

CHARTER REVISIONS READY TO BE PUT INTO BILL FORM

The proposed revisions to the City Charter are in the hands of an attorney for the Legislature and are scheduled to be put in bill form this week, the City Council learned Monday evening at its February meeting.

H. C. Brown who, later in the evening was appointed city solicitor, told of the status of the amendments and added they would encounter opposition.

The attorney said a rough draft of the revisions had been turned over to William Bush, House attorney, to be put in bill form this week. Bills will then be introduced, referred to the proper House committee. "It will then be up to you gentlemen to get them passed," advised Brown.

The solicitor explained he had talked to George Cain, representative from the Ninth Legislative District, of which most of Harrington is a part, and added that the opposition to the revisions was "potent, shall we say?"

Brown said two substantial real estate owners are opposed to the changes. He didn't identify the opponents.

The opposition to the Charter revisions hinged on the highly controversial one pertaining to the taxation of farm land in the City limits. At present, this land is not taxable unless drawn up in building lots or front upon some public street, improved.

The proposed revision would make it subject to assessments and this would include one in a proposed amendment to the sewer code whereby the owners of abutting property would have to pay for installation of sewers.

To install a substantial footage in sewers, a referendum must be held for a bond issue. Brown thought the sale of bonds might be affected by the revision on the taxation of farm land.

He advised, however, the Council to go ahead with its revisions and the group agreed.

Brown said he had changed a revision of the Charter on the bonding of the city manager and the city treasurer. This revision, accepted by the Council, would give it the power to decide if a surety bond was desired, and if so, of not less than $2500.

At the start of the meeting, Amnie Stafford and William G. Wechtner were appointed assessors at $300 each. They will prepare the general assessment which is to be finished by March 1. The Council, in a split vote decided by Mayor Smith, agreed on an assessment of 35 per cent of present value, the same as last year.

The city manager was told to collect delinquent water accounts of the third and fourth quarters in 1956, in 30 days. The Council also agreed to the collecting of water rent every quarter, which is according to the code. Some persons have been paying by the year. The Council also voted to accept the fourth quarter payment of water rental of Maurice Harrington as a payment in full. The motion was carried after Councilman Alan Rutledge said Harrington hadn't been billed properly, that is, every quarter as provided by law.

The Council agreed that Les Kemp must pay for permits to tap in sewer and water for two trailers on Short Street and that the work must pass inspection. This is to be done in 30 days.

After Councilman Tom Brown had recommended it, the Council agreed that a letter should be written to the State Board of Health asking its inspectors to inspect local restaurants, trailer connections to water and sewer, and residence not connected to the sewer. In the latter connection, it was mentioned there were some outhouses on Delaware Avenue.

A complaint was registered on a clogged tile, 40 feet long, on Mississippi Street at the entrance of the Pierre S. duPont School. This caused water to back up and stagnate. It was solved by saying the State would take care of it.

Mary Derrickson Weds in Lancaster

Miss Mary Patricia Derrickson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus H. Derrickson, of Lancaster, Pa., and Ronald G. Tweed, son of Mr. and Mrs. Guy M. Tweed, Lancaster, were married Jan. 11, according to a report received Saturday.

The Derricksons formerly lived in Harrington.

Officiating at the ceremony was the Rev. W. Edgar Cathers Jr. assisted by P. William Hutchinson Jr.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She was attended by Miss Colleen Mooney of Marticville as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Janet Rankin of Conestoga and Miss Nancy Eshelman of Safe Harbor Village.

Cynthia Caldwell of Eggersville, N. Y., cousin of the bride, and Martha Hershey of Lancaster, niece of the bridegroom, were flower girls.

Glenn Hershey of Lancaster, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, was best man. Ushers were A. J. John Derrickson of Del Rio, Tex., brother of the bride; Richard Rhoades of Manheim, brother-in-law of the bridegroom; and William Walsh Jr. of Bedford, N. Y.

Brian Caldwell of Eggersville, cousin of the bride, was ring bearer.

Mrs. Joanne McCarthy, church organist, played the wedding music. Norman Gerlach was soloist.

The bride wore a gown of Chantilly lace and tissue taffeta fashioned with a fitted bodice and bouffant skirt which extended into a chapel train. Her veil of imported silk illusion was held by a pearl tiara.

She carried a white orchid on a white Bible with lily-of-the-valley streamers.

The maid of honor wore a waltz-length gown of colonial blue velvet dress styled on princess lines. Her headpiece was a veiled white fur band. She carried a white fur muff accented with blue carnations and streamers.

The bridesmaids wore dresses of the same style in Christmas red and carried white muffs with red carnations and streamers.

The mother of the bride wore a sheath gown of light blue lace and chiffon, with a matching feather hat, light pink accessories and a corsage of pink rosebuds. The mother of the bridegroom wore a navy blue lace dress with redingote, navy and white accessories and a corsage of white rosebuds.

A reception was held at Meadow Hills Dining House, New Danville Pike. After a trip to New York City, the couple will reside in East Petersburg.

The bride, who is a graduate of Penn Manor High School, is employed in the offices of the Armstrong Cork Co. Her husband, also a graduate of Penn Manor High School, attended Franklin and Marshall College. He is employed in the Research and Development Center, Armstrong Cork Co.

Pre-nuptial showers for Miss Derrickson were given by her bridesmaids at the home of Miss Eshelman and by friends in the Armstrong offices. Mrs. Robert Herr of Lancaster, R2, entertained at a dinner and shower. The bridegroom's parents entertained the bridal party after the wedding rehearsal.

Chipman Dinner Committees Get Ducks in Row

Dr. W. T. Chipman, physician in Harrington 37 years, will be honored at a testimonial dinner Mon., Feb. 17, in the high-school cafeteria.

Tickets are available from members of the last four named clubs, or from Lester Smith, at People's Bank, and C. Tharp Harrington, at The First National Bank. The deadline for purchases is Wed., Feb. 12.

Fulton J. Downing is general chairman of the dinner.

Sulky Slants

Another week has rolled around and the weather seems to be all the talk everywhere you go. The winds have been terrible. You better not have your awnings or good chairs out. So far it hasn't bothered our trailers. If you happened to be out around where the cattle ranches are they seem to suffer more than most anything else. Where there are thousands of these white face cows, (and there are plenty around here) they just stand and shiver. And since the freeze its hard to get hay. The cattlemen are all buying for their stock. All we can buy is 3 tons at a time, where we generally get about 10 or 12 ton at a time out of Orlando. Yesterday it went up to 70, and then down to 44.

