Old Law Revived in Kent; 45 Fence Viewers Named

Kent County has 45 new officials as the Superior Court has honored an old law.

The judges appointed 45 fence viewers as called for in Delaware law—and as long as one justice can recall, they've never before been appointed.

Judge William J. Storey said Monday he can't remember ever making any fence viewer appointments in the last six years. The role of a fence viewer as written in Delaware Code is to judge fence disputes involving livestock between neighboring farmers.

According to the law, the Superior Court judges "shall annually appoint not more than eight nor less than five persons in each hundred to be fence viewers."

Judge Storey said the appointments probably would have been made anyway but he noted that he received a couple of calls from farmers about the viewers following publicity about them in the News-Journal papers.

The judges agreed on the appointments—five to a district—and filed them with the prothonotary's office May 2.

Delaware has some strict laws about fences but old English common law requires that the fences be "pig tight, horse high and bull strong."

Those appointed are: Duck Creek Hundred—James

Clark Jr., George E. Bryson, Harry C. Johnson, Elmer Pratt and Arthur Rusby, all of Smyrna.

Little Creek Hundred — N. Lee Remley, Cheswold; Roy S. Hand, Little Creek; W. J. Short, Samuel J. Fox Jr. and Howard Rawley, all of Leipsic.

Kenton Hundred — Norman D. Shorts, Welfare Home, Smyrna; W. Frank Fleming, Clayton; Joseph H. Simpson, Clayton; Frank W. Ryan, near Brenford, and Dudley Crossley, Clayton.

West Dover Hundred — Roger E. Davis, Hartly; Isaac Thomas, Marydel; Olin J. Phillips, Hartly; J. Wesley Walls Sr., Marydel; Fred Williams, Hartly. East Dover Hundred — Ralph C. Wilson, John F. McDonald Jr., George J. Pyott, Fred C. Lord and Harry R. Jackson, all of Dover.

North Murderkill Hundred — Ralph W. Wine, Woodside; E. S. Knight, Wyoming; E. Stephen Townsend Jr., Camden; Edward J. Kelly, Camden; Charles R. Brown, near Wyoming.

South Murderkill Hundred — John C. Darby, Frederica; Charles N. Webb, Frederica; Nelson M. Hammond, Felton; Peter Nechay, near Sandtown; J. Harold Schabinger, Felton.

Mispillion Hundred — R. W. Vane, Harrington; Orville Fry, Farmington Road; William W. O'Shaw, Harrington; Frank C. Neal Jr., near Harrington; and John F. Abbott, Harrington.

Milford Hundred — McKinley W. Maloney, Thompsonville; Charles D. Dutton, near Milford; Burton D. Willis, Lynch Heights; Emory N. Lynch Jr., Milford; James H. Latchum, Milford.

Kates - Scott

The wedding of Sandra Lee Kates, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willis E. Kates, to Harold Leslie Scott, son of Mrs. Dorothy Scott and Mr. Louis Scott, took place on Friday evening, May 31, at 7:30 o'clock in Trinity Methodist Church, Harrington.

The double-ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Charles H. Poushik. The wedding music was played by Melvin Brobst. The church was decorated with palms, candelabras, white gladioli and pompons.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length gown of white chantilly lace and nylon tulle over taffeta. The sculptured lace bodice featured a portrait neckline with lace applique in iridescent and long tapering sleeves of lace. The bouffant skirt featured banded lace and lace appliques with the back panels of the gown having alternate tiers of lace and tulle. Her finger-tip veil of nylon tulle fell from lace petals embroidered in pearls and iridescents. She carried white orchids attached to a white satin bow.

Miss Dawn Bowman, of Greensboro, Md., was maid of honor. She wore a ballerina-length gown of yellow lace over taffeta, styled with a molded bodice and a bouffant skirt. With this she chose white accessories. Her cascade bouquet was of yellow and white pompons.

Richard Scott was his brother's best man. Ushers were Edgar Layton and Darwin Kates, brother of the bride.

The mother of the bride wore a silk sheath dress of aqua and orchid with white accessories. She wore a white rosebud corsage.

The bridegroom's mother wore a silk sheath dress of beige and brown with matching accessories. Her corsage was of white rosebuds.

Following the wedding, a reception was held at the Harrington New Century Club.

After their wedding trip, the couple will reside at Pine View Farms near Harrington.

Loretta Paskey To Retire as Principal

Miss Loretta J. Paskey, principal of the Harrington Elementary School here for the past two and one-half years, has requested that she be retired at the end of the 1963 school year.

Miss Paskey, a graduate of Harrington High School, holds a B. S. degree from Teachers College, Columbia University, and a master's degree from the University of Delaware. Her work in administration and supervision was taken at the University of Delaware and the University of Vermont.

Originally a grade school teacher, she taught the fifth grade in the local district, later transferring to the high school as teacher of history and biology. This position she held until her retirement in 1959. However, in 1960 she agreed to come back and teach in the Junior and Senior High School. In January of 1961 she was selected as the elementary principal, a position which she has efficiently served ever since.

It has been announced that Solomon Markowitz, presently the principal of the Frederica School, will replace Miss Paskey this July.

