Bidder Selected For Wool Pool Here Tomorrow

Bids have been received and the highest bidder selected by the Delaware Sheep and Wool Association for its second annual wool pool to be held at the Kent-Sussex Fair Grounds, Harrington, tomorrow, when the wool will be graded and weighed and transactions recorded.

Mrs. Henry R. Goggin, Camden, secretary of the association, said the high bidder is a Philadelphia wool firm active in the Philadelphia Wool Trade Association. She said the Delaware association was highly pleased with the prices offered, which are:

Three-eighths blood and one-quarter blood wool, 52 cents a pound, tied; 50 cents a pound, untied.

Fine and half-blood, 51 1/2 cents, tied; 49 1/2 cents, untied.

Burry, black gray, cotted wool from dead sheep, lambs' wool, 42 cents.

Wool tied with anything but the paper twine which is standard for wool tying, 42 cents. Wool tied with such twine as for baling would be in this category.

Tags, or wool from around the legs, or badly stained and discolored wool, or in which grease, dirt or knots have formed, 20 cents.

Each producer's wool will be separated by grade and weight at the pool, which will start at 7:30 a.m. and continue to 4 p.m. Each will be given a receipt. Payments in full and complete statements will be sent the participating growers within the shortest possible time, Mr. Goggin stressed.

Each will share in the expenses, according to the amount of wool he markets. The costs, it was explained, are held to a minimum in obtaining the bids, grading by an experienced grader, insurance and miscellaneous operating costs. The costs can be held low because members of the association volunteer their labor so the raiser may get the most for his wool.

Wool is insured from the time it leaves the farm until delivered to the purchaser, with transportation from Harrington being at the expense of the successful bidder. In the event of rain or threatening weather, the participating growers should adequately protect their wool in transit to Harrington and it should be tagged with the owner's name and address.

Growers unable to get to the pool on Saturday may bring their wool in advance by arranging with Calvin Hollis Jr., Milford. The pool is open to producers not affiliated with the association.

Headway Made On C. of C. Sign Project

The Chamber of Commerce is making headway on its project, with the assistance of the Lions and Rotary Clubs, in erecting highway signs identifying the community.

At a meeting Monday night in The First National Bank Building, Samuel A. Short Jr., chairman of the sign committee, said he and Clarence Collins had visited the Lions Club and it was willing to help with the project. The project was also endorsed by the Rotary Club.

It is planned to erect signs north, south and west of town. The sign committee was authorized to get details and costs. Cliff Miller displayed a draft of the sign, prepared by a draftsman.

The chamber voted to insert an advertisement in the city directory compiled annually by the Odd Fellows.

It, furthermore, requested the president, Fulton J. Downing, to telephone, at the chamber's expense, several industries which had written Harrington about signs.

At the behest of Cliff Miller, it was agreed to ask the public, in general, and the businessmen, in particular, to display the flag on pertinent occasions.

Sulky Slants

They had quite big doings at the Buffalo Raceway last Saturday evening. Once a year Mr. Dunningan always puts on a big race for the Cancer Society, and last Saturday night's race was won by the president of the Grand Circuit, Octave Blake's "Newport Star." The race went in 2:04 2/5 again beating out western New York's "Jean Laird."

A check was presented by John J. Dunningan for $2,500 to the society. They always have a large crowd for anything like that up here.

Suppose "Newport's Star" will be pulling out for the big time real soon. "Janet's Girl" will be racing by the time this goes to press. She certainly has misad on some big purses. But she certainly will be ready when she does get going.

Dave and I are really thrilled, as our "Anna Day" has presented us with a little filly born June 4, by "Rudagar." She was sure a honey at three days old. She was so full of life. I hated to go away and leave her. But if you wait a couple of weeks they look so different.

But I'll stick to my "Volo Bohemia." He is so sweet and gentle. Dave like "Anna Day's" filly by "Donald Truax" that we will pick up this fall to train as she was Ann's first foal. Seems like you have to wait so long for the first one, then after that, one every year.

It sure seems funny to have Vernon Downs coming around asking for slow-class horses. Thought it was a proving ground for the Grand Circuit horses. Anyway they sent out typed notices to that affect, for the ground policeman was posting them around.

At Buffalo Raceway they have (Continued on Page Two)

Three Arrested On Charges of Stealing Wire

Three men were arrested in this area recently on charges of larceny of copper wires and interference with the operation of railroad signals.

As of Wednesday, two were confined in Kent County jail with bail set at $1000 each, with one in Sussex County jail.

They will face investigation for the alleged theft of the wire nerve centers of the railway signals on the Pennsylvania Railroad on the branch line in the vicinity of Harrington, Houston and Ellendale.

Picked up at their homes by detectives of State Police Stations 5 and 6 and H. M. Rupie, captain of Pennsylvania Railroad detectives, were Eddie Murchison, 33, Negro, of near Harrington; Louis Thompson, 39, Negro, of Harrington; and Norman W. Parris, 54, of near Harrington.

According to State Police, the thefts have been investigated several weeks in which thieves have struck at various points during the hours of darkness, clipping some 25 miles of wire, or approximately 5000 pounds.

The wire is valued by the railroad at around $3000.

Another count of larceny of copper wire has been placed against the trio. This is the theft of rolls of wire from the maintenance yards of the Delaware Power & Light Company on East Street.

State police said that the arrests have not written "closed" to the case.

"Commencement is always an outstanding event, and usually the greatest event in a community in the year," Samuel W. Grathwell, lecturer and traveler, said Friday evening at graduation exercises of Harrington High School in its newly constructed field house.

Goldie-Beacom School of Business made awards for spelling to Miss Baker, Miss Welch and Robert Scotton.

JoAnn Brown, the salutatorian, said that "in preparing for life, we are stepping out into a world of progress. To every proposition we should say, 'Will it help me attain my goal?'"

Mr. Grathwell, continuing, commented that some say there aren't the opportunities there used to be, we are facing an uncertain future, and there are no new frontiers. Youth is right on second count only, he pointed out. There are new frontiers in industry and science. "New frontiers, yes. Men and women often fail to know opportunity when they see it."

