

PROTANE GAS SERVICE OPENS BULK PLANT ON U. S. 13

Protane Gas Service of Delaware, Inc., this week announced the opening of a bulk plant on a 22-acre tract on the southbound lane of U. S. 13, and plans for further expansion.

Randall H. Knox Jr., district manager, said the service eventually would have a showroom, offices, and warehouse to the north of the bulk plant. All told, the gas service installations would have 400 feet frontage on U. S. 13 north from the branchline of the Pennys.

The local service is a subsidiary of The Protane Corporation, of Cleveland, O.

The new bulk plant, Knox explained, consists of 30,000 gallon storage tank, loading dock, and a charging room which enables the filling of four cylinders at a time.

The installation also has facilities for unloading gas transports and loading bulk trucks.

Previously, the service had to have cylinders filled at other plants. Now this service is done at the new bulk plant.

Protane Gas Service has progressed from cylinder operation to bulk delivery and fills 500-gallon and 1000-gallon tanks in the field for commercial and home heating.

The Magic Of Electronics

Electronics—the magic of the 20th Century—will soon be handling the bookkeeping chores at The Peoples Bank of Harrington.

Installation of a Burroughs electronic accounting machine that will automatically keep tabs on deposits, withdrawals and transactions for the bank's many customers was announced by Howard S. Wagner, cashier.

"We are proud to pioneer the use of this equipment in our area. With these new electronic machines our customers will receive more accurate, more efficient service than ever before," said Mr. Wagner.

The new machines can electronically "read" account information stored in magnetic ink stripes printed on the back of customer ledger cards. As operators post incoming data to these accounts, the machines encode, or "write" the new information into the magnetic stripes, keeping them completely up-to-date.

On the same night thieves tried to gain entrance to the Creadick Package Store, near the clothing store. The glass in the door of the liquor store was broken but a bar across the door prevented entrance. Entrance to the clothing store was gained by breaking out the glass in front.

GIVEAWAY BILL GOES TO CARVEL

In the sarpest about-face of this session, the Senate Tuesday passed a bill to permit certain types of giveaways.

The bill, which would allow merchants to give prizes provided no purchase is required, received 11 votes and four opposed. It received just two favorable votes when it failed last summer.

It has passed the House with ease and now goes to the governor.

The switch came after senators were contacted by proponents of the legislation and convinced, in nine cases at least, that the idea had merit.

George Tyler Coulson, representing the Delaware Association of Printers & Publishers, Maryland-Delaware Press Association and Delaware Broadcasting Association — which benefit from advertising involved in the giveaways — told the senators that in 47 states and federal territory a lottery is not a lottery unless something is paid by the person hoping to win.

Because of a court decision 30 years ago, Coulson continued, Delaware has a different definition of lottery and therefore Delaware merchants, advertising media and consumers cannot participate in many local and national contests.

He said this leads to ridiculous situations — such as banning door prizes at church functions — and imposes an unfair burden upon Delaware businessmen since other states can participate.

The court interpretation, Coulson said, was intended to prevent gambling. He said the proposed bill would not change that.

"We won't save money by not participating," Coulson said, noting that the state pays the same price without receiving the benefit of eligibility to share in the prizes.

Sen. Walter J. Hoey, D-Milford, said he thought the bill would allow a lottery "to some degree" and thus could not support it.

Voting for the bill were Sens. Bookhammer, Cook, Du Pont, Lord, Manning, McCullough, Simpson, Steen, Tull, Wilgus and Martin, opposed were Donovan, Hoey, Isaacs and Price. Two members, Johnson and Robbins were absent.

On the previous try only Cook and Du Pont voted for the bill. It was later restored to the calendar.

House OK's Lower Fine

A bill to lower the minimum fine from $25 to $10 for motorists convicted of driving unregistered motor vehicles passed the House without opposition, Tuesday.

Rep. George H. Exley, D-Harrington, the sponsor, explained that it keeps the present $100 maximum fine and that a judge or justice of the peace could still fit the fine to the offense, but said that many police officers and Motor Vehicle Commissioner Russell W. Whitby all agree the $25 minimum fine is too high.

Exley said many officers do not enforce it rigidly because of the excessive minimum fine. The bill would also permit a car to be driven to an inspection lane or garage after the driver has been arrested and convicted, something that cannot now be done without a special permit from the motor vehicle commissioner.

Federal Aid Funds For Public Works

A new Federal Aid project to be undertaken by the Delaware Board of Game and Fish Commissioners under the Federal Government's Accelerated Public Works program has been approved for the County of Sussex, according to an announcement by John S. Gottschalk, Director of the Northeast Region of the Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife of the Department of the Interior's Fish and Wildlife Service.

Delaware's allotment of funds under the nationwide Accelerated Public Works program for conducting game and fish restoration projects is $41,848. These funds were appropriated in the Supplemental Appropriation Act, 1963, approved May 17. The principal purpose of the Accelerated Public Works program is to provide employment in economically needy areas and to accomplish useful public works of lasting benefit.

Work under this project will take place at the Rehoboth Bay Access Area. In order to provide proper access, the state will dredge a channel and dig a lagoon, develop a 150 car parking area, and install a concrete launching ramp.

Federal funds in the amount of $7,500 will be matched by $7,500 of State funds.

CHIEF PETERSON KEEPS JOB

Mayor Fulton J. Downing cast a tie-breaking deciding vote Monday night to retain Police Chief David Peterson.

Downing threw his vote in with keeping the young policeman on the force after council had voted 3-3 on whether to discharge him.

