

MCGINNES, COBIN NAMED TO BUDGET, JUDGE POSITIONS

F. Earl McGinnes Jr. was named the state's first budget director Tuesday and Herbert L. Cobin was appointed judge of the New Castle County Family Court.

McGinnes is now administrative assistant to Gov. Elbert N. Carvel and Cobin is a Wilmington attorney.

Gov. Carvel Tuesday also named W. Marion Stevenson to another 12-year term as Kent-Sussex Family Court judge and re-nominated two highway department commissioners, Harry Bonk, of Rehoboth Beach and William J. Hopkins Jr., of Laurel.

All the appointments require Senate confirmation.

McGinnes would become budget director under a realignment of fiscal affairs contained in a recently-enacted legislation.

He is a former school teacher, state representative from Christina Hundred, who lives in Forest Brook Glen, near Wilmington.

Cobin has served, among other things, as chairman of the Governor's Committee for a State Correctional System.

Stevenson is the only non-lawyer in the state's judiciary. He lives in Frederica and is a former prothonotary of Kent County.

Cobin was nominated to fill the third New Castle County Family Court judgeship, created by the General Assembly this year. Carvel has not yet acted on another job on the same court, that of Judge Francis A. Reardon, whose term expired July 2.

Neither of the two reappointed highway commissioners are Democrats. Bonk is a decline while Hopkins is a Republican. An additional vacancy, caused by the resignation of Anthony B. Carroll of Dover, has not been filled. It must go to a non-Democrat from Kent County.

Both Bonk and Hopkins, if confirmed, will serve three-year terms.

Cobin's term would be for 12 years from date of confirmation. McGinnes would serve at the pleasure of the governor.

Highway commissioners are not paid for their work. Family Court judges receive $17,500 per year. McGinnes reportedly would receive a salary in the $14,000 or $15,000 range.

McGinnes' job would begin Sept. 1.

The fiscal reform legislation (HB-6) is a result of a study conducted by the firm of Cresap, McCormack and Paget. The budget director would be responsible for pre-audit work now done by the state auditor.

The auditor would handle post-audit work, now done by the Budget Commission. The Commission would become an advisory board.

July 31 Federal Tax Deadline

For federal taxpayers in Delaware, July 31 is more than the last day of a month.

For employers it is the deadline for reporting and paying over income taxes withheld and social security taxes on employees' wages during the three months ended June 30.

For persons who have collected excise taxes during the June 30 quarter, it is the due date for filing a return and paying over these collections.

Finally, it is the deadline for filing a return on Form 942 and paying over social security taxes due on wages of household employees who received more than $50 for the months of April, May, and June.

H. L. Brown, district director of Internal Revenue, emphasized that all of these taxes except the employer's portion of the social security tax, represent amounts actually held in trust for the United States government, and that no valid excuse is possible for any failure to pay them in full when due.

The raid was made at 2 a. m. by a State policeman and a liquor inspector for the Alcoholic Beverage Commission.

Welfare Home Cost Rule Asked

The State Board of Welfare has asked the attorney general's office to rule on the legality of disputed expenses at the Smyrna Welfare Home.

The Kent County Levy Court has refused to pay its share for four items in the June expenses at the home.

In a meeting with the county commissioners Tuesday Dr. George Botte, superintendent of the home, explained the expenses and justified them as both necessary and legal.

The commissioners have refused to pay $14,000, Kent's share of $60,917.62 in expenses which they claim are not justified under state statute.

Levy Court attorney N. Maxson Terry advised non-payment of the bills on the basis of the section of the state code which states the "cost of maintenance of the home (welfare home) and the care and support of its inmates shall be a charge against the counties."

Terry thinks the four items questioned do not represent maintenance but are capital expenses.

Only the Kent Levy Court has questioned the bills while New Castle and Sussex Counties passed them without question.

In the meeting Tuesday, Dr. Botte argued that the county's share of the four bills is really not $14,000, but $7,035.99 — which is the county share minus state reimbursement of half the monthly costs.

The $60,917.62 is a total for bills for a test well, a deep well, installation of a water treatment system and alterations of an oil heater.

Under the formula, by which each county is billed for monthly expenses at the home according to the number of its patients, Kent's expenses figure to 23.1 per cent.

Although Dr. Botte defended the expenses, commissioners told him, "It all hinges on a definition of the word 'maintenance.'"

"We think it should be defined," they said.

Word has been received from General Services Administration that new plate-glassed, aluminum doors are to be installed at main entrance in the near future.

Bill Asks $6.5 Million Of Windfall

A bill to spend $6.5 million of the divestiture fund for recreation and conservation was introduced into the House Tuesday.

Its sponsor, Speaker Sherman W. Tribbitt, D-St. Georges Hundred, said the bill is supported by several state agencies including the state planner and the Planning Council, the Park Commission, the Game and Fish Commission and the New Castle County Regional Planning Board.

The bill (HB-388) would provide for 43 per cent of the divestiture fund to be earmarked for three special uses until a total of $6.5 million had been so designated.

The amounts would be broken down so 61.5 per cent of the total would go to the Park Commission, 23 per cent to the Game and Fish Commission and 15.5 per cent to the municipal park and open spaces funds, the first administered by the city of Wilmington and the latter by the Levy Courts of each of the three counties.

The bill would permit purchase of 6,500 acres of parkland representing about $4 million of the funds. It would buy 4,000 acres in New Castle County, including the rest of the land around Lum's Pond and areas near the proposed Newark reservoir and along the banks of the Brandywine. Another 1,000 acres in Kent County at Killen's Pond and 1,000 at Long Neck in Sussex would be considered.

The Game and Fish Commission would get about $1.5 million for acquisition of 10,000 acres of uplands and wetlands for wildlife and conservation in Sussex County and another $1 million would be for the use of local governments.

The Park Commission would be directed to use its share of the fund for acquisition of lands and water and in connection with the development of state parks.

The Game and Fish Commission would be directed to use its fund for the acquisition of lands and water and for the furtherment of hunting and fishing in the state.

Any land or water so acquired would become the property of the state in the event the agency that purchased it ceased to operate it under conditions of the bill, which will require a three-fourths vote for passage.

The bill was assigned to the Revised Statutes Committee. It has the support of Gov. Elbert N. Carvel.