Using the Book of Job as an illustration, Grathwell intoned: "Some thought they heard thunder and others, the voice of an angel." "The pessimist hears only thunder," he said.

Grathwell hoped the 1955 class wouldn't start out believing the bad in life outbalances the good. "If the good didn't outweigh the bad, we wouldn't be here," he explained.

"The class should have an optimistic mind. If you can't get what you want, take what you can get," he advised. "Sometimes you are better off not getting what you want. Sometimes our best is not good enough because (Continued on Back Page)

"The gospel of hope is the gospel of self-help. It's up here in the mind that we live," Grathwell continued. He turned to a discussion of superstitions and pointed out that some hotels had no Room 13 or 13th floor. "All these beliefs can be dismissed without any consideration whatsoever."

Salem witchcraft was used as an illustration. A 19-year-old girl and 18 others were hanged on a charge of witchcraft. When the governor's wife was accused, the governor put a stop to the hanging.

"Just as witches were created, so have men and women created problems," said the traveler.

Distaff Stars To Be Seen Saturday At Delaware Park

Big doings are on tap this Saturday, June 18, at Delaware Park, when the first event of the widely-acclaimed Distaff Big Three series—the Delaware Oaks—ushers in the quarter-million dollar jackpot for the turf's glamor gals.

The Oaks, a mile and a furlong test restricted to fillies of the three-year-old ranks, is expected to attract a large and luster-packed field, perhaps as many as 15 horses, to battle it out for initial honors in the unmatched Big Three stakes for distaff stars. Many of the Oaks eligibles also are named for the "new" New Castle, to be run a week later at the Stanton track, and the world's richest race for fillies and mares—the $150,000 Delaware Handicap, a mile and a quarter championship classic scheduled for the Saturday, July 2, program. The Delaware, of course, climaxes the Distaff Big Three sequence.

The estimated gross value of the Oaks is conservatively figured at $50,000, including the $35,000 added money—a record for the stake.

Delaware Park and WPFH-TV, Wilmington, this season are presenting daily live telecasts of the Stanton track's featured sixth race and the Delaware Oaks running will be carried on the 4:30 to 5 p.m. program, with post time for the big race approximately 4:45.

The Oaks field is expected to be headed by Wheatley Stable's High Voltage, top juvenile of her sex last year and leading candidate for the 1955 sophomore filly crown, and Cain Hoy Stable's Lalun, heroine of the Kentucky Oaks. Others rated likely aspirants include Panford, Hen Party, Smart Devil, Rico Romance, Hibernia, Loquacious, Fantine Busher, Myrtle's Jet, Nimble Doll, Blue Banner, Petitioner, Red Letter Day, Sorceress, and Misty.

so many horses that they are sending their overflow over to Batavia Downs. Gosh, do they hate that. You can't blame them for that. To begin with, it's 45 miles one way. And if you happen to have a horse in the eighth race, you can just feature how long you will be in getting back at night. Some of the boys say it's around 3 o'clock in the morning.

Everyone up around here seems to be interested in the fairs. That goes for Dave... that has a couple that can't go too fast. At one time "Jane's Girl" made a couple of fairs. Those two heats help some on their speed. It really did wonders for "Watchim's Betty." You can always have so much fun around one.

Last year several of the boys here at Batavia Downs entered some horses, and when the race started you never have seen anything like it—horses broke and ran, some backwards, some forward and some across the center field. You would hear some driver say, "Did you see my horse?" "Yes, there he is across the center field." Take Louie Rapone for one. Dave kept yelling, "Look out, Louie, there's a horse behind you." But Louie thought Dave was kidding... just laughed and went. So what happens? Louie was turned up-side-down. But wasn't hurt anywhere. I don't think I would like to be a county fair driver even just for the fun of it.

Now Dave just asked me if I would like to send Volo out to some of them. I certainly do not. But I still like the fairs. Wish I was going to be there for the Harrington fair. We are going to stake Anna Day's filly in the two-year-old stake there.

So much for the horses. Now for a little of what is going on in the June wedding line.

Now is the time of the year that is really very interesting to go up to the Falls. Everywhere you look are the young couples, hand in hand, wandering along. Some of the boys still in their uniforms. There is a nook that is called honeymooners' paradise. And it sure gives them away. Up here they really go in for weddings—of all the noises, they've got them here. Guess you notice it more up this way, being so close to the falls. All roads up there this past weekend were really busy. And the weather is just right for such things—so darn hot that you really enjoy the cool breezes coming off the falls.

They say that the Canadian side is just the same—Americans going over there. But I can see their point, as you can get a better view of Niagara Falls, also the Horse-shoe Falls, and the rapids, from their side, also at night the rainbow colors are thrown on the falls from the Canadian side. Well anyway, it was no holiday last Sunday and the Peace Bridge was times a woman's thumb has a man under it.

The words, "In God We Trust," Falls for me on Sunday till after September's Labor Day.

Here are little gems of wisdom I have collected here and there: Sizes are often deceiving. Some-jammed. So no more of Niagara were placed on pennies for the benefit of those who use them for fuses.

A small town is the place where a fellow doesn't have to explain about his black eye. They already know. So long till next week.

TOWN OF LAUREL KEEPS PACE WITH DEVELOPMENT TREND IN STATE AND NEARBY MARYLAND

Another Delaware City which is keeping up with the development trend in Sussex County is Laurel, according to the Delaware State Development Department.

In a fourth of a series of articles on First State communities, it is pointed out that there has been a tremendous build-up in the Laurel area since World War II and it seems only to have begun.

Laurel has long been the home of the "Farmers' Auction" which in past years gave the community a distinctly agricultural standing. Thousands of dollars in sales are made annually and the auction is still in full operation.

Here is where strawberry, watermelon, cantaloupe and other crops are brought and sold to the highest bidder, then trucked away to the great markets for consumption.

The market has recently been moved to the north entrance of the city on the new dual Route 13 highway. It is constructed in such a manner that it has become one of the most complete markets of its kind on the Delmarva peninsula.

