

DIRECTOR ARRIVES TO STAGE SHOW FOR LEGION POST

Miss Rita Cotton arrived this week to start work on the big musical variety show, "You Can't Beat Fun" which will be presented on Thurs., Fri., Sept. 16-17 at the High School Auditorium for the benefit of Child Welfare development by The American Legion.

Miss Cotton comes to Harrington well recommended. She was graduated from Johns Hopkins University with a Bachelor of Arts. She has been interested in Little Theater work, radio, TV and publicity and promotion of civic entertainments. She has had special training on this particular production and her ability to work with both dramatic and musical talent will be demonstrated in the variety show she is producing here.

Miss Cotton in an interview Tuesday said, "I am most enthusiastic over this production and the possibilities for an outstanding show here in Harrington. Everyone seems so friendly and cooperative. I know I shall enjoy my stay here."

"You Can't Beat Fun" uses the Hide-It Club as its setting. Ten prominent local men will appear in special costumes representing the Broadway Butterflies and the Butter and Egg Men who are attending this gay spot where "everyone goes and anything can happen." A master of ceremonies keeps things moving at a rapid pace as he introduces a variety of acts. Twenty-four teen-agers will be selected to appear as chorus girls and five outstanding local specialty acts will be spotlighted in the show. These specialty acts will include musicians, singers, dancers and impersonators.

Anyone in Harrington and surrounding community is eligible to compete and there is no age limit, and those who participate do not have to be members of the sponsoring organization. Boggs Proclaims Labor Day

Industry's acceptance of Delaware as a good state in which to do business reflects credit on the state's work force. Gov. J. Caleb Boggs said today in setting aside Monday as Labor Day.

The chief executive pointed out "Delaware's future in the field of industrial development seems assured through the many expressions of interested businesses and firms which are continually seeking sites or building within the area." This Gov. Boggs pointed out shows that the standards of products manufactured in the state have met with high approval, both at home and in world markets.

"It is an annual custom," Gov. Boggs declared, "to set aside one day each year dedicated to those men and women through whose efforts we continue this high degree of productivity, which in turn makes our state one of the most prosperous in the nation. It again provided in 1953 the highest per capita income in the United States."

Gov. Boggs concluded by saying that Labor Day should be marked to remember "those who contribute so much to our well being and to the continued enterprise and loyalty of our thousands of workers whose daily performance carries the good will of the First State to all lands and all peoples."

Rotary Here Urged to Work for World Peace

Rotary Clubs in 89 countries and geographical regions throughout the world are united in an endeavor to promote international understanding, good will and peace. That was the message of Frank J. Quigley of Atlantic City, N. J., Gov. of District 272 of Rotary Club of Harrington, following a conference with local Rotary Officers and committee chairman, on Tuesday evening at the Wonder R.

In addition to the activities of Rotary's 8300 Clubs within their own communities to promote this objective, Mr. Quigley explained Rotary International has spent more than $1,500,000 in recent years through its program of student fellowships, which enable outstanding college graduates to study for one year in countries other than their own, as ambassadors of good will. Since 1947, when this program was established, 606 Rotary Fellowships have been awarded to students in 57 countries.

"With fellowship and service to others as its keynote, Rotary provides a common ground for 389,000 business and professional executives throughout the world, regardless of differing nationalities or political or religious beliefs," the Rotary District Governor emphasized.

The story of fifty years of service through Rotary will be told in a new motion picture film "The Great Adventure" to be released on Feb. 23, and in a book "The Golden Book" now in process of production.

Milk Producers Receive Refunds

Inter-State Milk Producers' Cooperative is mailing checks this week to approximately 6100 of its members and former members covering one year's patronage refunds from that organization.

This week's payment totals $81,782, according to Howard E. Jamison, treasurer of Inter-State, who stated that each member's refund check represents his pro rata share of the savings from the dues paid by the entire membership after taking care of the operating costs of the Cooperative.

These refunds, Mr. Jamison pointed out, differ distinctively from dividends in that they cover the refunding of unused money, rather than earnings on an investment which is usually the source of dividend payments. Services given by the Inter-State to its members which are financed from these dues, cover a wide variety of milk marketing activities and quality control work, including a market guarantee program whereby members are protected from loss of market and from failure to receive payment for milk marketed for them by the Cooperative.

