

Greenwood Man Killed When Train Hits Car

Louis Carl Zych, 32, of Greenwood was killed instantly Thursday, Dec. 15, when his car was struck by a Pennsylvania Railroad passenger train at Barwick's Crossing, one-mile north of Greenwood.

Zych, according to state troopers at Bridgeville, was driving east on County Route 5, when the diesel locomotive of the southbound train struck the car.

The automobile was dragged 120 feet along the tracks and was tossed to one side and completely demolished. The train stopped about a quarter of a mile down the tracks from the crossing.

Thrown from Car

The victim was thrown from the car and suffered a broken neck and other injuries. He was pronounced dead at the scene by Dr. C. Greylock Noble of Greenwood.

Frank H. Coulbourne of Wilmington was engineer on the train. The body was released by Sussex County Coroner Vellie Gray of Millsboro, who also investigated the fatality, to the William Fleischer Funeral Home at Greenwood.

There is a "stop, look and listen" cross arm sign at the crossing but no gates nor blinker lights. Zych was born in Wilmington, attended Wilmington public schools and enlisted in the U.S. Navy prior to World War II. He served with the Navy including the war period. Moving to Greenwood about five years ago, he had operated a dairy farm in that section and was active in the Greenwood Methodist Church.

Surviving are: His wife, Mrs. Hazel Zych; his father, Joseph C. Zych; his mother, Mrs. J. G. McNeal, this city; a sister, Mrs. Charles Gallaway, a brother, Robert, of Wilmington; and three step-brothers, Joseph Zych, Jr., and Richard and Joseph McNeal. The funeral was held Sunday at the Fleischer Funeral Home, Greenwood, with interment in St. Johnstown Cemetery, Greenwood.

The W. S. C. S. Society of Wesley Church, neighbors and friends, surprised Mrs. Anna Stokes last Thursday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Blades in honor of her 84th birthday. Mrs. Stokes received several nice gifts. Best wishes for many more happy, happy birthdays.

Mrs. Harry C. Jones, of Clayton, was a weekend guest of Mr. and Mrs. Roland T. Draper, Sr., Mr. and Mrs. Roland T. Draper, Jr., and Charlotte Ann.

The Wesley Church held their Christmas entertainment on Tuesday evening. The children knew their recitations well. The program was enjoyed by all.

Sulky Slants

By MRS. DAVE (PAT) SMITH

By the time this goes to press we will all be wondering what we received for Xmas. You know its a terrible thing to have packages around and not be able to open them. At least when they are marked, do not open until Xmas.

I happened to be visiting a family the other day, when the mother asked what are you looking for? The youngster replied: "Oh, just to see if Santa forgot and got here today." Sounds just like them.

I'll never forget when our little girl first found the things we had left in the ice box. She was about 5 years old then. What they don't think of saying. "Oh, mother, did Santa Claus get sick and leave all these things." That ended all our fun from then on. But that's the way it goes. I expect there are plenty that go through the same thing now days. Not too old fashioned any more.

But it is always a thrill to watch the children flocking around old St. Nick. At least every one gets into the Xmas spirit, for we all seem to have such a different attitude about that time. Wouldn't it be grand if all the world would keep it up?

To me, the most wonderful thing of all, is to drive around town just to see all the Xmas decorations. And when you see the Xmas trees in the homes, you can bet there will be a happy family on Christmas Day.

The most beautiful sight was last year when Dave and I decided all at once to go up to Buffalo for Xmas. As you drive down over the mountain going into Williamsport the lights were really a sight to see! You see, you are looking down into the town about 800 feet. From the river below it will hold you spellbound to look. We were not the only ones that were looking. At least 25 cars were parked there. But I think farther up north you go, they go more for outdoor lighting.

Another incident, not pleasant, took place in Dover where Bill sells trees at a display of boats which he also sells. A Santa Claus was displayed under lights in one of the boats and it was stolen.

Someone Steals Santa Claus

Bill Taylor, of Taylor Products, has been subjected to various facets of the Yuletide spirit, some of which must puzzle him.

Bill has been selling Maine Christmas trees here, and in Dover. One pleasant feature was the sale of six trees which were flown to an airbase at Thule, Greenland.

Two Killed When Automobile Hits Tree

A man and woman were killed and another woman was critically injured when their station wagon skidded on a patch of ice, overturned and was crushed against a tree near Slay on Sunday night.

The dead were identified by state police at Georgetown as William P. Strickland, 50, of 117 Champlain Avenue, Richardson Park, and Marian Marie Gray, 23, of RFD Milford.

In critical condition in the Milford Memorial Hospital is Mary Louise Fox, 28, of Hebron, Md., near Salisbury.

State police had to use axes, crow bars and a wrecking truck to remove the victims who were pinned in the wreckage of the demolished vehicle.

