Group Formed To Study Ferry Project

A Cape May-Lewes ferry project may have progressed at least one step farther following a meeting Friday night in Wilmington attended by officials of the States of Delaware and New Jersey and members of the Interstate Highway Division which operates Delaware Memorial Bridge.

After hours of discussion and counter-propositions, it was decided to establish a joint committee, made up of representatives of the Committee for a Cape May-Lewes Ferry in New Jersey, a similar committee in Delaware and representatives of the Interstate Highway Division. This committee is to examine all possibilities and approaches to bringing a ferry crossing about if at all possible.

Garrett E. Lyons, chairman of the Interstate Division, made it clear that his group was host to the officials of the two states merely for a discussion of the project where all could present their views and without taking a definite stand at the moment. He said that in his personal opinion he believed a ferry was feasible at that point and should become a paying proposition in time. However, the purpose of the gathering, he pointed out several times, was merely for a meeting of minds on the whole subject.

Senator Walter J. Hoey (D) of Milford made a proposal early in the evening that the Interstate Highway Division set up a $12,000,000 bond issue with which to establish a ferry between the two points. He said that South Jersey and people in southern Delaware are anxious

June 1 there will take place an event of unparalleled significance in the history of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Harrington—the ordination of the Rev. John Richard Symonds, Jr., to the priesthood, by the Rt. Rev. J. Brooke Mosley, Bishop of Delaware. Because St. Stephen's is too small and other facilities are not adequate, the ceremony will take place at Christ Church, Dover. It will be a signal event for the church in Dover, also, since there has never been held an ordination at Christ Church, in its 223 years of history. The Rev. Joseph S. Hinks of Milford will present Mr. Symonds for ordination. The Rev. Paul A. Kellogg of Dover, will play the organ, and the Rev. Victor Kusik of Bridgeville will deliver the sermon. Also taking an active part in the service will be the Rev. Samuel W. Wyson, Jr., of Camden, Dr. F. Sydney Bancroft, Jr., and the Rev. Layton P. Zimmer, of Mr. Symonds' former parish, St. Andrew's, Wilmington. There will be many other visiting clergy and notables. All Episcopal clergymen of the Diocese of Delaware are expected to attend.

In order to appreciate fully the significance of this event in the history of the Episcopal Diocese of Delaware, one must be aware of the centuries old tradition of the three-fold minister going back to the earliest apostolic church. The preface to the ordination reads, in part: "It is evident to all men, diligently reading Holy Scripture and ancient authors, that from the apostles' time there have been these orders of ministers in Christ's Church—Bishops, Priests, and Deacons."

The ordination to priesthood in the Episcopal Church is the culmination of at least eight years of rigid training and preparation. To be ordained to a priest, a man must have completed four years of college work at an accredited university and must have attained at least a Bachelor's degree therefrom. Before he can begin seminary studies, he must have the approval of his vestry, his rector and his bishop, and must have letters of recommendation from three faculty members of his university. He must also pass both a physical and a psychiatric examination. The man is then made a postulant and is placed under the direct supervision of the bishop of his diocese for the remainder of his period of preparation for the

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q—We have bats in the attic—many of them. What can be done to get rid of them?

A—We are sending a leaflet, WL 333 - "Control of Bats."

Q—How do I use 40% chlordane for termite control?

A—Trench around outside foundation 18" deep and 12" wide. 4 lbs. of material per 100 gallons of water is the right mix. No harm will come from higher rates of application—but be sure the concentration is enough to get control.

Q—My boy is raising pigeons. Do you have an information on them?

A—Am sending you F. B. 684 on "Squab Raising."

Q—Do you have any information on growin' roses?

A—We are sending you "Roses for the Home," a bulletin which answers most general questions.

Q—Is it a state law that turkeys sold in the state must come from pullorum clan flocks?

A—No. But if you are selling hatching eggs, then we suggest that you not attempt to breed these turkey poults with baby chix. Pullorum is a very contagious disease.

Q—What is the formula for a whitewash that is weather resistant and will not rub off?

A—Casein 5 lbs., Trisodium phosphate 3 lbs., Formaldehyde 3 pts., Lime paste 8 gals. Care in mixing is important. We are sending you more complete details in the mail.

Q—Is it getting too late to make silage from cutting alfalfa first then orchard grass and clover?

A—Stage of maturity seems to be of less importance with silage than with hay. The big advantage of grass silage over hay is that you don't have to worry about drying weather especially in the spring of the year.

Q—What is wrong with this clover (sample submitted)?

A—It is showing aphid and spittlebug injury. You can mow the clover and make it into hay training at Fort Dix.