'64 Festival Goes to Easton

Jun 18, 19 and 20 will be the dates for the '64 Delmarva Chicken Festival to be held in Easton, Md., according to an announcement received this week from William H. Rodney, chairman of DPI's Festival Committee. These dates were agreed upon during a meeting earlier in the week between John Noble, general chairman of local committees of the host community and representatives of the DPI association.

Plans are already being discussed for a program of varied activities during the three days of festivities. As has been customary since 1949, the highlight of the festival will be the National Chicken Cooking Contest, co-sponsored by The Poultry and Egg National Board and The Delmarva Poultry Industry organization. This contest is now regarded as the major chicken promotional project of the year and reached new heights this year when nearly 200 people from 43 states and the District of Columbia took part in the national cook-off in Salisbury, during the 16th annual Delmarva Chicken Festival.

In commenting on next year's festival, Ed Covell, DPI's president-elect for 1964, pointed out that not only the people of Easton, but civic-minded leaders all over Talbot County are excited about serving as host for this annual event and promise to help stage the "biggest and best yet."

Memorial Bridge Begins New Fiscal Year

Delaware Memorial Bridge is off and running in its new fiscal year of 1963-65. The big span recorded a three per cent rise in traffic last month over June, 1962.

In his monthly report to the Delaware River and Bay Authority, Frank J. Horty, general manager states that 1,215,781 crossings were registered in June, 1963, or an average of 40,526 vehicles a day. The daily average recorded in the 1961-62 annual report was 31,649 crossings. Of the total vehicles, 923,637 were passenger cars and small trucks.

Crossings totaled 1,180,288 in June 1962 and shows the continued increased use, as well as demonstrating the need for increased facilities, Horty points out.

Revenue was up 2.9 per cent in June over the previous year. Horty reminds this was the last month of operation under the old rates. Increased rates went into effect on July 1 to build up revenue for the proposed new twin structure and placing in operation of a Lewes-Cape May ferry.

Total income last month was $465,648.00 compared to $433,022.90 in June, 1962, or an increase of $12,618.10.

Horty also announced that Francis Riley was first among the toll collectors in their monthly efficiency competition and received a $50 U. S. Savings Bond. John Morrow placed second and received a $25 bond. Following were Herbert Cassidy, Ronald Fairweather and Rudolph George.

Cancer Society Gives Aid to 165 Cancer Patients

Where does a penniless cancer patient turn for assistance? Many turn to the Delaware Division, American Cancer Society.

A report by Dr. Robert W. Frelick, chairman of the Society's patient service committee, disclosed that since September 1 of last year, a total of 165 Delaware cancer patients have received some form of aid from the Society.

Of these, 113 were new applications—an increase of 20 per cent over the comparable period a year ago.

The Division service committee helped 23 persons with the expense of hospital care, and provided emergency homemaker service to one other.

Fifty-one cancer patients were given drugs, while 29 were loaned hospital equipment such as beds and wheelchairs.

Others received aid in the form of dressings, bedpans, transportation, gowns, and visits by members of the Visiting Nurse Association staff. In some cases, transportation, hospital home care, and hospital room and board were paid for.

Lewes to Observe 'Historic Days'

Tourists and other visitors to Delaware will always find a visit to historic Lewes rewarding, advises the Delaware State Development Department. The state information and promotion agency points out that this will be particularly true this weekend when this picturesque port-resort observes its annual "Historic Days."

The two-day observance opens Saturday with a re-enactment of the 1813 bombardment of Lewes by the British. Governor Elbert N. Carvel is to have a prominent role in Saturday's historical pageant.

On both Saturday and Sunday, tours of twenty-five places of interest will be offered; included are many fine old homes, the Zwaanendaal Museum, the life boat station and a restored country store. Boat tours of the Delaware breakwaters and Cape Henlopen areas are also being offered on both days.

Lewes is to Delaware what Plymouth is to Massachusetts and Jamestown is to Virginia, for it was near the site of present day Lewes that the first white settlement in what is now Delaware was established. In 1631, eleven years after the landing of the English Pilgrims at Plymouth, Dutch colonists settled on the right bank of the "Hoomkill River" (now Lewes Creek) and named their new community Zwaanendaal, meaning "Valley of the Swans." This initial effort at colonization, however, had a tragic ending as hostile Indians wiped out the colony within a year of its founding.

In 1659, the Dutch built a fort near the site of the previous ill-fated colony and a small community eventually grew up around this fort. By 1673, the area, now under English control, had developed into a port for ships trading in grain, meat and timber. Renamed Deale in the early 1680's, the community, became, in turn, Lewestown and then Lewes.

During the Revolutionary War and again in the War of 1812, Lewes bore the brunt of the British menace to shore and shipping. This weekend's "Historic Days" observance commemorates

Delaware State Fair to Open Saturday, June 27

The Delaware State Fair will open its 44th annual weekly season here on Saturday, July 27, with NASCAR sanctioned stock car races scheduled under the lights at 8:30 p. m. Drivers from a six state area are expected to be on hand with their modified, sportsman and hobby cars for this opening night spectacular. A warm-up period for the cars, and for the drivers to get used to the fast half-mile flat oval, has been set for 8 p. m.

The first of the ten lap preliminary heat races will receive the green flag promptly at 8:40 p. m. followed by two more heats and the consolation. Another scheduled event that always provides its share of thrilling action is the 15-lap hobby feature for the novice drivers. Closing out the evenings program of high speed entertainment will be a 25-lap feature for the modified and sportsman vehicles. According to a fair spokesman at least twenty cars will start this event.

Headlining the early entry list is last year's National Modified Champion, E. D. Krouse, of Richmond, Va., who at the present time is well on his way towards repeating his national honors. From New Jersey there will be Parker Bohn, of Freehold, N. J., the pilot of a hot GMC powered car, and very familiar to all Delaware Racing fans. From New Egypt will be Augie Moschera in his little No. 147.

Topping the list of "hometown" drivers is the name of Johnny Martin of Lewes, long a favorite of Delaware and Maryland racing fans and last years Delaware champion, and the chauffeur of a very fast modified Ford sedan.

