

H. E. Lynch, Jr., Dover Attorney, Dies Suddenly

Howard E. Lynch Jr., Dover attorney and banker, died suddenly Saturday while playing golf with friends at the Maple Dale Country Club.

Widely known as "Buddy" Lynch, he was 54 years old.

Mr. Lynch was stricken at about 3:30 p.m. when he was on the third green of the golf club. He leaned over and reached to pick up a ball and suddenly dropped to the ground. Death was attributed to a heart attack.

Dr. Harold E. Mercer Jr., who was in the clubhouse, was summoned. Mr. Lynch was taken to the Kent General Hospital in the Dover ambulance. He was pronounced dead on arrival.

Mr. Lynch had been playing golf in a foursome with Harry R. Jackson, Arthur W. Dobberstein and Frederick W. Brittan, all of Dover. His wife was playing the sixth hole at the time, with Mrs. Henry V. P. Wilson, Mrs. Brittan and Mrs. W. E. Holt.

Mr. Lynch was born near Georgetown on Oct. 7, 1900. He was graduated from Dover High School, attended the University of Delaware, and received his law degree from the University of Virginia Law School in 1923.

He was admitted to the Delaware bar the following year, and since then has maintained professional offices in Dover.

Mr. Lynch served as attorney for the General Assembly at the 1925, 1927 and 1937 sessions, and at various times was attorney for the State Highway Department. His most famous recent work was as attorney for the Milford Special School District in the segregation case, which went to the Delaware Supreme Court. This was the case involving the admission of 11 Negro children to the Milford School. It ended with their being sent to other schools.

Mr. Lynch was president of the First National Bank of Dover when it was merged with the Equitable Security Trust Company last year. He then became a vice-president of the trust company in charge of the "first office" in Dover. He was also a director of the Delaware Bankers Association.

He was a former vice-president of the Delaware Bar Association. Earlier this year, Mr. Lynch served as Kent County chairman of the Delaware Heart Fund.

Long active in the Democratic Party, Mr. Lynch was a member of the party's state committee, and usually took a prominent part at state conventions of the party.

For many years he was a director of the Maple Dale Country Club, and was also a past-president of the club. Active in the Episcopal Church, he was a vestryman of Christ Church at Dover. He was also a member of Kappa Alpha Fraternity.

Mr. Lynch is survived by his wife, Mrs. Katharine Pennewell Lynch, to whom he was married on Sept. 21, 1927. He is also survived by two children, Mrs. William C. Hamilton of Dover, and Howard E. Lynch III, with the U. S. Army in Germany; two grandchildren; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard E. Lynch Sr., Dover, and one sister, Mrs. Charles King, Smyrna.

Funeral services were conducted in Christ Church, Wednesday afternoon, with the Rev. Paul A. Kellogg, rector, officiating. Interment was in Christ Churchyard.

Professional Yeggs Hit Wyoming Safes

Safecrackers, regarded as highly professional, broke into four safes in two adjacent lumber company offices at Wyoming, Monday night and took an estimated $427.20.

They broke into the John Hunn Brown Lumber Company by knocking the lock off an outside door and forcing an office door. Then they cracked the two safes by the "punch method," knocking off the dial and punching out the tumblers.

They took $257.20 from one safe, but the other contained only paper and nothing was missing. Ten gallons of paint and several brushes were collected near the door by the thieves, but were left.

In the lumber company of the Charles Jenkins estate, the intruders again used the punch system to open one safe, which yielded them $100 in cash and $30 in old gold coins. They left several thousand dollars worth of stocks and bonds untouched.

The second safe, police said, they "messed up," and had to drill to open it. From this one they took $40 in cash and left checks totalling about $100.

Police said they apparently got into the second building through a side window. Officers estimated that the thieves spent about 20 minutes in the Brown office and about a half hour in the Jenkins firm.

Losses are estimated, since complete inventories could not be made immediately.

Kent Home Doings Felton

By CHARLOTTE SWANSON
Kent County
Home Demonstration Agent

Teen-Age Problems was the topic for discussion at a Leader Training meeting on May 24. A panel representing four professions working with young people discussed problems facing teenagers today and problems which they face in working with this group.