Mr. Markowitz has lived most of his life in Kent County. He holds a master's degree with 30 additional graduate credits from the University of Delaware, and has had 17 years teaching experience, 11 of which he served as principal of the Lincoln School, and the last four years as principal of Frederica School. Mr. Markowitz is married and has three daughters who attend Felton School.

New Boss, Machines In Tax Unit

Kent County's tax office got a new boss and some new machines Tuesday.

Dorsey Torbert was sworn in as new county treasurer and receiver of taxes replacing Thomas C. Robbins.

Robbins is going out of office after eight years of service. Within an hour after Torbert was sworn in by Chief Justice Charles L. Terry, of the Delaware Supreme Court, the Kent Levy Court approved purchase of three business machines to modernize his office.

The step is in line with Levy Court plans to modernize county operations. The tax office and Board of Assessment office are first in line.

Torbert, elected, last November, had to wait until the first Tuesday of this month to take office under the Delaware Code.

The new machines are one Burroughs dual printing and billing and accounting machine, $7,415.20; and two Burroughs cash receiving machines, $1,334.

Levy Court President James B. Messick said delivery is expected around July 1, in time to help with tax bills.

In the Levy Court's Tuesday session the county capitation list was reviewed and all taxes considered uncollectable culled out.

These will be published in each district of the county for two weeks, Messick said.

In other action the Levy Court swore in Kent County's sixth and seventh special constables, Henry Heller and Robert J. Donze, both of Dover.

Navy Advises June Grads To Apply Early

Frank J. Markert, CSI, USN of the U. S. Navy Recruiting Station, Dover, announced this week that most of the Navy's Technical Training Schools have open seats for qualified June graduates. Recruiter Markert said that the many openings in these schools generally occur each year during June, due to the fact that many of the past year's graduates have already been enlisted. All past graduates, thinking about completing their military obligation, as well as obtaining the best technical training one can receive, are advised to contact the local recruiting office during the near future in order to take advantage of recent openings.

All forthcoming June graduates desiring a specific High School Graduate Training Program should make their application now in order to reserve a spot in their chosen field, regardless of the day and month they plan on entering the Navy to complete their obligation.

Nine H.H.S. Students to Attend Music Camp

When the Delaware Music Camp opens at Wesley College in Dover Sunday, June 16, the above nine Harrington High School students will be registering for the one week of musical activities.

The chorus will again be directed by Robert E. Page, of Temple University. Mr. Page just completed appearances with his Temple University Chorus when they performed with Eugene Ormandy and the Philadelphia Orchestra in performances of Bach's "Easter Oratorio" and Beethoven's "Christ on the Mount of Olives."

The orchestra will also be directed by the director of last year, William Smith, assistant to Eugene Ormandy and the Philadelphia Orchestra. He will be coming to Dover immediately after a tour with a string ensemble composed of first desk men of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra.

The boys and girls who will be performing under such direction will be fortunate indeed to have such an opportunity and will be providing a rare opportunity to play great music under top directors.

At the close of the week on Saturday night, June 22, in the Dover auditorium, a concert by the chorus, orchestra, and instrumental ensembles, will be given, to which the public is invited without charge.

Each of the students from Harrington will be going to the Music Camp on a partial scholarship provided by the following community organizations: Harrington Lions' Club, the American Legion Auxiliary, the Parent-Teachers Association, and the Mothers' Auxiliaries from Trinity and Asbury Methodist Churches.

WHY EDITORS GET GRAY

The following letter was purported to have been written to the Plainville Times (state unknown). The letter to the editor is self-explanatory: "Dear Editor, Please send me a free copy of your newspaper containing the obituary of my aunt. Also publish the enclosed clipping of the marriage of my niece. And I wish you would mention it in your column, if it doesn't cost anything, that I have two bull calves for sale, and our church is having a chili supper. Tickets are 75 cents. As my subscription is out, please stop the paper as times are too hard to waste money on newspapers."

Maybe it's letters like that that create "smog."

OUR COMPLIMENTS

We don't know his name—but our compliments to the author who not long ago wrote, "Ten things I Wish I Had Known Before I Was 21." Here they are:

- What I was going to do for a living—exactly what my life's work would be.
That my health after 30 depended in a large degree on what I put into my stomach before I was 21.
How to take care of money.
The commercial asset being neatly and sensibly dressed.
That habits are mighty hard to change after you're 21.
That worth-while things require time, patience and work.
That the world would give me just about what I deserved.
That a thorough education not only pays better wages than hard labor, but it brings the best of everything else.
The value of absolute truthfulness in everything.
That my parents weren't old fogies after all.
To this list we would add one other thing we'd like to have known. We would like to have known that we could have attained much more wisdom had we not assumed that we already had plenty of it.

BIGGER THAN BOTH?

A subject that is attracting quite a bit of conversation lately around the coffee counters and on the street corners concerns the formation of a citizens' ticket for the city council positions, with more and more people asserting that the talk should be backed up with positive action.

Last year at about this time we understand that some effort was made to form a citizens' slate, but those concerned with the idea possibly waited too late to get something underway.