The accident happened on Rt. 36, between 5 and 5:30 p. m.

The patch of ice was the result of snow earlier in the afternoon that melted and froze over again Sunday night. State troopers said they were not certain which of the three was driving the car but they believed the operator was Strickland. The condition of the injured victim prevented questioning, Sunday.

A trooper said that all three of the victims suffered multiple injuries. The exact cause of death was uncertain. The lone survivor of the accident in addition to other injuries, had compound fractures of both legs and one arm.

The roof of the car was crushed down on top of the victims when the car toppled over against the tree. Police said the station wagon had Connecticut license tags but they explained that Strickland worked in the state but maintained his residence in Richardson Park. All three victims were taken to the hospital in the Milford Hospital ambulance.

He was last seen about 1 a. m. Sunday near the Burton Smith sporting goods store, which was broken into some time during the night before Dennin was held up. Two .22 caliber target revolvers and some ammunition to fit them were stolen.

Police said Dennin told them the revolver with which he was held up was similar to those stolen from the Burton's store.

The boy now faces charges of armed robbery, larceny of a motor vehicle, breaking and entering, and larceny.

Guard Non-Coms To Be Rated by New System

Non-commissioned officers of the Delaware National Guard will get a boost in prestige under a new personnel set-up to take effect January 1.

Under the new plan, men who hold the higher enlisted ranks only because of their technical or administrative skill will be called specialists. The term, "non-commissioned officer", will be reserved for men who actually exercise leadership, and are responsible for the performance of the men under them.

No change in pay will be made for any of the men involved. However, the noncoms will rank ahead of specialists and will have additional privileges. The change-over is similar to one made in the active Army several months ago, and is part of a long-range program designed to give added recognition to leadership.

Major General Joseph J. Scannell, Adjutant General of Delaware, described the move as one "designed to restore to our non-commissioned officers the prestige and position they once had."

"During the past 15 years", he said, "the number of non-commissioned officers in a military unit has risen greatly — even to the point where some types of units have more non-commissioned officers than privates. Most of them are not leaders, but rather highly skilled specialists. They have been given the added rank to give them extra pay and recognition for their skills, but in most cases they have not exercised leadership, the most important function of non-commissioned officers.

"Under the new system," General Scannell said, "these skilled specialists, who are so important in modern warfare, will continue to be given added pay and added rank, but they will be distinguished from the men who are leaders. As important as our specialists are, they can't function without leaders. What we are doing is giving added recognition to the responsibilities of leadership."

There are now seven enlisted ranks. The top four — corporal to master sergeant — are non-commissioned officer ranks. Under the new plan, four new ranks will be created, ranging from specialist third class to master specialist. They will receive the same pay as noncoms, but will rank between corporals and privates.

There will be very few master sergeants who will become master specialists, General Scannell explained. Most master sergeants, even those who are specialists, are leaders and have other men under them. They will retain their non-commissioned status.

However, few corporals will remain in the Delaware National Guard after January 1. Most of the present corporals hold their ranks because they are specialists. Only a very small fraction have other men under them. Those who don't will all become specialists third class.

About 10 per cent of the sergeants first class in the Guard will become specialists first class and about half the sergeants will become specialists second class. The others will retain their noncom ranks.

While a corporal will rank ahead of a master specialist, there is little likelihood that a specialist will be responsible to a non-commissioned officer of a lower pay grade. The skills required in a modern army are so specialized that in almost every case a non-commissioned officer who directs the work of technicians or administrative men must either be a soldier who has had years of broad experience, or a specialist who has risen to non-commissioned rank by adding the responsibilities of leadership to his duties as a specialist.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving Memory of Sallie M. Lord who passed away December 20, 1954.
 I cannot say, and I will not say
 That she is dead. She is just away!
 With a cheery smile and a wave of her hand,
 She has wandered into an unknown
 land.
 And let us dream how very fair
 it needs must be, since she lingers there.
 And you — O you who the mildest return.
 For the old time step and glad yearn.
 Think of her faring on, as dear
 In the love of There as the love of Here.
 Think of her still as the same, I say;
 She is not dead — She is just away!
 — James Whitcomb Riley
 Sadly missed by Husband and Son.

the candy content of Christmas stockings. Fresh cranberries for sauce and avocados for salads are other fruits that can be included to good advantage on this week's shopping list.

Vegetable supplies are good, so it will not be hard to round out the holiday menus once the meat has been selected. Celery, sweet potatoes, endive, leafy greens, turnips and white potatoes all are fairly low in price this week. Artichokes, mushrooms, parsnips, eggplants and radishes are other vegetables in the good buy class, and each one offers many possibilities for "dressing up" holiday meals with that "something special" that is appreciated so much at this time of year.