The 22-year-old soldier attended the University of Delaware in Newark.

now, or spray the clover with malathion, and wait at least 10 days before cutting for hay because of spray residue tolerances.

Q—The Federal Income Tax man says that you have books for farm use.

A—We have several kinds, mostly at no charge. Good farm use books will save on taxes. We can give you several suggestions on keeping records, when we know how much time you are willing to devote to it.

Q—What do you say is wrong with this sample of clover?

A—The leaves are showing holes which indicate weevil injury—and brown spots and shriveling which is caused by aphids or spittlebugs or both. The leaf color is generally good on the clover, but the grasses seem to show nutrient deficiencies. Am sending you a color leaflet that illustrates the trouble signs of a lack of plant food. Why not send in a soil sample to find out for certain.

Delaware Sheep and Wool Association Continues To Be Profitable

Cooperative effort as demonstrated by members of the Delaware Sheep and Wool Association continues to be profitable, according to reports given by the president, William Gray of Harrington.

The first pool of lambs held two weeks ago brought members an average price of 27.5c per pound. 54 animals were shipped then; 120 were marketed this week; and similar lots will be sold every two weeks until July. Lambs are sold as meat animals when they reach a market weight of 70 or 80 pounds, and pooling or gathering together the supply, permits marketing by grades which can net a farmer more money.

John McQuail of Smyrna and Mrs. Vera Rambo of Houston handle the arrangements for pooling lambs.

The association is also planning the annual wool pool for June 15 at the Kent-Sussex Fairgrounds at Harrington. Some 21,000 lbs. of wool were graded and pooled in 1956, and all indications point to a continued increase in volume. A farmer need not be a member of the association to participate, but membership is encouraged. Floyd Blessing of Houston serves as the wool pool manager. Marketing wool by grade and in quantity has brought Delaware farmers a premium of six to eight cents per pound in the past three years.

"Farming in Europe" was described by Mrs. Alden V. Keene of Middletown to association members last Tuesday evening. She gave a slide talk that graphically portrayed how far behind many sections of Europe are in agriculture. On the other hand, some European nations are doing a superb job of soil, water and forest tree conservation. Very little land is left idle, and tillage is very intensive because of the concentrated populations in many areas.

June is Dairy Month. The observance will mark the 350th anniversary of the American dairy industry.

Social Security

Many disabled people who are receiving disability payments under other Federal laws, or under workman's compensation laws, may be neglecting to apply for social security disability insurance benefits, Myron Milbouer, district manager of the Wilmington social security office declared recently.

The social security law does provide that any social security disability insurance benefit must be reduced by the amount of any of these other benefits which may be payable to a disabled person. But, Milbouer said, a disabled worker who believes that he could qualify for social security disability insurance benefits now, or at age 50, should file an application with his social security office promptly, even if he is already receiving another type of disability benefit.

Although he may not actually receive any social security disability, or only very small payments, his application will protect his right to social security benefits in the future, and also his family's right to survivors payments in case of his death. If he does not make an application, those future benefits may be lost or may be much lower in amount. Also, if the other disability benefit he is now receiving is reduced or stopped before he reaches retirement age, he might no longer be eligible for social security disability insurance benefits if he has not made his application in time.

Milbouer pointed out that after a disabled person reaches 65, these other disability payments do not reduce the amount of his social security old-age insurance benefits. He urged all disabled persons to acquaint themselves with the requirements of the social security disability provisions.

Free pamphlets explaining the social security disability provisions may be obtained by writing to the Social Security Administration, 340 W. 10th St., in Wilmington. A disabled person who believes that he could qualify under these provision, should then make application to his social security office, whether or not he is receiving another type of disability benefit.

TIDEWATER OIL HAS OPEN HOUSE, HAGLEY MUSEUM OPEN TO PUBLIC

Two significant events in Delaware last week increased the state's industrial economy and enriched its heritage of the past in the dedication of Tidewater Oil Company's "refinery of the future" at Delaware City

"On a vast 5000-acre site near Delaware City—the largest property ever assembled for industrial purposes on the Eastern Seaboard—this $200,000,000 vision has become a reality," officials declared.

More than 7000 Delawareans visited the installation on Saturday when Neighbor Day was observed. There were tours through the "oil city" so that people could better understand the size of the operation.

Amid ceremonies which recalled the industrial progress of the Brandywine Valley from 1640 to 1802, visitors received their first glimpses of the interior of the 143-year-old textile mill which has been converted into a museum.

The museum is devoted to the industrial history of the United States, but concentrating on the Brandywine Valley, its exhibits are designed to show how the diversity of mills which drew their power from the small river in colonial and early federal periods epitomized the beginnings of industry throughout the new nation.