The refund currently being made by Inter-State to its members distributes the unused dues paid by them during the fiscal year ending Aug. 31, 1947. Operating on a 7-year revolving capital basis, the savings of the intervening years provide operating capital and a reserve fund for the market guarantees extended to each member of the Cooperative. This is the ninth annual refund made by the Cooperative, which was organized in 1936. Total distribution of refunds now has reached $620,302.

In addition to the refunds made annually on the revolving basis, refunds are also made upon proper authorization to the estates or heirs of deceased members covering all such payments that would ordinarily be made in later years on such memberships. Payments in this category totaling $2,896 have been made during the past year.

Average Person Consumed 6 3-4 Oz. Meat Daily in '53

Did you know that the average person in the U.S.A. consumed 6 3/4 ounces of meat daily last year and that this amount of meat provided 49 per cent of the daily protein needs, 25 per cent of the calories and 43.5 per cent of the iron needed daily by a normally vigorous man?

These are among the facts emphasized in the educational meat exhibit near the judging arena of the livestock building at the Timonium State Fair. The exhibit was installed by the National Live Stock and Meat Board in co-operation with the University of Maryland.

"Visitors to this exhibit are finding that it is chock-full top-notch practical information that everyone should know," says Malcolm H. Kerr, extension animal husbandman of the University.

Pointed out in this exhibit is the importance of meat as a rich source of protein—the element needed for good growth and for resistance to infections. Also brought out is the high ranking of meat in furnishing minerals—these being necessary for building rich, red blood, sturdy bones and teeth.

Meat is also high lighted as an excellent source of vitamins, essential for efficient use of food and for well-being and body vigor. The average daily amount of meat consumed per capita last year, for example, furnished 24 per cent of the needed daily supply of vitamin A—30 per cent of the thiamine, 26 per cent of the riboflavin and 58 per cent of the

Says Women Still Rate Clothes First

Women still think of clothes as tops on the important list. That's the report of Ruth E. Pearce, clothing specialist for the agricultural extension service, University of Delaware. Miss Pearce says in 1953, consumer expenditures on clothing were more than three times that of the average for the 1930's.

But during the same period, clothing expenses took a lower percentage of the total income. "This doesn't mean the textile and manufacturing business will stop...there are more people to clothe," she explains.

The men's-wear market (including 15 years of age and over) will increase by 15,000,000 by 1970. The women's-wear market (15 years or over) is growing slightly faster than the men's market. The total increase is expected to be 18,000,000 by 1970. The market for the age group over 40 is expected to increase somewhat faster than that for younger people.

In 1954 the average price for wearing apparel has risen slightly, about 1 per cent higher than a year ago. A few declines in prices of women's clothing are noted, restricted to items made of man-made fiber. Prices of cotton apparel and men's and children's shoes increased a little.

Extension Work Shows Dividend

An estimated 5,393,822 families changed one or more agricultural practices in 1953 as a result of extension service activities, according to a recently compiled report by the United States Department of Agriculture.

This was 16 per cent greater than was reported in 1952. Of this total, 2,349,661, or 62.1 per cent, were farm families, while 950,533, or 17.6 per cent, were rural non-farm families. The survey results indicated that 1,093,628, or 20.3 per cent, of the families assisted lived in urban areas.

Estimates of county extension agents participating in the survey place the total number of families assisted, by some phase of extension work, during 1953 at 8,313,429 or 24 per cent more than were reported the year before.

In 1953, for the first time, provision was made in the statistical report form for reporting assistance given urban families separate from rural nonfarm families. This has doubtless resulted in more fully reporting urban extension work than in previous years, said the survey report.

BROILER GROWERS TO MEET AT U. OF MARYLAND

It's almost necessary for a broiler grower to keep up with rapid changes in his highly competitive business. If he lags too much in adopting improved methods of operation, he is liable to get caught in a cost-price squeeze that will force him to suit.

Maryland broiler growers will have an opportunity Sept. 15 to get a quick review of late developments. A broiler producers program has been arranged as part of the Maryland Poultry Day activities at the University of Maryland.

Broiler production practices in the areas competing with Delaware growers will be discussed by D. J. Snyder, Birds-Eye Snyder, Pocomoke City, Md. He has just completed a trip through various areas.

John R. Hargraves, another speaker on the broiler program,

Poultry Needs Pasture

Hot, poorly ventilated brooder houses do not raise healthy pullets, according to County Agent George K. Vapaa. This is one reason why most poultrymen have better success in raising their flock replacements on range.