Laurel forms one of the largest school districts in the state south of Wilmington. The schools have kept pace with the increased enrollment, the Development Department survey shows. Both buildings and grounds have been enlarged and improved.

Since 1947 the district has increased buildings and grounds to the amount of $1,653,000 in both high school and secondary schools. Of this amount, $325,000 has been expended on the Dunbar school. A very interesting sight takes place each morning and evening when the school buses arrive and depart with their pupils. This is accomplished without confusion or traffic jams due to the well-planned entrance to the area.

Laurel sends to various colleges and universities annually their full share of students who have made good in their scholastic and athletic activities and seek higher learning, it is shown.

Laurel is one of the two communities on the western side of the state which has water transportation. The Laurel River is navigable for light draft vessels and has been taking advantage of its river transportation. Recently a large ship navigated the channel loaded with grain for one of the milling companies.

The Laurel Chamber of Commerce has started a movement to have the government deepen the channel from the Chesapeake Bay to the town's easternmost wharfage, which is well beyond the center of the old city. This work, if approved, would come under the direction of the Baltimore office of the United States engineers, which has charge of the tributaries and of Chesapeake Bay itself. Laurel feels as many others do, that river traffic will stage a comeback in the next few years. This opinion is prevalent throughout the eastern seaboard of the United States, according to the Association of State Development and Planning Agencies.

The six Laurel churches spearhead the religious life of the city and are furnishing many extra-curricular activities in the community, the report shows, especially for the younger members. Noted pastors serve the pulpits in the area and contentment on the expression of people's faces is prevalent everywhere. In the last five years it is estimated that approximately $300,000 has been expended by the churches in additions and improvements which keeps them abreast with other communities in the state.

The community has special pride in the beautiful, modern and well equipped Mrs. Walter S. Carpenter Jr. memorial library. This building completely staffed, and with more than 12,000 volumes, is being well and fully used by citizens. It is stocked with modern and classic works and periodicals of all types which are of assistance to all who wish to make use of the institution.

There is a handy parking area in the rear of the library and the beautiful building, costing well over $150,000, is a memorial to the former Mary Scotten. It was opened in 1951.

Two banks—the Sussex Trust Company and the Peoples National Bank—serve the area. These institutions have combined assets of $8,393,000. One bank has already completed a drive-in entrance and the other is in process of building one. Both banks have, or are completing remodeling of banking facilities costing more than $172,000. These improvements came about because of public demand for increased services.

Housing in Laurel has made great strides, the report points out. Homes are in many instances well above the average cost of those in other areas and in many instances falling into the $30,000 and $40,000 bracket. Well over 150 homes have been built in the area during the last three years. The total cost of this development is said to reach approximately $1,800,000. Builders are said to be keeping up with housing demands. From an industrial standpoint, Laurel is also keeping pace. Two large feed mills have been constructed in the area in the last few years. Beacon Mills and Ralston-Purina Mills, are servicing the entire Delaware-Maryland-Virginia area, as well as processing feeds to ship to other states.

The Valiant Fertilizer Company has also enlarged its Laurel mill, due to greatly increased demands for their products. The Delaware Soy Products has also made improvements and increased capacity. Oliphant & Son Co., is now in the process of building a large warehouse at their roofing and spouting plant, while Atlas Plywood Corporation has made improvements to their door plant.

Matthews Poultry Dressing Plant has taken over the old Coster Freezing Plant for processing chickens for the eastern market. The previously mentioned firms, together with Delaware Hatcheries and B. V. Carmean, Blue Ridge Manufacturing Co. and Philadelphia Dairy Products Company complete the list of leading labor users and are the backbone of industrial employment in the area.

The report also stresses the many service stores serving the city have made substantial improvements, which has also given a "dressed up" appearance to the downtown section. The total of all these industrial and commercial improvements in the area amount to some $3,290,000 which points up the rapid growth the area is experiencing. Improvements of all types, including the schools and library show total expenditures of $5,255,000 in the last three to four years.

Laurel has a good water supply. It is served by the Pennsylvania Railroad. Eastern Shore Public Service Company is making improvements to its local facility and the Diamond State Telephone Company is preparing to handle any growth that it may be called upon to meet, according to officials.

It is an earnest city, eager to be of help; supports six service clubs, an active Chamber of Commerce and has a mayor and city council anxious to accommodate any new industry that may seek a new home, the Development Department reports.

All of the community and its businesses are protected by one of the finest and best equipped fire companies in the state. Fully manned with experienced fire-fighters and with four large engines for any emergency, there is also a fire company ambulance with 24-hour service.

Laurel is one of the oldest cities

Summer Music School In Session

For the fifth season, the Harrington Special School District is offering music instruction in the playing of all band instruments. This summer music school, which began last Monday morning, will continue until Fair Week, when it will close for the summer.

This year's season numbers 94 boys and girls from grades 4 thru 12, and includes beginners, intermediates and advanced players. All instruction is free to the student who pays a one dollar registration fee to enroll. This registration entitles the student to one class or private lesson each week, participation in one junior or senior band rehearsal each week, and admits him to all social activities planned for the summer as well as the concert held at the close of the season.

This instruction is made available through the sponsorship of the local school district in cooperation with the State Department of Public Instruction.

in western Sussex County. Agriculture will always be its backbone, but its sights are set higher.

13 Students At Vocal Camp

The Harrington Special School District has announced that 13 of its high school students will attend the fifth annual vocal camp sponsored by the Delaware Music Educators Association and the State Department of Public Instruction opening next Monday, June 20, at Wesley Junior College at Dover.

Over 153 students from all sections of the state will meet for the week under the direction of Dr. Clyde Dengler, music director engaged for this activity. They will sing in the closing concert on Sunday afternoon, June 26, at 2:30 p.m., in the Dover Field House, to which everyone is invited to attend.