When the horses leave here they shouldn't notice the cold too much. Unless we run into snow up the country. They talk about how many fish that are being caught around. I don't see how they brave the winds. Our lakes around our track have so many white caps on them. But you know Florida can't go on and on this way. Suppose when it gets hot you will holler you wish we had some of this cool weather.

Some of the boys are really stepping on with their horses. But not Dave. He is taking them slow and easy. Course the aged horses have plenty miles under their belt. But been turning slow miles. Next week, back one single.

So far we have Overseer who is just like old Speed. Never gets in a hurry and sleeps all the time. But trots all the time. Wears nothing, no boots no toe weights, in fact nothing. All Speed wore was bell boots and the yare for style. Dave just hated to see him with nothing on. He hates to see a horse loaded down with so much equipment. Which is nice for anyone at the barn taking care of him.

Sure too bad about Mr. Hank's owner passing away. He and his family are so nice. And he has some very good horses going through the Delaware sale this month. Mr. Hank said Mr. Elliott had never been sick a day in his life when he had the heart attack. So you never know. He is going to Lexington to try and pick up more horses, or maybe someone will buy his entire stable and he can go on with them. But that's the bad part of having a one stable owner. Unless you have something of your own. Dave only has Dr. Huber, but we can have outside horses if he wants them. In fact he turned down two good ones the other day. Two of our own and more colts from Anna Day every year, that's enough. Have nine as it is. Good, bad and indifferent.

Mr. Holloway, don't you forget to stop in when you come down this way. Dave said—when he looked at your picture in the Harness Horse you sure looked healthy. "Not missing any meals."

One of our trainers had a pretty bad accident this past week. I don't know if he was known by many up there. He was at Westbury racing last year. His name, Sam Smith. Seems he was traveling pretty fast around one of the curves you have to travel to get to the main highway when his station wagon turned over. Was unconscious when he was picked up and sent to the hospital. Was placed on the critical list, but we heard they had taken him off. His stable is just across from us. We had been talking and laughing with him and kidding him about just getting married. Then Dave and I left for Morrison's Cafeteria where we eat every day, was gone about two hours and when we came back everyone was standing around talking about the condition of the station wagon and the other car he hit.

This is a bad road, seems everybody goes so fast and there are several turns, a couple of bad blind ones at that. Not too bad even with the night clubs going every night. You would think there would be more. About the only time we are out at night is when we go to the wrestling matches or over to the dog races. At last, I went down to see "Don Eagle" the good looking Indian. And you should

2 Enter Pleas of Innocent In Kent County Road Deaths

Two recently indicted manslaughter defendants entered pleas of innocent when arraigned before Judge William J. Storey in Superior Court Friday at Dover. They are Lt. John W. Moore stationed at the Dover Air Force Base, and Richard A. Emory, Dover.

Both were indicted on Jan. 20 and are represented by Henry J. Ridgely. No date has been fixed for their trials.

Lieutenant Moore is accused of being the driver of an automobile which figured in a fatal accident on Orchard Avenue, Morris Estates, on the south outskirts of Dover, Dec. 22.

Officer Fatally Injured

Fatally injured in the accident was Lt. Michael J. McCormick, a fellow Air Force officer of Moore's.

McCormick was a passenger in the car assertedly operated by Moore, according to allegations. Emory was the alleged driver of an automobile which was involved in a mishap along the DuPont Parkway, north of Dover, on the night of Dec. 27, which resulted in the death of Norman Rasmus, Cheswold.

Rasmus was struck by the Emory car, it is charged, when he alighted from his vehicle after it had been struck by a third car.

Speeder Fined In Harrington

George Wyatt, 50, was fined Sunday by Magistrate L. Gooden Callaway on a charge of exceeding safe speed.

The fine was in the aftermath of an accident in which Wyatt's car skidded onto a shoulder on Rt. 14, a mile east of Harrington and careened for 95 feet before crashing into a guard rail. The accident happened about 4:25 p. m.

A passenger in the car, Clarence Coy, 60, of Harrington was admitted to the Milford Memorial Hospital for observation after he complained of a slight bump on the head. He was released Monday.

HOUSTON METHODIST CHURCH DAMAGED $60,000 BY FIRE

Houston Methodist Church, the only church in the community, was destroyed except for its brick walls and part of the roof by an early-morning fire Sunday.

The flames broke through and consumed the interior of the adjoining educational building.

Sunday school was held in the firehouse and parishioners worshipped at morning services in neighboring towns.

$60,000 Loss Partly Insured

The Rev. Ray W. Kirwan, pastor, said the church was valued at more than $60,000 and only partly insured.

The fire apparently broke out when a furnace backfired and spread quickly.

Firemen from Houston, with the aid of companies from Harrington and Milford, fought the blaze for four hours and managed to keep it confined within the buildings.

The blaze was discovered by Willis Clifton, an engineer on the Delmarva line of the Pennsylvania Railroad, coming home from work at 5:45 a. m.

Interior Destroyed

The buildings were completely closed and this helped prevent the fire from breaking through the outside walls. All floors, walls and furniture were destroyed.

Trustees of the church were called to an emergency meeting at which they decided services would be held at the Houston fire hall.

Mr. Kirwan credited the firemen with "heroic efforts" in saving at least part of the buildings and in preventing the fire from spreading to nearby structures. Women provided sandwiches and coffee for the volunteer firemen on duty until about 10 a. m.

Dense clouds of black smoke rolled into the sky during the height of the fire.

Potato Recipe Livens Winter Dinners

Liven up winter dinners by serving those same old foods in different ways.
 For your next oven meal, try potatoes baked in a bubbly cheese sauce. This is delicious with meat loaf, ham, baked fish or pork chops. If there's room in the oven, cook a vegetable in a covered baking dish at the same time. Peas and green beans are good buys—both canned and frozen—right now. Cook vegetables three times as long in the oven as on a surface burner.