The fairground's new modern all steel 5,000 seat grandstand, located one mile south of Harrington, Delaware on U. S. 13, offers a clear and unobstructed view of the entire raceway. A few reserved seat tickets are still available. Reservations may be made by calling 398-3269 or writing to the Delaware State Fair at Harrington, Del. The tickets are priced at $1.50 each including the cost of grandstand general admission.

HARRINGTON SCHOOL SURPLUS USE STIRS FEUD IN SENATE

Legislation to allow the Harrington Special School District to use leftover funds from a building program for other construction was deferred Tuesday in the Senate.

An argument, which continued after the Senate recessed, arose on whether the change should be made without approval of the district's voters, who voted for the original referendum.

Charles Hoff, principal in the district for only one week, told the Senate that the school district wants to add a stage and dressing rooms to the gymnasium. The money, about $1.2 million, was originally used to build classrooms.

But approximately $90,000 was left over. Hoff said the state would not have to pay any more.

Sen. Calvin R. McCullough, D-Holloway Terrace, commented he was glad to see a school have money left over.

President Pro-Tem Curtis W. Steen, D-Dagsboro, asked whether the voters approved the new work. Sen. J. Donald Isaacs, R-Townsend, said that if funds were unused, they should go back to the taxpayers to reduce the debt.

Majority leader Leon E. Donovan, a Democrat from Harrington, said he had not been approached on the bill one way or another.

Donovan then adjourned the Senate until Wednesday. Minority Leader Reynolds du Pont, R-Greenville, shouted for a roll call but Lt. Gov. Eugene Lamont rapped the gavel for adjournment, saying "I know we have it."

DuPont said later he wanted the roll call because "we're not willing to go home every afternoon and leave things sitting around."

Safety Council Warns Against Sun Eclipse

The solar eclipse Saturday will be a dramatic spectacle—but one that is highly dangerous to the eyes of children and adults, the Delaware Safety Council warned Wednesday.

Staring at the darkened sun with the naked eye or even through sunglasses, exposed photographic film or smoked glass can damage the eyes by burning the retina, said J. James Ashton, manager of the council, who passed along a warning from the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness, Inc.

There is no safe way to look directly at an eclipse of the sun, the society warned. There are simple ways of looking at it indirectly. Watching it on television is one. Another is to use two pieces of cardboard. Punch a pinhole in one piece. Stand with your back to the sun and hold the piece with the hole a foot or two over the second piece so that sunlight shines through the hole into the second piece. It will show the image of the eclipse.

The society reported that after the partial eclipse of the sun three years ago, there were widespread reports of damaged vision among school children of Western states. Utah reported 31 cases of eye burns, and the State of Washington estimated 75.

The reason for not looking directly at the eclipse is that, although the dazzling visible rays of the sun are blocked, dangerous infra-red rays are still emitted. When focused on the delicate retina of the eye these rays cause burns. Ordinarily the light from the sun keeps people from harming their eyes by looking at it. The retina is not sensitive to pain, and the victim does not realize he has been burned until it is too late. Burns on the retina produce blank spots in the individual's field of vision and are not curable.

Tuition Deductions Turnabout

The Senate, like a woman, always can exercise the right to change its mind—even after a bill has been passed.

That was the case Monday when the Senate passed a bill to allow state income tax deductions for tuition payments.

After it passed, its sponsor, Minority Leader Reynolds duPont, R-Greenville, asked the status of an amendment which would limit deductions to tuition for higher education.

Senate Secretary Leslie Greenly reported the amendment had not been passed.

Sen. Allen J. Cook, D-Kenton, then asked that the vote be reconsidered. The Senate then passed the amendment, 12-5.

Then, at the request of Sen. duPont, the Senate voted to defer the amended bill.

In other action during a busy but uneventful day, the Senate: —Added Sen. Eugene R. Bookhammer, R-Lewes, to a committee to formally "receive" Ft. Miles land from the federal government if the government gives it to the state. Ft. Miles is in Bookhammer's district.

—Passed a bill trying for the third time to express its intent on police pensions. Two other police pension bills which passed the General Assembly were found to be technically in error.

—Received an amendment to the minimum wage bill from Sens. Curtis W. Steen, D-Dagsboro, and Bookhammer, which would exempt fishermen, watermen and seafood processors.

FENCE TALK

With George Vapaa

It's not too early to remind you about some events coming up shortly:

July 27 to August 3, the Delaware State Fair at Harrington. Don't forget to stop by our extension service building near the grandstand. 4-H entries should break records, in spite of the dry growing season.

August 7, the University of Delaware Substation Farm Field Day at Georgetown. The 75 crop test plots are showing meaningful differences due to varieties, fertilizers, spray treatments, and tillage practices. The county agents will be "hawking" the bus tours around the farm. Specialists will explain the details and answer questions at the "Sick Plant Clinic." Take samples for analysis if you like.

August 13 and 14 - The Delaware Dairy Tour by bus to central Maryland and to central Pennsylvania. Call our office 736-1448 for the schedule, or check your Dairy Digest. For some this has become an annual vacation away from home and a chance to learn what others are doing.

The prolonged dry weather is causing more and more Delaware farmers to become hay buyers instead of hay producers. If the dry weather continues, supplemental hay feeding will be needed for producing dairy herds or growing livestock.

There is no point in allowing livestock to walk over burned pasture in search of something to eat. They would be much better off in the shade with some supplemental feed.

If you're planning to buy hay there are some things to watch for. Visual inspection doesn't tell what's inside a bale of hay.

Hay buyers should become "Three T" purchasers. We explain the three T formula this way:

The first T is for time—time the hay was cut. Hay cut during the first 10 days of May can be 65 per cent digestible but the same hay cut on June 1 will have dropped to 50 per cent. This is a loss of 300 pounds of digestible nutrients. In a grain bag this would cost you $12-$15—reason enough to know when the hay was cut.

The second T stands for ton, the usual weight basis on which hay is bought. One dollar for a 60 pound bale of hay equals $33 a ton, but a dollar for a 40 pound bale equals $50 per ton. The weight of the individual bale of hay thus is very important. Buy by weight instead of the bale.

The third T is for test. If a ton of hay testing 6 per cent crude protein is purchased, 500 pounds of cottonseed meal will have to be fed with it to make it equal the protein in a ton of hay testing 16 percent protein.