When you look at small town politics objectively, the eternal grab for party power is rather ridiculous. So what is the big deal about having a Republican or Democratic majority around the council table? Is there really that much glory connected with the job?

It is difficult enough for a small town to move forward, what with sometimes limited funds and the occasional nonprogressive element that handcuffs all efforts to boost the community. The entrance of petty political influence has no place in the management of a city's affairs.

A leader of one of the parties volunteered the idea to us that a citizens' ticket is the only way, and it's time to get it started. He suggested that a town meeting be called as soon as possible to at least see how much interest there is in this movement.

We think that more qualified men would be willing to run for the council if they knew they would be divorced of any political affiliation. And this should lead to the hiring of city employees on the basis of their abilities rather than what party they are a member of. Obviously there would be many other advantages.

We have no particular quarrel with the two-party system, but apparently we're not alone in the belief that a citizens' ticket is worth a try. What do you think?

FREE MEALS FROM YOUR YARD

by Carrington H. Burgess

Troubled with pestiferous weeds in your yard?

Why not kill two birds with one stone?

Some of the most prevalent lawn pests are excellent for salads and cooked greens. Just this week I had a salad of dandelions and had cooked greens of dandelions, pokeweeds, and lambsquarter, all from our lawn and backyard.

When one considers that all flora and fauna were once wild, it makes sense to presume that many wild plants have food value. Some are gradually being domesticated and sold commercially.

Dandelions, for example, are raised and their prices quoted on the Philadelphia market.

Pokeweed is sold on the King Street market, Wilmington, peddled from house to house in the cities, and canned commercially in the South.

The pokeweed, forming a part of the mixture we cooked for greens this week, came from next to a corner of the house. If we keep it cut back, it will furnish greens until frost. We have cooked and put quite a bit in the freezer compartment of the refrigerator. Years ago we heard of a Wilmingtonian who put it into his freezer.

Pokeweed is plentiful. However, I got most of ours in a woods area near the 7th green at Shawnee Country Club, Milford. I also harvest narrow dock at the same place. I then tote the bag while I play the penultimate and final holes.

Pokeweed is so tender it can be cut, stalks and all, a foot high. The berries make good wine and the roots will cure colic in chickens, we have been told.

Getting back to our yard, we also have plantain, which makes a good green, while in the back yard there is some wild lettuce.

Sourgrass, small thistles, and wild mustard also make good greens. Of course, in the early spring, wintercress is another good green.

With the recent heavy rain, one can find the succulent mushroom in the lawns. I found a few in ours and cooked them. They were so small; however, one would starve to death eating them. I ate them because a previous occupant of our house did. Before I did, however, we checked them out from an encyclopedia.

Now for a few other edible, wild plants, viz.—elderberry blossoms, ground cherries, violet leaves, the green shoots of the carrion flower, young shoots of the pasture-break (fern) and cinnamon fern, burdock roots and stems, rootstock and young flower head of the cattail, tubers of the Jerusalem artichoke, young milkweed pods, and the tubers of groundnuts.

ADVERTISING vs. ENGLISH

The poor old English language really takes its lumps here in America. For generations now it had to fight from being turned into gibberish by the slang-makers and today it is engaged in mortal combat with the advertising industry.

New "words" and the misuse of old words are becoming so common in advertising that people hardly pay any attention to them. What's more, these words seldom have any real meaning and, therefore, no real reason for existence except to impress the less critical, to make them believe they are being offered something unique.

Two such words have appeared recently to cause particular irritation. First, an insurance company says it offers family "security." The word does not appear in any of the standard dictionaries. To be charitable, we must assume they are trying to say security. At the same time, the ring of the word could also be related to secure as to gain possession of. Thus, family security service would mean they will go out and get a family for you if you want one.

The other word that has been bothering us is the one used by the manufacturer of a washday product who says his product does more than does an ordinary detergent because it contains five "laudratives." Again, to be charitable, we presume he means that it contains five additives to help it do better laundering but the crime he committed here in trying to say that is unforgivable and should be punishable with a five year sentence in an alphabet soup factory. On the other hand, he might feel too much at home, in an alphabet soup factory because there, too, the letters of the alphabet fall into incongruous combinations that have no meaning in our language.

The advertising industry may not know it but it has a beautiful tool in the English language to work with in hawking its wares. One would think that the admen would take better care of it, keep it polished and shiny, rather than try to beat it to death every time they try to write a new ad.

Let's hope that someday they mature enough to learn to take better care of their treasures.

The Florissant (Mo.) Reporter

LAWMAKERS AND CRITICISM

Said Ben Franklin—if all printers were determined not to print anything until they were sure it would offend nobody, there would be very little printed.

That's the only consolation we can give the poor, misunderstood legislators who are bemoaning the unjust criticisms they have received from various scribes. Their threat to forbid liquor advertising in the papers doesn't worry us very much—the grog interests are notorious for their lack of generosity to us small fry.