Range reared birds are more resistant to disease, and maintain egg production better during the laying year. With a good poultry range you will raise healthier birds at a lower cost and increase your profit per bird. The most important factor for success in producing eggs is to raise healthy replacement pullets that will live and lay as a high rate of production for a full year. According to research conducted at Ohio State University egg production of range-reared pullets averaged 5 per cent higher and mortality 10 per cent less than pullets reared in confinement. This was a period of from 21 to 26 weeks of age.

September 1 is the ideal time to "plant a poultry pasture" in Delaware. To insure a good stand get your soil tested and apply the necessary amount of lime. Broadcast 500 lbs. of 5-15-15 fertilizer or 600 lbs. of 4-12-12 if starting a new range. Where chickens have already been raised on the range, 500 lbs. of 0-14-14 or 350 lbs. of 0-20-20 may be used. The soil should be plowed, disked and culptacked, before planting to make a fine firm seed bed. Broadcast a mixture of 2 lbs. ladino clover, 3 lbs. alsike clover and 6 lbs. of meadow fescue, using a wheel barrow or rotary type seed. If no culptacker is available, er, then culptack the soil again, leave the seed uncovered.

Enclose the range with a tight fence buried 6" in the ground to keep out predatory animals. Mow it occasionally to keep grass short and tender; and it will raise 500 healthy pullets per acre. If desired, a catch can be fixed on the door of the range shelter so that pullets will trip the door open whenever they jump down from the roost in the morning.

Leaves Contain Top Food Value

"Good roughage is the backbone of our feed supply for cattle and sheep. In summer it is pasture. In winter ration is built around the hay supply."

County Agent George K. Vapaa goes on to point out that "the hay crop harvested now will determine largely how well your livestock are fed next winter." He asks: "Are you saving all the feed value in you hay?"

Legume hay gives more feed value in protein and mineral content than the grasses. But getting all this feed value of legumes in the barn is a problem. Much of the feed value is in the leaves. If the leaves are shattered and lost in the field, the best part of the plant never reaches the feed rack.

Take alfalfa hay for example. The leaves contain about 22 per cent protein, while the stems contain only about 10 per cent protein. If most of the leaves are lost, so is most of the protein content. The same rule holds for the calcium content of alfalfa hay. While the leaves contain better than 2 per cent calcium, the stems have less than 1 per cent.

Legume hay with plenty of feed value means well-cured, leafy hay. Getting all this feed value in the barn means cutting before the plants are in full bloom and the leaves shatter readily. With early cutting and rapid curing, your livestock can look toward a productive winter with leafy, nutritious hay before them.

will tell of the various costs involved in processing poultry which cause the spread between the farm and the consumer. Hargraves is operator of the Carolina Poultry company at Federalsburg, Md.

Dr. J. C. Hammond, O. A. Newton and Son Co., Bridgeville, is going to discuss improvements in feeding broilers. Dr. Hammond is well informed on broiler feeding practices and problems in the Delaware area.

A discussion of how better broiler management can aid in reducing losses from disease will be given by Dr. F. R. Beaudette, Rutgers University, New Brunswick, N. J. Dr. Beaudette is strong advocate of sound management as the primary method of preventing disease.

Five men representing various segments of the Maryland broiler industry will be on a panel to discuss the topic, "Can The Broiler Industry Be Stabilized." Moderator of the panel is D. Ernest Matthews Poultry Co., Salisbury. Other panel members are Allen Bradley, Bradley's Hatchery, Easton; E. Brown Quilren, Berlin-Milling Co., Berlin; Rex Stephens, Armour-Chesapeake Co., Salisbury; and George Wolfe, a broiler producer from Salisbury.

Joseph A. Friedman is the sixth panel member. There is a possibility of poultry appearing on the New York Mercantile Exchange in the near future, and he will be present to discuss the part the exchange could play in stabilizing the broiler industry.

The broiler program is part of the Maryland State Poultry Council's annual summer meeting. It has been arranged by Bounds Phillips and Harry Reick, Jr. of the State Poultry Council, and D. W. Francis and James L. Nicholson of the University of Maryland poultry department.

Growers wishing to attend the meeting should be at Central Auditorium at 1 p. m. The program concludes at 4 p. m.

GOBBLER FLOCKS GAIN

U. S. Farmers are raising a record number of turkeys this year. The 61,045,000 turkeys are a 9 per cent increase above last year. Large varieties increased in number by 6 per cent and small varieties by 16 per cent. The previous record crop was 60,868,000 in '52.

FOOD FOR TERRAPINS?

Chicks hatched by commercial hatcheries in Maryland totaled 6,274,000 during July. This was eight percent more than in June, but one percent less than in July a year ago.