I suggest this recipe:
 Potatoes with Cheese Sauce
 2 tablespoons butter, 2 tblsp. flour, 1 cup milk, 1/2 tsp. salt, 1/8 tsp. pepper, 1 cup grated cheese, 1 tsp. lemon juice, 2 cups diced potatoes.
 Melt butter over low heat. Stir in flour. Stir in milk gradually and continue stirring until thickened and smooth. Add seasonings, cheese, and lemon juice. Stir until cheese melts. Pour over potatoes in greased baking dish. Bake at 350 degrees about one hour. (serves 6).

Bath Area Laundries Gaining Popularity.

Have you considered using the bathroom area for a laundry location? Washers and dryers in the bathroom or in a room nearby are being used by several homemakers to save steps.
 The reason for the location is that most soiled family laundry is put in a bedroom or bath hamper. Clean linens and clothing are usually kept in or close to these rooms.

A second bathroom with walls and ceiling finished to withstand high humidity might be the best location. There is usually little extra plumbing required for the laundry. Only the washer and dryer should be located in the bath. Ironing space is best found elsewhere.

To be rid of the clutter of hand washables, a separate laundry room near the bath could be used. This area should be large enough for washer, dryer, laundry sink for hand washing, a drip-dry section, and ironing and pressing.

Greenwood

The Sunshine Class of Greenwood Methodist Church will meet at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Smith on Feb. 12.

James R. Smith left on Saturday morning for a motor trip to Florida. He will be away an indefinite time.

After 43 years of active service as rural mail carrier Water Mills retired this past week. On Friday evening the postmaster and office force surprised him in the form of a Retirement Banquet at the Wonder R in Harrington. Members of his immediate family were also present. His associates presented Mr. Mills with a lovely gift.

Sunday dinner guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Hatfield were Mr. and Mrs. Robert K. Jester and daughters, Beth and Cindy. Callers on Sunday evening were Mr. and Mrs. J. Burton Case of Harrington.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Hatfield and Ellen enjoyed mid-morning coffee after church at the Gerald Pearsons.
 Mr. and Mrs. Horace Maloney entertained a group of friends at a buffet supper on Saturday evening. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Byron Wise, Mr. and Mrs. William S. Cook, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Allison Davis, Dickie and Gary, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Hatfield and Ellen, and Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Meredith. Out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. William Maloney of Bel Air, Md.

activities, but when vacation comes there is very little that the children have in the way of recreation to keep them off the street. A swimming pool would be the solution. When the mothers were working they would know where their children were during their absence.

If each and every one of us would just consider what it would do for our girls and boys, we could keep delinquency from our town.
 It has been said that "Idol Hands are the Devil's workshop" this is absolutely true, and our children must be kept busy in the form of amusement. To build a swimming pool would not make anyone make any great personal sacrifice and they would reap great joy if it were accomplished. In this there must be unity to accomplish our aim and make it possible.
 Just think of this project and I am sure you will feel the same as I, that it would be worth whatever money you put into it.
 In closing let us all be thankful and grateful for the wonderful teachers in our school and last but not least, remember, it is our boys and girls of today that will make our future laws of tomorrow.

Snow Plows on the March

We take snow plows for granted but it is high time the personnel of the State Highway Department, who operates them, should be praised.

Usually, with a heavy snowfall, one restricts one's travel or, perhaps, doesn't travel at all. Even then, while one is safe and asleep in one's bed, one hears the snow plows going thru Harrington.

Friday's snow was a heavy one. Saturday evening we almost canceled a trip to Rehoboth. We knew the roads would be open, however, thanks to the highway department. With cautious driving, we made it with no difficulty. But between Harrington and Rehoboth we saw a number of snow plows beside the road, waiting, and we said, "If it were not for you we wouldn't be here."

What Price Glory

Charles A. Lindquist, a doctor of philosophy and a top-flight mathematician, became enthusiastic about satellite possibilities in 1954 after he was assigned to the technical feasibility studies office of the Army Ballistic Missile Agency at Huntsville, Ala. Early in 1957 Lindquist began developing a system for computing the orbit of a satellite. His hobby came to fruition with the Explorer launching on the historic night of Jan. 31.

Letter to the Editor Of Local Interest

To the Editor:

It was indeed most enjoyable to see the Talent Scout Program on the TV Sunday evening over station 12.

I did not have the pleasure of seeing the Talent Show at the school but it must have been a great thrill for the parents of the students who took part in this show.

I often travel down memory lane to the days when I attended Felton School, and I think of the many advantages that are given the children who attend our very splendid school.

It is true we were taught the 3 R's, but we did not have the many advantages of today, namely, music, sports, etc. If we had a bean bag to play with during recess, that was a great pleasure to us—no play ground equipment such as our boys and girls have today.

One of my outstanding teachers was Mr. H. V. Holloway, in addition to his aptness in teaching he was kindness personified to those who were fortunate to be one of his pupils. I still have among my treasured possessions a letter from Mr. Holloway in which he offered me a position in his office in Dover as a stenographer, this was after I had graduated from Goldey College—he never forgot when he taught us, and the memory still lingers on.

In my very humble opinion, I think that the citizens of Felton and the surrounding community should be more than pleased to support each and every project that is sponsored by our school.

I am 100% for all the education that can be given our girls and boys.

I shall never forget how pleased our very capable Principal H. E. Henry, looked when he greeted those who cast their vote in order to pass the referendum to have the addition added to our school.

I lived in Wilmington, Del., prior to making Felton our home and the first Memorial Day we were here we went to see the parade. The High School Bands in Wilmington, do not excel our school band which is under the leadership of Mr. Evans. He is par-excellence, and while witnessing that parade I wondered why there were not more out to cheer these boys and girls, if nothing more than to show our appreciation of the great work that has been accomplished by this very capable instructor of music.

Do we as taxpayers realize how much time and patience it takes to develop this talent?

Just to think that two of our teachers would venture a night such as Sunday was to accompany these talent scouts to Wilmington, namely, Mrs. Reed Hughes and Mrs. Clifford Chambers. This real interest is what makes Felton School what it is today—co-operation between the teachers and their pupils.

Felton has no child delinquency problems and I personally attribute this to the faculty of the school.

There is one other thought that I have had in mind, the short time I have lived in Felton and I trust that not too far in the future it will be a dream come true.

During the fall and winter our girls and boys do have the school

Is the Importation of Rabbits The Answer to More Rabbits?