Mark Twain once wrote about the Hawaiian legislature: "Somebody got up and proposed an absolutely absurd something or other and a half dozen others discussed it with windy vehemence for an hour. The rest of the house listened in silent patience and then a sensible man showed the foolishness of the matter in five sentences, and the measure died. So it goes. In Wisconsin a legislator listening to a discussion on fixing a penalty for arson, suggested that when a man committed this damnable outrage he should be either hung or required to marry the girl."

Concerning the slings and arrows thrown at congressmen and legislators hearken to these observations:

If Congress quickly puts through a program of legislation asked by the administration it is a rubber-stamp Congress. If it fails to do so it is an obstructionist Congress.

If it passes too many new bits of legislation it is a busybody; if the number of bills passed is small it is a do-nothing Congress.

If the members spend considerable time on junkets or with the folks back home they are criticized for not tending to the business of law making. If they stay in Washington too long they are accused of being out of touch with the folks back home.

If they too closely follow the wishes of the people of their district they are being provincial and neglecting the general interest of their country. If they do not reflect the sentiments of their constituents they are taken to task for flaunting the will of the voters.

If they adhere strictly to the political party line they are party hacks but if they don't they are political mavericks.

If they yield to any pressure group they are called the captives of the lobbyists but if they oppose legislation in which a strong pressure group is interested they are branded as an enemy of the group and a foe to progress.

If they spend a lot of time debating a bill they are called a bunch of windbags but if they push legislation through with little or no debate they are accused of using steamroller tactics.

When this country adopted a representative form of government under a written constitution it was not seeking the most efficient type of rule but rather the type that would be most responsible to the people.

By its very nature Congress is and ought to be a cross section of all the people of the United States. Senators will nearly always reflect the attitudes of their states and representatives will mirror the people of their districts.

There may be times when we think congressmen should speak with one voice and reflect the national interest rather than the interest of the part of it they represent.

But until the people want to speak in one voice and submerge their own interests and desires to those of the common good there will be no unanimity in Congress. But then if the people ever reach such a high state of perfection there will be little need for government in any form except in the fields of international relations and national security.

The same applies to the legislature.

Letter to the Editor

MOVE TO AFRICA

I must have been successful in disputing Mr. Errigo's effort to restrict the use of the word "Negro" as support was rushed to him in tonight's paper. A letter signed: "Jane K. Conrad" commended "Attorney Errigo's stand" then proceeded to imply that I was less than perfect.

As she doubtless expresses the feelings of so many, let's get the record straight. In the past, I helped the Negro when he was down but he has changed; and so have I.

Few are inclined to put the welfare of the nation ahead of their own individual "rights." Many years ago, I made a few enemies by advocating elimination of the color line in the Dover Library. I was one of five who started the colored recreation center at the Knights of Pythias Hall on Queen Street. Later, it was absorbed by the new W.P.A., expanded and gradually evolved into the present Y.M.C.A.

During the Milford "incident" over school integration, Bryant Bowles had Kent and Sussex Counties in a frenzy until he was stopped. On the witness stand, he blamed me for stopping him. At that time, I was a hero to the Negroes and their allies.

Today, judging from the Conrad letter, I am in the Negroes dog house. That is all right; I will be farther in it soon. But remember this: the real friend of the Negro is not the politician who kids him along in order to get his vote.

Now back to the Conrad letter: "... Negroes were brought to this country forcibly to provide cheap labor in the South..." In Africa, there is the quaint custom of selling captives as slaves. Our negro slaves were sold by other Negroes. Furthermore, it should be remembered that the North as well as the South bought slaves. In time, Northerners discovered there was more money in buying, transporting and selling slaves than in keeping them. So don't allow the do-gooders from New England and Pennsylvania to act too sanctimoniously about us "bigots who oppose mass inte-

Again: "... African culture had a family system which provided..." for the elderly people on whom we look as a burden. It might be a superior system, but not for me. In Africa, Negroes eat the weak and elderly. That is why even in the 20th Century, old Negroes in Africa are scarce.

Again: "Curiosity prompts me as to how many Negroes Mr. Layton has hired on other than a menial basis?" The answer is: Very few and, after half a century's experience, I have little faith in it."

Another quotation from the Conrad letter, and enough for now:

"And that is all the Negroes are asking... the opportunity to be citizens of our country." What this "request" really means can be judged by an authoritative report in the Herald Tribune: The Negro want to be "a full American entitled to all rights, privileges and equal enjoyment of opportunities, and all the rest without having to earn these and without having to prove himself."

Was not this country founded on the earnings of the American Colonists? Imagine their privations as they sailed for weeks on small ships across the Atlantic or trudged Westward over the mountains with rifle, axe and plowshare. George Washington, and others as well, exchanged a life of comfort for the rigors of Valley Forge and the danger of being hanged if unsuccessful. Did he not prove himself?

But the Negro of today wants to reverse all that. He wants to exchange the difficulties of work and proving himself for a life of ease without earning it. Being subsidized by Welfare to breed prosceniously and to stand around street corners while there is work to be done, is not enough for him. He want "equal accommodations."

Are they to be subsidized by Welfare also?