The members from Harrington who will take part in the camp, together with their sponsors, are as follows: Barbara Edwards, Alvin Jarrell, Mary Jo Pitlick, Lois Hopkins—sponsored by Horace Quillen. Mary Evelyn Harrington, Eleanor Wagner—sponsored by the Mothers' Auxiliary of Asbury Methodist Church. Sandra Raughley—sponsored by the Pathfinders Class of Asbury Methodist Church. The meeting was called to order by our president, Eloise Brown. The salute to the flags was followed by Bible reading. The minutes were read and approved as read by our secretary, Kay Bowdle. Roll was called, with 20 members present. The dues were collected, and reading of the treasurer's report which was $45.61.

We discussed a summer picnic, but decided to wait until the next meeting to make the proper details.

As a goal we decided to have each member enter something at the fair this year. For recreation each month, we decided to have a baseball game before the meetings. A motion was made and seconded to buy two bats and balls to keep in the club.

The meeting was adjourned and games were enjoyed by all. Delicious refreshments were served by Eloise Brown.

Even the factory-installed extras you may want on bargain, such as Heater & Defroster—$81.70; Radio & Antenna—$92.50.

THIS is a Buick—a 2-door, 6-passenger SPECIAL Sedan.

It packs a walloping 188-hp V8 engine under the hood—is carried on a strapping 122-inch wheelbase—rides with the luxury cushioning of all-coil springing, the solid steadiness of a full-length torque-tube drive, the extra safety and silence of tubeless tires.

It's big and brawny and road-steady and roomy—each seat cushion measures over five feet in width.

Yet this beauty—as the price we show here proves—delivers locally for just about the price of the well-known smaller cars—even below some models of those same cars.

Buick Sales Are Soaring To New Best-Seller Highs

That, for sure, is one reason why Buick sales go higher and higher and higher. More and more people are finding that you can buy a

Buick for the price of a smaller car, so more and more people are getting this bigger buy for their money.

They want the bigger package of sheer automobile for the money that they get in Buick—bigger in power thrill, in roomy comfort, in riding steadiness, in structural solidity.

They want the added prestige and pleasure of owning Buick styling and size—and the added safety and sureness of Buick roadability and handling ease.

They want, too, the spectacular performance and better gas mileage of Variable Pitch Dynaflo[†]—yours at modest extra cost.

And they certainly want the choice Buick offers of a car in every price range, with each one the buy in its field—the low-price SPECIAL, the supremely-powered CENTURY, the extra-roomy SUPER, and the custom-built ROADMASTER.

Why don't you come in for a visit and see how much real automobile your money can buy here?

WHAT CAPITAL IS

It is the facilities which make possible production to fill human wants

Capital, by classical definition, is "any form of wealth employed or capable of being employed in the production of more wealth." In man's ageless struggle to draw more abundance from nature, capital has been of overwhelming importance. Its creative role underlies all economic progress.

Strictly speaking, capital is not money, though the terms often are used interchangeably. Rather, capital is the tools of production. Development of monetary systems facilitated, but in no sense originated, capital formation. Thus the prehistoric man who fashioned a crude net of reeds to catch more fish created capital; he invested not money, but his own time.

From Biblical times there has been a sharp distinction between hoarded money, which serves no purpose, and capital. The Parable of the Talents tells of a nobleman who richly rewarded two servants for investing, and doubling, funds he put in their hands; but cast out the third servant who buried the money entrusted to him. Then, as now, capital was an investment from which some return was expected.

The first large accumulations of capital came with the demands of maritime trade in Medieval times. Ships and sizeable inventories of goods were required. Prior to that, most capital was in land or in crude tools to till the soil and convert the harvests of field and forest into food, clothing and shelter. Celebrated Venetian merchants dominated trade for eight centuries by accumulating capital to open markets in the East. The House of Medici in Florence, and Jacob Fugger the Rich, of 16th Century Augsburg, built fortunes by investing in trade. Such ventures reached full flower in The Netherlands and England during the 16th and 17th Centuries, and held sway until the Industrial Revolution opened new horizons and revamped man's ways of life and his capital requirements.

Artisans' Tools Cost Little

In early America, capital requirements were small. Most men were farmers or artisans. Tools were simple and inexpensive, and most workers owned their own. If their needs exceeded their funds, they followed E. I. DuPont's practice of 1802—interested friends in investing some of their savings. As late as 1850, four out of five workers were classed as individual proprietors. Today, by contrast, four out of five workers are employees. The tools in use are so complex and so costly that no one man possibly could afford them. Men need organizations that permit them to share the costs, the risks and the effort with one another. The corporation is such an organization. Reduced to its essentials, an industrial corporation is but a means of bringing together the savings of many to finance the facilities and manpower essential to modern production. Invested savings serve precisely the same function in a corporation like DuPont, with an investment of more than two billion dollars, as in the colonial artisan's shop. They are still the means by which men buy tools, and thus produce and have more. (Appropriately, the history of creative capital in America dates from the nation's very beginnings. The Virginia Company, which settled in Jamestown, was founded in 1606 as a joint-stock enterprise.)

Capitalism has reached its highest level of development and achievement in America. It has surpassed the fondest dreams of its most optimistic prophets, and confounded the direst forebodings of pessimists like Karl Marx. In all history, no nation has ever been able to create for its people the material and cultural standards which Americans enjoy today. Furthermore, the nation does not sit static on either an economic or social plateau; it has the means, the abilities and the will to build an ever better tomorrow.

The results of creative capitalism are dramatically illustrated in a single fact: In the past 25 years, the U. S. economy has expanded fast enough to increase an individual's purchasing power, on the average, 40 per cent. This has been made possible largely through investment in tools that enabled man to make more, and, therefore, have more. The capitalism which Marx predicted would enslave man has proved to be his servant. The very people it was to victimize have become its beneficiaries.

The capitalism of yesterday, personified by such men as Vanderbilt, Morgan, Carnegie and Rockefeller, has evolved into a new capitalism. Ownership of the economy lies not in "Wall Street" but in the hands of millions of individuals, some of them wealthy but most of them not, for whom a gamut of new investment channels have opened up.

In surveying a typical day's trading recently, The New York Stock Exchange found that most of its business came not from the city's financial district at all, but from out of town. And the nation's largest brokerage house, handling 10 per cent of the trading in the Exchange, notes that 90 per cent of its customers are out-of-towners of modest means.