Rev. Robert Duke, pastor of People's Congregational Christian Church, in Dover, represented the clergy. The point of view of the teacher and the school administrator was given by Dr. William B. Simpson, superintendent of Caesar Rodney School. Mrs. Marion MacDonald, Kent County 4-H Club agent, gave us the views of people working with youth organizations. Mrs. Clarence Marker, of Wyoming, was on the panel to speak as a mother of teen-agers.

In the course of the discussion, it was pointed out that modern teen-agers have more freedom, more choices, and a better opportunity for both good and evil than their parents had. When Home Demonstration clubs discuss this topic at their local meetings, they will gain insight into this and many other factors which influence teen-agers.

Those who attended the meeting are: Mrs. H. S. Griffith, Houston; Mrs. C. Parvis, Houston; Mrs. Jane D. Lafferty, Camden; Mrs. Mildred L. Doyle, Camden; Mrs. Mary William, Dover; Mrs. Catherine Wilson, Dover; Mrs. Marie Dugheltree, Dover; Mrs. Margaret L. Kennedy, Dover; Mrs. Louise V. Roosa, Milford; Mrs. Mary F. Broiler Growers Selected For Producing Honors

Broiler growers who have been selected for this month's "Broiler Producer of the Month" Club are: R. W. Hemminger, Felton; Louis Kielbasa, Harrington; Harvey Warner, Milford; Robert Rust, Harbeson; Irving Hastings, Georgetown; Clifton Kinnikin, Laurel; Warren Boyce, Laurel; Lida Brasure, Millsboro; Norman Mitchell, Frankford; Grice McCabe, Selbyville. (Listed in geographical order, not in accordance with results.)

Top producers are nominated each month by feed dealers on the basis of weight gains, feed efficiency, and livability. Average weight of these flocks was 3.35 pounds at 10 weeks, two days of age. Feed conversion ratio was 2.85 pounds of feed per pound of meat. This gave a difference of 40 points between weight and feed efficiency.

Trends in the broiler business were clearly stated by R. W. Hemminger, "We are allowing more ventilation, more floor space and equipment, and selling at a younger age." Hemminger starts 1,000 chicks less in his house now than he did a year ago; he allows one square foot of floor space per bird. Only 375 chicks are put under each brooder stove in the winter time, when he installs six coal stoves to supplement the 14 gas stoves.

Ventilation facilities in his 24-foot deep shed roof house includes sliding windows in front (extending up to the roof), hinged dropboards 18 inches wide, in the rear wall, full-length doors every 30 feet in front and back walls, and the tile chimneys in the roof (originally installed for coal stoves).

He starts opening the front windows when chicks are one week old, and by seven weeks of age the windows are entirely open during the daytime (spring and fall weather). At night, he may close three-fourths of the windows if the weather is cool, and leave one out of every four open. Naturally, he adjusts the ventilation according to weather conditions, but gives the chicks plenty of fresh air.

It is now time for dealers to nominate their top broiler producers for the month of May. Nominations should be mailed to the County Agricultural Agent, who will make arrangements with each dealer regarding a convenient date for visiting the grower. A management check-off list is filled out for each broiler grower selected for the "Broiler Producer of the Month" Club.

SAVE NEEDED PAPERS, ADVISES COUNTY AGENT

Are you frequently haunted by two little pieces of paper? One is the piece of paper you save for future reference. The other is the one you should have saved, but didn't. Now all of a sudden you need it, urgently. Of all the things you might have kept, this is the one you didn't.

That's just my way of reminding you that spring house-cleaning time is here—and along with it comes the urge to throw out all kinds of things. True, it is good sense to discard many of the items that have accumulated in the drawers and on the desk during the winter but they should be discarded with some thought and care. Go through these papers carefully discarding those that have no value and putting those that must be kept in an orderly file, preferably one that is fireproof.

Just what should be kept and what discarded? Here are some general rules to follow, suggests County Agent George Vapaa:

1. All insurance policies in force, wills, deeds, stock certificates and auto titles of course must be kept. Should be no question about these.