Home economists estimate that home-brewed coffee costs about 2 cents a cup.

Hot Weather May Hit Broilers In September

Maryland poultrymen are cautioned to be alert to heat problems should temperatures turn extremely hot in September after the recent pleasant weather.

"Most of the poultry deaths caused by hot weather occur after sudden rise in temperature, chiefly because not enough water is available," says James L. Nicholson, University of Maryland extension poultryman at the Salisbury broiler research farm.

He advises poultrymen to at least double the number of waterers if temperatures get high. "Distribute them throughout the house so the birds will not have to walk more than 10 feet to drink."

Nicholson adds that since the normal consumption of water is two pounds to each pound of feed and the water intake is doubled during severe hot weather, one-half the feed troughs may be used for waterers.

Additional waterers tend to evenly distribute the birds around the house and eliminate crowding. During hot weather chickens are inclined to crowd around the fountain, where the litter is cool and moist. This situation keeps some birds from getting water and may cause suffocation. Drinking cool water is the main method the chicken has to reduce body temperature.

"Additional attention given to the birds during a hot spell will result in lower mortality and better feed utilization," the extension poultryman says.

Frame Buildings Need Paint

The life of farm buildings can be increased by 10 to 16 years simply by applying paint when needed according to Byron L. Bondurant, extension agricultural engineer at the University of Delaware. On a dollars and cents basis this means better than 3 per cent interest on money invested per painting.

Do not wait too long to begin painting, Bondurant reminds. If siding has begun to rot or if metal roofs have begun to rust, this deterioration may continue after the paint is applied. Delays in painting mean more time in preparing the surfaces for paint.

Fall is a good season for outside painting. However, painting may be done anytime the weather is not damp, frosty, or freezing. The surface to be painted should be thoroughly dry and the temperature between 60 and 80 degrees for best results.

Exposed woodwork of new buildings should have at least one primer coat as soon after construction as weather permits. New galvanized sheet iron is easier to paint if allowed to weather for about a year. However, the galvanized surface may be prepared for immediate painting by scrubbing it with a strong water solution of bluestone or sal ammoniac.

Watch Lima Beans If Weather Turns Misty and Cool

Most Marylanders would welcome cool, moist weather as a change from the dry summer. But folks in the state who grow lima beans had better watch their crop if we get rain and the temperature drops.

Cool, moist weather is favorable for the development and spread of downy mildew disease in lima beans, according to plant pathologists at the University of Maryland.

Dr. L. O. Weaver, extension plant pathologist, says the disease may be recognized by the white mold that covers part or all of the pods and other infected parts of the plant. Pods finally turn black and die. Losses are often severe.

The disease can be controlled by dusting or spraying with an effective as sprays," Dr. Weaver says, "and since dusters are often more readily available than sprayers, dusting may prove more practical and effective."

Pathologists recommend a fixed copper dust or a zineb dust when a duster is used. When these materials are used as sprays, use two pounds of metallic copper (four pounds of 50 per cent copper product) per 100 gallons of water.

Bordeaux mixture is not recommended because it may injure the plants.

"Applications should be made every week as long as weather is favorable for the development of the disease," Dr. Weaver advises.

Soil Important To Good Gardens

In order to get the greatest returns from the vegetable garden, it is important that the soil be in good physical condition. Now is the time to do something about it.

Organic matter worked into the soil will improve aeration and drainage and make it easier to cultivate. The easiest way to build up organic matter in garden soils is to grow wheat, oats, or rye.

Sow seed of these soil improving crops now between the rows of vegetable crops. Use one or two pounds of seed per 1000 square feet. There should be enough plant food left over from fertilizer applied last summer to produce vigorous growth of the green manure crops.

These cover crops have a three-fold purpose: (1) increasing organic matter in soil, (2) storing of plant food over winter and (3) protecting the surface of the soil from erosion or compaction by rain during winter.

Perhaps you noticed during this summer just past how some gardens stood up much better than others. In most cases this was due to the high organic matter content of the better gardens. The soil was loose and spongy and could hold more water and the

SULPHUR BUTTERFLY

Many Species Of Sulphur Butterflies

To most persons Sulphur Butterflies are best known as the yellow to orange butterflies that may be seen flocks clustered on the ground around some roadside pool. So conspicuous are these flocks sometimes that even an amateur may make a safe guess as to their identity as he whizzes by in a speeding automobile.