A recent U. S. Steel Corporation survey showed that 53 per cent of its stock held in individuals was owned by people with incomes under $10,000, and that the $5000-and-under income group owns more stock than the $25,000-and-up group. Once controlled by a handful of men, U. S. Steel now has more than 275,000 such owners. American enterprises, in sum, are now owned by the many, not by the few.

The fact that nearly everyone shares, directly or indirectly, in the ownership of American business, is not the only way in which capitalism has confounded Marx's predictions. The economic and social barriers he predicted would bring dissension and class warfare are steadily disappearing. The fruits of creative capital have been so widely distributed that debutante and typist, junior clerk and senior executive cannot be distinguished by the clothes they wear. Even in the cars they drive, the difference is probably not in newness, but only in make. To a greater extent than ever before, the doors of opportunity are open to all. There is no arbitrary line between boss and worker. Capitalism provides individuals the ability to create more, the education to realize their potential, and the freedom to pursue ideas and ideals. In the United States today, more than ever before, man has the chance to attain the security, the self-esteem and satisfactions which he has sought through the ages.

HOW'S YOUR PUBLICITY?

No newspaper, daily or weekly, is doing its work if the publicity material of local and civic groups is slighted or overlooked. Publicity is one of the most important functions we are prepared and able to serve. Sometimes, however, it presents a problem.

With the possible exception of organizations which regularly sponsor town-wide betterment programs and projects, we have selected no favorites among the vast number of local organizations. We attempt to give full coverage to them all, but we depend on publicity chairmen within the groups for their news. Organizations that arrange interesting programs have little difficulty in providing material, or in having it printed.

Any newspaper, however, has a considerable problem in making much of a story out of "regular meeting will be held" or "refreshments will be served" information. We find that the success of a publicity program depends first of all on the type of activity to be publicized and secondly, the initiative and ability of the person assigned to handle publicity.

We recommend that local organizations examine their own publicity programs if they feel they don't get proper recognition. It is easy to place the blame for weak publicity on the newspaper, and difficult to originate a successful campaign. —The Branford (Conn.) Review

FUSE PROTECTION IMPORTANT IN ALL ELECTRIC CIRCUITS

No wiring system is complete without fuse protection for all circuits, according to A. V. Krewatch, extension agricultural engineer at the University of Maryland. Mr. Krewatch is often asked about the protection for motors connected to these lines.

An ordinary fuse consists of a soft metal strip which melts when the safe carrying capacity is exceeded. The fuse is so enclosed that it melts or burns out. No damage is done, but the flow of electricity is interrupted until the fuse is replaced, he explains.

The agricultural engineer warns that such fuses protect the wires from overheating but do not protect motors from damage. Motors draw as much as three or four times their normal running current when starting and coming up to speed. This starting period lasts only a few seconds.

Motor coils are designed to carry this great overload for a short time. The ordinary fuse will not carry the overload and will melt unless it is large enough to carry the overload. Then it is much too large to protect the motor from damage.

A special delayed action fuse or a motor-starting switch equipped with a proper size thermal cut-out is needed to protect any motor. Since motors are expensive and overload protection is cheap, it is sound practice to safeguard every motor.

Motor controllers with overload protection, says Krewatch, are preferred to special delayed action fuses since it is easily possible to replace motor fuses (fustrons) with ordinary fuses of large size which might give no real protection.

Farmers Warned of Overwork On Hot Days

"Don't let the summer rush of farm work lead you to disregard the dangers of heatstroke and heat exhaustion," warns George Vapaa, county agent.

Doing hard physical labor in the hot sun or in a stuffy place will bring on heat exhaustion quickly. The sickness occurs when the body's heat regulating system collapses during prolonged heat or over-exposure to the sun. In heatstroke, body temperature rises, skin becomes hot and dry, face reddens and headache develops. Heat exhaustion is not a stroke, nor does it require the same treatment. Instead of burning up, the patient's body is cool, perhaps with clammy sweat. Both are preventable conditions, and the best line of treatment is preventative.

The National Safety Council recommends the following precautions:

1. Increase salt intake to offset excessive loss of salt in the body through perspiration. The salt intake can be increased by increasing the salt on one's food, by drinking salted water, or by taking salt tablets.
2. Avoid over-exertion and over-exposure to direct sun rays or extreme indoor temperatures and high humidity.
3. Wear a hat while out-of-doors; wear light, porous clothing.

Social Security Rights Stay Intact During Disability

Delaware workers have a new kind of disability protection under a new provision in the 1954 amendments to the social security law—a means of keeping their social security rights intact during a prolonged period of total disability.

The new provision, according to Myron Milbouer, manager of Delaware social security office at 313 West Street, Wilmington, works like this: If you are totally disabled for work six months or more and your doctor believes that your disability will continue indefinitely, you should apply to have your social security record "frozen" for the period of your disability. When the time comes of figuring up the monthly benefits payable to you when you reach 65, or to your survivors in case of your death, the years when you were disabled, and therefore not working, will not be counted against you. In determining whether you have met the work requirements, and in figuring the benefit amounts, the effect will be the same as if you had reached 65 on the day your disability began.

"The provision keeps your old-age and survivors insurance in force if you should become totally disabled, just as many life insurance policies provide that your insurance rights will not lapse during a period of total disability," Milbouer stated. He added, "The OASI program is financed by the two per cent deducted from your wages plus the matching two per cent the company pays. If you have no earnings, the payment of the social security tax stops. But by taking advantage of the "disability freeze" provision in the new law, you can protect your benefit rights while you are unable to work."

There are, of course, some conditions to be met in order to qualify for this "disability freeze":

The worker must have a record of fairly long and steady work under social security; five years of work out of the 10 years before he was disabled; 1½ years of work in the three years before he was disabled.

His disability must be one that can be determined by medical evidence. It may be either severe mental or physical disability which makes him unable to do any substantial gainful employment, or it may be blindness.