L. Lee Layton Jr. Dover, Del.

Delaware Food Market Report

June promises to be a good month for fresh vegetables. Rains have helped greatly to increase the flow of vegetables into markets from both local and long distance growing areas. Recent cool weather has been responsible for the fine quality lettuce being shipped to markets from such local areas as New Jersey and Long Island. With no long distance freight cost involved, prices are more attractive for large, sound heads of popular iceberg lettuce. Romaine and smooth Boston types are also plentiful and excellent in quality. Other good salad choices include carrots, celery, cabbage, spinach, radishes, and peppers. Beets are plentiful now and they too can be used in a salad. They add a bright touch and a distinctive pleasant flavor, whether you serve the roots or the tops (if they are tender). Local and New Jersey asparagus continues in good volume along with corn, potatoes, and sweet potatoes from Florida and other distant growing areas. When shopping this weekend, be sure to check the canned vegetables section of the market. There are larger supplies of canned vegetables and prices are and will be lower than last year on such items as canned sweet corn, tomatoes, and tomato products. Frozen vegetable items do and will cost about the same this year as last. There are more lima beans, corn, and green peas than last spring; a little less snap beans and broccoli. Strawberries are the fruit to check this week. Supplies were checked somewhat by cool weather, but have increased greatly now. You will find a wide range in quality and price for this fruit, so look carefully before you buy. Pineapples and watermelons are sharing the feature spot with strawberries. Supplies are large and quality good to excellent. Limes, avocados, and a few Southern peaches round out choices for the fruit low. Texas cantaloupes are available in fair supply, but quality needs to be checked. The height of the season for fresh fish is here, and with it a wide selection of species from nearby waters. Top choices for the next few weeks include porgies, whiting, sea bass, a variety of flounders and mackerel. For dinary warm weather dishes choose from the following shellfish: soft steamer clams, hard clams, hard crabs, lobsters, and mussels. For a luxury shellfish, lobsters are reasonably priced now.

Canine Personage Is Festival Guest

One of the most celebrated dogs in the world will be on hand next Friday and Saturday to greet spectators at the Delmarva Chicken Festival in Salisbury.
She is Lady Greyhound, living symbol of the Greyhound bus company, the official carrier of contestants for the National Chicken Cooking Contest finals at the Festival.
The Lady, only 5 years old, is already an old hand at public appearances. She has criss-crossed the continent more than 50 times in her relatively brief career, and has appeared on television with such stars as Jack Benny, Art Linkletter, Steve Allen, Garry Moore and Ed Murrow. Also, she has played countless leading roles in newspapers and on local television as the star of department store fashion shows in many cities.

Lady Greyhound's lengthy list of honorary titles is equally impressive. Not only has she been crowned queen of National Dog Week but of National Cat Week as well. She has served as symbol for World Animal Day and owns a dozen other such honors.
A beautifully trained dog who appears to like the small-fry contingent as much as they like her, Lady Greyhound has managed a private life in spite of her almost constant public appearances. Not too long ago she became the mother of nine puppies from a champion Greyhound father.
Accompanied by her training and publicity entourage, Lady Greyhound will appear at the Civic Center in Salisbury during Friday afternoon festival activities. Saturday afternoon, she will have a place of honor in the festival parade.

FENCE TALK

With George Vapaa

Land leveling is a man-made practice. Nature starts us off with hills and dales. Civilized man finds it desirable to work his farm machines on the level, and sadly, even puts his home on flat land if it is part of a development.

Your county agent was driving by Joseph Wild's farm west of Wyoming, last week. Huge draglines and dozers were scooping off the sandhill for highway fill. The top soil will later be bladed back, and the field will be much easier to till.

The soil texture should be improved after the layer of sand is taken out. Joe tells me the field will be easier to irrigate and manage. Not many people could utilize this practice, but it's a good one.

Last week I mentioned what Bill Taber said about filling highway borrow pits with trash. The land could then be covered, leveled, planted to trees, or be developed for other uses. There is no reason why a dump or pit must forever remain such.

Unless your home or farm has been rewired in the last 10 years, the odds are ten to one that you have overloaded circuits. That's the word from Rural Electric Co-operative engineers at Greenwood.

It's during the summer that homeowners use more electricity. Be sure that your wiring can handle the heavier load.

Here are some signs for spotting overloaded wiring: fuses that are always blowing; a fluctuating TV picture or dimming lights when another motor goes on; or slow heating irons and toasters.

Ask your power supplier to have a power-use engineer survey your electrical needs. He'll make sure that your wiring is adequate.

If air conditioning is in your future, the safety specialist recommends that you be doubly sure that your wiring can easily handle the extra power.

Although power mowers save a lot of energy in keeping the nation's lawns trimmed, they can also reap a very grim harvest. University of Minnesota figures show that power mowers, in a recent year, clipped 50,000 toes, 18,000 fingers and caused injuries in some 70,000 accidents. In addition, about 20,000 children were injured by flying objects thrown by rotary mower blades.

Labor needed to produce 100 pounds of broilers in 1950-51 amounted to 3.10 hours. Ten years later, it had dropped two-thirds to .98 hours. Also, during this 10-year period, the more rapid weight gains contributed significantly to improved efficiency in the use of buildings and equipment, because production facilities are tied up for a shorter period of time per flock—thereby permitting more flocks to be produced each year. This information is in the May issue of the Farm Cost Situation report, published by the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Thinning corn was a practice many of us did as boys. But modern hybrids with precision planting make the practice unnecessary.