The action took place at a special meeting of the entire council at 5 p.m. Monday. The meeting followed last Wednesday's session at which four councilmen voted first to discharge Peterson, and then to suspend the firing pending a public hearing.

Council took the action before being reminded by the city clerk that the town charter calls for holding a hearing for any city officer discharged.

Peterson, 26, had little comment on the session—except to say he appeared before the councilmen to explain what he termed complaints they had.

The council first voted to discharge him last week on the strength of a city manager's and police commission report.

But Downing said Monday night many of the "things" brought up in the report were explained or "clarified" by Peterson in his appearance.

Downing said the recommendation to discharge Peterson was based upon "no particular thing he did." Neither was any major infraction involved, he said.

After hearing Peterson out, council held an executive session—then went into open session for the deadlock vote. Councilmen F. Lawrence Price, Burton Satterfield, and Clarence Black voted to retain Peterson.

Councilmen Wilson Bradley, the police commission chairman; Howell Hitchens, and Luther P. Hatfield voted against him. Downing's vote decided the issue.

Miller Named Director of Tunnel Ass'n.

William J. Miller, Jr., director of operations for Delaware State Highway and Delaware River, and Bay Authority was named a director of the American Bridge, Tunnel and Turnpike Association at Montreal, Canada this week.

Miller, who returned home this week becomes the second Delawarean to be so honored by the Association.

The board of directors is composed of 15 men who are elected, from the 175-unit group which represents toll facilities worth nearly $10 billion, it was pointed out.

Charles H. Rutter, manager of Delaware Turnpike, was also in attendance at the Montreal meeting and the Turnpike was accepted as one of the latest member-facilities in the Association.

Miller became director of operations of the Delaware State Highway Department more than two years ago. He also served in a similar capacity with the Delaware Interstate Highway Division which operated Delaware Memorial Bridge prior to establishment of the joint Delaware - New Jersey ten man Authority in February, 1963. Miller was named by that group to continue as director of operations for the Authority.

Lawrence A. Rubin, executive secretary of the Mackinac Bridge Authority of St. Ignace, Michigan, was named president of the Association. He succeeds James Adams, manager of San Francisco's Golden Gate Bridge.

J. H. Tyler McConnell, chairman and Theodore C. Bright, vice chairman of the Authority, have expressed their delight in Miller's selection considering it a tribute to the caliber of professional people which the Authority employs.

Senate OK's Use Of Bond Surplus

The Harrington School District was finally given permission to use money left over from a bond issue to do other work.

The Senate Monday passed and sent to the governor a bill that allows the district to use $90,000 to build a stage and dressing rooms onto the gymnasium.

The money was originally in a $1.2 million bond issue used to build classrooms.

On two previous attempts the Senate refused to pass the measure with some arguing another referendum should be held.

But Monday all the senators who had not supported it before arose one by one and changed their votes, allowing it to pass unanimously.

They said that they had looked into the situation more closely and decided it would be the cheapest and best way out for the district. All those who changed their votes were Republicans.

Vehicles Collide North of Felton

Two vehicles collided at a crossroads north of Felton early Tuesday morning, resulting in about $1,000 damage and a $15 fine for one driver.

Loretta Quail, of Viola, was going east in her car on county Route 371. She apparently pulled out into Route 13, hitting a car driven by Doris Bratten, 33, of Felton, going north on Route 13, police said.

Loretta Quail was arrested and fined $15 and costs by Magistrate Elijah Harrington for failure to yield right of way.

Damage to the Bratten vehicle was estimated at $750 and to the Quail vehicle, $250-$300, according to police.

Mrs. Francis J. Winkler, president, welcomed the members and their guests to this first meeting which is traditionally a covered dish luncheon.

Following the luncheon, Mrs. William A. Taylor introduced the speaker for the afternoon, Mrs. William H. Henshaw, of Vane's Florist, in Dover.

Mrs. Henshaw held her audience spellbound with her demonstrations of flower arrangements. Four very different bouquets were the result of her handiwork.

Also a guest at the meeting was Miss Jan Vollmer, Women's Page editor of the Delaware State News.

Mrs. J. Millard Cooper, public affairs chairman, gave the itinerary for the Washington, D. C. trip which members will take next Tuesday. Caleb Boggs and Representative Harris McDowell. A tour of the capitol and attendance at a session of the Senate or House of Representatives will conclude the day.

A few more places on the bus are still available. Anyone wishing to take the trip may call Mrs. Cooper by the weekend.

SBA DOES MORE THAN FINANCE, C. OF C. HEARS

Financial assistance is the best known aspect of the Small Business Administration, but there are many other ways in which the organization can help the small-business man, Leon E. Savage, chief of the procurement and technical assistance division told a well-attended Chamber of Commerce gathering at a buffet at The Wonder R Tuesday.

At the start, however, Savage, for many years an industrial consultant, gave an insight into the organization of the Small Business Administration.

"Our success depends on public understanding and co-operation, particularly from business and civic leaders," he began.

"SBA is the first single governmental agency where the small-business man can get a variety of assistance. In the past, he received only temporary service in some particular field. . . . He defined small business in the following manner:

Small business comprises 4,500,000 enterprises, or 90 per cent of all businesses of record. It employs 30 million persons. At SBA the yardstick as to what comprises small business is one which employs a maximum of 250 persons and does not dominate its field in the manufacturing area.

In other phases, usually, but not always, specifications can be changed to include businesses employing from 750 to 1000 persons.

Returning to the best-known aspect of the Small Business Administration, financial assistance, Savage explained the maximum loan was $350,000, to be paid in a maximum of ten years at 5 1/2 per cent interest. He added, however, that in surplus labor areas the rate was 4 per cent.