He must apply to have his earnings record frozen while he is disabled and after he has been disabled six months or more. A person who becomes blind or disabled should get more information about the "freeze" provision from the local social security office. The protection is not given automatically; an application must be filed before the freeze is effective. If you'd like more information about the disability freeze, ask your social security office in Wilmington for a copy of Leaflet OASI-1954-4, "Facts For Those Who Are Disabled."

Heavy Rainfall Boon To Owners of Shallow Wells

The recent heavy rainfall in Delaware has been a boon to owners of wells throughout the state, according to Johan J. Groot, state geologist.

During the past year there was a considerable deficiency of rainfall and a general decline in water levels in Delaware took place, with the unfortunate result that many people experienced water shortages.

"The water levels in most of the observation wells operated by the Delaware Geological Survey in co-operation with the United States Geological Survey did not completely recover during the winter months," Mr. Groot explained, "and during the past six weeks they have been declining again."

Had the dry weather continued, shallow dug wells might have gone dry again and even now relief may be only temporary.

"It is the intention of the members of the Geological Survey to continue their careful observation of test wells and any water level declines of the future," Mr. Groot declared. "Our measurements and studies probably will be continued for a number of years to determine long-term trends in water level fluctuations and to establish, if possible, relations between temperature, rainfall and water levels."

Inquiries about well levels and related geological problems should be addressed to Mr. Groot at the University of Delaware.

CHEMICALS ADD YEARS TO FENCE POST LIFE

Chemical treatment will add 10 or 15 years to the life of elm, pine, red oak and maple fence posts, informs County Agent George Vapaa. He adds that it doesn't pay to treat more durable woods like locust, osage orange and red cedar.

It costs 15 to 35 cents for the material to treat a post, depending on its size. Small posts will absorb about 1/2 gallon of the chemical, while a 6-inch post 7 feet long will absorb about a gallon.

Farmers who have limited time and can buy 3/4-inch locust posts at 50 cents, probably can't afford to treat their own posts. If they have thinnings from their own woodlot and time to do the work themselves, home treatment will pay, he says.

Round, seasoned posts take treatment best. Round posts have more sapwood exposed and the sapwood is the part that absorbs the chemicals. It's important to peel posts and season them for at least four to six months before treating. Dry wood absorbs more of the solution.

Vapaa suggests copper naphthate, "penta," or creosote for treating. Follow directions on containers for diluting these materials.

Old oil drums welded end to end with one side cut out, make a good treating tank. Posts should be covered with solution at least 48 hours but not longer than 72 hours.

Creosote requires a hot-cold treatment. That means the solution is heated with the posts in the tank, then allowed to cool. That increases absorption. The other two materials are for cold soaking.

SOLBEANS AND SORGHUM GOOD AS CORN SUBSTITUTE

If you're looking around for a good substitute crop for corn silage, how about trying soybeans and sorghum? This crop is one of the best substitutes for corn silage, says Frank E. Springer of the agronomy department at the University of Delaware. He claims many farmers are looking for a crop of this type.

Right now, the middle of June, is the ideal time to seed soybeans and sorghum, Springer adds. Planting now will give a good yield. The yield may be 10 to 15 per cent less than corn silage, but the nutrient value is about equal.

There are a number of varieties of both soybeans and sorghums adapted to Delaware conditions. Hay type varieties of soybeans such as Wilson give best yields, but such yellow seeded varieties as Lincoln and Ogden are satisfactory. Hegari sorghum is probably the best for Delaware conditions. This variety will grow four to five feet tall. On very fertile soils shorter varieties such as Martin, Plansman or Wheatland may be advisable. At any rate, stick to one of the above-named varieties. Do not ask for "amber cane." Beware of mixed sorghum.

Several methods of seeding are satisfactory. Generally the soybeans and sorghum seed are mixed together and seeded with a grain drill. Sometimes the sorghum will settle to the bottom of the box and give uneven seeding. This can be corrected by dampening the seed slightly and mixing thoroughly before it is put into the box.

The seeding rate per acre is 1 1/2 bushels of soybeans thoroughly mixed with 20 to 25 pounds of sorghum.

A liberal application of fertilizer is desirable—400 to 500 lbs. per acre of 5-10-10 fertilizer will give excellent results. The fertilizer should not be drilled with the seed because of danger of injury to the germination of the soybean seed.

The soybean-sorghum mixture should be harvested for silage just before the seed gets fully ripe and before the stalks get tough and woody. A field forage harvester with cutter bar attachment is the most satisfactory method of harvesting. Good silage can be made without a preservative if there is at least 40 per cent sorghum in the mixture. However, many farmers feel that the use of eight pounds of sodium metabisulphite per ton gives them a much better silage.

Plenty of Baltimore Bin Room For Wheat

There should be no great difficulty in obtaining storage space for 1955 Maryland wheat in Baltimore terminal elevators, according to Dr. Paul E. Nyström, chairman of the Maryland wheat storage advisory committee. This problem has been a serious difficulty in other years.

All of the government-owned wheat from this section of the country in the Baltimore elevators has been sold and is moving into export in good volume. Government-owned wheat from other parts of the United States in Baltimore is heavy, but is expected to move out before the new wheat crop is harvested.

It is indicated that a minimum of 2 1/2 million bushels of storage space, with possibilities of an additional $750,000 will be available for Maryland wheat for storage in Baltimore under government loan.

4-H Delegates At National Camp

Delaware is represented by four outstanding 4-H Club members at the 25th National 4-H camp in Washington, D. C., this week, June 15-22. Chosen for their achievements in club work are Marie Woerner and Edward Wilson of Newark, William Weber of Delmar and Betty Hayes of Houston.

The camp's purpose is to help prepare boys and girls for responsibilities of citizenship through a better understanding of our national government and a wider outlook gained through travel and acquaintance with young people of other states, territories and countries. One of the outstanding events of the week will be a visit to the White House, where the members and their leaders will meet and talk with President Eisenhower.