Festive holiday dinners are long-remembered. Most of us want to select foods that are of top quality but still "good buys," since our pocketbooks are a little thin after buying presents. The list of best values this week includes many foods that are very easy to prepare and many that are traditional for Christmas.

Since turkeys are in the spotlight at Thanksgiving, many families prefer ham for the main course meats for Christmas that are both economical and attractive include: crown roast of pork, pork loin roasts, picnic shoulder, baked chicken and roast duckling.

Entertaining can be easy during the holidays with ready-to-serve meats for buffet-style meals. Cold sliced ham or turkey and ground ham patties are easy ways to serve meat left over from the big Christmas dinner. Among the other cold cuts you may wish to have on hand are salami, bologna, braunschweiger, luncheon meat, sliced olive and pimento loaf and tongue.

Haughton Wins Nation's Crown in Harness Racing

COLUMBUS, O. — William R. (Billy) Haughton of Massapequa, N. Y., continued his virtual monopoly of harness racing driving honors by winning the national money and race winning crowns again in 1955. The U.S. Trotting Association announced today.
 Not only was the personable, young (32) New Yorker a repeat winner in both categories, but he also established new all-time records, a practice he has been following with monotonous regularity in recent years.

Haughton's 1955 earnings were $599,445 and he won 168 races. The previous records, both established by Haughton last year, were $415,577 and 153 wins.

Haughton encountered no serious competition for either title. Joe O'Brien of Del Mar, Cal., who handled Horse of The Year Scott Frost, was runnerup in the money department with $421,660 and Stanley Dancer of New Egypt, N. J. placed in the race winning category with 130.

It marked the fourth straight year that Haughton has won the dollar title and the third consecutive time he has captured the race-winning crown. On each occasion he has bettered previous national records in each division.

Campaigning principally over the metropolitan New York tracks, Roosevelt and Yonkers Raceways, Haughton was successful with both trotters and pacers and with young and aged stock alike. His principal source of income was the 3-year-old pacing star Quick Chief,

While we endeavor to maintain a home-like setting, we have also been careful to keep pace with progressive developments in the field of mortuary science so that those whom we are privileged to serve will have the advantages of modern progress.

Rapid Increase In Enrolment at State University

Dr. John A. Perkins, president of the University of Delaware, opens his 1954-55 President's Report with the statement, "Students are coming to the University of Delaware in such increasing numbers that attempts to project enrollments accurately have been futile."

How accurately he has spoken is revealed by a recently prepared statistical study which indicates that enrollment growth at the University of Delaware has far surpassed the average growth of all other degree-granting colleges and universities.

A survey issued by the American Association of Land Grant Colleges and State Universities shows that between 1939 and 1954, undergraduate enrollments in all publicly supported educational institutions increased 80.9 per cent. During the same period, the University of Delaware's enrollment more than doubled or, to be exact, was 109.8 per cent above the 1939 figure. In that year, 932 students were enrolled in undergraduate courses at the university; last year's totals in the Schools of Arts and Science, Engineering, Education, Home Economics and Agriculture reached 1,954.

Nor does this growth seem likely to slacken in the next fifteen year period. Dr. Raymond Walters, President Emeritus of the University of Cincinnati, has reported in his annual statistical study of enrollments in the country's educational institutions, that this year's national college student body is nine per cent greater than last year's. Ahead of schedule, as usual, the University of Delaware student body increased from 1,954 to 2,141, the second largest enrollment in the university's history and a gain of 9.6 per cent over 1954. Such expansion, Dr. Walters believes is "a portent of tremendous enrollments to come in the next decade."

Delaware also parallels the national trend in the growth of its separate schools. Nationally, the greatest percentage gains came in specialized courses, but the largest numerical gains were in arts and science. The Schools of Engineering and Education at Delaware enrolled 53 and 48 more students, respectively, to show the greatest percentage gains, but the School of Arts and Science topped both with 72 new majors. The School of Agriculture gained slightly and Home Economics remained about the same.

Even more amazing is the growth of the University of Delaware's total educational program since 1939. In that year, in addition to the 932 undergraduates, there were 132 students enrolled in academic extension and 68 in graduate studies, making a total of 1,132 students under instruction. By 1954 there were 1,954 undergraduates, 1,630 in extension, and 885 graduate students, a grand total of 4,469. This year the undergraduate count has risen to 2,141, the graduate students number 983, and the extension division is caring for the needs of 1,735, making a total of 4,859 students under classroom instruction.

"With such expansion during the past fifteen years of the university's history, there is good reason for all Delawareans to expect even greater development in the next fifteen years, when unusual growth is predicted," Dr. Perkins advised.

"Yet, to thinking men and women this development to accommodate increased numbers of college students should be a source of satisfaction rather than consternation. The University of Delaware will never become a large university. The growth we anticipate will only contribute to an enriched life and more effective educational experience for those who will enroll here in the years ahead."