But last week your county agent helped hoe the demonstration plot on Jim Mitchells' farm south of Smyrna along the dual highway. The object was to correct variations in plant spacing because we are working with more than twenty varieties. We want all hybrids to perform at similar plant populations, and their was some variation in seed size at planting time.

Bird damage seems to be especially severe this year on some varieties of corn. We also noted it where the corn was planted very shallow. Two inches is a good average depth.

The cool, dry weather had made for poor growth of corn so far. But now with two or more inches of rain, the prospects of warmer weather, we should be able to "hear the corn grow" on a quiet evening.

June 15 is the date of this year's annual wool pool, sponsored by the Delaware Sheep and Wool Association. The Pool will take place at the Delaware State Fairgrounds, Harrington, from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. Medium grade wool sold for 56 cents a pound at last year's pool. Prices paid to producers are based on competitive bids received from several large buyers. If you have any questions on the pool, contact J. H. Shropshire, livestock specialist at the University of Delaware, or contact our County Extension Office on the second floor of the Dover postoffice.

Hogs, like humans, do better when they get some relief from the hot weather that's just around the corner.

Researchers have shown that hogs subjected to a constant 100° temperature take about four times as much feed to gain a pound as hogs that are kept at a constant 65° temperature. Keeping hogs cool on a hot day will pay big dividends. This is true whether it is natural shade, artificial shade or wallows.

Farm buildings are becoming a part of the total farm machine operation. No longer are they designed for a single use. And the tractor has become a part of the design.

Llewellyn Stoltzfus, west of Harrington, has a new pole loafing barn for his dairy herd. He will be able to clear it readily with his tractor blade and loader, instead of the old hand shovel operation. Then too, he has placed it in such a way as to take advantage of concrete feeding platforms and other devices to minimize hand labor.

To make top-quality hay for dairy cattle, cut it early. That's the recommendation of University of Delaware dairy scientists. They suggest cutting alfalfa and alfalfa-grass mixture when the alfalfa is in the bud stage.

Speaking of Insects

with Dale Bray

Usually we humans don't see much of certain insects because of protective color or shape, but there are a few which become conspicuous because of the safeguards they have. The bagworm is one of these. This pest builds a case or bag around itself. It lives inside this bag which becomes a sort of portable house which is carried along wherever the bagworm goes. As the bagworm grows, it adds bits of leaves to its home. In that way the case or bag is always just the right size. The bagworm feeds on a great many kinds of plants, but it seems to prefer evergreens such as cedar, spruce, and pine. If bagworms chew all the foliage from any of these trees the trees usually die.

When the bagworm reaches full growth, the bag usually is about 2 inches long. Inside these bags, the worms change to pupae in September. A few days later they change again—this time to adults; the males emerging as small black moths, and the females remaining in their cases as wingless moths. After mating, the females produce several dozen eggs, but they do not lay the eggs. Instead, they die, and their bodies serve as sacks to house the eggs. This is the way winter is passed—inside the bags where the eggs are safe from birds and most other enemies. In spite of the protection by the bag, some enemies do get in. Tiny wasps and flies lay eggs through the case and these eventually destroy the bagworms. In early June, the surviving eggs hatch and the young caterpillars crawl out of the old bag. Each one spins a silken case about its body. Then as it feeds on leaves it attaches bits of the leaves to its case thus starting the cycle over again.

To control this pest on a small plant, you can count on handpicking. Don't just pick them—burn them after they are picked. On large plants, spray in mid-June with Sevin. The larger the bagworms become the more difficult it is to kill them with insecticides. This is true for nearly all insects.

Farmers don't always use insecticides to control insects. Sometimes, by managing a crop in a special way, the damage by insects can be kept to a minimum. Farmers commonly cut their alfalfa early if their fields are heavily infested with alfalfa weevils. By cutting early they remove the pest's food causing many to starve, and they prevent the damage from "mushrooming" as it would do if the weevils were allowed to feed more and grow larger. As much as 80% of the weevil's damage can be done during the last of its grub stages. So, by cutting before most of them are in this last stage, as much as 80% of the damage could be avoided.

NEARLY 2 TIMES AS MANY: OIL HEATED HOMES ARE NOW NEARLY DOUBLE IN 10 YEARS

THE UNITED STATES HOUSING CENSUS OF 1960 is the first study made that included methods of home heating. This revealed an astonishing increase in the use of fuel oil as a method of home heating.

IN MARYLAND oil-heated households jumped from 287,200 in 1950 to 470,400 at the end of 1960. This reflected an oil gallonage use increase of 513 million gallons, compared to the 373 million gallons burned in 1951.

IN DELAWARE oil-heated households jumped from 42,100 in 1950 to 95,000 at the end of 1960.

VIRGINIA had an equally astonishing jump in homes heated by fuel oil. In 1950 Virginia had 236,400 homes heated by fuel oil. In 1960 this climbed to 495,500.

