest growth of the grains. Barley will produce a greater amount of feed, but may dairymen feel that rye is more palatable. Seed at least three bushels per acre for a good winter pasture. Seeding should be done both ways of the field.

3. Fertilizer will play an important role in the growth of these fall crops. A fertilizer high in nitrogen such as 10-10-10 insures enough nitrogen for a vigorous growth. Seeding recommendations plans for hay or straw or other temporary silos are available at the county agent's offices in Newark, Dover and Georgetown.

CONCORD REUNION RECALLS DAYS OF 'YE OLDE IRONMONGER'

The Village of Concord, once a thriving community and located at the headwaters of the Nanticoke River about four miles from Seaford, will be the scene tomorrow of the 30th annual reunion of native sons and daughter, together with kinsmen and friends who will gather for an all-day program.

Each year 200 or more persons pay a visit to the now quiet surroundings, rich in historical data and the birthplace of many prominent persons, to spend the time strolling the crooked streets of the old village, to visit the site of the old bog-iron furnaces, and to "just visit," even though the Hon. Robert G. Houston, and George Morgan, native sons and both gifted speakers steeped in Sussex lore—will not be on hand to hold forth on Concord's gentle history for they are both now dead a long time.

The history of the village dates back to 1763 when a 290-acre tract of land was purchased by Abram Mitchell, of Philadelphia and Walter and Samuel Franklin, merchants of New York. Concord became a center of iron making after a failure in New Castle County due to scarcity of good ore and finances.

Erected Furnace

The Philadelphia and New York business men erected "Pine Grove Furnace" where bog iron was produced and shipped, via the Nanticoke River to the Chesapeake Bay and on to England and Scotland. This industry flourished until the British fleet blocked the bay during the Revolutionary War and the furnaces were shut down. The townsmen enlisted under Lt. Vaughn in the First Delaware Regiment of the Continental Army and were in battle under Washington, DeKalb and Greene.

George Ellegood, of Concord, has in his possession an old sheepskin map of 1796 showing that the town was laid out by Seth Griffith and Thomas Laws and consisted of 159 lots. The streets were called Water, Cross, Shippin, Market, Washington, Green's Lane, First, Second and Third.

For many years prior to the community house. Definite plans for the evening program are not complete and usually depend on events.

A familiar figure, that of Linford Outten, of Dover, long time vice president of the Sons and Daughters of Concord, will be missing this year. Mr. Outten died since the last reunion. Everett Cannon, of Princess Anne, Md., has been president of the association for many years. His son H. Everett Cannon, of Washington, D. C., is in charge of most of the arrangements. The Women's Society of Christian Service of Concord Methodist Church, of which Mrs. Mabel Hasting is president, will sponsor the dinner; while Ray Phillips, of Wilmington, will be in charge of music.

With the opening of the railroad which came through Seaford, about four miles away, Concord began to gradually decline as a business center. Now it is a more or less retreat for those seeking peace and quiet.

The visitors usually start gathering in the village in the early morning. Memorial services at 1 p. m. in Concord Church are followed by a business session. The famous Sussex County chicken and dumpling dinner will start about 3 p. m. in the village