VETERANS ADMINISTRATION Information Service QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q—I have just been discharged from the armed forces, and I understand that I have three years from my discharge to begin Korean GI Bill training. However, I plan to reenlist for four years. I will be in uniform when my starting deadline comes along, so my question is will I be able to begin GI training after I complete my four years of active duty?

A—No. Under the law, a veteran must begin GI training within three years from his first discharge. The law makes no exceptions to this rule.

Q—If a veteran allows his GI insurance policy to lapse, is the effective date of lapse the date the last premium was due or is it the last day of his 31-day grace period?

A—The date of lapse is the date he last premium was due. It is the last day of the grace period.

Q—As a World War II veteran, I am eligible for a GI loan. However, I returned to active military duty. Am I still eligible for the loan, or must I wait until I am discharged again?

A—As a World War II veteran, you still are eligible for a GI loan, and you have the right to use your loan benefit while you are in the military service.

Q—I understand that disability compensation payments must stop when a veteran returns to active military duty. I am going to college and am a member of ROTC. Is time spent in ROTC drills considered active service?

A—No. Time spent by ROTC members in drills as a part of their activities is not considered to be active military service. Your compensation payments will continue.

Arnold Moore

Arnold Moore, Laurel, Is Winner in State 4-H Tractor Program

The State 4-H Tractor program winner is Arnold Moore, of Laurel, who has been a 4-H member four years. His trip to the 34th National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago recently was provided by American Oil Company.

Through this program, Arnold has kept tractor repairs at a minimum.

He learned to operate and maintain farm machinery and power tools. Through the use of a well running tractor, he was able to increase production and, in turn, invest in other machinery and equipment. Learning basic mechanics and the value of scheduled inspections, Arnold cut down on machinery failure.

Arnold is carrying projects in beef, field crops, swine, and poultry. He is a member of the Sycamore 4-H Club led by Gladys Herrn and David Elliott.

CAR-TUNES

A GUARD STRAP WILL PREVENT SHOCK

Are you one of those unfortunate car owners bothered with shock when you grab the door handle?

As you prepare your exit, you grab the handle and it goes "pop", or "crack," disturbing your serenity and interrupting your prognostications about what Old George is going to do in the first at Bowie.

This shock, induced by sliding across the seat covers, is not harmful, but it can be annoying. In an attempt to avoid it, you may try to push down the handle with your elbow, tho we cannot understand why this should be less harmful than grabbing it with one's hand.

But you approach the problem like a maid testing the water before going bathing — like a dog approaching a porcupine or a skunk.

Once outside your car, you do not grab the handle of the door to close it, but push it shut by pushing against the window.

Some cars will shock one in the winter, and others will shock one, sometimes two, all the year around. Enough of this drivel. Go see Pat Fry and he will install a guard strap on the door of your car while you wait. No more shock. You can be a man again. No longer will your car have you buffaloed.

THE MUNICIPAL ELECTION

The municipal election is not too far off. In fact, it will take place Tuesday, Jan. 10. It will be held to fill the post of councilmen in the First and Third Wards.

These posts are now held by Walter Messick and Charles Jerread, respectively, or respectfully, as Pete Fink from Sockum so aptly phrased it.

We believe these boys have done a good job and deserve to be re-elected, if they run again.

The main purpose of this article, however, is to remind the electorate an election is coming up and that, for those who have a crow to pick, now is the time to do it.

Candidates will be nominated at the annual Citizen's Meeting, Friday night, Jan. 6, at the Fire house. Petitions for candidates will be presented, and candidates may also be nominated from the floor. If you have a man in mind, get a petition filled and present it at the meeting.

But we favor Jerread and Messick. They are members of the "do-it now" faction of the City Council. They are prevented from going off the deep end by the "let's-wait-awhile-and-look-it-over" faction. These two factions preserve a nice balance of power in the Council. We do not believe the present Council is perfect, but we do believe it is a progressive one, taking the interests of the City at heart and serving without pay. It definitely deserves more praise than it is getting.

A WISE EDUCATIONAL STEP

Here is something which should attract the attention of educators everywhere: The University of Tennessee has installed a project the object of which is to make all students more proficient in writing and speaking English. Instructors in every class, from agronomy to zoology, may grade a student not only on the subject being studied but also on the effective use of the language. If the student is deficient he is required to make up the deficiency before he receives his degree in his major.

That sounds sensible. Possibly those of us who are in the business of writing the language feel more keenly on the subject than others but it appears to be little short of folly to educate a student in the sciences yet turn him out from his school without the ability to be articulate and specific in his use of the language.

There has been an increasing interest in the teaching of cultural courses in our professional schools. It is stretching the point a little to refer to the proper use of the English language as purely cultural — it is too practical for that, yet it points to the same direction for the very reason that one cannot become proficient in writing and speaking without some cultural background. That requires a most unusual person.

