Scouts See Snow in W. Va.

Explorer Post No. 76 with William Walls and Roland Hitchens as advisers, has just returned from a three-day camping trip in the mountains of West Virginia. Snow was encountered on route and camp was pitched in the midst of the storm. Early morning Saturday, found the weather clear but with ice in the water buckets, making the morning wash-up a very brisk affair.

A hike up the mountains was the order of the day, with the troop being able to observe grouse, deer, and viewing the splendor of the country side. It is from experiences such as this that our young boys learn. not only the fundamentals of camping, but also self-reliance, co-operation, respect, and know ledge of both nature and man

Harvest more corn . . . cut field losses . . . by planning your harvest when you plant. You'll find it's a mighty profitable move! Here's how P-A-G's planned harvest program works: you plant short season hybrids first and work up to full season hybrids. The early varieties are ready to pick as early as September. Varied hybrid maturities allow continuous harvesting when

The most important part of the whole plan is the right hybrids. P-A-G dealers have the hybrids . . . and the corn-growing knowhow to help plan your program. See us soon for the full story.

Kick the question marks out of your soybean fields

Kick out the question marks, eliminate the unnecessary risks from your soybean operation. Plant Southern States Soybean Seeds, and steer clear of "over-the-fence" seeds. You can't afford their many question marks. Why take needless chances on variety mixing that cuts your yield ... low germination that reduces your stand . . . weeds that plague you for years to come. No question marks in Southern States Soybean Seeds. They give you maximum profits. See your Southern States Cooperative Agency now.