2. All military records including orders to active duty, commissions, honors, medical treatments, reserve status, and disabilities and discharge papers.

3. A list of stocks, bonds and other forms of securities you own. The list should include serial numbers, denomination, date of purchase, and type of ownership and interest or yield rate.

4. Tax returns for state and federal income tax must be kept. It's a good idea to keep them for at least five years. You may want to file some of your supporting data along with them. It will help you recall each item if called upon to do so at a later date.

5. Cancelled checks—all should be kept for at least two years. After that you can thin them out, keeping such things as checks written for taxes, insurances, rent, debts, purchases of securities or real estate, plus all others that some day might be needed to substantiate a fact.

6. Personal records such as birth certificates, marriage and divorce records, medical treatments, notes, mortgages, social security card and other vital family records.

7. Bills and receipts that might be needed as evidence at a later date. Sales slips and guarantees that should be kept as long as they are in effect.

When a man was convicted in Dusseldorf, Germany, of forging five-mark pieces (worth about $1.50) and sent to prison, a mini official complimented him on the perfection of his work.

Producers Urged To Consider All Outlets For Eggs

Many egg producers find it difficult at this time of year to sell eggs at a profitable price. The reason might be that they are faithfully standing by their regular egg buyers, when they could find better markets in their areas by considering every possible egg outlet.

"Too often, farmers fail to realize they have five or six alternative methods or market outlets for selling their eggs," says Dr. Harold Smith, poultry and egg marketing specialist in the University of Maryland department of agricultural economics.

He says that in one study conducted by the university, it was found that the farm price of eggs for a given week varied from 37 to 60 cents per dozen, depending on where farmers sold their eggs.

A number of farmers develop a good market right at their front door, selling to people who stop at the farm and want to buy eggs. This involves a minimum cost of marketing, and the farmer usually receives top market prices.

Other alternatives are cooperatives, wholesalers, retailers, hotels, restaurants, direct delivery to consumers, country stores and selling to so-called egg hucksters who come around once or twice a week to buy eggs.

Finally, there is the possibility of selling hatching eggs, providing the flock is approved and arrangements have been made with a hatchery.

Dr. Smith says price is naturally one of the most important things to consider in making a choice of market outlets. Another consideration is the cost of marketing—obviously, it costs more to sell eggs direct to the housewife in the city than it does to sell at the farm.

"The thing egg producers must always remember," he emphasizes, "is never to ignore a potential egg market. It might turn out to be the best market."

CONGRESS CHANGES REQUIREMENTS FOR ACP PAYMENTS

A bill to repeal the 1954 Farm Act provision for withholding ACP payments from farmers who plant and over-harvest more than their acreage allotment of the six basic crops, was passed by the Senate last week and signed into law by the President. The House had passed the bill earlier.

The provision will allow those farmers to participate in better soil conservation measures and receive some cost-shares to help them with the added expense, and still produce over their allotted acres of corn if they so desire.

Before the repeal of this section of the law, no one could receive any agricultural conservation payment unless they harvested within their allotted acres of basic crops.

Farmers who have not yet filed requests for cost-sharing, because they believed that they would not be entitled to participate in the 1955 program, should now do so at their county A.S.C. office, while program funds are still available.

There are several practices available whereby farmers may co-operate with our government in carrying out conservation with enduring benefits by establishing acreages of legume and grass sods with fertilizer and lime. Another popular practice is more use of cover crops for winter protection from erosion.

Here are a few other practices for co-operative cost-sharing with the government: The initial improvement of a stand of forest trees for erosion control or forestry purposes, or the establishment of a permanent sod to control the flow of water and check soil erosion, or the construction of permanent open drainage systems to dispose of excess water, or the installation of underground drainage systems.

FLAG DAY

Declaring that the flag of the United States of America has become "the symbol of hope throughout the world, not only for a lasting peace but as the emblem of a nation with a heart," Governor J. Caleb Boggs set aside Tuesday, June 14, as Flag Day in Delaware.