FARM PROBLEM HASHED

The four-footed animal with the long snout and a curl in his tail has suddenly become the center of one of the hottest debates in agriculture.

The hog has come into his own as far as front page publicity is concerned. He has been the main reason for the Senate Agricultural Committee to suddenly decide to hold a series of grass-roots meetings throughout several states . . . for Secretary Benson to make a hurried trip to Denver to confer with President Eisenhower . . . for the talk of a split in the present administration.

If the hog had the power to reason we feel sure that he would be dissatisfied with the low price he commands on the market. We believe, however, that his chest would swell with pride when he realized that he alone would cause so much consternation among the politicians.

Most people agree that the prices on live hogs are too low when compared with other commodities. Opinions vary as to how it should be done, but it is generally agreed that hog prices are sick and need a shot in the arm to bring them around. It is also generally agreed that it is necessary to find a cause before a cure can be affected.

It is possible that the hog market is dollars lower than it should be (even considering large numbers) due to the lack of direct competition on live hogs? Is it possible that the average weight system is responsible to a great extent for a slow market? Is it possible that the Market News plays one of the major roles in the hog industry? Is it possible that the system used by Market News to report the hog market is the biggest threat to the competitive system there is?

Is it possible that the answers to the above questions would give us at least partly, the cause of the sickness in hog marketing?

(Editorial Note: Some farmers are responsible for keeping hog prices lower than they should be. Prices in the country are based on those at the terminal markets. When a farmer sells direct to the packer in the country, that packer buys fewer hogs on the terminal market, thus lessening competition.)

Mistletoe

Mistletoe has glossy evergreen leaves, small yellowish flowers, and waxy, white, glutinous berries. The young shrub never takes root in the ground, but is a parasite that grows from a "sucker root" on the trunks of other trees. It belongs to a genus of which there are about twenty species, all parasitic, distributed through warmer parts of the old world. The American mistletoe grows from New Jersey southward and westward.

The mistletoe appears as a bushy growth with many branches often four feet long. It grows on both deciduous and evergreen trees. It is the state emblem of Oklahoma.

Because of its peculiar character, the mistletoe played a prominent part in German and Norse mythology. The mistletoe was said to bring happiness, safety, and good fortune as long as it didn't touch the ground. The Celts held the plant in veneration, especially when found on the oak.

Holly

Holly has bright red berries, conspicuous among dark green prickly leaves. There are about one hundred and seventy-five species of holly shrubs. In some of these, the leaves are blackish and bear yellow or black berries.

Holly is most abundant on the bottom lands of eastern Texas and Arkansas. The holly sometimes forms a tree fifty feet high. It is from this species that much of the commercial holly is taken.

"Holly and Mistletoe"

Both of these familiar symbols of Christmas represent a curious mixture of pagan superstition and Christian legends. The word holly is said to be a corruption of the word holy, which was applied to the red-berried tree in the belief that it was an offshoot of the "Holy Tree".

The holly tree was associated with the Old Testament story of the burning bush from which the Angel of the Lord appeared to Moses. In early Christian symbolism, the red berries of the holly represented the Precious Blood of Christ and His promise of everlasting life. One tradition associated holly with the Crown of Thorns, which would make it a symbol of the Crucifixion rather than of the Incarnation. Long ago, however, popular custom disassociated holly from the tragedy of Christ's death and made it a bright symbol of the joyful miracle of His birth. Today, the glossy green leaves and bright red berries spell out an unmistakable "Merry Christmas" wherever they appear.

Some of the superstitions connected with holly have their roots in pagan mythology. It was believed to possess magical powers, since its leaves do not fall when other trees shed theirs, and the horns of the holly tree were believed to be effective in trapping evil spirits.

Holly wreaths also served as a sort of calendar for the druids in Gaul and the British Isles. These pagan priests wore the wreaths throughout the winter, and accepted it as a sign that spring had come when birds picked the berries from the wreaths.

The druids also considered mistletoe to be sacred, and used it in their sacrifices. Although the plant is popularly associated with the sacred oak of the druidic rites, the parasite is rarely found on oak trees; in England today, apple trees are the principal source of the white-berried plant. Mistletoe also played a role in Teutonic myth; the worshippers of Wotan believed that Bolder the Beautiful was slain with an arrow made from this plant. This association of mistletoe with the death of a god was carried over into Christian legend in the story that the mistletoe was actually the tree from which the cross was made, and that in punishment for this dreadful crime, the tree had been changed into a dwarf plant.

The custom of kissing under the mistletoe, which originated in England, may have owed its origin to an old Norse belief that mistletoe was a symbol of love and peace. It is said that hostile groups of fighting men would literally kiss and make up if they chanced to meet under a tree bearing mistletoe.