The SBA is not in competition with private lending institutions, Savage continued. He pointed out that about two-thirds of the loans were made with other lending institutions and that banks can process the applications. The banks get paid first. The program is endorsed by the American Bankers Association.

In 1958 the Small Business Investment Act was passed permitting investment firms to be licensed by the federal government for long-term loans. Another regulation permitted SBA loans to local development corporations.

In 1961, the Area Development Act was passed to eliminate areas of chronic and underemployment. This is done by loans, advice and assistance to communities. Another phase applies to areas of natural disaster in which loans can be made at 3 per cent up to 20 years.

Turning to his specialty, procurement and technical service, Savage emphasized the Philadelphia office, out of which he works, had 14 licensed engineers alone and that technical assistance was available for persons affected by urban renewal, for example.

In similar aspects, Savage said SBA can provide an industrial potential survey and explain how to sell to the government.

In the latter respect, the gov-

Nosegay... by Fostoria

As its name suggests, Nosegay is a lighthearted floral pattern, as delightfully feminine as a bride's bouquet. It is a polished cutting on graceful handblown stemware. It was designed to complement floral patterns in china, but you'll find it goes equally well with many plain and geometric designs. Come see it in our open-stock Fostoria collection.

Poultrymen Study Broiler Housing

More than 225 poultrymen attending the Broiler Housing Seminar at the University of Delaware's Georgetown Substation on Thursday (Oct. 3) heard University and industry experts discuss many phases of broiler housing, from economics to environment control.

Among the highlights of the meeting were reports on some of the findings in experiments in windowless, insulated broiler housing conducted by University of Delaware researchers.

Ernest W. Walpole, extension agricultural engineer at the University, who designed the windowless broiler house, pointed out that the objective of mechanized, controlled environment broiler housing is to make broiler management easier.

"We want to eliminate some of the guess-work and much of the tedious, drudgery type of labor from broiler management and reduce the time required to properly care for broilers," he said. "It is our contention that a mechanized ventilation system with controlled inlets can eliminate both the labor and guess-work involved in ventilating. Then the operator will have more time to do a better job of watching the birds."

"Mechanization should free the operator, both physically and mentally so he can devote more of his time to management where it counts — in the actual observation and care of the birds. This should result in higher income and in improved quality of the birds marketed," Walpole said.

Ray Lloyd, associate extension poultryman, reported on field studies being conducted on broiler housing on the Delmarva peninsula. He said the research shows there is a considerable saving in fuel costs where thermostats are used to cut off the heat when the desired brooder temperature is reached.

The research also indicates that insulated pens are especially effective during hot weather. Lloyd explained that this is because when the birds are kept cooler they will continue to eat, while birds in a hot, uninsulated house will not eat during extremely hot days. He said this means that the birds in the cooler, insulated house will weigh heavier and have a better feed conversion.

Lloyd also said the research shows that the amount of light in a broiler house being tested at the University substation, it was found that broilers do better with a low light intensity, he said.

W. T. McAllister, extension economist at the University of Delaware, pointed out to poultrymen that one-tenth of a cent a pound in either high prices or lower costs would have meant some $850,000 more broiler income for Delmarva.

"As the broiler industry matures," he said, "there is a tendency for the margin between costs and prices to narrow. This is the result of competition among all segments of the broiler industry as each firm tries to maximize its potential returns."

McAllister said, "The magnitude and frequency of errors in judgment or management must be reduced if company profit is to be protected. Any idea which offers an opportunity to reduce fuel cost by as little as $1 per thousand during winter brooding or to improve feed conversion by 10 points, or to increase the output per man has merit." McAllister then explained ways of determining whether various changes in broiler growing methods could prove profitable to the broiler grower.

Frank D'Armi, associate professor of poultry research for the University, explained some of the experiments in broiler housing conducted at the University, showing slides of some of this research.

D'Armi, Lloyd and Walpole have co-authored a publication, "Insulation and Mechanical Ventilation of Delmarva Broiler Houses," which explains how to install these facilities in new or existing broiler houses.

Other speakers at the Broiler Housing Seminar included engineers and scientists from other universities and from the U. S. Department of Agriculture, as well as representatives of firms making materials used in broiler housing.

Retired Scout Leader Speaks On Scouting

"I have always regarded Girl Scouting as an outdoor program," is the considered opinion of 80-year-old Mrs. Austin Roberts of Sudlersville.

Just last year Mrs. Roberts retired as leader of the oldest existing troop of Girl Scouts in Maryland, and during her 38 years with scouting, she led the Sudlersville troop on a wide variety of field and camping trips around the nation.

A pioneer-type, Mrs. Roberts declares, "Scouting seems to be turning more to housekeeping and child care these days. I always felt that the girls could learn that at home, so I tried to teach them something about the outdoors. It's good for people to know something about nature."

With the Chesapeake Bay Girl Scout Council preparing for their October "kick-off" for funds, Council leaders cite the work of Mrs. Roberts through the years and hold her up as an example to the other volunteer leaders and workers on the Peninsula.

Mrs. Roberts became interested in Girl Scouting in 1924, working with Troop 1 at Sudlersville under Miss Sara Spencer Roe, who had founded the troop at Sudlersville as well as the one in Centreville. She took over full responsibility for the Sudlersville troop in 1929 when Miss Roe fell ill.

"Robbie," as her girls still call her, took the Scouts camping for the first time at Booker's Wharf, on the Chester River, near Centreville, now the site of Camp-Pe-Co-Meth, the Methodist Church camp.