In a proclamation issued from his executive offices in Dover this week, Governor Boggs said that it was his sincere hope that proper homage will be paid to the national colors on that day through displays of Old Glory and through patriotic exercises and gatherings.

"May we also emphasize on this day and every other day," he continued, "that proper respect be accorded our national emblem in public places, and that it receive its deserved recognition when it passes in parades or on any occasion where it may be used as a demonstration of our faith and loyalty to the land we love."

The full proclamation follows:

WHEREAS, the Flag of the United States of America has become the symbol of hope throughout the world, not only for a lasting peace but as the emblem of a nation with a heart; and

WHEREAS, that emblem, with which the early colonies and later the 48 states became identified, now is one of the oldest in the world in point of continuous service to a nation; and

WHEREAS, this banner with 13 alternate stripes of red and white and its field of blue with a star for each state was officially adopted on June 14, 1777, as the emblem of liberty; and

WHEREAS, it has been customary for many years to recognize that anniversary by a general display of Old Glory on all state and public buildings, schools, churches and homes; now

THEREFORE, I, J. Caleb Boggs, Governor of the State of Delaware, do hereby set aside and designate Tuesday, June 14, 1955, as

FLAG DAY IN DELAWARE

It is my sincere hope that proper homage will be paid to our national colors on that day and that patriotic exercises will be held; that some time during that day we take time to repeat our pledge of allegiance to the flag, either publicly or privately, and that we remember the sacrifices that have been made during the past 178 years in order that our banner could fly over a land of the free.

May we also emphasize on June 14 and every other day, that proper respect be accorded our national emblem in public places, and that it receive its deserved recognition when it passes by in parades or on any occasion where it may be used as a demonstration of our faith and loyalty to the land we love.

Q—I am required to take a physical examination to reinstate my lapsed GI insurance policy. Would VA accept an examination made by an osteopath?

A—Yes, provided the osteopathic physician is a graduate of a recognized college of osteopathy and is listed in the current directory of the American Osteopathic Association.

Q—I bought a house with a GI loan. Occasionally I earn a few extra dollars on the side, and I'd like to use this money to pay off the loan in advance. Is there any minimum set for these pre-payments, or may they be for any amount?

A—Your pre-payment may be for either one monthly payment or $100, whichever is less, or in multiples of either one of those payments.

Q—I have been taking on-the-job training under the Korean GI Bill. I intend to change my course to on-the-job training in a different field. I already have had three reductions in my GI training allowance. After I change, will I receive the full rate of allowance, or my current reduced rate?

A—Since you are changing your job training course, you will receive the full rate of allowance at the beginning of your new course. This rate will be reduced at four-month intervals.

Q—How much money can I borrow on my permanent National Service life insurance policy?

A—You may borrow up to 94 per cent of the cash value of your policy. Your VA district office, where you mail your premiums, can give you the amount of your current cash value.

Majestic Canada Goose Ranks High As Source of International Wealth

CANADA GOOSE
© 1954 National Wildlife Federation

If the success of any organism is dependent on its ability to inspire other creatures to worthy endeavor there are few who would doubt that the Canada Goose has been eminently successful. We enjoy its flesh. We pay out enormous sums in connection with the sport of harvesting its surplus populations. We thrill to its calls in migration and to the effect produced by a flock migrating high in the sky. Our ancestors literally feathered their beds with down from the birds. And we devoutly hope that our descendants will be able to share the experiences we have had with these birds.

Most organizations that rely on pictures to help tell their story use the Canada Goose as a central theme now and then. The National Wildlife Federation publishes a series of large pictures of waterfowl and one of these entitled "Autumn Calling—Canada Geese" is justly a favorite with many, particularly those whose outdoor experiences have been such that the picture stimulates an almost unbearably happy nostalgia. The little picture shown here is from the federation's series of wildlife stamps, around which these articles are written.

A Canada goose may have a wingspread of to 5½ feet and a length of 3½ feet. The larger gander may weigh to 18 pounds, but the younger migrating birds of the year may be under eight pounds in weight. The flight formation is that of a wavering V, changing as the leaders may fatigue and drop back to let more vigorous or more rested birds take over.