For the benefit of any reader who may wish to indulge in this ancient and pleasant practice, it should be noted that mistletoe is not intended to be an excuse for a prolonged kissing. In strict conformity with a re-ol tradition, one should remove a berry and present it to the lady of his choice who then grants the privilege of one kiss. When the last berry is used, the mistletoe has lost its power, and all kissing privileges expire.

Merry Christmas

One year ago was Christmas. Here it is again. During this past year have we helped or given to others who are needing?

It is not too late. Give to others a share of our blessings who are unfortunate enough not to be able to have a few luxuries of life.

Take a gift or two that we ordinarily give to others who are plenty able to give without receiving and you will have a happier Christmas as well as making and you will have a happier Christmas as well as making.

There is so much happening around this time of the year that we forget that we are to be our brother's keeper, so let's not forget these words that were handed down to us by the greatest of all persons who ever lived on earth.

It is hard to say the words that we want to say to you and yours. Words are, of course, emblems of thoughts and our thought today and the days to come is this:

"So we say 'Merry Christmas to you and yours — and our sincerest wish will not come true unless 1956 brings happiness to you."

"Every window glowing bright
And every house astir
With people trimming Christmas trees
And hanging pine and fir.
It's time for Christmas wishes now,
And just the right time, too,
For a great, big heartfelt special one
To real, good folks like YOU!"

It's Christmas at Poplar Acres where the Wheelers are wishing you the Merriest Christmas of All.

School of Agriculture Curriculum Group Active

Revising educational curricula is a continuing process in most institutions of higher learning and the University of Delaware is no exception. Curriculum committees in each of the university's schools have for some time been modifying the offerings of their schools to meet the changing needs of their students and the society into which they will enter.

In 1946 a study was initiated by a Committee on Educational Theory and Practice which submitted its report to former President William S. Carlson in 1949. This report resulted in the sort of "house-cleaning" which must be undertaken periodically to ensure that the best possible educational course is being followed.

Dr. John A. Perkins has announced that during 1955-56, the University of Delaware is renewing its efforts in this line. Each of the five undergraduate schools is concentrating upon a revision of its own course offerings and, where necessary, changes will be made. Most of the schools are inviting specially qualified consultants in their respective fields to visit the university during the coming year.

On Monday and Tuesday of this week, Dr. Thomas H. Hamilton, Dean of the Basic College at Michigan State University, visited the campus as a general consultant on curriculum study, an assignment for which he is ably suited. A graduate of DePauw University and the University of Chicago, he has taught at Lawrence College, the University of Chicago, the Pennsylvania College for Women, and has been assistant dean and dean of the Basic College at Michigan State since 1953. He addressed the entire faculty and held a number of special conferences with representatives of the different schools answering their particular queries.

Some of the schools already have made good progress in this work. One of the major overhauling jobs is necessary in the rapidly expanding field of engineering where ideas and methods are changing almost overnight.

Within the past year, the School of Engineering joined with the School of Arts and Science to prepare a new five year program in liberal arts and engineering designed to produce men of executive calibre with a broad background of educational experience. Opportunities for nontechnical electives also have been increased in their four year undergraduate majors.

Now, under the direction of Dean William W. Hagerty, three new steps are being considered. These plans involve a more effective use of nontechnical courses by offering them in series, rather than as scattered choices; the increasing of the scientific content of all engineering programs; and the integration of basic engineering-science courses for all engineers, regardless of their field of concentration. This means that certain courses would be standardized for all engineers — electrical, mechanical, chemical, and civil — without being slanted to one particular phase of instruction.

Another point being explored by the engineering faculty is the suggestion by many consultants that universities should concentrate upon the scientific development of their students and leave specialized technical training to the companies hiring them. Other important results of the curriculum study may be the addition of courses in nuclear and instrumentation engineering.

Although it is the largest, the School of Arts and Science has also made effective progress in modifying present courses and in adding and eliminating others. The two year certificate programs offered through extension and on the campus in accounting, general business, secretarial studies, general arts and science, the biological sciences and chemistry are a direct result of the suggestions of a visiting consultant, Dean Lawrence L. Jarvie of the State University of New York.

Other liberal arts courses have been revised in the fields of biology, science, and history and a new experimental course, "Reflective Reading," will be offered for the first time in 1956. This course, under the direction of Dr. Bernard Phillips, has been designed to foster "the enlargement of the student's proficiency in the arts of reading, writing and discussion, the diversification of his interests and the development of a taste for general reading."

In the School of Education, a standing committee has been continually working on curriculum study. This group was stimulated by the consultant services of former Dean of Education W. Earl Armstrong, who is now director of a national organization concerned with the approval of institutions devoted to teacher education. Dean Armstrong was able to contrast the original objectives of the School of Education with its present position and goals.