One by one neighboring states have ceased importing mid-western rabbits. This plan to increase rabbit populations has proven to be dangerous, ineffective and far too expensive.

Pennsylvania twenty years ago literally imported rabbits by the tens of thousands. After careful investigations their chief of research reported in 1937 that there was no resulting increase in rabbit populations. Pennsylvania discontinued the practice of importing rabbits and encouraged a program of food and cover development and of trapping and transfer of native cottontails.

New York terminated the practice of importing rabbits in 1939. However, sportsmen's clubs were issued permits for importing the cottontail. "To evaluate the results of such stocking the open season in order to learn what returns might be realized in terms of direct hunter take. Based on data from four representative areas, it was estimated that hunters recovered 8.6 percent of the rabbits stocked during the gunning season. Box-trapping data for portions of two areas indicated a calculated survival into the breeding season a less than 13 percent. The cost of each rabbit shot or surviving into the breeding season was $6.98.

"It was concluded that release of imported rabbits, either during or after the open season, is decidedly uneconomical and that very little improvement in hunting opportunity can be expected for the money spent."

The plight of the cottontail has been carefully studied by the New Jersey Fish and Game Department. "An intensive investigation into the effects of stocking imported cottontails in northern New Jersey was carried out between November 1949 and October, 1954, on four areas of about 100 acres each; Area 1 was not stocked and not hunted; Area 2 was hunted but not stocked; Area 3 was not hunted but was stocked; Area 4 was both hunted and stocked.

"The rate of reproduction by spring survivors was sufficient to insure an abundance of rabbits by fall on all areas, stocked and unstocked, hunted and not hunted.

"Increases in cottontail populations were not obtained by stocking imported rabbits, even as many as 80 per 100 acres. A method which apparently did increase cottontail population was the intelligent use of habitat manipulation."

Arthur Harper, writing in the Ohio Conservation Department's publication "The Cottontail in Ohio" realistically describes the rabbit management problem. His remarks pertain to all states where a larger population of rabbits is desired.

"The fact is that man's efforts to restock rabbits just can't hold a candle to the rabbit's own system. We have seen that if a pair of rabbits has a good place to live with plenty of food and cover, they will increase to about 20 rabbits in one year. Instead of trying to substitute man methods for increasing rabbit population, why not assist the rabbits to do the job for themselves? If they need more food and cover, let's provide it for them. In other words, we can increase the rabbit population in a given area by increasing its carrying capacity, just as a farmer can increase the number of milk cows in a pasture by improving the pasture."

Sussex Has New 4-H Club Agent

James O. Baker, for seven years 4-H Club agent in West Virginia, has been appointed to that position in Sussex County, Wayne Bath, acting state 4-H Club leader, announced.

Baker replaces Mrs. Lester Coleman of Georgetown.

Baker will carry out the 4-H youth portion of the county extension program, working closely with agricultural and home economics specialists with the state extension service. His activities will bring him into close contact with local leaders and club members. One primary duty will be to train local club adult advisors and leaders.

Baker has a degree in general agriculture from West Virginia University, and graduated from East Fairmont High School in that state. The new leader is a native of Fairmont. He served 18 months in the Army's engineer corps, one year of this in Europe. For nine years Baker was a West Virginia 4-H'er.

The 4-H agent is married and has two children. They live in Georgetown.

Methoxychlor Dust Recommended For Hornfly Control

Methoxychlor applied as a dust is now recommended by the U. S. Department of Agriculture as a treatment for control of hornflies on dairy cattle.

T. L. Bissell, University of Agriculture as a treatment for control of hornflies on dairy cattle.

T. L. Bissell, University of Maryland extension entomologist, says the USDA recommendation applies to the dust treatment only. The department does not recommend use of methoxychlor sprays applied to dairy cows for control of hornflies or other insect pests. The insecticide is recommended as a spray for application in dairy barns as a residual treatment for the control of stable flies and houseflies.

The USDA recommendation concerning methoxychlor dust follows the recent decision by the Food and Drug Administration of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare that (1) no residue of methoxychlor is permitted in milk, but (2) there is no objection to the use of methoxychlor on dairy cows if the insecticide is applied that no residue occurs in milk.

Bissell says studies have demonstrated that when methoxychlor is properly applied as a dust treatment to only the backs of dairy cows, no residue of the insecticide occurs in milk. USDA entomologists have found that such a dust treatment provides excellent control of hornflies, one of the most costly pests of dairy cattle.

They recommend applying 1 tablespoon of 50-percent methoxychlor powder to each animal, sprinkling it over the back and rubbing it lightly into the hair. This treatment will provide control of hornflies for about 3 weeks, according to the USDA entomologists. The researchers caution, however, that such methoxychlor dust treatments to the animal will not control lice, other biting flies, the house fly, or ticks.

Spring Pruning Can Improve Quality and Value of Forestland

Early spring—just before the growing season—is the best time to prune trees that are being grown for eventual sale on good timber markets. Whether it pays to prune or not depends upon the general condition of the forest and its trees.

Harry W. Dengler, University of Maryland extension forester, says that pruning is a slow and tedious job, but in an otherwise well-managed forest it helps to produce the large, straight, clear logs that command top prices in timber sales. Local foresters are ready to advise small forest owners on management practices—including pruning and how to go about it.

In general, trees at first pruning should be fairly young, 4 to 6 inches in diameter, so the branches to be taken off will be no more than 2 inches thick. At this age cuts heal fast and leave only small knots, says Dengler. Pruning cuts must be close to the trunk because stubs take too long to heal and may let in rot or insects. Not more than two-thirds of the total height of the tree, nor more than the lower third of the live crown, should be pruned at once. A second pruning in a few years may be necessary to get a clear 16-foot log or, on the best timber, to get long clear poles or two clear logs.

A fairly heavy pruning saw, with a blade 12 to 18 inches long, is the best tool. Pruning high branches with a ladder does the best job, but a pruning saw on a long pole may be safer and more convenient.

In forestry, as in other businesses, high quality products sell easiest and bring the highest prices. Good lumber from large straight clear logs can always command a market, says Dengler, because good timber is scarce. Farmers own one-seventh of the nation's saw timber. Better management would greatly increase the profit possible from these farm woodlands.