In 1936, Mrs. Roberts' troop became the first group of Girl Scouts in the country to take a trip-camp. Riding in a bus hired from a nearby town, they took a week's journey into the woods of the Shenandoah Valley. She recalls that the roads in the area were just opening up after the Depression.

However, this trip was so successful that a year later, the troop journeyed into Canada to visit the Dionne quintuplets, born three years earlier, and who were still world-wide news. The Sudlersville Scouts also met Dr. Allan Defoe, the doctor that delivered the Dionne girls.

"Robbie's" girls always traveled on a shoestring; the cooked and slept at campsites along the way.

"We were camping out in Vermont on the way back from Canada," recalls Mrs. Roberts, "and one of the girls rolled down the mountain in her sleep." The outdoor life was invigorating, but apparently not always safe.

Mrs. Roberts took her girls to the 1939 World's Fair and in following years made trips to Washington and even out to Lexington, Kentucky to see the famed racehorse, Man 'O War. Between trips she organized Girl Scouts up and down the Eastern Shore. As a former Centreville Girl Scout says, "Mrs. Roberts was the backbone of Girl Scouting in this whole area."

She served as Lone Troop Consultant and organizer for the National Girl Scout Organization when this area was made up of lone troops. "Robbie" was so beloved by her girls that one year they held a bake and raised funds so they could send her to a national Girl Scout Convention and she wouldn't have to skip to miss out on any fun.

Mrs. Austin Roberts has dedicated her life to Girl Scouting since she entered the program in 1924 — no one could have been more dedicated, says Chesapeake Bay Girl Scout Council officers that worked with her for so many years.

Mrs. Elmer Mick

Mrs. Elmer Mick, 75, died at her home, Chestnut Knoll, Milford, Sunday night.

Private funeral services were held at the Rogers Funeral Home Wednesday morning.

Mrs. Mick is survived by two sons, Dr. Felix Mick, Milford; Frank Mick, Arizona; two brothers, Judge Felix Piekarski, Philadelphia; Clem Piekarski, Detroit, Mich.; one sister, Mrs. W. K. Lattions, West Palm Beach, Fla., and eight grandchildren.

Mrs. Mick was the widow of Felix Mick, a teacher in Harrington Schools in the '20s.

Label Is Key to Performance of Garments

The label or handtag is an important bit of "literature" on any garment you buy, according to Janet Reed, extension clothing and textiles specialist at the University of Delaware.

With the wide variety of fabrics available today, it isn't always possible to tell the kind of fabric you're buying by the "feel". Federal law requires that all textile fiber products — including pillows and mattresses as well as garments and yard goods — carry labels giving the generic names of fibers and percentages of each fiber in the product. These generic names include natural fibers such as cotton, wool and silk and man-made fibers such as acrylics and polyesters, Miss Reed explains.

However, even though fiber content must be listed on the handtag, or label, a shopper can easily be misled by other statements on the labels, Miss Reed notes.

Even such a common term as "drip dry" can be misleading, she points out. "Although we usually think of 'drip dry' as meaning a garment which needs very little ironing," Miss Reed says, "a manufacturer can conceivably use this term to describe anything washable—because, after all, any fabric will 'drip dry'. The term itself says nothing about wrinkles or ironing."

Miss Reed explains that, for this reason, it's best to get your clues as to wrinkle-resistance and other features from fiber content and fabric finishes listed on the label.

Other statements Miss Reed has noticed on garment labels include such things as "guaranteed to fit," "figure flattering," "quality tailoring," or "100% quality fabric." These are masterpieces of deception, she says, because they are just a lot of words that don't really mean anything about construction or care of the garment.

Many labels, however, are very helpful, listing not only the fiber content of the garment, but washing, ironing and other care instructions. It's a good idea to save these labels, jotting down a description of the garment, so you can refer to it when doing the laundry, Miss Reed says.

With all the new fibers, fiber blends and finishes, it's no longer possible just to look at a fabric and positively identify it, Miss Reed notes. Rayon may look like linen, cotton may look like wool, nylon may look like silk. The only way to really find out what you are buying is to read the labels—and be sure you've interpreted them correctly, she says.

Winners Named In Favorite Foods Contest

Winners have been named in the four divisions of the annual state-wide 4-H "Favorite Foods Contest," according to James O. Baker, state 4-H leader.

The cook-off, held recently in Dover, was open to winners of the county contests. All entrants are members of 4-H foods clubs.

Each entrant was required to prepare a food appropriate to one of the four categories, in addition to submitting a written menu for the meal and for the entire day's meals. The youngster also arranged a centerpiece and place setting to be used when serving the dish.

Winners in the breakfast category were Ava Willey, of Dover, first; Nancy Morris, Townsend, second, and Deborah Duke, Hartly, third.

In the luncheon dish division, Georgeanne Perry, of Newark, placed first, followed by Margaret Thomas, Maryland, and Janice Warrington, Bridgeville.

Winners in the dinner division were Linda Stayton, of Houston; Andrea Moore, Bridgeville, and Judy Layton, Georgetown.

In the dessert division, winners included Dorothy Hopkins, of Lewes; Thelma Thomas, Maryland, and Faye Seely, Greenwood.

Cash awards were presented to the winners by Suburban Propane Gas Corporation, which also provided stoves used in the cook-off and supplied overnight accommodations and meals for the contestants and their chaperones.

Agents at National Conf. Challenged To Change Image

An Iowa extension administrator called on county agents across the nation to look at their image and accomplishments to see if they are adequate for the changing times.

Speaking before the National Association of County Agricultural Agents, Marvin A. Anderson, associate director of the Cooperative Extension Service, Iowa State University, said recognition of continuing education and the importance of program determination are the two basic ingredients necessary if the county agent is to be successful in his role.