Canada geese breed from Labrador to Mackenzie and south to the Gulf of St. Lawrence, South Dakota, Utah and northern California. The winters are spent from southern British Columbia to Nova Scotia and south to southern California, Mexico and Bermuda. In New Zealand enormous flocks have been developed that migrate only slightly.

Adult Canada geese mate for life. The goose incubates the five to nine eggs in a down-lined nest that is usually but not always on the ground. Incubation lasts from 28 to 30 days and the yellow goslings usually appear about June. There is but one brood a year. Once a year in late summer or early fall the adults have a molt in which they lose all their flight feathers at once. In some areas, the natives harvest great numbers of the birds during this time when they are helpless.

Many recognize a sustained wildlife population as really big business. To these the Canada goose is an asset that might well rank with the celebrated goose that laid the golden egg. Few animals rank higher than the Canada goose to wildlife economists. Many farmers whose fields lie in the path of the migrating herds do not always share this enthusiasm for the birds. Somehow a rational program must be worked out for the management of this international source of wealth which will be just to all parties concerned and which will assure a continued reasonable abundance of these splendid birds. It is to the solution of problems such as these that the National Wildlife Federation has dedicated itself.

—E. Laurence Palmer

Long British, U. S. Friendship Seen

United States Senator J. Allen Frear says that continuity of planning between the United States and Great Britain for the proposed Big Four Conference should now be assured as a result of the Conservative Party victory in the British election.

In his weekly statement, Mr. Frear contrasted the present situation with that existing at the time of the Potsdam conference when another British election resulted in the replacement of Winston Churchill as prime minister by Clement Attlee.

In discussing the pending meeting of the Big Four, Senator Frear expressed concern over efforts by the Kremlin to establish a neutral belt of nations in Europe. Such a proposal if agreed upon, would, according to the senator, prevent any possibility of eventually unifying all of Germany.

Mr. Frear also discussed briefly present negotiations between Russia and Yugoslavia through which, he said, Russia was endeavoring to re-establish the Tito regime as a full-fledged member of the Red bloc. However, the senator expressed the view that western aid to Tito in recent years should help prompt Yugoslavia to maintain an attitude of co-operation with the allied nations.

JOHNSON GRASS IS SERIOUS WEED IN MARYLAND

Johnson grass is rapidly becoming one of the most serious weed problems in Maryland. This noxious perennial weed has invaded many acres of farm land in southern and central Maryland, and on the Eastern Shore.

The mature Johnson grass plant looks so much like sudan grass that the weed may get a good start before a farmer recognizes it as the serious threat to cropland that it really is. Dr. Paul Santelmann, University of Maryland Extension weed control specialist, says that if a farmer sees sudan grass where it wasn't seeded, it's almost a sure bet he has an infestation of Johnson grass. Young weeds look a lot like small corn plants.

Once Johnson grass gets established, it is harder to get rid of than most weeds because it has two methods of spreading. It spreads by the ordinary method of producing seeds, and new plants also spring up from an extensive root-stock system that grows in all directions. Roots go several feet deep if the plant isn't controlled and get so well entrenched that eradication is almost impossible.

"This emphasizes the fact that Johnson grass must never be allowed to go uncontrolled," Dr. Santelmann says. "It can completely take over a patch of ground by crowding out desirable crops."

The first step in Johnson grass control is the same as for all weeds. Keep it off the farm. It may get on the farm in low-quality seeds, particularly forages such as alfalfa, lespedeza and fescue. So farmers are urged to check tags on all purchased seed to make sure there is no Johnson grass in it.

If the weed gets started in spite of precautions, it should be prevented from spreading until there is an opportunity to go after it with chemical weed killer. Pulling up or cutting off individual plants before they mature will prevent seed production and eliminate one method by which the plant spreads.

Farmers sometimes spread the weed by plowing or discing through a patch in a field. Dr. Santelmann says it is very important never to pull such implements through patches of Johnson grass. A plow or a disc may cut roots into little pieces and carry them some distance before they drop off. Each piece of root is capable of starting a new plant.

