CITY COUNCIL STILL LOOKING FOR ADDITIONAL REVENUE

The City Council is giving serious consideration to raising revenue, with a plan probably to be formulated next month. Mayor Fulton J. Downing at the regular April meeting Wednesday evening, told the Council he had a plan to increase revenue and added it would come up at the May meeting.

Continuing, he explained securing additional monies would require a selling deal—either to spend less or earn more. He believed the May meeting would be a good time to disclose a plan since the final payment on the sewer bonds, started in 1935, would be paid off.

Payment of taxes started this week and were proceeding well, said City Clerk Cathryn Simpson. It was thought the payments would be sufficient to pay off the sewer bonds but the Council decided to play safe and authorized $5000 for the purpose if sufficient tax money did not come in within the next two weeks.

Getting back to increasing revenue, nothing was decided Wednesday night. However, establishing a sewer tax or increasing capitation taxes has been mentioned. Councilman Albert C. Price told the Council an increase in capitation tax from the current $4.15 to $8.50 would increase the revenue $6229.

Nothing was mentioned about increasing property taxes, though the last increase in this field was in the reign of the late Mayor Earl Sylvester many years ago.

C. of C. Asks City Help For Annual Christmas Lighting

The Chamber of Commerce wants the City to assume the costs of installing the special ornamental Christmas lighting.

Thomas L. Peck, the chamber president, told the Council, at its April meeting Wednesday night, he was broaching the subject early to give plenty of time for thought and that "he didn't expect any action tonight", which proved to be the case.

He explained the lighting program benefited all citizens and that all should pay through their government. He added the chamber had been obliged to dip into its own funds to add to contributions for the lights and this was not practical since the chamber dues were limited.

He believed the City could do it cheaper and pointed to Milford and Seaford as examples of communities which paid for the lights. The City, however, has been paying for the current for the Christmas lights.

A feature of the meeting was the playing of tapes of the visit of Mayor Downing to the Caribbean recently.

Century Club Holds Luncheon

A large number of out-of-town guests were present at the spring luncheon of the Harrington New Century Club on Tuesday afternoon at the club house. This is the traditional "big" luncheon that marks the close of a president's two-year term, and is always attended by a large group.

This year was no exception with members inviting their friends from out-of-town and a good representation of state officers and other club presidents being present also.

As befits a spring luncheon the floral decorations and color scheme in the club house vied with the lovely spring hats and outfits of the ladies. Luncheon was served by the Choir Mother's Auxiliary of Asbury Church.

Mrs. Francis J. Winkler, club president, welcomed those present, following the invocation by Mrs. Quay Rice, Mrs. J. Fred Miles, state president, and Mrs. William Draper, Kent County vice president, both spoke briefly.

The program consisted of a choral ensemble from the Harrington High School. They sang "Green Cathedral." The ensemble was Miss Bobette DeVroy, Miss Jeri Jarrell, Miss Marilyn Jarrell and Miss Dawn Hopkins, Marshall Hatfield and Ronald Hughes. Miss Jeri Jarrell sang "How Lovely Is Thy Dwelling Place." Mrs. Leon Kukulka sang "On the Board Walk At Atlantic City" and "Easter Parade" to introduce the Easter Fashion Show skit. Those taking part in the skit were Mrs. Lester Smith, narrator, Mrs. Kenneth Aiken, Mrs. Fred Bailey, Mrs. Fred Wilson, Mrs. Samuel Williams, Mrs. Robert Weaver and Mrs. Charles L. Peck, Jr. They all modeled

Assembly To Return on Monday

It's official now, the General Assembly will return on Monday.

Lt. Gov. Eugene Lamnot, who presides over the Senate, said Tuesday that he and House Speaker Sherman W. Tribbitt, D-St. Georges Hundred, had agreed on the date and that notices to legislators were going out.

While it is never possible to predict how long the assembly will stay in session, Lamnot said "it looks like it could stay for a while."

The legislature has met for five days this year but is still in its third legislative day, out of an allowed 30.

Tribbitt said the assembly will probably spend next week considering some pending legislation including the Open Spaces bill, HS 1 for HB 388, and then take up the budget.

Tribbitt said he is very eager to get the Open Spaces bill enacted. It would take some $3 million from the divestiture fund to acquire land for recreation and conservation.