Social Security Notes

Numerous women in Delaware have benefited from another change in the social security law that went into effect last September. Many of them had previously filed claims for wives or widows benefits and had been disappointed to discover that they were not entitled to any because they had not been living with their husbands. A recent amendment eliminates this provision and allows a wife to receive benefits based on her husband's account even though they are not living together, and also allows a widow to receive monthly benefits even though she was separated from her husband many years prior to his death.

For instance, several cases have arisen around Wilmington since September of claims that can now be awarded under the law. One woman had been deserted by her husband 10 years ago, and when she first applied for wife's benefits upon reaching 65 she was told she was not eligible. Recently she filed a new claim after hearing of the change in the law, and now receives a monthly check of $44.30 based on her husband's account, even though she has had no contact with him since he left the state.

A young widow stopped into the Dover contract station last month to arrange to have her minor children's check sent to her new address. She herself had never received a widow's benefit because she was separated from her husband before his death. After being advised of her new rights, she filed an application for herself, and now she receives her own monthly check along with her children.

A widow downstate had filed an application last June and her claim was disallowed when it developed that she hadn't lived with her husband for three years prior to his death. She visited the contact station in November, and found that beginning with September, the effective date of this new law, she was entitled to $81.40 monthly.

Other women whose cases are similar to these may also be eligible for monthly benefits now even though they were previously told otherwise. They should present their cases to their local social security office.

Hay May Be Poor Buy, Compared With Other Feeds

Maryland dairymen are finding hay prices much higher this year than usual, and are asking what is the most economical method of feeding under existing grain, forage and milk price ratios.

Robert D. Appleman, University of Maryland Extension dairyman, says that in most cases hay is too high priced to be a profitable buy. By using home grown grains, he says, good concentrate mixes can be fed to the milking herd at price of $60 per ton or lower. When concentrate mixes are available at this price, a dairyman cannot afford to pay more than $35 for a ton of No. 2 grade alfalfa hay. Hays of lesser feeding value, such as the average timothy hay, are worth less than $30 per ton.

Using concentrate mixes at $60 a ton as a standard, Appleman says legume silage is worth about $14 per ton, if it is of high quality so that cows will eat plenty of it. Corn silage that was well-eared when made into silage is worth about $12 per ton. If little grain can be found in the corn silage, its value is lowered about $2 per ton. Grass silage with little legume in it, sorghum silage and non-eared corn silage are all worth about $10 per ton.

It may be wise for dairymen to investigate the possibility of buying silage rather than paying for over-priced hay, according to Appleman.

Small Seasonal Price Rise, Large Carry-Over Seen For Soybeans

Prices farmers receive for soybeans the rest of this marketing season are expected to stay close to the support level. The seasonal increase in prices this year is likely to be small because a large supply of beans is still to be marketed.

Market observers in the University of Maryland department of agricultural economics point out that the difference between the October seasonal low in prices and the seasonal high has been narrowed in recent years because farmers have tended to market later than formerly. This is particularly true with a big 1957 crop. Farmers sold a smaller proportion for early season use than usual. It is estimated that all of 1957-58, 325 million bushels probably will be crushed in the U.S., with another 90 million shipped abroad. This would leave record stocks of around 45 million bushels on hand next October 1, 35 million more than in 1957.

On the production side, the uptrend continued last year as the U. S. farmers planted a record acreage and got record yields that added up to a total of about 480 million bushels. Maryland farmers fell behind the record-setting pace, mainly due to drought. The Maryland crop did not quite total 3 1/2 million bushels. It was almost a million bushels less than the 1956 crop, but more than 2 million bushels larger than the 1946-55 average.

The record 480 million bushels for the national crop is a big increase over the 1946-55 average of 272 million bushels.

In spite of record production, good demand is keeping prices at about the support level. Domestic and export demands have both been heavy, according to the Maryland economists. They report that U. S. soybean processors crushed about 85 million bushels in October-December last year, far above any previous quarter. Exports from Oct. 1 through Jan. 10 totalled about 43 million bushels, 4 million more than peak for that period the previous year.

Trinity Methodist Church Notes

Our all church supper is being offered this week. We begin serving Saturday, at 4 o'clock in Trinity Church. It isn't often we have an opportunity to eat in an atmosphere of congenial company, in church surroundings with colored glass windows. These windows, which had been in bad shape, were cleaned and repaired in December. Now we are putting on this supper in order to raise the money to pay the bill. Suppers are usually the effort of one church organization; but this supper is the united effort of all organizations in Trinity Church, working together for one object: Men's Bible Class, Loyol Workers, MYF, W.S.C.S., O.U.R. Class, Junior Choir Mothers. All the members and friends of Trinity are willingly supporting the work with donations, the purchase of tickets, and work during the actual serving. The committee which heads it is composed of representatives of organizations: Mrs. Grace Miner and Mrs. Orrie Hobbs, Mrs. Gooden Callaway and Mrs. William Shaw, and Sam Williams. It is a pan-fried chicken dinner with trimmings; all the food will be on the table in the form of a buffet supper. The price includes dessert. It begins at 4 and continues until all are served, or until the food is all gone. Dinners will be sent out.

Sunday, after Church School at 10, there is morning worship at 11. At the 11 o'clock service, the anthem is "My God and I" by I. B. Sergei. The Junior Choir will sing "Battle Hymn of the Republic." The pastor's sermon is "I Believe in Man."

In the evening, the MYF meets at 6:30. Evening service at 7:30, when the pastor talks again, this time on church attendance.

Monday at 10, the W.S.C.S. prayer meeting in the church annex.

The W.S.C.S. study course, taught by Mrs. Earl Sylvester, meets Monday evening at the home of Mrs. John Waller. Last week Monday, due to the annual entertainment of the Loyol Workers Class at the home of Mrs. Clyde Miller on Weiner Ave., the study class met Wednesday with Mrs. Ethel Raughley on Clark Street and at 1:30 instead of the usual 7:30.

1958 Kent & Sussex Fair Dates Announced

J. O. Williams, president of the Kent & Sussex Fair Association, has announced that fair dates this year will be July 21-26. Representatives of the Association returned Friday after attending the Central Fair Circuit meetings in Allentown, Pa.