Two Delaware county agents, William H. Henderson, Sussex County, and George K. Vapaa, Kent County, attended the meeting.

Anderson said everyone in agriculture must reassess his services continually. He said that talks with experts in other fields related to agriculture indicated that county agents are changing much too slowly in terms of the needs of modern farming.

Anderson asked agents attending the convention to accept some of the methods used by major corporations in projecting their image. "The most significant factors in the image building process are personnel and product. The agents represent the personnel. What they feel and do to further their objectives will be likened to the good image of a corporation. The product is the educational benefits that the county agent passes on."

He listed the requirements necessary in improving the county agent image: an attitude that accommodates change; training that precedes need; a perception of the significant leadership that is effective and a dedication to follow through.

While attending the meeting, Vapaa received the National Association of County Agricultural Agents Distinguished Service Award. He was one of 122 agents from 44 states to be recognized.

U. of D. Releases Broiler Housing Bulletin

A bulletin describing practical use of insulation and mechanical ventilation in growing broilers has just been released by the University of Delaware.

The publication, "Insulation and Mechanical Ventilation of Delaware Broiler Houses," is a joint project of the Agricultural Extension Service and Experiment Station of the School of Agriculture at the University of Delaware. It was written by Ernest W. Walpole, extension agricultural engineer, Frank A. D'Armi, assistant professor of poultry research, and Ray Lloyd, associate extension poultryman. Publication of the bulletin was prompted by the increased interest in improving broiler house environment, according to the authors, all of whom have an active part in broiler housing research at the University of Delaware's experiment station.

Better broiler house environment can be achieved by eliminating temperature extremes and reducing condensation, at the same time providing adequate fresh air for the birds, the authors point out. They say the most practical way to accomplish this is through the use of insulation and mechanical ventilation.

The bulletin discusses the types of insulation that can be used in broiler houses, explaining how it should be applied to both old and new houses and pointing out the differences among insulation materials available.

In addition, the authors describe mechanical ventilation systems for insulated broiler houses, explaining how to select and install fans, inlets, controls and wiring.

The publication is illustrated with photographs and drawings showing types of housing including the University of Delaware's new windowless broiler house, the first of its kind on the Delmarva peninsula, as well as methods and examples of proper ventilation of several types of housing. There is also a table indicating the insulation value of all common materials being used for this purpose.

Copies of this publication may be obtained by writing the Agricultural Hall Mail Room, University of Delaware.

Extension Council Holds Safety Meeting

Representatives from Delaware Home Economics Extension clubs are attending their fourth annual safety conference today (Oct. 10) at the First Presbyterian Church, Dover.

Sponsored by the Delaware Home Economics Extension Council, the meeting is featuring talks by Dr. Gorbam Lane, professor of psychology at the University of Delaware, and Samuel McKay, former director of safety for Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania. Their topics deal with the ways attitudes and emotions affect behavior and, therefore, safety.

The luncheon meeting is open to chairmen of safety and family life committees of the more than 90 home economics extension clubs in the state, according to Mrs. Alice King, state leader of home economics extension at the University of Delaware. Mrs. Edward Berg of Newark, is chairman of the state safety committee.

"We know that children and young people imitate adults and that our attitudes and behavior toward driving practices and law enforcement influence the behavior of young people," Mrs. King said. "Therefore the family has a major responsibility for building positive attitudes about safe driving and other safety practices."

KISSMEYER NEILSEN

Research Scientist Joins U. of D. Staff

Dr. Eric Kissmeyer-Nielsen, a native of Denmark and a recent graduate of the University of Wisconsin, has been named an assistant research professor in the department of agricultural biochemistry and food technology at the University of Delaware.

Dr. Kissmeyer-Nielsen's main research project at present deals with the chemistry of mushrooms, determining how their nitrogen and protein content relate to human nutrition, according to Dr. Morris Cover, director of the University's Agricultural Experiment Station.

Dr. Kissmeyer-Nielsen received his bachelor of science degree from the Agricultural College, Copenhagen, Denmark. He spent five years working on research in food processing for an industrial firm in Denmark and for the American Scandinavian Foundation in New York and Copenhagen.

He earned his master of science degree at Cornell University and his doctorate from the University of Wisconsin. He is married and the father of one son.

Speaking of Insects

with Dale Bray

Of all the animals of the world, the insects have the greatest range in size. It would take 100 of our smallest beetles to cover a distance of one inch. Our largest insects, on the other hand, have a length of over 12 inches.

This smallest is of great importance when it comes to the control of insects with chemical insecticides. Once an insecticide has penetrated the insect's skin, called the exoskeleton, it has to travel only a short distance to reach the vital organs. In a large animal, the distance between skin and vital organs is enormous.

In addition, the surface to volume ratio of an insect is much greater than in larger animals. With greater surface, there will be an increase in absorption of insecticide. These two factors help to explain why the amount of chemical necessary to be dangerous to humans is many times greater than for insects.

Among the most important natural controls for insects are the spiders. Generally, biologists have been less impressed by the effectiveness of spiders than they have by the more spectacular parasitic wasps and flies that feed on other insects. This probably is because the numbers of spiders is underestimated. They are more abundant than most people think. Based on counts made several years ago, there are about 2 1/2 million spiders per acre in an ordinary countryside. Most of these will feed on insects—certainly playing an important role in control of insects.

Insects feed on almost every conceivable substance. Some can survive and even flourish in poisons such as cyanide and strychnine. They sometimes surprise the housewife by appearing in large number in such unusual things as paprika, cayenne pepper, and tobacco. They commonly are found in flour, corn meal and other stored food. Usually such infestations are brought into the home with the product, but once they are present they may spread to other stored food.