Holland's "The Butterfly Book" lists eleven kinds of Sulphur Butterfly under the genus Colias and Holland lists two in his simpler "Butterfly Guide." Lutz in his "Field Book of Insects" lists two species of Colias and points out that they differ from the commoner better-known Cabbage Butterflies by having silver-centered spots on the under sides of the wings, which spots are lacking in the Cabbage Butterflies.

Costmcock in his "Introduction to Entomology" lists three Sulphur Butterflies, each under a different genus and none under "Colias." Klotz in his estimable "Field Guide to the Butterflies" applies the common name of Sulphur Butterfly to eight out of the ten species of Colias he mentions. It should be obvious from this that while you can make a good guess at a bunch of butterflies around a mudhole you may get deeply involved if you try to rationalize simply the literature you will find on them in the average library.

We are not here too concerned with meticulous details about these butterflies. Even our artist did not venture a guess as to the species he was drawing but instead merely listed his subject as belonging to the genus "Colias."

The name Sulphur Butterfly is used rather promiscuously. While Klotz lists eight species as belonging in the genus Colias he also considers members of the genus Anteos as being "Angled Sulphurs", three members of the genus Phoebias as being "Tropical Sulphurs" with two others lumped with them. He gives the common name of "Sulphur" to six of the seventeen species of the genus Eureka which he groups as the "Little Sulphurs".

For our purposes here we must mention that all of these butterflies are members of the family Pieridae which are grouped as the Whites and Sulphurs. The pigments formed from the uric acid wastes of their bodies are not found in other butterflies. In many of these butterflies there is a difference in the wing patterns in the different sexes and many times the females of typically yellow species may be white.

There is also sometimes seasonal differences in members of a common species. The food of the larvae of the butterflies most frequently considered as sulphurs is usually clovers while our typical cabbage butterfly and its close relatives feed essentially on the mustards. There are usually many generations in a year due primarily to the relatively short larval period.

All this apparent confusion might invite you to study these interesting and common butterflies that the National Wildlife Federation presents to you through its Wildlife Stamp series.

TALL CEDARS COMBAT MUSCULAR DYSTROPHY

The Band of Evergreen Forest No. 49 Tall Cedars of Lebanon, under the direction of William Marsh of Seaford, gave a civic concert on the Green at Rehoboth Sunday evening.

The concert was presented to the public with the national objective of Tall Cedars to find a cure for the killer disease, muscular dystrophy.

Arrangements for this affair were made by Maj. Roy Palmer and Chief of Police Irving Vienot. Maj. Palmer welcomed the band to Rehoboth and introduced the Grand Tall Cedar, Charles E.

Saunders of Chincoteague, Va., who, in turn, thanked the city, officials for the invitation to Evergreen forest to give the concert.

The Grand Tall Cedar explained what muscular dystrophy was a disease that generally attacks children, slowly paralyzing the muscles until the child eventually dies at the age of 12 to 15 years.

There are more than 50,000 Tall Cedars in the United States and each is a contributor to this most worthy cause.

The band played 12 numbers and ended with the national anthem.

Bellah to Write Article on State

Delaware's James Warner Bellah, noted author who specializes on War Between the States stories, and now a resident of Santa Monica, Calif., recently turned to another theme. The current issue of Holiday Magazine contains his gracious and beautifully written article on Maryland.

Mr. Bellah paid little attention to his own First State in this treatise, except for an occasional reference. He says, "When the ubiquitous DuPont interests put in a nylon plant at Seaford, Del., the handwriting was firm upon the wall; economy of all Caroline County, Maryland, was converted literally overnight from agriculture to manufacturing."

Later Mr. Bellah, in tracing the early history of the region refers to Baltimore's famous Fifth Regiment, and its unbroken history since 1774. "With the Blue Hen's Chicken of Delaware," Bellah writes, "it took the brunt of Washington's rear-guard action at Long Island."

Mr. Bellah's descriptive power is at its best when he says, "There is breathlessness to Western Maryland after one crosses the Appalachian Trailway—a sense of quiet expectation in this meeting of past and present."

He recounts vividly the history, terrain, the people and the progress made by Delaware's neighbor since the days of Lord Baltimore. Perhaps the reason Mr. Bellah gave the First State "a light touch" is accounted for in an announcement that in a future issue of Holiday there will be "The Delaware Story"—by James Bellah.