Dean George M. Worrlow has disclosed that a curriculum committee in the School of Agriculture has been working since February of 1955. One of its developments is the two year certificate program for the student interested in technical agriculture. Guest consultant Dr. Ernest L. Anthony, Dean of Agriculture Emeritus of Michigan State University, will visit Delaware in January, 1956.

The School of Home Economics last year revised the offerings for all five of its majors: child development and family life; foods and nutrition, home management; textiles and clothing; and home economics education. Since the faculty of this school is comparatively small, the entire group worked on the project and was able to complete its task rapidly.

According to President Perkins, "The University of Delaware has not been much given to faddism in curriculum revision. It has not juggled its offerings into different patterns and widely advertised the results as innovations, a practice not uncommon in higher education today. Where there has been a demonstrable public need for instruction, the university has tried to arrange for new programs within existing resources. It is with this policy in mind that we undertake this valuable self-study during the coming year."

"... I'm really sold on Blue Cross"

"As secretary to Dr. S. M. D. Marshall," says Mrs. Imogene Sammons of Milford, "I'm in a position to compare different types of hospitalization policies, and my preference is Blue Cross-Blue Shield. I'm really sold on it, and so is Dr. Marshall. My personal experience with Blue Cross and Blue Shield has been excellent. Last year, for instance, I had a bad fall and was hospitalized for 5 weeks with a fractured knee cap and chipped ankle. Although my hospital bill and surgeon's fee came to $500, I paid only $36 of it myself — Blue Cross-Blue Shield took care of the rest. You can't get better protection than that — that's why I think everyone should have Blue Cross."

When you invest in Blue Cross protection for hospital bills, and Blue Shield protection for surgical and medical bills, you're making the best health investment money can buy. Yet it costs surprisingly little to give yourself this fine protection. Remember — Blue Cross-Blue Shield is a non-profit organization . . . and that means safe, low-cost health insurance for you and your family. Get the facts today. Kent Home Doings

Have you finished all your Christmas decorations? Or are you still open for suggestions? Maybe you have been wondering how to put Christmas cheer into a special spot in your home. Here are some suggestions which take only a small amount of time and effort, and use materials you probably have in your home.

One of the simplest decorations for a mantle, table or bookcase is an arrangement of evergreens and plain Christmas tree balls. Lay the greens in an attractive way, and place the balls among them so that they sparkle from unexpected places. One of my favorite combinations for this is holly and small red balls. You might want to use many colors together in one size, or several sizes in one or two colors.

Another easy table decoration can be made this way: Place small pieces of pine or cedar in a low bowl, as you would a conventional flower arrangement. Use small or medium-sized ball to decorate this arrangement. Have more or larger ones at the bottom, perhaps piling them in the bowl itself.

You can show off a beautiful piece of glassware by piling it full of sparkling balls. This is particularly nice for cut or pressed glass or heavy modern glassware.

A beautiful, but easy, small arrangement can start with a wide pillar for the candle. Make it with a rope of 1/2 or 3/4" beads, and you can use for decorations.

Small Christmas tree, Christmas balls can add to this arrangement, too. If you plan to burn the candle, be sure to have something under it to catch the drips!

If you have been wishing for a brass bowl and candlestick set, try this substitute! For the candle holders, cut milk cartons off to about two inches. Cover them with gold foil paper, and place a small piece of plastic foam inside. The foam will hold a candle firmly and can be covered by placing small (1") Christmas tree balls around the candle. To substitute for the brass bowl, cover a box, about 2 1/2" or 3" deep and 6x6" or larger with the same gold foil. Heap this with high balls and wait for the compliments!

Have a merry Christmas!

Social Security Notes

"An application for old-age and survivor's insurance benefits must be filed before payments can begin," is the advice given by Myron Milbouer, district manager of the Wilmington social security office.

One of the basic requirements that must be met before benefits can be paid to a retired worker is that he must contact the nearest social security office and file an application for them. The same requirement must be met before survivors benefits can be paid to a deceased worker's family after his death.

"It is very important for the worker and his family to understand this requirement so that checks can be started promptly and so that no loss of payments will result," Mr. Milbouer said.

The three statements which follow are important to every worker and to every member of his family.

1. The worker who is between 65 and 72 years old should file his application at the nearest social security office at the earliest opportunity after he retires from work.

2. A worker at the age of 72 need not retire to be eligible for payments. Payments may be made to an insured worker at the age of 72 regardless of his earnings. The worker still employed at the age of 72 should file his application at the earliest opportunity after he attains that age.

3. After the death of a person whose work was covered by social security, some member of his family should inquire promptly at the nearest social security office to learn what survivors insurance benefits may be paid.

Complete information regarding social security payments can be obtained by contacting the Wilmington office at 813 West Street. The telephone number is 4-7770.

lating to the birth of Jesus. Don't forget the real reason back of all our celebrating of Christmas Day—the worship of the Son of God.