One of the most important pests of the kitchen is the cigarette beetle, so named because it will chew up cigarettes that are left unwrapped. This is the same beetle that gets in the paprika. Another one is the confused flour beetle. I think the people who named this particular species were the confused ones, for the beetles don't seem to be confused at all. They go about their business of infesting our food just as a normal healthy flour beetle should do.

When stored food is infested with insects, it should be destroyed by burning or heating for some time in an oven. There is no point in thinking about insecticides for control of these pests—you must not spray the insecticide on the food you intend to eat—and besides, who wants it after the bugs get in it anyway?

FENCE TALK

With George Vapaa

A rice paddy is presently under construction in the northern part of Kent County says Frederick T. Mott, U. S. Soil Conservationist. This new 15 acre conservation practice is being tried by Bombay Hook Wildlife Refuge. Rice paddies for waterfowl control are expected to prove quite satisfactory in this area.

Many Kent County Soil Conservation District Cooperators are competing small "goose ponds" ranging from a half acre to an acre in size. These are relatively inexpensive shallow ponds, which will support one or two duck blinds during the hunting season. Local farmers realize a substantial income from these ponds. Goose and duck hunting is becoming a bigger business each year in Kent County, says Mott. We know, because Kent Soil Conservation District farmers are keeping us busy with demands for this type of assistance.

A twenty-one acre wildlife pond for ducks and geese is being constructed on the J. Richard Draper and Samuel U. Mitchell farm near Bowers Beach. This is a private pond which the land owners will rent to hunters this fall. This pond has an 800 ft dam with a water structure to raise and lower the water.

Rutgers University in New Jersey has lost its most famous landmark, the Kilmer Oak. The tree has been declining for several years, and finally had to be cut down Sept. 18.

Its fame, quite apart from its age and majestic proportions, rests on the legend that it inspired Joyce Kilmer, World War I hero-poet, to write the poem, "Trees," that ends: "Poems are made by fools like me, but only God can make a tree."

Proponents of the legend say it's only logical to believe that the young Kilmer, fond of taking walks, was moved to compose his verse after repeatedly gazing on the majestic oak, then in its prime, on the College of Agriculture grounds.

Hog ulcers may be caused by modern life. High-pressure modern feeds and swine raising practices may cause stomach ulcers in swine, according to a veterinary scientist at the University of Wisconsin. Investigators who examined the stomachs of 3,700 pigs found abnormalities of the stomach lining in 44 per cent and erosions, ulcers, or scars in another 16 per cent. Barrows had more stomach ulcers than young females or sows. But there was no difference among breeds. Researchers are checking stress factors as well as feeding and management practices as possible causes of ulcers.

Worn snapping rolls can create two serious corn harvest problems that usually show up when rolls have been in use for 500 acres or more.

They cause more shelling as ears are removed from the stalk, and more plugging—which leads to accidents. A good indication of snapping roll condition is the amount of husks left on ears that have gone through the picker. Snapping rolls in good condition will remove enough husks so that the husking bed can finish the job, deliver clean corn to the wagon. Worn snapping rolls leave more husks on the ear.

Don't try to extend snapping roll life by welding beads on worn rolls, except in an emergency. Welding the rolls will stop plugging, but has little effect on corn losses. In fact, improper welding can increase losses.

New rolls in a picker can easily save four to five bushels of corn to the acre. At that rate, they should pay for themselves after about 60 acres of corn harvesting.

Everything in agriculture is seasonal—there's a time to plow, a time to plant, a time to harvest. With a beef cow herd, harvest time—when the calves are weaned—is one of the most important. It is the most important where income is concerned.

A good calf crop depends upon good bulls and good cows—the kind that raise a calf regularly, the kind that wean a good big calf every year. It takes a good deal of paper work to develop this kind of herd.

Records must be kept of the sire and dam of each calf. The date the calf is dropped is important because you are going to want to know its age at weaning time. Each calf—in fact, every animal in the herd—should be permanently identified. Neck chains get lost, brands are sometimes hard to read, ear tags pull out and ear notches are misread. For permanence, a good tattoo just cannot be beat.

Delaware Food Market Report

Every day, it seems more and more apples, more varieties, too, make their welcome and long-awaited appearance at the markets and roadside stands. The United States Department of Agriculture says an above average apple crop is on the way. Well over 122 million bushels are likely to be harvested over the nation, with good crops in the two leading apple producing states—New York and Washington. There will be ample reason for us to join the celebration of National Apple Week beginning now. Apples are and will be featured everywhere.

Top Northeast apple and in most plentiful supply is the McIntosh, an old favorite in this area. Also to be available in good supply in the coming weeks will be Staymans, Winesaps, Red and Golden Delicious, Jonathans, Cortlands, Baldwins, Rome Beauties, and other local varieties.

When selecting apples for cooking and eating raw, let taste, appearance and texture guide you. The sweeter, less tart, and fine textured varieties make good eating apples. While the tarter and firmer textured apples are best for cooking; many varieties, however, make good eating and cooking apples—Stayman, McIntosh; Cortland, and Jonathan are examples. Delicious, both red and golden, are usually considered eating apples.

No matter what the variety, apples are at their peak of flavor and quality when they are firm, bright, crisp, and clean. Here is an old fashion test—a good apple will "squeak" when you rub your thumb over the surface.