COST-SHARING PROVISIONS OF 1955 ACP WILL BE ON SAME BASIS AS 1954

Cost-sharing provisions of the 1955 Agricultural Conservation Program will be continued on about the same basis as for 1954, it was announced this week by Paul W. Mitchell, state chairman of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee in Delaware. Mitchell reports the Delaware handbook, covering the state ACP, was submitted to Washington for approval Aug. 27.

The national program, developed by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, provides the authority and sets up broad principles that were used as a guide in developing the state program.

In 1955, particular attention will be given to meeting conservation problems on land taken out of crop production in complying with acreage allotments. Such land should be used to build up moisture and fertility reserves.

Mr. Mitchell made it clear that any ACP cost-sharing is to be used to aid farmers in meeting specific conservation problems on diverted acres and in no way represents a payment for complying with acreage allotments.

Emphasis again will be given to those conservation measures which will continue to provide protection and land-use improvement in the years to come. As under the 1954 program, cost-sharing on a number of practices will be on the basis of the initial establishment of the practices. The responsibility for maintaining the practice will be up to the farmer.

Under the 1955 program, farmers will be given more than one year to complete "package-type" (multiple-unit) practice projects. Under the 1954 program all units of a multiple-unit had to be completed within a year.

or package-type practice would be the construction of open drainage ditches. This project might involve the excavation of the ditch and the spreading of the spoil bank. Generally, it is more practical to spread the spoil several months after excavation.

Under the 1955 program, a farmer may receive his cost-sharing conservation payments as he completes the excavation and does not have to wait until the entire project is completed.

The 1955 program continues the provision for the development of practices to meet special local conditions or emergencies.

Cooperating in the development of the Agricultural Conservation Program for the counties will be the county agricultural agent, representatives of the Soil Conservation Service, and Forest Service, as well as officials of local soil conservation districts and county and community Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committees.

PLASTIC FILMS SUCCESSFUL IN REPACKAGING FRUITS

Transparent plastic films such as Plofilm, polyethylene, and cellophane have already "earned their salt" in the repackaging of fresh fruits and vegetables. "But now some of these same transparent films are proving their worth in pre-prepackaging certain fruits," says University of Maryland fruit marketing specialists.

The refer to results of recent studies made by the United States Department of Agriculture, which indicate that certain sealed in film box liners for fall and winter pears and Golden Delicious apples substantially lengthen the cold-storage life and maintain the quality of these fruits.

These box liners also extend the fruits "shelf life" after removal from refrigerated storage.

Physiological changes in pears, generally associated with progressive ripening of the fruit in cold storage, were definitely retarded by the use of sealed film liners.

While biochemical tests did not always reflect the benefit of sealed film box liners for Golden Delicious apples, visual and taste examination and a check of weight loss of the fruit during storage showed the value of this packing method.

The Maryland marketing specialists say the USDA study indicates that certain precautions must be taken when fruit is packed in these liners. "Fruit should be free of surface abrasions and potential fungi infection, washed with an effective fungicide, and handled carefully to minimize bruising, as moisture conditions within the sealed package are conducive to decay," they explain.

Mar-Del Play-Offs Begin Sunday

MAR-DEL LEAGUE
W.	L.	Pct.
Frederica	10 4	.714
Lewes	9 5	.643
Felton	8 6	.571
Viola	7 7	.500
Harrington	6 8	.428
Ridgely	6 8	.428
Wyoming	5 9	.357
Henderson	5 9	.357

Playoff positions in the Mar-Del League were decided at Milford Sunday when Lewes failed to put in an appearance at Milford Park to resume play of the 17 1/2-inning game that was called by darkness last week with the score 6-6. League President Ed Holleger forfeited the game to Viola.

The victory thus gave Viola the No. 4 position in the final standing and erased Harrington's and Ridgely's chances of moving up.

Also scheduled Sunday was a protest game involving Viola and pennant-winning Frederica. They resumed play in the bottom of the ninth and there was no change, with Frederica winning, 5-2.

In an exhibition game, Ridgely defeated Harrington, 8-6. Semi-final playoffs will begin Sunday as Frederica entertains Felton and Lewes is host to Viola.

Townsend Defeated In Bay League Game

Pennant-winning Townsend was upset by tail-end Cheswold, 9-7 in a game at Cheswold Sunday. Jimmy McCrystal struck out 11 and gave up seven hits in tabbing the pitching verdict.

Now, You can adjust Corn Picker Snapping Rolls On the GO!

It's new! It's exclusive! It's another great International Harvester development! Now, you can adjust McCormick corn picker snapping rolls on the go—from the tractor seat! Pushing or pulling a handy lever gives you eight different snapping roll spacings.