Morning Worship will begin at 11:00 o'clock. Christmas Day will be celebrated. Special music by the Junior and Cathedral Choirs. Sermon by the pastor.

No evening worship will be held until January 8th.

The Christmas dinner of the Pathfinders Class will be held on Wednesday, December 28th, at 6:30 p.m. in the Collins Building. Members and their children are invited to come.

Holy Communion and Student Recognition Day will be celebrated on Sunday, January 1st, at morning worship. All students home for the holidays are invited to attend and sit together with their friends in a reserved section at the front left of the sanctuary. At the close of the service an offering for the Student Fund will be received at the door.

Sell Broilers at 10 to 11 Weeks, U. of M. Advises

College Park, Md.—Broilers should be sold at ten to eleven weeks of age, according to Dr. Harold D. Smith and James Horne, agricultural economists at the University of Maryland.

This is the most profitable age, the economists report, because records show that the dollar return, above out-of-pocket costs, reaches its maximum at this time. Out-of-pocket costs include the chicks, feed, medicine, fuel and litter.

The producer who sells his chicks at ten weeks realizes this higher dollar return than the producer who holds his chicks for longer or even shorter periods, Dr. Smith said. Average broiler weights at ten weeks were 3.25 pounds.

Dr. Smith and Horne found these results in a study of broiler production efficiency and methods of financing production. They used actual flock records of poultrymen on the Eastern Shore of Maryland for the study.

Poultrymen selling their broilers after ten weeks experience a higher cost for each pound of meat produced according to the study. Returns, above out-of-pocket costs averaged $67 per 1,000 chicks started and sold at 10 weeks while nine week birds averaging slightly less than three pounds brought returns of $64 per 1,000. Dr. Smith reported that flocks selling past 12 weeks did not pay for their out-of-pocket costs, resulting in a net loss to the average producer.

This and other information will be related to the cost of financing broilers under different profit sharing agreements used on the Eastern Shore. Preliminary results show that the dollar returns to the grower are also affected by the financing methods and certain management practices used in broiler production.

Many producers tend to sell their broilers at lighter weights when prices are high, while others tend to hold their birds for longer periods in hopes the market will rise. "In view of this," Dr. Smith said, "our study bears out the fact that broilers should be sold at ten to eleven weeks."

County Chairmen Named For Children's Bureau Push

Mrs. William K. Paton and Mrs. N. Maxson Terry of Dover, have been named as co-chairmen of the Kent County 1955 Campaign for funds for the Children's Bureau of Delaware. Both are members of the Board of Directors of the Bureau. Mrs. J. H. Tyler McConnell of Wilmington is serving as General Chairman of the 1955 Campaign for Kent and Sussex Counties. Solicitation is being made by mail in all communities in the county except Dover where no appeal will be made since the Children's Bureau is a member agency of the Dover United Community Fund. Assisting Mrs. Paton and Mrs. Terry are the following: Mrs. John E. Burris and Mrs. Desmond A. Lyons of Milford, Mrs. H. C. Webb and Mrs. Cummins E. Speakman of Smyrna, Mrs. Marion Stevenson of Frederica and Mrs. J. C. Messner and Mrs. A. B. Parsons of Harrington.

The goal this year for Kent County is $1,200, toward the support of the Bureau's services to families and children from the county. The Children's Bureau has given care in boarding and adoptive homes to twenty-six children from Kent County in the first ten months of this year. In addition, many couples unable to have children of their own living in the county have turned to the Bureau to adopt a child. Support for these services to Kent County families is obtained through the annual drive for funds, the Dover United Community Fund, the Kent County Levy Court and payments from parents of children in the care of the agency. Mrs. Paton and Mrs. Terry in calling upon the residents of the county for support of the Bureau's program urged that careful consideration be given to the very necessary services provided to needy children.

The Children's Bureau of Delaware, since it was established in 1918, has been helping children in need regardless of race, creed or color. A baby is born out of wedlock, parents separate and a home is broken, a mother becomes seriously ill — these and many other reasons may temporarily deny a child his place in his own home. The Bureau's job is to help during the emergency — to plan for the child until his own family is ready to take over again or until adoption or some other lasting plan can be made for him. The two main services are therefore: to provide temporary foster home placement for any child needing care and to provide, under the Delaware adoption laws, adoption placement for any child legally free and physically, emotionally and mentally suitable. The trained staff of caseworkers, doctors, nurses and psychologist are available and used for every child in care to safeguard his health and general well-being.

A contribution to the Children's Bureau of Delaware helps provide a child in need with the love and care and family life he requires during his separation from his parents or helps to find new parents through adoption for the child legally released. Contributions should be sent to Children's Bureau of Delaware, 1310 Delaware Avenue, Wilmington 6, Delaware.