The 3T hay buyer knows what he has bought, and how much.

Poisonous plants are taking their toll of livestock annually in Delaware. About 150 plants cause internal poisoning to livestock when eaten. Most of them are dangerous throughout the year, although some are seasonal hazards in particular.

With few exceptions, grazing animals will not eat poisonous plants unless forced to by a lack of good forage. This situation occurs mostly in early spring, late fall or winter, and during periods of drought. It can be remedied with an adequate supply of forage for livestock.

Don't let your livestock graze near dumps where poisons may have been discarded. Hedge clippings or garden refuse may be extremely dangerous also because of spray residues.

Keep animals away from plowed fields, eroded ground or new ditches. These areas may have exposed roots which are sometimes poisonous. Some poisoning may occur from algae in waterholes. This might very well have been the case at the Treadway Inn pond where several ducks died recently.

Frequently, poisonous plants are found growing around buildings or fences. Many times cattle will graze through fences when the best pasture is right under their feet. Maybe they require a variety in their diet. However, this could be an expensive one.

Some plants, although not poisonous in the usual sense, cause internal injury due to sharp thorns and spines. Some of them wound the mouth, causing infection and eventually the animal may starve.

Early diagnosis of plant poisoning is important. If you suspect plant poisoning, call a veterinarian right away and remove the animal from the area where poisoning occurred.

Most of the poisonous plants can be destroyed by digging them up, burning them or applying chemicals. Sometimes it is more practical to fence areas off where poisonous plants abound rather than destroy them.

Good management is the secret for controlling poisonous plants. Usually, undesirable plants cannot compete with a well-developed grass sod.

Earle T. MacHardy, president of the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange says that the imbalance between the supply and demand on a global basis will cause higher prices for at least several months. He says "We will need seventy five million tons annually by 1970. The best we have ever done is sixty million tons." MacHardy says we will have to increase world sugar output by as much as fifteen million tons or 25% better than the best year to date.

Any marketing quotas for next year's wheat crop will be established based on existing laws according to Secretary of Agriculture, Orville Freeman. In spite of threats to the contrary, no attempt will be made to push any wheat legislation through this session of Congress. President Kennedy had indicated prior to the wheat referendum that if farmers voted against the referendum they might face new legislation restricting their sale of wheat even more. The farmers voted no anyway, but the Department of Agriculture indicated they are willing to forgive and forget. At least this time.

Haymaking time is a dangerous one for farm people. More accidents occur on the farm between July and August than any other time. You can avoid accidents by following certain recommended procedures: Check all equipment before starting to work. Repair all broken parts. Make sure hay racks, barn floors and ladders are in good shape. Put safety guards on and leave them on. Turn off machinery before attempting to make repairs. Be alert. Don't try to work when you are overtired. National Farm Safety Week is coming up. Let's keep it safe.

The president of a Canadian grocers association says consumer protest against stamps but flock to the stamp giving stores. They decry premiums in boxes but can't resist the children's demands for them. They place price fifth in their reasons for patronizing a store then make mad dashes for the specials. They protest the cost of packaging but support the development of convenience food with almost frightening vigor.

University of Illinois research comparing haylage, silage and regular hay shows no significant feeding differences among the three forages according to the report. The report also indicates that haylage can be stored in conventional silos. In a 56 day feeding trial the haylage showed feeding value equal to that of silage and regular when fed to producing cows.

Farmers Misled On Wheat Referendum

Delaware Farm Bureau president Roland E. Garrison stated recently that an administration which undertook such a decisive test of farm sentiment in the recent wheat referendum now has a moral obligation to honor the results of the test.

Much of the reaction in Washington has been unbelieving and unrealistic, for farmers to turn sharply away from the public treasury and to vote down higher guaranteed prices must seem like an incredible development to big government, and there has been wide spread misunderstanding, and in some cases deliberate distortion of what farmers really voted for on May 21.

Garrison said the distortions usually take the line that farmers voted in effect to "have their wheat and eat it too"—that they merely rejected a government program with high prices and tight production controls in the hopes of getting another program with just as high prices and no production controls at all.

"This is not only wholly untrue," said Garrison, "it is wholly unfair to farmers who voted against the blandishments of high fixed, government guaranteed prices in spite of a long campaign conducted by the Secretary of Agriculture to convince them they would go under financially if they did. Farmers voted for fewer controls, and chose to take their chances in a dynamic market system. They don't ask for a medal, but only fair acknowledgment that what they voted for was a temporary adjustment program to ease the transition to freer markets."

"This was not a political contest," he said, "not a skirmish between Democrats and Republicans for some strategic advantage in 1964. This was not chess game played out with wheat acres, this was a massive outpouring of farmer sentiment on the direction they wished to follow in the next era of American agriculture."

"Least of all is it an occasion for political retaliation." "If this Administration means to be responsive to the people," Garrison challenged, "then it was a solemn obligation to respond to what people on the farm voted for in a freely conducted election it initiated and supervised itself."

"Clearly," he said, "farmers voted to turn away from the management of their farms by the government to the management of their farms by themselves."

"But after 25 years of increasing addition to government programs," he added, "it is not realistic to expect them to break away in one whack."

Garrison said that the program Farm Bureau endorses is a temporary program to serve as a transition between where farmers have been under an era of controls, and where they have voted they want to be in a new era without controls.

Legislation to serve this transition has been introduced by Senators Aiken (R-Vt.), Anderson (D-N. M.), Hickenlooper (R-Iowa), and Holland (D-Fla.). Mr. Garrison noted it would: repeal provisions for another referendum next year; prohibit dumping of surplus stocks of wheat and feed grains on the market to break the price; relate price supports to actual market prices instead of government-fixed levels; retire surplus cropland over the next three years on a voluntary, competitive bid basis.

Garrison noted that Secretary of Agriculture Freeman had "wished farmers good luck" on their choice to return to the market with "not one ounce of vindictiveness." Now, Garrison said, the requisites of a needed transition back to the market affords the Secretary a real opportunity to demonstrate his sincerity—to "lead farmers in the course they themselves have freely chosen."

LEWES TO OBSERVE

the occasion, in 1813, when British ships bombarded the port.