The strong growth in oil heat in these three states during the past 10 years reflected the equally dynamic advance scored by the liquid fuel consumption elsewhere in the nation, the National Oil Fuel Institute study points out. These figures show a continued growth by the homeowner in the use of oil for home heating.

In the three states mentioned above, the figures show that oil is the more popular way to comfortably and economically heat a home. This follows the exhaustive study made by the NOFI Market Research Department. In this study the figures used were from the United States' Housing Census. Locally, the Del-Mar Oil Heat Association reflects confirming figures on the use of oil as a home heating fuel.

SPORTS

KEITH S. BURGESS — Sports Editor

"Sports Odds And Ends"

Allen Wix, the smallest three letter man in Harrington High history, is now in the U.S. Army stationed in Germany. Wix won varsity monograms in baseball, basketball and cross-country. The latter sport is very large in Europe and since it was Allen's best we would like to see him give it a whirl while overseas.

We read in another newspaper where a city lad won a college varsity letter in sailing. This is a sport? It's true that there is a trick to all trades and it does take a certain amount of skill to make like Christopher Columbus on a smaller scale. But should it be classed as an intercollegiate sport? We think not.

Daryl Jopp, of North Carolina High, a nephew of James Jopp, of Harrington, had a good year as a member of the Marylanders' track team. Jopp tossed the twelve pound shot a distance of over 40 feet and ran on a record-breaking 880 yard relay quartet, that was clocked in a fast 1:36 for the half mile.

An item not connected with sports came to our attention last week. An out-of-state car passed over the undulation in the road in front of Asbury Methodist Church on Weiner Ave. The motorist stopped a bystander and asked "What do the letters DIP mean on that street sign?"

Jake Correll, of Newark, who finished third in the mile run in the recent state title meet, is a relative of Harrington's promising distance running freshman, Ken Correll. Clarence Hackett was sixth in the same race as he was timed in 4:41.7, his fastest clocking for the mile. Injuries and other setbacks after Clarence left H.H.S. kept him from even coming close to realizing his potential as a scholastic distance runner. We hope he'll have better luck in the college ranks.

Next week we will have an article on the successful H.H.S. baseball team which Jim Hawpe guided to a 7-3 season, and a third place finish in the eleven-team Henlopen Conference. We hope to have a picture of the team and the complete batting averages.

Bob Smith, of H.H.S. was one of 350 boys and girls up to and including 15 years of age, who competed in the Junior Olympics track and field meet held at Baynard Stadium, Wilmington, Tuesday night. Bob won the half mile run and will represent Delaware in that event at a meet to be held in Philadelphia at a later date. Runners from several other states will compete. In the Junior Olympics meet many of the girls proved to be swift runners. A meet official stated that he contacted most of the Wilmington schools regarding the possibility of more emphasis on track in girls' physical education classes. The coaches at these schools were all rather mature ladies, who rebuffed the official and stated that softball and nothing else would be included in spring P. E. training. We would like to see more Delaware schools involved in girls' track on an intramural basis. One reason that this is important is the fact that at the annual U.S.-Russia far outstrip the American lassies. The U.S. boys then outdo the Communists. The Reds then lump the scores together and claim the victory. This sometimes happens in the Olympic games, also.

since then. In line with this new goal H.H.S. will meet Corpus Christi High of Elsmere in a dual meet on Oct. 4 on the state meet course at Rockford Park. This early season meet will give the boys an idea of what to expect in the state championships and will enable them to know how hard they must train at home in order to win all the marbles on Nov. 6.

Bob Smith Wins 800 in Junior Olympics

Bob Smith, of Harrington, was an easy winner in the half mile run at the first annual Delaware Junior Olympics held at Baynard Stadium, Wilmington, Tuesday night. The victory qualifies him for a similar meet to be held in the near future in Philadelphia. This latter meet will feature runners from several Eastern states. Smith is competing in track for the third spring although he is only 15 years of age. Often in the past he has had to compete with boys and men several years his senior in order to get the practice. When this is the case victories are often few and far between. Tuesday night was one of the rare occasions when Bob had rivals his own age as he competed in the 14-15 age bracket. He was seeded No. 1 and soon proved that the seeding committee made no mistake in so doing.

The local boy took the early lead but did not panic when Mal Thornton, of Tower Hill, Winchester "Bill" Morris of Wm. Henry and one other runner quickly passed him. He ran in the second lane away from the pole and alertly moved ahead each time he was in danger of being boxed in by other runners coming up from the rear. At the end of the first lap Smith passed Morris and began to move away from the pack. With 220 yards to go he kicked into high gear and won by several yards with Morris, a Houston boy, second. The time was 2:07.3 and represents Smith's best 880 thus far. Veteran runners like Harry Knotts and Dwight Hackett were seniors before they could better sophomore Smith's time. Knotts at 2:05 and Hackett at 2:06 are the only Lions runners with faster clockings.

Home Economics Agent Retires

Miss M. Katharine Jones, home economics extension agent for New Castle County, is retiring this month after 15 years' service. Miss Jones joined the staff of the Co-operative Extension Service in September, 1947.