The committee is justly pleased with the show they have been able to procure for the entertainment of the many friends of the fair. In conjunction with the regular vaudeville acts during the week, special attractions on Friday afternoon and evening will be Jimmy Dean star of motion pictures, television and radio. Also appearing will be Pop Eye, the Sailor Man. Saturday night another singing sensation, Dick Todd, will be introduced to this area for the first time. Like his brother, Pat Boone, Dick has crooned his way into the hearts of television audiences all over the country.

4-H Clubs throughout the state have already begun to make preparations for the fair. Other exhibitors have gotten away to an early start in order to be ready for this annual event.

Harness racing will be featured for four days, with the colt stakes carrying excellent purses. The two-year-old events for both gait are worth upwards of $10,000 and the three-year-olds of both gait going for about $7500. This is the fair's 39th year.

Three Experts, Tomato Awards, Exhibits Indicate Farm and Home Week Variety

"Managing a Laying Flock," "When to Irrigate," "Exploration for Water," and "Measurement of Microclimate" are titles that mean little in themselves—but Delaware Farm and Home Week visitors Feb. 11-13 will learn that the exhibits with these titles offer helpful information necessary to the profitable operation of any modern farm.

Modern homemaking is not being forgotten either, as University of Delaware schools of agriculture and home economics staff members are joining hands in putting the final touches to some 30 exhibits designed to interest and help both farm and city people.

The shape of an even bigger pattern than scientific changes explained in exhibits will be unveiled at 11:30 each day of the annual program, when top-ranking experts take over at a general session.

The three-day lineup of speakers is Carroll P. Streeter, editor of Farm Journal, Philadelphia; Robert H. Bingham, vice-president, Grocery Manufacturers of America; and Congressman Harry G. Haskell, Jr.

Streeter's talk should be of particular interest to all farmers and businessmen allied with agriculture. Streeter, editor of the nation's largest farm magazine, is expected to reveal information gathered during extensive traveling in all corners of the country. His topic will be the future of agriculture in the urbanizing northeast.

The impact of this talk could be reflected in the second general session speech Feb. 12, when Bingham observes what the farmer's stake will be in tomorrow's food supply. A bit of speculation here with consideration given to the numbers of farmers dropping out of agriculture each year could provoke imaginative thinking. This same situation could be the case when Congressman Haskell speaks on the subject "How Small Our World" Feb. 13.

A special event of interest to all tomato growers is slated Feb. 13, when 15-Ton Tomato Club awards will go to several growers. Gov. J. Caleb Boggs is expected to present the awards. Last year 10 tons of fruit per acre qualified a grower for an award. Improved cultural practices helped jump the harvest of so many growers above 10 tons that it was decided by club authorities to increase the requirement to 15 tons. The decision also was based on increasing production costs lessening profit from a 10-ton harvest.

First three winners last year were Camden grower Hans Steffens, 26 tons per acre; Samuel Walker of S. H. Derby and Co., Woodside, 25 and one-half tons; and Carl Sytnik, Townsend, nearly 24 tons per acre.

Specialists will round out the three-day event at Agricultural Hall, Newark, with talks on livestock, crops and fertilizers, dairying, fruit production, poultry, vegetables, and home economics. One special program Feb. 11 will include the pros and cons of irrigation and the future of agriculture.

Offers Recommendations for Peas

Recommendations for this coming season's crop of peas were offered today by George Vapaa, county agricultural agent, as he discussed soils, lime, rotation, land preparation, fertilization, time of planting, insect and weed control.

He suggested choosing well-drained soil containing as much organic matter as possible. The soil should be relatively sweet, with a pH of 6.5.

Good land preparation is essential. Work ground until it is smooth and level. Rough ground may cause a poor stand. Mr. Vapaa added that rotation is a necessity to prevent diseases like root rot. A five-year rotation is best.

Plow down 200 to 300 pounds of cyanamid one week to 10 days before planting, the agent continued. Drill deep 800 pounds of 10-10-10 just before planting. If five tons of poultry manure are applied per acre, omit the cyanamid and apply 900 pounds of 10-10-10.

The planting season in Delaware starts in late February and ends in early April. The processor will suggest the planting date using the heat unit system as a guide. Seeding rates vary with the variety. Alaska is usually seeded at five to five and one-quarter bushels per acre. Large seeded sweet peas are usually planted as near six bushels as possible. The suggestion was to calibrate drills carefully before seeding and to pull the drill at about three m.p.h. Planting depth will vary with the time of planting and the soil moisture. One to one and one-quarter inches for early planting and up to one and three-quarter inches for later planting on light soil was advised.

Aphids are usually the most troublesome pest on peas, Mr. Vapaa noted. Examine the growing points of the vines frequently to determine aphid abundance.

They may appear at any stage of growth.

Weeds often cause a loss of yield. Check the field carefully when the peas are about two inches high. If weed control is necessary, apply a dinitro spray of three pints in 30 to 60 gallons of water. Spray when peas are three to eight inches tall and weeds are one to two inches tall. Do not spray if the temperature is over 80 degrees. The best temperature is 60 to 80 degrees, the agent concluded.

Delaware to Host Meeting of Farm Managers, Rural Appraisers Next Week

Delaware will host the annual winter meeting of the Northeast Society of Farm Managers and Rural Appraisers Feb. 11 and 12, with the society taking in part of the Farm and Home Week program in Agricultural Hall, Newark.

John J. O'Donnell, society secretary-treasurer, Doylestown, Pa., announced the group will hear talks Feb. 11 at two farm and home week sessions. General session speaker Carroll P. Streeter, editor of Farm Journal, Philadelphia, with a discussion that morning of agriculture's future in the urbanizing northeast, is first.

The society that afternoon will hear speakers make observations on tomorrow's farming. Leading off the program will be Dean George M. Worriolow, University of Delaware school of agriculture, scheduled to predict future changes in state agriculture. Dr. Joseph Ackerman, managing director, Farm Foundation, Chicago, will extend the discussion beyond the state when he predicts needs for tomorrow's agriculture—including people, money and technology.

Irrigation a topic of prime interest to Delaware farmers, will be the subject of three speakers on the program. Dr. D. J. Fieldhouse, university horticulture researcher, will consider whether irrigation is necessary. Dr. J. G. Groot, state geologist, will speak on irrigation in regard to the state's water supply. W. T. McAllister, extension farm management specialist at the university, will take the farm manager's point of view in his discussion of irrigation costs, whether it will pay, and in what circumstances.