Early fall turkeys should offer many opportunities for economical meals. Supplies are again quite large; watch for special sales. More pork is coming to market and prices on some cuts have declined. During the week ahead, watch for sales on both fresh cuts, such as: loins, spare ribs, ham, and Boston butt, as well as on smoked hams, and picnic hams.

This is the month to try a variety of fresh fish and shellfish, since cold, stormy weather will later reduce supplies. Abundant fresh fish include bluefish, butterfish, flounder, and cod.

Many fresh vegetables are now plentiful, prices are reasonable and quality is good to excellent. When you shop next, be sure to check the following for good buys; brussels sprouts, cauliflower, celery, cabbage, sweet potatoes, peppers, green and yellow onions, lettuce and beets.

There've Been Some Big Changes Made

The bus at the top was fine for 1938. It made frequent stops, operated on two lane roads, and encountered little traffic.

Today's bus is designed to run hundreds of miles without stops. Its motor is more powerful, yet quieter; and the coach is air conditioned, rest-room equipped.

But one thing is the same—the Trailways spirit of neighborliness and helpfulness to the traveler. This spirit, we feel, is why Trailways has grown in service to your community and the nation.

"Sports Odds And Ends"

It was a good football weekend for Bears' teams and a bad one for the Colts. The Chicago Bears beat the Baltimore Colts 10-3 in a National Football League game and the Harrington Junior Football League Bears of Mill Morris' bested the Colts of the same league by 15-0.

Four Local Lads To Compete In Physique Contest

Four young men who are members of the St. Stephen's Gym will compete this Saturday in an open Novice Weight Lifting and Physique contest in Philadelphia.

As far as is known locally, these are the only civilian weight lifting contestants south of the canal in Delaware. The boys are: Jim Cain, who will enter the 123 lb. event; Mike Bakota, the 132 lb. event; John Yocum, the 143 lb. event; Ed Yocum, the 198 lb. event.

The meet will begin at 1 p.m. and will continue into the evening. It is sanctioned by the Mid Atlantic Association of the AAU (Amateur Athletic Union) and is sponsored by the South Philadelphia Weight Lifting Club. The meet will take place at the Vane Recreation Center, at 26 & Moore Streets.

A Novice Meet is one where no contestants has ever received first place in any previous weight lifting contest. Other lifters preparing for future meets are Frank Welch, Raleigh Davis, Jr., and Mike Kohel. Several boys who are beginning the program are: Jack Hopkins, Steven O'Neal, Terry McCready, Quay Rice, Jr., Sam Ludlow and Bill Haldeman. The coaches are Ezra Yocum with Sgt. Leonard Buzzuto, of the Dover Air Force Base, as advisor and associate coach. Sgt. Buzzuto is also lifting in the 198 lb. class but represents the Dover Air Force Base.

Members competing in this meet will be honored in a special way Sunday evening, Oct. 20. All contestants will leave at 8 a.m. for the Saturday meet. Spectators, who desire to go should be at the church at 9:30 a.m. with box lunch and adequate spending money.

Lion Harriers Win Easily In Wilmington

Coach Harold McDonald's Harrington High cross-country Lions outran Corpus Christi High of Elsmere at Rockford Park, Wilmington, Friday afternoon. Bob Smith ran the 2.4 miles hills course in 12 minutes and 24 seconds with Dennis Rogers and George Bonniwell taking second and third. The later two were both clocked in the same time (12:30) since they were only an inch or two apart.

The Lions 19-36 triumph stamps them as the team to beat in the Class B State Championship meet to be held on November 6th. A. I. DuPont High of Wilmington, another Class B contender, nosed out Corpus Christi on Monday of this week by two points. St. Elizabeth High School, of Wilmington, appears to be the only Class B school with a chance to beat the Lions unless De La Warr High, of the Blue Hen Conference, has an enrollment small enough to qualify them for the Nov. 6th test. In that event it would be a three team race. Other schools in Class B are Howard High, Archmere, Tower Hill, Brown Vocational, Seaford, Caesar Rodney, Milford and possibly Claymont.

In the Corpus Christi meet Wayne Carson and Ellis Weyer captured sixth and seventh place to account for Harrington's winning low total of 19 points. Roger Betts, Henry Minner, Marshall Hatfield finished eighth, ninth and tenth in the field of 36 starters and finishers. Freshman Danny Hicks made his best varsity showing as he sprinted home in 11th position.

Roger Redden, Bobby Matthews and Donald Wells grabbed the next three places ahead of Corpus Christi's No. 3 and No. 4 runners.

A check of the records for the past few years shows that frequently a boy who occupies the No. 9, No. 10 and higher spots on a H.H.S. team could be No. 2 or No. 3 on many of the other teams in the area. This is concrete proof that the locals are consistently strong, year in and year out.

Harold Russ and Bob Dean came across the finish line together in 14:25 followed by Nick Morris in 14:37. These are fine times for first year men. Morris and Dean are eighth graders, but would be varsity runners at some other schools. Kids like these will be ready and able to fill in for Carson, Rogers, Bonniwell and Smith after the big four are graduated.

This week the Lions will endeavor to stretch their victory string to four as they take on Centerville, Md., Wednesday, and Seaford and Caesar Rodney Friday. Both meets are at Killen's Pond. Starting time is 3:45.

The Harrington Club will serve as hostesses for the Powder Puff Mechanics Workshop for Kent and Sussex Counties, Nov. 5. The sessions will be held beginning at 10 a.m. in the Parish House of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church and Fry's Amoco garage. Mrs. Quay Rice, safety chairman, stresses that the workshop is for all club women and will include tips on pedestrian, passenger and driver safety. The workshop is sponsored by the Delaware Safety Council and the Delaware State Federation of Women's Clubs.