Marie Woerner, president and junior leader of the Pencader 4-H Club, has completed 10 years of club work. During this time she has completed 22 projects including clothing, foods and home improvement. In 1953 she was state clothing winner and received a trip to National 4-H Club Congress. She has given 12 demonstrations on 17 different occasions and was a county dairy foods demonstration winner. Marie has received six scholarships to state short courses. She has served as vice-president of the County Junior Council. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Aloysius Woerner, Marie will be a sophomore at the University of Delaware in the fall.

Betty Hayes, a six-year member of the Houston Cardinals 4-H Club, has completed 11 projects which include clothing and foods. She was girls' county public speaking contest winner in 1954. Betty received a trip to the NEPPCO exhibition at Harrisburg in 1954, where she gave a poultry foods demonstration. She has served as club president and is now club reporter. She will be a high school senior in the fall. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Russell P. Hayes.

Edward Wilson, a six-year charter member of the Blue Hen 4-H Club, has completed 19 projects, including garden, dairy and beekeeping—with dairy being his outstanding project. He received a trip to National 4-H Club Congress as a result of dairy achievement. Edward has also received county medals in gardening, safety and public speaking, and received a trip to the National Junior Vegetable Growers Association, and six scholarships to state short courses. During his 4-H career, Ed has appeared on 17 radio and two television programs. At the present time he is reporter and junior leader of his club and has been president, vice-president and county recreation chairman. A senior in the fall at Newark High School, Ed is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Wilson.

Farm Real Estate Rises 5 Per Cent

Farm real estate values in Delaware rose five per cent during the past year, despite a drop of five per cent in farm prices.

This apparently means that farmers still consider farm values reasonable, says Dr. R. O. Bausman, chairman of the department of agricultural economics at the University of Delaware.

"This seems to be especially true with out-of-state buyers who find Delaware farm real estate values reasonable in comparison with values in other states," Dr. Bausman points out. "A relatively large number of out-of-state farmers have purchased land in northern Kent County and in southern New Castle County."

For the United States as a whole, farm real estate values have increased two per cent and farm prices have dropped four per cent. The largest change in farm real estate values during the past year was in the corn belt, where the increase averaged about six per cent. The largest decline in farm values was in the southeastern and northwestern states, where the drop averaged about two per cent.

One of the reasons for the purchases of land in Delaware and in other states is to increase the size of farms. Many farms are too small to justify the heavy investment in machinery which farmers find necessary. They are also too small to enable farmers to maximize efficiency. It is probable that this type of demand can be expected to have a bolstering effect on the level of land prices for some time.

Veterans News And Answers To Questions

Q—I have just been discharged from the armed forces with a disability. I have applied to VA for service-connected compensation. If and when I am placed on the rolls, I intend to get a permanent GI insurance policy available to disabled Korea veterans. But in the meantime, I would like to be covered with insurance. Is there anything I can do now?

A—Yes. You may obtain the special Korean GI term insurance—available to all Korea veterans—if you act within 120 days following your discharge. Then, after VA rules that your disability is service-connected, you may apply for the permanent insurance. Meanwhile, you will have been covered by the special term policy.

Q—I have been out of service for a year. I am planning to apply to VA for disability compensation. Since the armed forces have my medical records, will I be required to take a physical examination?

A—You will be required to take a VA physical examination. VA may waive the examination, under some circumstances, only for veterans who apply for compensation within six months after their separation from service.

Q—I am a "double duty" veteran with service in World War II and since Korea. I am in training under the World War II GI Bill. I would like to switch to the Korean GI Bill, but I notice that my three-year-from-discharge starting deadline for Korean GI training has passed. Is it too late to switch?

A—No. Even though your Korean GI Bill starting deadline has passed, you still may be permitted to switch to that training law. You may make the change either at the end of any regular enrollment period or at the time your World War II GI entitlement is exhausted.

Q—Is it possible for a veteran who lives in one state to get a GI loan to buy a home in another state?

A—Yes, it is possible. However, lenders generally confine their lending operations to certain specific areas. You should check your lender.

Willard H. Baker, 62, World War I veteran and former linesman with the Eastern Shore Public Service Company, died Saturday at his home 218 Harrington Avenue, after a several weeks' illness. Leave the Suckers Alone

Often times skillful gardeners mistakenly remove some or all of the vigorous shoots that grow from the base of corn plants or along the stems of other plants. The reason expressed by these gardeners is that by removing the "suckers" they are "throwing the strength back to the plants."

This sort of midsummer pruning of vegetable crops is not a good idea. Not only does it stunt the plants but it reduces their vigor and makes them more susceptible to disease as well.

Leaves are the factories for plants. It is in the leaves that air and water are made into sugars, proteins, starch, hormones, vitamins and enzymes. Plant foods taken up from the soil by the roots are used in the leaves to help with the manufacture of these foods which are essential for our good health as well as the vigor of the plants. Healthy leaf and shoot growth is almost a guarantee of a high yield of top quality vegetables.

If your vegetable plants are beginning to look tired and rundown you can help them most by making a light application of complete fertilizer in the middle of each row. Work the fertilizer in gently so as not to damage any roots and then soak the garden thoroughly. Protect new growth by spraying or dusting with insecticides and fungicides. It is too late to spray after the leaves are infected, so make it a practice to protect new leaves as they grow.

Kent & Sussex Fair To Feature Auto Racing July 29-30

Two banner days of championship auto races at the Kent and Sussex County Fair—Friday and Saturday, July 29-30—this year establishes a new record for top-grade automotive speed and thrills at the fair.

The two-day racefare, including a combined bill of stock car and midget car events on Friday afternoon, July 29, and a program of nationally-famed AAA big cars, Saturday afternoon, July 30, will be directed by Sam Nunis Speedway, Brit Holloway, fair manager, announced.

It is the first time in the long and colorful history of the popular county fair that two days of auto races have been scheduled. Heretofore, the fair featured one day of AAA big-car races as a "closing day" attraction.

Race Director Sam Nunis already is busy securing the best drivers and cars obtainable for the two-day speedfest. He is both well known and popular among sports patrons of the Kent and Sussex Fair for his many race presentations since 1946.