TCA is the chemical recommended for Johnson grass control. It is fairly expensive and not economical to use on areas of more than 1/3 to 1/2 of an acre. Cultural control methods work best on larger areas.

Dr. Santelmann says TCA has given fairly good control in experiments when used at the rate of four pounds per 1,000 square feet. The chemical comes as a powder, and works best if used in water at the ratio of one pound of chemical per gallon of water. The solution can be sprayed with either a hand or tractor sprayer.

Dalapon is a new chemical which is attracting some attention as a control for Johnson grass. Dr. Santelmann says this new product shows promise of going a better and cheaper job than TCA. "But we haven't worked with it long enough to be sure," he adds.

Dr. Santelmann and another member of the University of Maryland agronomy department, Joseph L. Newcomer, recently prepared a mimeograph on Johnson grass control. Agronomy Department Mimeo No. 16 gives a thorough discussion of preventive and control measures, and is available from county agents' offices.

Keep hogs cool . . . at home and on the way to market. At home provide shade and fresh water at all times. On the way to market, ventilation plus moist sand bedding will help your hogs arrive alive and healthy. Wet down sand bedding at frequent intervals on the road.

Hot weather is mighty rough on today's hogs unless steps are taken to keep them cool—cool on the farm and cool especially on the way to market. Hogs are strictly temperate animals when it comes to temperature, and since man has bred them to reach market weight in a limited length of time, it's up to man to help them overcome these unnatural handicaps.

Shade, cool water, fresh air and a cool place to lie down have to be provided by their owners and transporters.

Yes, once upon a time the ancestor of today's hog was a darn good forager, being lean of limb and fleet on foot. He was no stranger to the cool, dark recesses of the country's virgin forests and his footsteps beat a path to the nearest water hole.

That is true no longer. Today his feed awaits him in well filled self feeders, because he is too busy putting on weight to go rooting for it. Fresh water and a clean place to lie down in the shade are just as vital as his feed supply.

And when it comes time for today's hog to go to market, he has to have first-class accommodations. You can't pack him in a truck or a rail car like humans in a subway train at rush hour. He has to have non-skid bedding—sand is best of all—and that sand should be wet down frequently in hot weather. He has to have ventilation, because of all market animals today's hog has the smallest lung capacity for his weight. And what's more, he doesn't sweat, so occasionally sprinkling him with cool water and wetting the bedding on the trip to market is good insurance for his safe arrival. As one hog man said a long time ago, a hog with a wet belly is a live hog.

No Such Thing As Blight-Resistant Tomato

Home gardeners should take with a grain of salt any claims salesmen may make that they have blight-resistant tomatoes for sale. As yet, there's no such thing available, say plant disease specialists.

J. W. Heuberger, extension pathologist at the University of Delaware, suggests spraying or dusting tomatoes as soon as the first fruit has set, or when the fruit is about the size of marbles. Repeat applications about every 10 days throughout the season.

Copper has long been recommended and it's still good, but there are several new organic chemicals on the market that are as good and somewhat better than copper. These include zineb and maneb. The manufacturer's directions for using these materials will be found on the container. Follow them carefully.

Tomato growers also are often plagued by a virus disease, usually called mosaic. There are several viruses which affect tomatoes. Some will completely dwarf plants, others will turn the leaves into a shoestring-like effect, others will merely produce a mottled effect on the leaves. All of these viruses are spread from infected plants, either by insects or by the grower when he prunes or works the tomatoes.

SUDAN GRASS GOOD EXTRA SUMMERTIME PASTURE CROP

What am I going to use for pasture? That's a good question for many farmers each summer as permanent pastures reach the "end of the line."

One of the best supplemental summer pastures for Delaware is Sudan grass, says Frank B. Springer, assistant Extension agronomist at the University of Delaware. One acre of Sudan grass properly managed, will supply enough forage for three cows. He reports it is one of the most profitable forage crops grown.

Now is the time to seed Sudan for grazing early in July, Springer adds. A seeding rate of 20 to 25 pounds of seed per acre is sufficient for a good crop.