You'll want this great new feature whether you now own or intend to buy a McCormick No. 24 two-row mounted, or No. 14-P one-row pull-type, corn picker. It gives you three-way mastery of the corn harvest.

You do better work because you adjust the rolls instantly to suit changing field and crop conditions.

You work faster because you don't have to stop and get off the tractor to adjust the snapping rolls.

You work safer because you can change the snapping roll adjustment from the tractor seat to avoid slugging in rank stalks or heavy trash.

Stop in for more facts the next time you're in town.

There has been some preparation in getting the school in readiness for the re-opening. Acoustic coils have been put in each of the four classrooms and the drive has been widened and also extended. Now instead of having to make a turn at the back of the building you will be able to drive around the school and come out the new drive on the other side of the building.

Mr. and Mrs. Byron Knight of Wilmington, spent the weekend with his mother, Mrs. Kathryn Knight, Mrs. Edna Davis and Eleanor.

FOUNDATION FOR GOOD DAY IS A GOOD BREAKFAST

By Dr. MARTHA M. ELIOT
Chief, Children's Bureau

"A good breakfast is the foundation for a good day," our grandmothers used to say to our mothers, some of whom passed the saying—and deed—along to us.

According to modern ideas of nutrition, there couldn't be a sounder fact. But teachers, nutritionists, all those concerned about the well being of children are concerned because too few children are eating adequate breakfasts.

At the recent meeting of the American Home Economics Association in San Francisco, the nutrition consultant of the California Department of Health gave the result of a survey of the breakfast habits of 10,144 students in various California communities. The survey was conducted as a joint program by several committees of the California Home Economics Association.

Sixty-eight percent of the students "almost always" had breakfast. Six percent never had breakfast. The other 26 percent sometimes had breakfast and sometimes didn't.

"Not enough time for it and still get to school" was the main reason given by those who didn't have breakfast. Other reasons were that "there was nobody to eat with" and they did not like the food.

The self-imposed diets of figure-conscious teenagers was also mentioned as a family breakfast problem.

Many people are concerned with the problem. The Association itself recommended that, rather than breakfast being a staggered affair, the whole family eat together. And that there should be plenty of good food available for each individual to eat as he has no overemphasis or nagging—desired.

It was hoped that California would soon institute a program of breakfast education in its elementary schools, as many other States have done.

In many the focus for good nutrition is not on breakfast alone, though that seems the most neglected meal. Minnesota is one of several States that have been doing a job in all-out nutrition education. The State has a Nutrition Council which works with local health departments and school systems and through the Agricultural Extension Service with 4-H Clubs.

Canada's Department of National Health and Welfare has made a film to improve eating habits of children in that country. Called "Food for Freddy," the film is based on the premise that a child likes to know "why" that the answer "because" is not enough when a child says, "Why is milk better for me than soda pop!"

A pleasant thread of story of family life runs through the film, but the big lesson is got over by having the children feed six white rats exactly the same types of food they bring to school in their lunchboxes. Some rats are fed jam sandwiches, sugar cookies and pop. Others are fed cheese sandwiches, carrot sticks, and milk. Soon the rats on the latter diet are sleek and active, while those who live on sweets alone become scrawny and bad tempered. One

Liners Available For Farm Ponds

It's a big disappointment to a farmer who goes to the expense of building a farm pond, only to discover he has built the pond on soil that will not hold water.

Farmers who have had this disappointment will be interested in pond liners which are now available.

"These pond liners make it possible to locate ponds just where they are wanted without taking into account the nature of the soil," says Ray W. Carpenter, agricultural engineer at the University of Maryland.

He calls attention to this development and point out that the liner material is water-tight, resistant to soil organisms, decay and rot, and is handled as easily as roll roofing.

The liners can be economically used by placing it only on the parts of pond bottoms that allow water to leak.

"If the dam leaks, application of liner material may save many loads of scarce clay and avoid the tiresome job of puddling and placing it for a watertight job," suggests Carpenter.

On August 9 the first Mexican fruit fly ever found in the United States was trapped in a grapefruit at San Ysidro, California. The California Department of Agriculture is carrying forward a survey and eradication program to prevent the harmful pest from becoming established.

of these, in fact, died. To top off the film, each school child who sees it is given a copy of Food Rules to take home.

It is ironic that in this land of plenty there should be malnourishment, whether through ignorance, or choice, or sheer laziness. But certainly effort on many fronts is being expended to remedy the situation.