Eagles Nip Lions In Last 15 Seconds

Harrington High School's football Lions lost a heartbreaker at Ocean View Saturday afternoon when a long desperation pass play clicked for the Lord Baltimore Eagles and gave them a come-from-behind 13-7 victory.

The Lions, hampered further by the loss of standout pass catcher and defensive specialist Tom Lord did not play as well as they did against Bridgeville the week previous, but held a 7-6 lead and were driving on the Lord Baltimore goal with less than half a minute remaining.

Barry Fry, who had been the chief Harrington offensive threat, was hit hard and dropped the ball. An Eagle got the ball and headed upfield only to be stopped by a long, diving tackle by Charlie Taylor, just as it appeared that the Lord would go all the way to score.

With 15 seconds left to play an enemy receiver got behind the defense and took the long pass for the go-ahead score. After the try for the extra point failed Lord Baltimore kicked off, smothered the ball carrier and then time ran out.

At the start of the game Harrington marched down the field but were halted by two fumbles. The host team then scored first by gaining ground on several plays through the Lions forward wall. The touchdown came on an improvised play that started with an attempt to go through the middle. The ball carrier found the center of the line jammed up so he bounced back out and went around end to tally the six-point score, on a scamper of 35 yards.

The Lions recovered a fumble on the Eagles 30-yard line in the second period but could not capitalize on the opportunity.

Another Eagle drive was slowed by a fifteen yard penalty and then halted completely by a last-ditch tackle by Wayne Porter, that prevented a Green runner from possibly going all the way.

Bill Adams carried twice for a first down on the Lion's 34 before the Eagles held. Richard Black got off a fine punt that carried all the way to the host team's 18.

A later Harrington surge finally reached paydirt. Adams and Fry carried the mail to the Eagle 10-yard line. Fry then crashed through the Green line twice in a row to score then repeated this formula for the extra point that put Harrington in the van 7-6. Bill Adams' recovery of a fumble started the drive.

The host school had a move stopped on the H.H.S. 44 as Rusty Jack creamed a ball carrier for a loss.

Just before the four minute buzzer Black got the Lions out of trouble as he fielded a low pass from center and got off another good boot to the Eagle 18.

The Lords tried an aerial that was batted around in the air before Larry Garey picked it off for the Lions on the L.B. 40. Fry gained 11 yards on two plays to put Harrington on the Green 29. With a first down and only scant seconds remaining, the Harrington fans felt pretty good. Then disaster struck and four plays later the game was in the Lord Baltimore win column.

Frank Glazier's Lions will have their work cut out for them this week when powerful Millsboro will visit Harrington Saturday afternoon.

The Blue Devils dropped a one point decision to strong Georgetown of the Diamond State Conference, beat Lord Baltimore by three touchdowns and clobbered Rehoboth 33-0. Led by their 205 pound All-State fullback Jim Layfield, they appear to be tough opposition, indeed.

We are not giving up on the Lions this early in the season, for we feel that it may soon be their turn to get some breaks. After Millsboro, only one tough opponent, undefeated John M. Clayton, remains out of the six foes to be met. Give the locals a couple of good bounces of the oval and they still may fool a lot of people.

Kent and Sussex Raceway at Harrington has extended its racing meet through Oct. 26, giving the track a 38-night program.

William W. Shaw, director of racing, revealed that the request for an eight-day extension had been approved by the State Harness Racing Commission and the United States Trotting Association.

Through 20 nights of racing this year, total attendance was 62,146, an average of 3,107 nightly. This compares to 62,657 or 3,133 nightly for the first 20 nights of 1962. Total mutuel handle so far this year has been $2,032,285, down slightly over 1% from 1962, when $2,058,846 was bet the first 20 nights. The nightly mutuel handle this year have averaged $101,614 compared to 102,942 for the same period last year.

Last Saturday night the season's total mutuel handle was reached when 4,480 persons in attendance bet a total of $154,286. The previous high for the year had been the $153,666 set the previous Saturday night.

Shaw announced that during the first 20 nights of racing the track has paid horsemen a total of $111,000 in purses.

Lion Harriers Win Third Straight Meet

Centreville, Md. High was unable to get a man in the first ten in a dual meet with Harrington at Killen's Pond on Wednesday. Actually, the first seven Lions across the finish line were all that was needed to give H.H.S. a perfect score 15-50 victory.

Capt. Wayne Carson, Bob Smith, George Bonniwell and Dennis Rogers linked arms and finished in a dead heat for first place. The time of 12:52 represents a new record for Carson and is close to the personal bests of Rogers and Bonniwell.

Marshall Hatfield cut 10 seconds off his previous best time as he corded a fast 12:59 for the 2.4 miles course. Ellis Weyer was one second behind Hatfield in sixth place. Roger Betts, Roger Redden, Dan Hicks and Frank Cain nabbed the next four spots. Betts, Hicks and Cain ran their fastest races ever. Hicks, a freshman, never has been as near the front as his ninth place finish this time.

Donald Wells chopped off 15 seconds from his previous best time as he continues to improve and impress. Jack Dickerson (14.33), Harold Russ (14.44), Wayne Reid, Harold Mullins and Jim Rash were other Harrington runners to log their best races ever. Russ and Rash are the newest members of the squad. They don't have nearly as many workouts under their belts as do most of the others, but they are steadily bringing their times down.

Friday, Oct. 11 the Lions will entertain Caesar Rodney and Seaford in a triangular meet at Killen's Pond. Coach Harold McDonald's Lions hope to hurdle the larger Diamond State Conference schools and keep alive their unbeaten season.