Sudan grass is suited to a number of soil types; however, one good practice to follow in selecting the spot to grow Sudan is to pick a few acres of the best soil on the farm. The cultural practices involved in growing Sudan are much the same as for corn. The seed bed should be worked up well but yet be firm.

A good balanced fertilizer such as 10-10-10 at a rate of 400-500 pounds per acre is necessary for a good crop. This may be applied at the time of seeding or before seeding, whichever may be most convenient.

Many different methods of seeding Sudan grass are used. A cyclone seeder, Brillion seeder, or small grain drill with small seed attachment, does an excellent job. The most important point about seeding Sudan is to not bury the seed too deep. A surface seeding gone over once with a cultipacker does a fine job.

There are several varieties of Sudan grass adapted for Delaware farms. Three of the best are: Sweet Sudan, Piper, and Tift. These are all fairly disease resistant and are palatable to the animals.

One of the biggest problems to the farmer is that of when to graze Sudan. A good rule of thumb is to not turn the animals on Sudan until it is knee-high or 18 inches high. At this state of growth, the prussic acid content is negligible and no damage to livestock will result. Sudan should never be grazed after it is wilted or after a frost. With proper management practices being followed, Sudan grass is one of the finest supplemental pasture crops that we have at our disposal.

MILK TOPS LIST OF PLENTIFUL FOODS

With milk production continuing at near-record levels, milk and other dairy products will be plentiful in June, says George Vapaa, county agent.

Milk and dairy products appear at the top of the U. S. Department of Agriculture's list of plentiful foods for June—the month the dairy industry is observing as Dairy Month.

Other foods on USDA's plentiful list for June are: Broilers and fryers, fresh and processed limes, lemons and oranges, and processed grapefruit, rice, beef and beef products, lard, vegetable fats and oils, fishery products such as canned tuna, fresh and frozen halibut, and frozen fish fillets, and spring potatoes.

Don't argue with this baby!

All Chevrolet's competitors and most of the high-priced cars tried it recently in official NASCAR* trials—and took a licking!

Meet the champ! The new Chevrolet "Turbo-Fire V8"—the most modern V8 on the road today. Here's what happened—

Daytona Beach. NASCAR Acceleration Tests Over Measured Mile From Standing Start. Chevrolet captured the 4 top positions in its class! 8 of the first 11! And on a time basis Chevrolet beat every high-priced car, too—but one! But wait!—this is just the beginning!

Daytona Beach. NASCAR Straightaway Running Over Measured Mile. Open to cars from 250 to 299 cu. in. displacement. Chevrolet captured 3 of the first 5 places!

Columbia, S. C. NASCAR 100-Mile Race on half-mile track. Very tight turns. Chevrolet finished first!

Fayetteville, N. C. NASCAR Late Model Event. Chevrolet again finished first. Because of even tighter turns the driver chose to run the entire 150 laps in second gear! Yet no overheating or pit stops!

These facts you can't laugh off. Sales leader. Road leader. A crowning achievement of Chevrolet and General Motors. Try a Chevrolet . . . and live in a land of going-away where you win all the arguments! Soon, maybe?

Mar-Del Baseball League action Sunday produced three close games, the tightest one coming at Milford, as Milford edged Felton 4-3, for its first loop victory.

Ray Holston, who went seven innings before retiring in favor of Ralph Greenly, was credited with the pitching win. Tom Gorman led Milford at the plate with three hits. Fred McDowell was the loser in relief of Jack Donovan, who lasted only one inning.

League-leading Milton kept its unbeaten pace with a 6-4 victory over Frederica on the latter's field, the fourth straight success for Milton. Gil Darby hurled his third victory, aided by a Jim Reed homer in a three-run fourth frame off loser Red Greenfield.

Farmington shaded Wyoming, 5-4, at Wyoming, as Paul Dean outpitched Don Oliver. Lenny Outten paced the winners' 14-hit attack with five safeties.