Prior to the completion of the Delaware Breakwater in 1897, the beaches near Lewes and particularly around Cape Henlopen were periodically strewn with wreckage of storm beaten ships, and, down into present times, these beaches have been the scene of many exciting rescues.

From the community's earliest days, Lewes residents have "gone to sea in ships" and Lewes men still pilot seagoing craft from Lewes to Philadelphia and other Delaware River Ports, and then down river and bay to the Atlantic.

Lewes, first port of call from the Atlantic on the northern water route to Wilmington, Chester and Philadelphia, is today enjoying well merited popularity not only with those who come to enjoy its sandy beaches and calm protected waters, but also with those interested in the history of the state, bay, river and valley that have Delaware as part of their names.

Located at the eastern end of Delaware Route 18, which carries much of the resort-bound traffic from the Chesapeake Bay Bridge and U. S. Route 50 across Sussex County to Delaware's famed bay and ocean resorts, Lewes is also easily accessible from north and south. To reach Lewes the southbound traveler should leave U. S. 13 at Dover, travel south on U. S. 113 to Milford and on Delaware Rte. 14 to where latter intersects Delaware Rte. 18, which is the principal approach to Lewes. The northbound traveler may leave U. S. 113 at Georgetown and follow Delaware Rte. 18 to Lewes, or, if coming north on Delaware 14, can proceed to intersection with Rte. 18 and then turn east.

The Development Department also points out that Lewes will soon be accessible from the east with the proposed Cape May-Lewes Ferry carrying Garden State Parkway traffic from New Jersey across the mouth of Delaware Bay to Delaware's historic port-resort.

Delaware Food Market Report

The sugar situation is still in the news even though not making the same headlines now. It is the topic of many conversations at check-out counters as the bill is paid. Everyone is beginning to notice that prices have increased 1 to 5 cents on some items, so it pays to know the reasons why and how sugar will and is affecting the prices of other foods you buy.

About 1,000 items in a supermarket contain sugar. Sugar will probably continue to cost at least 5 cents per pound more than last year. Add these two together and you can see average food prices will go higher as markets move upward to partially or fully recover the increased cost of sugar.

One major company announced an intended price increase in their gelatin desserts. Several large candy companies have announced price increases or are contemplating doing so. Companies bottling soda beverages have announced increases in some market areas. The whole situation is deadlocked by whether this is a real sugar shortage or whether it's the product of speculative efforts or the result of inadequate quota allowances.

Processed fruit prices have gone up recently too. This is partly due to the price of sugar and partly because of predicted shorter crops of some fruits for processing. But, it's pretty certain prices will be higher on pears, freestone peaches and fruit cocktail. New York state canners have increased prices of applesauce and it looks as if citrus juices will go up again.

What do increases in sugar prices mean to processed fruits? Each 5 cents per pound increase for sugar means 7 1/2 cents advance for a dozen 10-oz. packages of frozen strawberries, (require 1 1/2 pounds of sugar). For 30 pounds of frozen strawberries, the 5 cent increase or a pound means 1 cent per pound increase in processing costs.

When you shop next stop and check prices, see what you are paying for confectionary sugar, for packaged icing mixes, etc. Know where your grocery money is going and for what.

Now is the time to think "big" in planning meat purchases. There is no scarcity of high quality meat. Large cuts, as a rule, are more economical now than smaller ones. So consider beef roasts, fresh pork shoulders, hams and turkeys all as good buys.

Japanese Larger As Result of Better Diets

The traditionally tiny Japanese people are getting bigger—probably as a result of the milk, meat and eggs in their increasingly Americanized diets.

Measurements show that one- and two-year-old baby boys are more than an inch taller and a pound and a quarter heavier than the average of ten years ago. The average height of sixth grade girls has increased more than three inches in the past 30 years, and the average height of 15-year-old boys has gone up nearly three and a half inches since World War II.

Rice, once the mainstay of the Japanese diet, is slowly being replaced by foods that are taken for granted in American diets—particularly meat and milk. In fact, it is anticipated that Japanese consumption of milk will increase 500 per cent in the next ten years.

"The Japanese are living proof of what nutritionists have been telling Americans for years—that milk is vital for strong, healthy bodies," says Janet Coblentz, extension food and nutrition specialist at the University of Delaware. The beginning of the Japanese body growth can be traced to the end of World War II, when powdered milk from the United States as well as other nutritionally sound foods were introduced in school lunch programs for Japanese children, she points out.

Today, more than 70 per cent of Japan's primary schools serve milk as part of a low cost school lunch program, and even though milk is included in all the daily school lunch menus, the chief request of Japanese mothers still is, "Give them more milk."

There are some interesting side effects of the widespread growth in Japan, Miss Coblentz notes. Children's garment sizes have had to be revised, because three-year-olds no longer fit into standard three- and four-year-old sizes. Schools have had problems, too. Chairs and desks are too small for the taller students. It is predicted that Japanese houses may also become too small for the generation of larger people.

Americans, too, are slightly larger than in the past, but the growth rate is not nearly as high as in Japan, simply because Americans have consistently had well-balanced, nutritionally sound foods in place of the more limited rice diet which has caused Japanese growth to spurt as it has, she says.

NEW STAMP

prevailed upon the U. S. Post Office in Washington to issue the Amelia Earhart Commemorative Stamp in memory of this aviation pioneer who was their founder, Mrs. Bonnet said.

When the U. S. Post Office issues the stamp on July 24 at Atchison the cachets will be divided among seven Ninety-Niners who flew with Miss Earhart. After appropriate ceremonies they will fly to various points in the country to begin deliveries. It is one of these planes which will arrive at Pittsburgh on the morning of July 25 and transfer the cachets for delivery to Delaware.

Miss Borek, who comes to Wilmington, is described as a petite one hundred pound pilot. She is serving as aircraft inspector for the 1963 Powder Puff Derby which terminates in Atlantic City. She will receive a key to the city of Wilmington from Mayor Babiarz.

Marie D'Alterio and her husband are both pilots. With their families they enjoy flying vacations each summer. She is presently treasurer of the Middle East Section of the Ninety-Niners. Beth Sturdevant, her co-pilot, lives in Runnemed, N. J.