Nunis stated that entry blanks for the stock and midget car races, like the championship AAA events, only will be sent to outstanding drivers and car owners. It is predicted that a crowded field will compete in each of the coming programs.

While it is too early to list the official starters, the speed director feels confident that this year's races will present many new headliners. He'll endeavor to have stars from the Indianapolis 500-mile race join state and sectional champions for the closing bill on July 30.

A record entry of "name" pilots is to be included in the big field that will race the stock and midget cars on July 29, Nunis advised.

George Pappas and his wife, Smyrna restaurant owners

"... our $538.30 hospital bill cost us only $40.00"

"On our way back home from a vacation in Florida three years ago, my wife and daughter were seriously injured in an automobile accident," says George Pappas, restaurant owner of Smyrna. "Mrs. Pappas had a fractured skull, and Patricia had a compound fracture of the leg. There was so much to worry about, it made me feel real good at the hospital when all I had to say was, 'I'm a Blue Cross Member'... and the hospital took over from there. You couldn't beat the care we had when we were in that accident in South Carolina. After twelve days my wife was discharged from the hospital but Patricia had to stay a whole month—and yet our hospital bill of $538.30 cost me only $40.00! It's wonderful—having Blue Cross protection and also knowing that wherever you go it's with you. And my employees feel the same way. We've had a Blue Cross group here at our restaurant for eight years and we're very well enrolled. There are a lot of people who wish they did have Blue Cross. They wait until something happens and then wish they'd thought to take it. As for me, I'll never be without it."

Are you protected if you have an accident a thousand, or even a hundred, miles from home? You are if you have Blue Cross-Blue Shield—health protection that travels with you. For information about Blue Cross hospital care and Blue Shield surgical-medical protection—the best, the safest, the lowest cost health investment you can make—contact the office nearest you today.

VALEDICTORY ADDRESS

Miss Pauline Welch
We who stand tonight at the meeting between a happy past and an unknown future have reached not the end, but the Commencement of our lives. What those lives are to be depends in a large measure upon the foundations we have been building for them during our years of preparation here.

Education makes people easy to lead, but difficult to drive; easy to govern, but impossible to enslave. Since ours is a nation that leads and a nation of leaders, education is becoming the most imperative basis for building the platform on which we stand.

Because we have the advantages of education, it is possible for every man to understand the complex problems which are every-day happenings in our government and in our democracy. Since we have our freedoms of speech and press, we are able to learn, to find out, to know exactly what happenings are taking place. We are not subject to a censorship that cuts off any knowledge that, as citizens of this United States, we could and should know.

Over the years, it is possible to remember many who have, unsuccessfully, tried to take advantage of us. To illustrate this particular point, let us recall a man well-known to many — Senator Huey Long, of Louisiana. As Governor of Louisiana, one could never say Mr. Long did not help and aid many millions of people. However, it is a well-known fact that as senator, representing Louisiana at Washington, D. C., Mr. Long waited two years before assuming his duties in the capitol, in order to make certain that a man who would carry on matters as Long wished, would become the next governor of the state.

Huey Long had behind him the force of his own diabolical mind and a huge political machine. Because of his attempts to drive and enslave a multitude of people, Huey Long was shot to death on Sept. 8, 1935. Certainly we are not the ones who should decide whether justice was meted out properly, but his untimely death was a form of justice.

This is the very thing that education tries to break down—the inability to decide whether a promise is such or just empty words spoken to mislead. Simply because we have developed into a people who are easy to lead, we must never forsake our democracy or we shall be driven. This is the great problem facing young people as they step out into the ever-growing and fast-moving pace we have set for ourselves. As world leaders, not only in political issues but also in other matters important to a healthful existence throughout the world — matters such as health and education—we, as young people leaving high school, must accept the responsibility of our adult life.

DELEGATES TO 4-H CLUB CAMP

Delaware's delegates to the National 4-H Club camp, under way this week in Washington, D. C., are, top row, Betty Hayes, 16, of Houston; Edward Wilson, 16, of Newark; bottom row, William Weber, 18, of Delmar, and Marie Woerner, 19, of Newark. Attendance at National 4-H Camp is one of the highest honors in club work.

Since we have acquired a basic background for the acceptance of such problems, the next question arising is—are we going to govern and be governed properly, or shall we, by our lack of interest, allow ourselves to be enslaved as pieces of machinery to be used, just as a farmer would use a tractor or a secretary a typewriter.

Because we are young people just making the first steps into a more adult world, there will be many times when we are not certain what path a good citizen should follow.

One thing is certain, no high school graduate has the right to stop learning. Each diploma carries with it an obligation to participate in community life and further one's education through constructive learning in some worthy career.

The world in which we shall live will be good in measure only as we make it so. It is with us, the new graduates, that these matters will rest. Shall we be a people easy to lead, but difficult to drive; easy to govern, but impossible to enslave?

To the faculty we must also express our earnest thanks. In the days to come, when we are thrown more and more upon our own guidance and intuition, our minds will travel back to the times when you have guided us around so many difficulties.

Classmates, as we look back, how easy it is to estimate by the landmarks along the road, the "value received of our school career! Now the time has come for the working out of our "promise to pay"! To us the challenge should be an inspiring one, for it sets absolutely no limit to the possibilities of our attainment. "For value received, I promise to pay," as represented by diplomas may be a reminder of a most enjoyable duty and an enviable privilege, our hearts answering to the divine command of old, "Freely ye have received, freely give!"

German footwear manufacturers are trying to find how to increase per capita consumption of shoes beyond the present 1.21 pairs a year, Bonn reports. But production costs are high and consumer purchasing power relatively low.

COMMENCEMENT

we didn't prepare for the best. Wishful thinking, wanting something someone else has, without trying to get ahead with what you have."

The dean at Wooster College once told Grathwell: "You keep thinking about what you can't do, instead of what you can do. It was the turning point of my life," said Grathwell.

His message was entitled, "Mission of Courage." "There is no more paralyzing force than fear. Take a chance when success looks reasonable. The mission of courage is to destroy fear, doubt, despair. You have to have faith. Go forward, believing in yourself, determined to make yourself, and not let the world make you."