A final speaker that evening, Frank D. Hansing, U. S. Department of Agriculture, will compare Delaware's broiler industry with other producing areas. He will talk at a business meeting at the Dover Hotel.

A stop that afternoon will be at the university's 200-acre experimental hay farm near Middletown. The next day stops are scheduled in the heart of the state's broiler area. Society members will visit the integrated broiler business of Townsend's Inc., Millsboro; Murray's Feed Service, Frankford, to see a new push-button feed mill; an independent broiler grower; and the Eastern Shore Broiler Grower's Exchange, Selbyville.

The society is a professional organization of men actively engaged in farm management and rural appraising or closely allied fields.

Improperly Placed Fertilizer May Hurt Corn Seeding

Farmers who use more fertilizer and a higher analysis fertilizer at corn planting time than they did a few years ago may be overdue for a change in the way they apply the fertilizer.

When a heavy dose of fertilizer and a seed are placed right together in the soil, the seed is in great danger of being damaged by the salts that result when the fertilizer starts to dissolve.

This wasn't so important on most farms a few years ago, according to Dr. Frank Bentz of the University of Maryland agronomy department. He says that when it was the general practice to use only a small amount of low analysis fertilizer at planting time it didn't really matter too much where the fertilizer was placed—whether directly over the seed, under it or right with it. As the fertilizer went into solution, the plant roots got some of it and the plant benefited.

It's a different story now, with heavy applications of high analysis fertilizer. If the fertilizer is placed directly over the seed, the tiny leaves of the sprouting seedling may run into the heavy concentration of chemical, and go no further. If fertilizer is placed directly under the seed, the roots may run into a fatal concentration of salts. And if the fertilizer is placed right with the seed, chances are against the seed ever germinating.

"Logic suggests that the best spot to place the fertilizer is a little below and a little off to the side of the seed," says Dr. Bentz. "And tests have shown that's exactly right. By placing the fertilizer band about 1-inch below and 2-inches to the side of the seed, it's far enough away so it doesn't damage the seed, and yet it's close enough so the tiny roots can reach the nutrients within a few days."

The soil scientist says fertilizer placement attachments that do this kind of job are available from machinery dealers for most corn planters.

Sudan and Millet Capable Of Doing Better Jobs

Reputations as "emergency" crops are probably keeping sudan grass and millet from doing the jobs they are capable of doing for many farmers. In many cases, these crops are planted late in the season and then only when the weather is so dry that other forage crops are already hurt.

It's nice to know there is an old stand by like this in time of need. But Charles P. Ellington, University of Maryland department of agronomy, thinks we could get a lot more out of the crops if we planted some acreage to one of them every year, as a regular part of the cropping system.

He points out that if the weather should turn dry in summer, the sudan or millet will already be there with a head start if planted at the right time. If the season is normal, on the other hand, one of these crops can still do a good job. Most other pastures slump to some degree during midsummer, even in good years. Sudan and millet not only fill this gap, but can be grazed throughout the season, up until frost. The crops are better utilized if the field is divided into three or four areas which are grazed in rotation.

Ellington's recommendations for growing the crops include these main points: (1) Prepare a good seed bed. (2) Broadcast fertilizer (probably something like 10-10-10, depending on soil tests), and disk it in. (3) Seed with either a cultipacker seeder or grain drill, being careful not to plant the seed too deeply. (4) Plant about 10 days after corn planting time. (5) Plant a recommended variety—either Ripper, Tit of Sweet sudan; or common pearl millet.

About one-third of an acre of one of these crops is usually considered sufficient, along with other pastures. Ellington stresses that sudan or millet should be used as a supplement to perennial pastures and hay crops, rather than the main center of forage production.

State Turkey Growers Plan Fewer Birds

Delaware turkey growers plan to reduce 1958 production by 30 per cent, compared with the output last year, according to agricultural statisticians of the U. S. Department of Agricultural at College Park, Maryland.

If growers' intentions are realized, the report said, heavy breed production will be down about one-third compared with 1957, and light breeds down about 29 per cent. Total production in 1958, based on intentions as of Jan. 1, will be 453,000 birds. Production last year was 647,000, the report added.

Much the same prospect was reported for Maryland, but not so sharp a reduction was indicated by growers. Growers there indicated raising 2 per cent fewer birds in 1958 than in 1957. The statistician's Jan. 1 survey revealed an expected 362,000 birds this year, compared with 464,000 in 1957. A 12 per cent reduction in heavy breeds was noted along with a 40 per cent decline for light breeds.

If United States growers carry out their intentions, about 81 million turkeys will be raised this year, the report said. Last year production was 80.6 million. North Central and Western region growers plan increases of three to four per cent, while North and South Atlantic and South Central area growers plan decreases of five to seven per cent. Intentions reported for heavy breeds mean an increase of three per cent, light breeds an 11 per cent reduction.

The report from College Park said the number of United States turkeys actually raised in 1958 may vary somewhat from Jan. 1 intentions, the difference depending on prices of feed, supply and prices of hatching eggs and poults, and the sale of turkeys remaining in growers' hands. In 1957 growers raised four per cent fewer turkeys than intended on Jan. 1.

During 1957, the report continued, there was an ample supply of poults throughout the hatching season. Feed supplies were plentiful and prices worked lower through the season.

Acreage Signup Deadline Changed to February 20

The closing date for filing corn and spring wheat acreage reserve agreements has been changed to Feb. 20, according to an announcement by George C. Simpson, Houston farmer and chairman of the Delaware Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee.

Simpson noted today that the closing date had been set for March 7. Agreements may not be withdrawn by producers after the new February closing date, he explained. The unexpected heavy signup indicates desired participation may exceed funds now available, the chairman added.

However, Simpson continued, the new closing date will permit an earlier determination of the amount of any unused state allocation available for transfer to states where additional funds are needed.

Agreements have been signed in Delaware to take up all the present allocation of $746,200.

Interested farmers not signed up may enroll the county ASC office with the understanding that if more money becomes available after Feb. 20 agreements can be made on a first-come-first-served basis, Simpson said.

He stated that a producer cannot receive more than $3,000 on any farm unit.