4-H Club Members Visit Massachusetts

Sussex County 4-H Club members are participating in an unusual exchange program this week. A group of 36 teenage 4-Hers left Monday for a week in Berkshire County, Mass., where they are staying with rural and small town families near the county seat of Pittsfield.

Accompanying the group are William Pinnell, Sussex County 4-H agent, and Mrs. Pinnell.

The trip is the first half of an exchange between the two counties. A busload of Berkshire County 4-Hers will spend a week in Sussex County next summer.

Each of the youngsters is staying with a family with 4-H Club members of its own and are treated as members of the family rather than guests. This means that some of them will have a real vacation, while others may work on the hosts' farms or do other chores, Pinnell said.

The Berkshire-Sussex exchange is the first such program ever attempted in Delaware. However, the Massachusetts group has participated in several other interstate exchange programs in the past, and 4-H officials feel it is an excellent way for youngsters to learn about people living in other areas.

The Sussex 4-Hers will return home on Monday.

4-H News

4-Hers, cows and cars made up the agenda for the recent Dairy Judging Tour. Wayne Collison, Harrington, scored first place in a field of 24 judges. Four farms were visited by Kent County 4-Hers, members from Sussex and New Castle County and several Vo-Ag members. Parents and leaders provided transportation.

The top scoring members who will join Wayne at the Delaware State Fair 4-H State Contest are in order, Sam Dixon, Clayton, Louis Starkey, Houston; Connie Moore, Dover; John Davis, Milford; Craig Eliason, Frederica; Gary Simpson, Houston, and Wayne Hendricks, Harrington. Chestnut Grove 4-H club ranking number one in club teams was composed of Sam Dixon, Connie Moore and Lillian Dixon. Farms visited were A. Bailey Thomas, Camden; Robert Sammons, Harrington; Woodrow Haas, Camden, and Rodney Caulk, Wyoming.

Other 4-Hers participating were: Fred Stites, Becky Tatman, Ronnie Robbins, Hope Torbert, John Comegys, Bill Warner, Bill Simpson, Patty Stites, Edna Dixon, Tom Davis, David Robbins Jr., Med Davis, Clifford Hudson, Jerry Charles, Nancy Webb. Donald Burton, assistant livestock specialist, University of Delaware, was the official judge. The contest consisted of classes in Jerseys, Ayrshires, Guernseys and Holsteins. Members placed a total of eight classes with questions on five classes and oral reasons on one class. The State Judging Contest will take place at Harrington July 29.

Judging Contests will also be held in baked goods, clothing, vegetables, livestock, food preservation, poultry and eggs.

sugar, since the flavors are strong and will overpower the fruit flavor and may darken the fruit.

In making jelly, jam and other preserves, half the sugar may be replaced with honey, or one-third of the sugar replaced with light corn syrup, Mrs. Thomas says. If you use more than half honey, the flavor, color or consistency of the jam or jelly is likely to be altered. It is best to use honey as a substitute only with strong flavored fruits to prevent taste changes, which may or may not be desirable.

When making jams and jellies with honey, cook in a large kettle since honey causes foaming and boils over easily. Cook slightly beyond the usual jelly test, or about seven degrees above boiling.

Explorer "Ready" Program Begins With Emergency

Del-Mar-Va Council Boy Scout Executive Board members witnessed a spontaneous but dramatic launching of the new Explorer "Ready" program at Rodney Scout Reservation this week. Upon arrival for their annual camp visitation meeting the Board found a corps of Explorers in the act of bringing a stubborn "underground" woods fire under control.

The fire which had been smoldering for several hours in the thick dry layer of humus soil burned over an area of about three-fourth of an acre. Camp officials described the condition being similar to a "peat bag" fire. To bring the fire under control it was necessary to use hand tools to turn over the soil which was then thoroughly soaked.

Every normal precaution had been taken by Scouts the previ-

JAMES MITCHELL, SMYRNA, fills his planter with one of the twenty Hybrid corn varieties being tested on his farm. The tests are being conducted in cooperation with the University of Delaware and the Delaware Crop Improvement Association.

A MIXTURE OF ATRAZINE AND URAN was sprayed on the test plots on the Mitchell farm to determine if this two-in-one operation would provide adequate weed control and needed plant food and save one trip over the field. Dr. William Mitchell, extension agronomist at the University of Delaware, says that although the tests won't be completed until this fall, apparently the results have been quite successful.

Cost Cutting on Corn Tested In Smyrna

It's becoming a well known fact that Atrazine will control weeds in field corn. And most farmers are sure that additional nitrogen will boost corn yields.

But can the two be applied at the same time using the same equipment, eliminating the time and expense of another trip across the field? Dr. William Mitchell, extension agronomist at the University of Delaware, thought so, and he set out this spring to prove it under everyday farm conditions.

With the assistance of county agents and fertilizer company representatives he laid out a demonstration plot on the James Mitchell farm near Smyrna. James and his father grow 500 acres of corn in addition to milking 75 Holstein cows, and they are always on the lookout for labor saving techniques. The Mitchells were already co-operating with the University and the Delaware Crop Improvement Association in testing the performance of 20 hybrid corn varieties.

Mitchell applied an Atrazine-Uran mixture in strips across the test plots just after the corn was planted. Although complete results of the tests won't be known until the corn is harvested, Dr. Mitchell says the two products can be mixed and applied at one time with favorable results. In addition to the saving from making only one application, cultivating was eliminated.

This is one more method available to corn growers for applying nitrogen and weed control chemicals, and many farmers will find it an excellent method, although it is not a "cure-all" for every kind of soil or for every farmer, Dr. Mitchell points out.

Anyone interested in seeing the variety tests and the Atrazine-Uran demonstration can stop at the Mitchell farm on Route 13 near Smyrna. The plots are well marked, and the Mitchells are glad to have anyone interested stop by.

Tours of Projects To Highlight Farm Field Day

An opportunity to view the more than 80 research projects under way at the University of Delaware's Agricultural Substation will be available to all Delawareans on August 7 at the annual Farm and Home Field Day.

Bus tours will be conducted throughout the day on the Substation grounds, Route 28, southwest of Georgetown.

Of particular interest will be plots showing the results of various insect, disease and weed control methods. Among the experiments being conducted are the use of a number of different weed and disease control chemicals on field and sweet corn, carrots, tomatoes and peppers; the use of herbicides on strawberries; various disease and weed control methods on soybeans and other grains; and insect and disease control for apples.