Delaware Park Features World's Richest Classic

The $150,000 Delaware Handicap, climactic classic in Delaware Park's quarter-million dollar Distaff Big Three, loomed today as not only the world's richest race for fillies and mares, but also the most glamorous and spectacular, judging by the scintillating list of 156 nominations announced by Racing Secretary J. Gilbert Haus.

The newly-named Delaware Handicap this year replaces the New Castle as racing's top distaff stake and only "hundred-grander" for lady horses. In succeeding the "old" New Castle, the Delaware retains the championship mile and a quarter distance. The unmatched Big Three sequence on the final three Saturdays of the 32-day meeting, May 28 through July 4, includes the Delaware Oaks, June 18; the "new" New Castle (now a mile and a sixteenth major allowance prep for the Delaware Handicap) on June 25, and the "big one"—Delaware's greatest sports attraction and one of America's biggest—July 2.

Virtually every outstanding distaff racer in the country is named for the Delaware, their total earnings through 1954 alone easily exceeding $4,000,000. They include all the 1954 distaff champions and holders of at least eight various titles over the past two years. The 54 leaders are Wheatley Stable's High Voltage (juvenile filly); Foxcatcher Farms' Parlo (three-year-old queen), and Mars. Charles Silvers' Lavender Hill (older fillies and mares), as well as Calumet Farm's California leader, Miz Clementine. Then there are the 1953 champions Grecian Queen (any age), Evening Out (two-year-old filly), and Queen Hopeful (top money-winner of her sex among the juveniles).

Also in the elite class is Gainsboro Girl, defending champion of the race. The Shawmut Stable star last year outran a record field of 20 when it was the New Castle Handicap, netting $101,800 of the $138,400 gross value—high until this year. The 1955 running, with its new name, will be the 18th.

High Voltage this year has captured two stakes—the Acorn and Black-Eyed Susan, while Miz Clementine won the Las Flores. Queen Hopeful took the Suwanee. Other 1955 stakes winners include Lalun, Kentucky Oaks; Rosemary B., Black Helen; Sometime Thing, Priores; In Reserve, Santa Ynez, and Snugger, a division of the Correction.

It would be difficult to name a back too late, as it was a very bad evening to come along the lake. But I was sure glad I was coming back to the Buffalo Raceway.

But I do think the track is better down there. At least they say it is about three seconds faster than here. The track itself looked grand. For another thing, they don't pay the purses there as they do here.

There was a purse strike in the making here, with the horsemen and the owners, but that is out as the horsemen and Mr. Dunnigan have reached an agreement. A verbal understanding has been reached. The horseman had asked for a written contract guaranteeing that 40% of the harness track's pari-mutuel income be devoted to purses.

But James J. Dunnigan, president of the Buffalo Trotting Assn. refused to sign a contract, pointing out that he had allotted 41.7 per cent to purses last season without a written contract. Another thing that was brought up was the living quarters for grooms, a perfect track for training and better track for races. But everything is settled now and things are back to normal. It was sure in a turmoil for a few days. But the horsemen were sure sticking together.

Now for a little personal note: Anyone who sees John Schegle, tell him the little dog we got from him came back from the hospital with flying colors. Everyone up here sure likes her. She has a beautiful fairground to roam in. "Sadie Key," as she is called now, Dr. Grogan, every time he comes on the ground. She has more friends than my Peke.

Wonder how the grandstand is coming along? I'm a little lonesome to come back. Guess when we get in this fall the stores will all be full—the new ones that were about finished when we left.

It's raining, so guess we will take off for the hills, and see a little of the countryside. So long till next week.

Frederica took over second place in the Mar-Del League Monday with a 9-1 victory over Farmington there, in the only baseball action of a scheduled three-game card.

Rain and wet grounds postponed contests between unbeaten loop leader Milton and Felton, and Wyoming and Milford.

Jim Postles, 53-year-old right-hander, hurled the Frederica triumph, spacing seven hits in a seven-inning st. Jack Moore finished up. The defeat, charged to Buck Thompson, who pitched the first five frames for Farmington, dropped the latter club out of a tie for second.

Harold Fisher had four hits and Harold Brown three as the big men in the winners' 19-hit attack.