Student Council News
The Student Council held a meeting January 28.
The Kent County Student Council Valentine's Dance will be held at Smyrna High School on February 15 from 9 to 12. Faye Spicer is selling tickets to the dance. The prices are $1 a person and $1.50 for a couple. No tickets will be sold at the door.

Trouble developed at the last school dance so the Student Council has taken measures to keep it from happening again. The boy who was responsible for shooting firecrackers has been barred from the next three dances. Dance cards will be strictly checked at the door. If someone outside of school is brought in as a guest, the student and the guest will have to sign in at the door. If they make trouble, the student's dance card will be taken away, and the guest will be barred from all future dances.

The Student Council hopes that the students will co-operate with them by bringing in only guests that will not cause trouble. If any trouble arises again, the school may not be allowed to have dances any longer.

Letter to the Editor

Delaware Schools Face a Problem

The question has been asked as to whether or not our district could or would carry our educational program at local cost in the event the legislature curtailed our funds. Inasmuch as this would materially raise our taxes, I suggested that it could not be done. To this end the present legislative suggestion that the unit be raised from 20 to 25 pupils for the secondary school (grades 7 to 12) and from 25 to 30 pupils for the elementary school, (grades 1-6) cuts deeper than appears on the surface. It does not mean that a teacher would carry 25 or 30 pupils, but would change the entire school structure.

We are getting our money allocations on the basis of 20 elementary and 25 high school pupils at present. With these means our class groups run anywhere from 22 to 34 in the elementary school and the home room groups in the high school from 17 to 34.

We are carrying seven teachers who do not have home rooms because these are the ones that are not counted to determine the unit. For the sake of argument we will say they are the Agriculture, Music, Art, Manual Arts, Librarian, Commercial, and the Guidance or the Home Economics teachers. Can you visualize a school not offering these materials or subjects?

Our enrollment as of January 31, 1958, is 591 in the elementary schools and 321 in the high schools. These numbers, with the unit requirements standing at 20 and 25, will give 40 units or 40 teachers. To this has been added two additional teachers for our special classes and two for the educable classes in the Armory by special appropriation.

Should we choose to carry on the present basis without the full state help we would be required to raise an additional $39,676. This is the amount we would lose or what would be needed to hold the seven teacher units. This would require an additional tax load of seventy-seven cents (.77) which added to fifty-five cents (.55), the present rate, would bring the real estate rate to one dollar and thirty-two cents ($1.32). Our present tax has an additional $7.00 capitation tax for our local and debt service requirements.

Twenty-five pupils is an acceptable load. Thirty should be the maximum in any class in the elementary school. A teacher will be little more than a child nurse and our system will be entirely on the negative side when the classes are overloaded. In our present set-up our largest class has 34 pupils which is not too acceptable.

A united front on the part of the community should be presented, and our legislators should be kept informed of our need, as well as of our hopes for the welfare of our children.

Kindly weigh and consider these facts and govern yourself accordingly.

Yours,
J. C. Messner

Drivers Hurt In Dover Crash

Three men were hurt, none seriously, in a collision at the intersection of U. S. Routes 13 and 113-A just outside Dover Friday night.

State police said both drivers claimed they had the green light, and investigators have been unable to determine which one is telling the right story.

Injured were the drivers, James H. Clough, 28, of Wyoming, and James N. Adams, 27, of Greenwood, and a passenger in Clough's car, 26-year-old Wilbert Downes of Camden.

Clough suffered a lip laceration, Adams brush burns and chest injuries, and Downes a laceration on the left side of the face. They were treated at the Kent General Hospital in Dover, where they were taken in the Dover ambulance. Adams' wife, a passenger in his car, was unhurt.

Blown Transformer Curtails Power

Part of Harrington was without electric power some hours Tuesday when a transformer blew out at Mechanic and Fleming Streets.

Partial service was restored in a few hours, but complete service was not restored until late in the afternoon.

The blowing out of the transformer, a few minutes before 9 a. m., affected current on Fleming Street and Weiner Avenue to Center Street, The First National Bank, and the block surrounded by Mechanic, Commerce, and Fleming Streets.

In the block was The Harrington Journal, which had to curtail operations, and the shirt factory of George A. Sherwin which dismissed its employees in mid-morning.

Williams Tosses Hat Into Ring

U. S. Senator John J. Williams, in a telegram to The Harrington Journal Wednesday, stated he would be a candidate for re-election this year, striving for his third term.

He said: "This is the last year of my elected term and I have decided to announce my candidacy for re-election to the United States Senate. On two previous occasions the Republican party nominated me and the people of Delaware were good enough to elect me to this position. In again soliciting the support of the voters of our state my only promise is that if re-elected I will continue to recognize my position as a public trust and to the best of my ability will continue to work for good government and to support those policies which I consider to be in the best interest of our country and our state."

Trinity Methodist Church Notes

Mrs. A. M. B. Snapp gave a fascinating talk on family life in Japan, to our Woman's Society of Christian Service meeting Tuesday. The Rev. Snapp, now pastor of the Methodist Church in Wyoming, was formerly a chaplain stationed with U. S. forces in Japan. While living in Japan, the Snapps collected many interesting costumes and other Japanese items. Mrs. Snapp worked in the Christian-sponsored kindergartens. After the lecture, and a period of admiring the Rev. and Mrs. Snapp's beautiful Japanese collections, coffee, cherry tarts, and candy were served.

Following the social hour, the W.S.C.S. held a business meeting. Among other items of business, the society voted to raise their missionary giving for next year, and to pay $500 towards the church redecorating fund. This is to be added to the $50 paid by the MYF and the proceeds of the pan-fried chicken supper sponsored by the whole church Sat., Feb. 8.

March of Dimes Closes Monday

The March of Dimes campaign for Harrington, Farmington and vicinity will definitely close on Monday, Feb. 10. The receipt of $176.54 from the pupils and faculty of Harrington Special School District, of which $28.71 came from the P. S. DuPont School, brings a total contribution of approximately $1000.00 as of Monday, Feb. 3. This figure is $400 short of our district's average for the past 12 years and it is noted that a number of past years contributors have not contributed to date.

The committee would appreciate your help in this great cause to enable the National and County Foundations for Infantile Paralysis to continue to help the 70,000 victims of crippling polio. Leave your contributions at the First National and Peoples banks not later than Monday.