Other research of general interest includes experiments in tomato and cantaloupe breeding to compare newly bred varieties with standard varieties; and a large number of plots comparing varieties of strawberries, onions, soybeans, apples, peppers, tomatoes, cantaloupes and potatoes.

Research on other fruits, vegetables and field crops will also be shown. In addition, a newly designed windowless broiler house will be open for inspection, as will the poultry diagnostic laboratory and other experimental poultry facilities.

One of the highlights for women at Farm and Home Field Day will be comparison tests of seven varieties of frozen strawberries. The berries, grown at the Substation, are being tested to determine the best varieties for the home freezer, and homemakers will be able to sample the berries and vote for their choice.

Another program for women, set for 10 a.m., will be a discussion of food spoilage and its causes, along with methods to prevent spoilage. Miss Janet Coblenz, extension food and nutrition specialist at the University of Delaware, assisted by Frances Shoffner, Sussex County home economics extension agent, will conduct the program.

A "Sick Plant Clinic" will be manned by University specialists in entomology, plant pathology, horticulture and agronomy. Visitors are invited to bring problem plants to the clinic for suggestions on possible causes and cures. Microscopes and other equipment will be set up so visitors can get a close-up look at their plants.

Other features at Farm and Home Field Day include a chicken luncheon in the Substation grove at noon, Civil Defense exhibits and a variety of other exhibits.

Capable Young People Needed In Agriculture

Scientific agriculture, America's chief contribution to the physical well being of modern man is threatened by a force from within, according to the retiring Dean of Agriculture of the University of California. The culprit declared Dean Fred N. Briggs is public indifference.

"If we are going to maintain the abundance of food which Americans mistakenly take for granted, the public must become more aware of the importance of agricultural industry to our economy," he said.

Commenting on this, Dr. William E. McDaniel, director of resident instruction in the School of Agriculture at the University of Delaware says that more capable young men and women must be attracted to agriculture.

He says there is a mistaken idea that contributes to the reluctance of students to enter the agricultural sciences. This misconception is that there are fewer farms and farmers, therefore there must be fewer jobs in agriculture.

Commenting on this attitude McDaniel points out that agriculture includes processing, marketing and many other industries in addition to actual farming. "There is a turmoil of change going on in these fields as new scientific and economic ideas develop. There is a tremendous need for well trained young people who can put these new methods to work."

In elaborating on a statement by Dean Briggs that "it is a scientific miracle when only 20% of a family's income will buy all of its necessary food items," McDaniel says that agriculture also contributes to the nations economic growth in other ways. "Mechanized farming which has permitted one man to produce food for himself and more than two dozen others has enabled excess manpower to move into other industries."

In addition to his duties as director of resident instruction in the School of Agriculture, McDaniel is also head of the Department of Agricultural Economics.

Speaking of Insects

with Dale Bray

There are over forty species of mosquitoes in Delaware, but most of them don't annoy people. Moreover, there is one, the saltmarsh mosquito, which is more of a pest than all the others put together. This is the one which swarms out of the salt marshes of Delaware by the millions each summer to plague the resort areas as well as cities such as Dover.

Like all other mosquitoes, the salt marsh mosquito spends part of its life in water. This comes about in the following way: A female salt marsh mosquito returns to the marshes after having gotten a meal of blood, perhaps from you. She lays many eggs, not in or on water, but on mud or sod in the marshlands. Sometimes these spots remain dry for days or weeks, and if such is the case, the eggs don't hatch. Neither do they die. Eventually, a high tide will flood the marshes, and the eggs float. In a few hours most of them hatch producing tiny mosquito larvae called wigglers. The wigglers live for a few days in the water, feeding and growing. During a hot spell they can complete their wiggler stage in about seven days. They then change to pupae or tumblers. About three days later the adult mosquitoes emerge from these tumblers. They rest for a short time in the grass and brush along the edge of the marsh. Millions upon millions of these pests may congregate in such areas making life nearly unbearable to man and animals. When conditions are just right, they begin flying, sometimes covering as much as 10 or more miles. They descend in hordes on cities and fields. Workers are driven from fields and homeowners from their yards. There is no way to cope with such astronomical numbers except to apply an insecticide over large areas. Fortunately mosquitoes are not as tough as some insects. We can kill this mosquito with about one ounce of insecticide per acre. By comparison, the European corn borer seems indestructible; it takes one pound of the insecticide per acre to kill the corn borer.

Insecticides aren't the only tools we have to fight the salt marsh mosquito. Where there are drainage ditches, any floating eggs will be drawn down the ditches and out into the bay where mosquito wigglers cannot exist. Another way to thwart this pest is to do just the opposite—impound the marshes and keep the area flooded so that the females can't find sod or mud for egg-laying.

Through the fine co-operation of the State Game and Fish Commissioners, the State Highway Department and the Entomology Department at the University of Delaware, there is a good example of this type of control near Little Creek. Here a marsh which formerly produced millions of salt marsh mosquitoes and practically no wildlife each summer, now produces none of these mosquitoes, and is a wildlife paradise.

If you must be outside when mosquitoes are after your blood, use a repellent. One of the most effective ones is called DEET. To be certain you have this product look at the active ingredients—it should read 'diethyl toluamide'.

"Sports Odds And Ends"

Saturday is Little League Tag Day. Little League baseball players and their chaperones will solicit funds and give tags to the donors. This will be the only door-to-door appeal this season.

The Harrington Softball Belles will play the Camden-Wyoming Little League mothers at Camden-Wyoming Little League park Saturday evening at 6:30. We don't think the upstarts realize what they're up against. We predict a lopsided Belle triumph.

Henry "Smoky" White is another workhorse at the Moose Ball Park in an effort to help keep the eight youth baseball teams in action.

John Richard Hamshar, of Glen Cove, N. Y., decided to visit his pop-pop in Hartly. After promising his parents to be careful, the 14-year-old pedaled his bike 240 miles to Hartly in 26 hours. Here is another American youth with stamina and courage.