Drainage Problems Occupy City Council's Time

Discussion of sewers and a ditch occupied a large part of the time of the City Council at its April meeting Wednesday evening.

A ditch at Benjamin Street and Smith Avenue has been a problem for some years. It has been eroding the lawn of Maurice Harrington, whose lot extends back from Delaware Avenue and City Manager Alfred G. B. Mann believed the erosion from the ditch might cause a cave-in of road and curbs adjacent to the Benjamin Street bridge.

It was thought a three-foot tile or metal sewer, extended north 40 feet to a bend in the ditch, might solve the problem. Since the ditch takes drainage from state-maintained roads, such as Liberty Street and Delaware Avenue, it was suggested the State Highway Department might be interested in paying for the tiling. The city manager will get in touch with the department; meanwhile, the City will get prices from private contractors just in case.

Turning to sewers, Council Burton Satterfield said property owners were well pleased with the solution of a drainage problem on Grant Street near Dorman Street. City Manager Mann had had the sewers cleaned and this did the trick.

When Satterfield mentioned a perennial drainage problem at Short and Missillon Streets, Mann said he would check on costs of the Dorman Street project and perhaps he could arrive at a price on the first-mentioned project.

Cleaning the sewers would probably entail the use of a special machine. Mann mentioned a sewer rodding machine was very efficient but would cost $3829. While not action was taken one or two councilmen looked on the project favorably.

Blue Cross 'Plan B' Offered To Subscribers

22,000 subscribers of the standard Delaware Blue Shield Plan who do not belong through groups have an opportunity to apply for the new "Plan B" surgical-medical program. On Saturday, information about applying for the new surgical-medical coverage was mailed to these 22,000 Blue Cross and Blue Shield subscribers who pay their dues directly to the local Plan's office. The deadline for the return of the "Plan B" applications is this coming Friday, April 3.

Student contract subscribers will not be offered the opportunity of increasing their surgical-medical coverage at this time.

Group subscribers were offered the opportunity earlier this year to increase their surgical-medical benefits. About 650 of the 2,000 Blue Cross and Blue Shield groups gave their employees the opportunity to select the new "Plan B" surgical-medical program.

H. V. Maybee, managing director of Group Hospital Service, reported today that over 78,000 standard group members in 644 groups elected to take new "Plan B" (Continued on Page 8)

Mrs. Edgar Craven, Monroeville, N. J., is seeking information here for a family history. Persons having information may write her or get in touch with The Journal.

Mrs. Craven writes: "I am trying to locate a death which occurred in Harrington about 1890-92 (I am told). I am trying to do family history and the woman would be my husband's great-grandmother, Elizabeth Edwards (maiden name) who married—1. Joseph Craven; 2. Azariah Smith; 3. James C. Money."

Mrs. Craven says Smith and Money were residents of Harrington. She requests a list of morticians who were around here at that time. She adds she believes Mrs. Money is buried in Hollywood Cemetery.

A large crowd was present to enjoy the traditional fried oyster and chicken salad dinner put on by the Felton Fire Company Ladies Auxiliary.

A feature of the meeting was the presence in a body of the newly organized Kent County Young Peoples Farm Bureau Group. Their president, Robert Biggs, made a few remarks in which he listed their objectives and their plans for meeting these objectives.

Charlene Workman, Delaware Farm Bureau Queen, gave an interesting and inspiring talk on the importance of making our own decisions and standing up for our convictions.

A request for more participation in Farm Bureau activities was made by Mrs. Gladys Mack, State Farm Bureau Women's chairman.

POLICEMAN IS FOUND SHOT DEAD

Camden-Wyoming Police Chief Francis G. (Fats) More, 52, was found dead Tuesday morning of a gunshot wound.

State police said the wound, caused by a shot through the head with a .32 caliber revolver, was apparently self-inflicted.

Chief Moore had been missing since 8 a.m. Monday when he left his son, Wayne, 14, at the Caesar Rodney School.

Friends said he had been depressed over recent health reports he had received from his physician.

A brother, Charles, died in Baltimore Tuesday of natural causes after a long illness.

He was last seen going south on U. S. 13 near Camden.

When he did not arrive home, he was reported missing by his wife.

Police began a county-wide search for him, but he was not found until 10:20 a.m. Tuesday on a farm near Magnolia.