Mrs. Alice King, state leader of home economics extension, in announcing Miss Jones' retirement, said, "During her 15 years of service to the people of the county, Miss Jones has carried out a broad program of home economics for adults, based on the latest research and study and applied directly to the homemaker's situation."

Dealing with such subjects as clothing construction, family food and nutrition, efficient home management, wise use of income, and child development, Miss Jones has aided hundreds of New Castle County homemakers in providing better homes for their families, Mrs. King pointed out.

Also, under Miss Jones' direction are 30 home economics extension clubs with a membership of more than 800. Numerous workshops and special interest groups have also been organized to discuss and solve specific problems and to work on various creative projects.

One of the honors which Miss Jones received as a result of her work was the distinguished service award given by the National Home Demonstration Agents Association. In receiving the award, Miss Jones was cited for her work with both urban and rural families, her understanding of the needs of the people in the county, and her ability to develop programs based on these needs.

A native of Virginia, Miss Jones is a graduate of Virginia Polytechnic Institute. Before coming to New Castle County, she was a high school home economics teacher, home service director of a utility company, home management supervisor for the Farmer's Home Administration, home economist for the Federal Homestead Project and director of an out-of-school youth program.

"Increased interest in the home economics program, requests for the latest research information and keeping abreast with changing times presents a real challenge to the home economics extension agent. Katharine Jones has made a significant contribution to this dynamic program of education for adults," Mrs. King stated.

Belles To Open Season Tonight

The Harrington womens' team will open their season tonight (Friday) at the Moose field. The opposition will be furnished by a team from Salisbury. Game time is 8:30.

The local team will be playing under the name of the Harrington Belles, and for the first time since its beginning will be wearing regulatory softball uniforms, which were purchased for the team by different sponsors throughout the town. However, there has been some delay in the making of these uniforms and it may be necessary for the women to wear the same attire as last year in their first game.

"Echoing Halls" Elects New Staff

Harrington High School has privileged this year by having a school paper.

The paper, named "Echoing Halls," by Miss Sharon Goodhand, was expertly edited by Miss Gloria Schaper, a Sophomore.

The paper is considered as "one" of the successes for Harrington this year. Only by a lot of sleepless nights and more than a lot of hard work, did the paper succeed.

Miss Schaper's only comment about the paper was merely, "It was a very trying job, but I have enjoyed every minute of it. I plan to switch to a journalism course in a school in Virginia next semester."

On May 23rd, 1963, the staff elected Miss Lynn Bennett, editor for next year, with Miss Peggy Edgar as assistant. This staff promises a much bigger paper and a better one.

Below you will find the staff now, and also next year's staff.

1963-64 Editor: Lynn Bennett; Co-Editor: Peggy Edgar; Secretary: Nina Hitchens; Treasurer: Marilyn Sherwood; Grammar Editor: Linda Richardson.

Successful Hostess Plans In Advance

A little practice and experience in giving parties will help make you the kind of hostess whose parties are always a treat, says Janet Coblenz, extension food and nutrition specialist at the University of Delaware. When you are well organized and sure of yourself as a hostess, you can relax and enjoy the party along with your guests, she comments.

On your list, include people who have something in common and whose company you enjoy. Two weeks before the party is the time to send written invitations. If the gathering is to be small and informal, telephone at least one week ahead. Clues as to the type of party and appropriate dress are courtesies which the guests will appreciate.

You may want to plan your party around a theme, such as a Hawaiian luau, Chinese meal, or the Fourth of July. These lend themselves well to decorations and meal planning. The meal need not be elaborate. If you can prepare most of the food in advance, you will have more time to spend with your guests.

A few foods well prepared, says Miss Coblenz, are better than many time-consuming and difficult to serve foods. Be sure that hot foods are served hot, and cold foods cold. A kitchen cart with wheels will help you make fewer trips to the kitchen. In the dining room, it can be used to hold platters and other foods when they crowd the table. If candles are used at the table, light them.

When serving buffet style, plan your progression so it is convenient for the guests. If a creamed sauce or meat is to be served over a shell or rice or noodles, place the base in line ahead of the topping. Silverware and napkins at the end of the line prevent an unwieldy handful when the menu is self-service.

If dinner is to be served at a table, placecards often eliminate confusion. There are many original ways for these to carry out the party theme. If placecards are not used, the hostess should point out the seating arrangement at the guests come to the table.

Conversation sometimes lags at a party. A thoughtful hostess is the one who sees that no one is left out of the evening's activities. You'll be one step ahead if you have entertainment planned.

She was also a member of the "Alice in Wonderland" cast, and company manager for the tour.

Substation Field Day August 7

Farm and Home Field Day at the University of Delaware's Georgetown Substation has been set for August 7, according to Dr. Morris S. Cover, director of the Agricultural Experiment Station.

A special committee, headed by Frank Gordy, director of the substation, has begun making plans for the annual event at which results of research and other functions of the substation are unveiled to the public.

Though the program is in its formative stage, Cover urged Delawareans to set aside August 7 as a time to visit their substation, and to observe firsthand the progress in the many research projects.