Large Blocks Form This House

A SMALL HOUSE PLANNING BUREAU DESIGN NO. C-275

The exterior walls of this neat little house are constructed of 8-foot concrete blocks, stripped for lath and plaster and finished with stucco. There is a full basement, three bedrooms, living room and combination kitchen-and-dinette.

An unusual number of closets is an outstanding feature of this plan, which includes wardrobe closets in the bedrooms, towel and linen cabinets, coat closets and a spacious storage closet for larger items, such as a sewing machine, card tables and chairs.

Kitchen cabinets form a U-shaped kitchen, separating the dinette from the kitchen proper. Floor area is 1,212 square feet and the cubage is 23,876 cubic feet.

sent lusterware exhibit, that will remain on view until October. This exhibit has been attracting much attention from the thousands of summer tourists who visit the historic museum.

The new pieces include a gold-toned lusterware jug decorated on each side with pictures of General Jackson. The inscription reads "The Hero of New Orleans." It was lent by Dr. Charles Hollis of Seaford, having belonged to his grandparents, Jacob and Mary Kinder. Dr. and Mrs. Hollis have also contributed a copper-toned pitcher bearing a medallion picture of President William Henry Harrison, and on the other side a log cabin with a sign, "To let after 1841." Other pieces from Mrs. Hollis are two copper-toned jugs decorated with floral sprays, and one gold-toned jug trimmed with yellow bands. She also lent to the museum two pieces for its glass collection, a pressed glass tavern-type spoonholder in the diamond pattern, circa 1846, and a blue Bristol glass bud vase.

Mrs. Larns Dodsath of Lewes has contributed a pressed glass covered compote in the "Westward Ho!" pattern.

CIVIL DEFENSE TRAINING PROGRAM IN SCHOOLS

(Seventh in a Civil Defense curriculum in some schools. By D. PRESTON LEE
State Director of Civil Defense

During and immediately after an enemy air attack, each public and private school in Delaware will be a self-contained community, wholly dependent on its own resources and the steadfast courage of its teachers and students.

To be ready for that day, to make sure that there will be level-headed people who will know what to do, to be certain that the children themselves will know what to expect, a Civil Defense training program has been operating in schools throughout the state since 1951 under the over-all direction of Dr. George R. Miller, superintendent of public instruction.

This program directly touches every teacher and pupil in the state. Each school is expected to name a Civil Defense director from among its staff. Each school has its own Civil Defense plan.

Monthly Civil Defense drills are required. Their purpose is to make sure that each pupil knows where the school's shelter area is located and how to get there quickly from any part of the school. Outside drills also are required, so that children will become accustomed to falling flat and covering their faces when the alert is sounded. School planning even covers details such as directions to janitors for closing down boilers and heating plants during an emergency.

Courses in Civil Defense-stressing why preparations are necessary and giving facts on how to prepare—are part of the regular What's more, ninety per cent of the state's approximately 2300 teachers have taken Red Cross first aid courses. Many of them now are due for refresher training. Some high school pupils have undergone junior first aid training.

Immediately after an air attack schools would be evacuated and placed at the service of other CD divisions for use as emergency hospitals, or possible refugee centers.

As with towns and cities, each school is responsible, in large part, for its own Civil Defense planning and training. How well each school faces up to an emergency when it comes, depends on the effectiveness with which it plans and trains now.

Another Civil Defense unit which is up to its ears in planning at the moment is the transportation division under James E. Burns, supervisor of traffic at the Chrysler Corporation, Newark.

In an emergency, quick movement of supplies, heavy equipment, even refugees may be necessary. Where to find the trucks, the railroad cars or the ships on short notice?

That will be the unenviable task of the transportation division. To be ready to meet such demands, Mr. Burns and his staff have already made contacts with leading trucking firms in this area. They now have a good idea how many trucks, for instance, would be available on the average on any given day. A survey of railroad facilities—sidings, loading cranes—also must be made in advance.

Much of the drudgery of home maintenance has been removed for the modern housewife by the installation of mechanical devices and labor-saving appliances.

These add beauty as well as efficiency to any home. They have also decreased, in great measure, the hazards of home accidents. However, they impose a certain degree of caution upon the user or operator, just as an automobile does.

Much can be said for the cautious person who takes the time and the interest to have each feature explained in detail and to abide by the advice and instruction concerning each device with moving parts. Each of these requires a certain degree of supervision — the extent of which has been determined by factory-trained experts with, quite often, years of experience in handling, instal-