Farmer David Moore, no relation of the chief, went down a road near his farm southwest of Magnolia to check friends' reports that a strange car had been parked on the lane.

Moore found the chief sitting in his car, and called police.

The chief was pronounced dead on arrival at Kent General Hospital by Dr. Norman Jones.

Police estimated he died some time Monday morning.

Moore, a native and life resident of Camden, was well known for his work as a police officer.

One friend described him as devoted to his job, and some thought foul play might have been involved in his disappearance.

He was a driver examiner for the Motor Vehicle Division in Kent County and was "a conscientious and able worker," according to Motor Vehicle Commissioner Russell W. Whitby.

Moore had been chief of police in both Camden and Wyoming for 15 years. He was assisted by part-time policeman George T. Pusey.

Wyoming Mayor Raymond Johnson said no action has been taken to find a new police chief for the two towns. He said Councilman Charles Heritage, head of the joint police commission, will call a special meeting in the near future to take action.

Crash Kills Trucker On U. S. 13

A 40-year-old Maryland truck driver was fatally injured last Friday afternoon when he apparently fell asleep and ran off U. S. 13 south of Greenwood.

The victim, Carl Goslee, of Mar-dela Springs, Md., was pronounced dead at Nanticoke Memorial Hospital, Seaford, by Dr. Richard Tobin, deputy medical examiner. He suffered a fractured skull, the left side of his chest was crushed and both legs were broken when he was hurled from the rig after it struck a tree.

The tractor, with a 40-foot flat bed trailer, struck a car parked beside the road.

Its driver, Mrs. Evalia Mihalik, 37, of near Bridgeville, was taken to Milford Memorial Hospital for observation.

State police said the truck, owned by J. I. Wells and Co. of Salisbury, Md., was southbound on U. S. 13. They theorize from the manner in which the truck ran off the right side of the road that the driver fell asleep.

The truck sideswiped the Mihalik car, continued off the road for 152 feet, clipped off a telephone pole, then smashed into the tree.

Blood Pressure Machine Important For Diagnosis

Since blood pressure is an indication of the condition of your circulatory system and often gives a clue to the existence of other ills, it is customary procedure for your doctor to take your blood pressure when you visit him. It is a simple test, but one that many people do not understand.

The blood pressure machine is called a sphygmomanometer and consists of three main parts: an inflatable cuff that is placed around the patient's arm, a rubber bulb for pumping air into the cuff and a glass which looks like a thermometer and contains a column of mercury. Some have a dial instead of the column.

The doctor first places the cuff snugly around your bare arm just above the elbow. Then he squeezes the bulb until the cuff is filled with air. As the cuff gets tighter it shuts off the flow of blood through the artery, since the squeeze from the air pressure in the cuff is greater than the push of blood in the artery. The

Teens' Cleanliness Good Health Habit

Many teenagers tend to become careless about their grooming and so increase their self-consciousness. They worry because their complexions break out, their fingernails are dirty, specks of dandruff appear on their shoulders. These worries can all be eliminated by a carefully observed regimen of daily good grooming.

Teens should form the habit of keeping clean at all times. The first step in doing this is to take a bath or shower every day, more often if you take part in active sports or games. Follow your bath with an application of an antiperspirant or deodorant. Shampoo your hair regularly.

Because these are the years when most teenagers have trouble with their skins—pimples, blemishes and various skin eruptions—special attention should be given to the complexion. The best defense against blackheads and blemishes is lots of soap and water applied frequently. Wash your face gently and rinse all the soap off. Be careful about squeezing and pinching pimples and blackheads, since this will often aggravate the trouble.

Acne can be controlled and treated usually without leaving any scarring. Acne is the result of increased glandular activity and the secretion of oils which tend to clog the pores. Since some foods such as chocolate, nuts, pastry, fried and greasy foods may increase acne, it may be wise to replace these items in your diet with fruits, meats, milk, and vegetables.

Local Telephone Men Help Injured Man

If you're going to have an auto accident, choose a location where there's plenty of people to give first aid.

Ten employees from the Diamond State Telephone Company were recently attending a class on signal transmission in the conference room at the Milford Bowling Lanes.

All at once there was a loud scraping noise and through the window the men saw that a car had overturned and was skidding along the street outside the classroom.

Instinctively, the telephone men rushed out of the building to see if they could help. One member called the police immediately. The others ran to the overturned car.