Another bicycle story concerns Airman 2C Harold Griniger, of the Dover Air Force Base. Last year he joined American Youth Hostels and bicycled across Europe. Members get a bed and supper each night for the small cost of 40 to 75 cents. Using a geared bike it was no problem to cover between 30 and 70 miles a day. Griniger said this mode of transportation enabled him to see much more of the country at a small fraction of the average cost. On a guided tour one must be continually on the move as everything is rush, rush, rush. On a bike, if one discovers a charming, bucolic retreat, it is easily possible to linger awhile. Murray Metten, Sr. retired travel editor of the Wilmington Journal-Evening is another, who toured Europe on a bike. American youth Hostel members range up to 90-years-old.

The writer has read several articles on the fun and adventure of such a bike trip and at present we own four bicycles counting a small 20 inch for son, Matt, who will be six in September. In two or three years we hope to bicycle through Eastern Europe.

Harrington Edges Ruritans, 7-6

Tuesday saw another real close battle between the Ruritans and Harrington. The Ruritans, again with a chance to gain top spot were edged 7 to 6 on a come from behind effort by the local softball team. Chester Short's seven hit pitching was backed up by a 14 hit attack as everyone hit all through the lineup. The Ruritan attack was paced by George Collins and Dale Spence with 2 hits each.

The Mavericks again dropped another close one 8 to 7 as Carl Wright's Taylor & Messick ball club tightened their hold on third place with the victory.

The Mavericks, trailing 8-4 going into the top of the 7th inning, exploded for three runs to pull within one, but pitcher Leonard Outten tightened down on them and that was as far as they got.

There will be no games fair week. The playoffs begin the second week in August.

There has really been some good ballplaying in this league, so let's see everyone out to see your favorite team go.

Little League "Tag Day" To Be Held Saturday

Saturday, from 10:00 a. m. to 12:00 noon, will be observed as "Tag Day" for Little League Baseball throughout the Harrington area. The Little and Senior League Boys are to meet at the firehouse at 9:30 to start soliciting.

"Tag Day" is the special event which has been planned to invite the community to participate in supporting its local Little League Foundation. All members of the Little League teams (which include Little League, Senior League and Minior League) will participate in a door-to-door campaign for your contributions for this program for youth. Your donation will be acknowledged by a tag designating that you are "a Little League Booster".

Among the local organizations, etc., who have already been very generous in supporting our Little League teams for 1962 and 1963 are: American Legion, American Legion Auxiliary, Brooks Armor (Wilmington), First National Bank, Lions, Moose, Peoples Bank, Reese Harrington, Rotary, and W. W. Shaw (Washomatic & Shaw's Furniture).

Most of you know some youth who is or has been on a Little League Baseball team. You know the thrill and excitement which revolves around these boys as they play and as you watch them start as truly beginners to mature little by little, as they are guided by the rules and training of little League.

Little League Baseball is essentially a program of service to youth and is dedicated to helping boys become good and decent citizens. It strives to inspire them with a goal and to enrich their lives towards the day when they must take their places in the world. It establishes for them rudiments of team work and fair play and enhances the welfare of the community and the nation through benefits to the boy and his family.

Your cooperation in making the first "Tag Day" for Harrington vicinity a success will be greatly appreciated by the Little League Mothers' Auxiliary. We hope you will display a "Little League Booster Tag" on July 20.

Little League Baseball News

The highlight of this week's Little League game was the no-hit, no-run game tossed by 10-year-old righthander, Dave Newnum on Monday. The Moose hurler set the Rotary Club nine down without a hit, while his mates were scoring 25 runs. His father, Bill Newnum, was a classy left hander at Greenwood High and later played with Hickman, Seaford and other semi-pro teams in this area. This writer played at H.H.S., while Bill was at G.H.S. We remember a contest at Greenwood in which Bill got out of a sick bed to lose a tight 3-2 game to Bridgeville's Bob Hock. Hoch, now on the faculty at Milford High School, later progressed as far as Triple A in the pro ranks.

Chuck McNally led the winner's attack as he belted two out of the park and double twice in five trips to the plate. Big Mike Welch pitched a tidy four-hitter and also had two hits, one of which went over the centerfield fence for four bases. Belles Best Sudlersville, 11-7

Last Friday night the Belles played a team from Sudlersville at the Moose Home ball park.

Sudlersville opened up with six runs in the first three innings to one run for the Belles to make it seem an apparent runaway game. The Belles had been hampered by a hitting slump in their previous outings and it appeared to be the same in this game.

Late in the game the Belles suddenly exploded with everyone taking a turn at bat and getting on as they held Sudlersville to one more run and a hitless final inning to overcome the early score set by Sudlersville, winning 11-7.

Tonight (Friday) the Belles will play a team from Asbury Church, made up of a congregation of both men and women, at the Moose field. This game will be the late game to start as soon as the first game is over in the boys' league. The time is around 8:30.

Saturday night the Belles will play the Camden-Wyoming Little League mothers at the Camden-Wyoming ball park at 6:30. This is the first meeting of these two teams and should provide some entertainment for those fans who follow the Belles when they play away from home.

September Is Cystic Fibrosis Month

September will be Cystic Fibrosis month in Delaware.

Richard Cecil, president of the Delaware Chapter of the National Cystic Fibrosis Research Foundation, announced this week that the organization's annual campaign will be conducted during the month of September.

The program directly supports research on cystic fibrosis, an inherited children's disease for which there is no known cure. Also, the campaign raises funds for drugs, antibiotics and treatment facilities for the young victims of the disease.

An extensive door-to-door appeal will be made throughout the northern portion of the state, and other fund-raising activities will be conducted in Kent and Sussex Counties. Several thousand volunteers will make a canvass beginning Sunday, Sept. 8, Cystic Fibrosis Sunday.

President Cecil said that funds for research are badly needed, since little is known about the cause or the cure for the disease.

"Our only consolation lies in the fact that children with cystic fibrosis are living longer now than was formerly the case," he said. "Now more than half of the CF patients die before they are eight years old. As grim as these figures are, only a few years ago more than half died before they were five."

He said that many research projects financed by the National Cystic Fibrosis Research Foundation are conducted in this area, a number of them in Philadelphia hospitals.

Serious complications of cystic fibrosis involve the lungs, digestive system and sweat glands. There are more than 25,000 children afflicted with the disease and more than 4,000 new cases are diagnosed each year.