The driver was unhurt, but his passenger was trapped in the wreckage, apparently injured. A call was made for an ambulance and a member of the class who is an ambulance driver assisted in getting the injured passenger out of the vehicle.

Other members of the class noticed gasoline pouring from the wreckage. They quickly got a fire extinguisher and also checked to insure that none of the bystanders were smoking. Still other members of the class directed traffic around the scene of the accident.

When the police and the ambulance arrived, the injured person had been freed and wrapped in blankets. The situation was well in hand.

When the ambulance pulled away and the authorities had arrived to remove the wreckage, the ten men returned to their (Continued on Page 8)

Kent County, for the first time, is spending money at a rate of $1 million a year—25 per cent more than it planned.

This was revealed in the annual audit report presented to the Kent County Levy Court Tuesday. It showed that as of the end of the audit year last Nov. 30, the county had spent $1,153,524.44, the first time that mark had topped a million.

Nearly half the total went to welfare recipients — $546,600, or 48.45 per cent. By contrast, the budget for the fiscal year to end this June 30 planned $335,950 for welfare spending in a total budget of only $738,553.

Thus, if the spending rate as of last November continues, and there is every reason to believe it will, the county will have spent approximately $300,000 more than it planned last year.

Home-rule proponent and Levy Court President James B. Mesick pointed out the county has no control over the spiraling welfare spending.

The county must raise any amount of money the state asks, he said, yet it has no say on how the money is distributed.

Auditor Harold E. Remley said the books as of the end of the accounting year last Nov. 30 show a deficit of $73,038.02, mostly in short-term loans to be paid from future receipts.

The deficit was not the largest registered by the county. In 1958 the audit showed a deficit of more than $90,000.

Welfare and departmental expenses together accounted for 87.4 per cent of the total expenditures of $1,153,524.44. The "welfare" category total includes fire companies and hospital as well as welfare payments.

Remley presented the report Tuesday to Levy Court and explained its significance. He pointed out that many figures would no longer be valid because of the time lapse since the end of the county's accounting year.

Remley said the county, as of Nov. 30, was owed more than $185,000 in overdue taxes. Some of the amounts had been delinquent since 1948 and earlier. Unpaid capitation taxes accounted for more than half the deficit.

Remley said the county originally had not budgeted more than $1 million, but had to spend that much money because of unanticipated costs.

He said court costs and welfare payments exceeded their budgeted amounts and accounted for the increase over the planned expenditures.

The welfare money is used by the state for the Welfare Home at Smyrna ($302,000), general assistance ($192,000) and aid to dependent children ($50,000).

Remley said a $12,000 increase in aid to dependent children funds (Continued on Page 4)

Greenwood

Tues., March 24, 32 9th grade civics students traveled from Greenwood High School to Milford City Hall to observe a town council in operation. The students, under the direction of their teacher, Carl Hill, were able to get a first-hand knowledge of the problems of Civic Government, a subject they have been studying for the past several weeks.

Mr. Hill stated that he feels this trip has done more to spur the interest of the students in their study of local government than any other single thing he has attempted. Plans are being made to take the classes to a meeting of the Greenwood Council April 7, so they can get the viewpoints from two different types of town government in two different sized towns.

Dover Woman To Read the Label On Household Aids

Delaware B.P.W. has become the recipient of many recent national and state honors. Dr. Elizabeth Phillips of Dover, International Fine Arts committee woman, was appointed to the National Timekeepers Committee for the National Convention. Dr. Phillips will not only attend the National Convention in Detroit, Mich., July 19 to 23, but will travel to Canberra A.C.T., Australia, to be present at the 24th board meeting of the International Federation of B.P.W., April 20 to 24.

State President Wilhelmina Miller and Miss Ethel Rehert, of Lewes, World Affairs Chairman, have received joint recognition through their appointment by Gov. Carvel to serve on the Committee to greet the Japanese governors of the provinces and their wives, who will be guests of the Governor, May 1 and 2. Mrs. Miller has also been elected a director of the Delaware Safety Council and will serve as a judge for the Easter Promenade at the Battery, sponsored by the New Castle Board of Trade.

B.P.W. received further recognition when Mrs. Rosella T. Humes accepted her appointment as chairman of resolutions for the National Convention of 1964. Mrs. Humes is legislative chairman. Her B.P.W. state project is the remodeling of the magistrate system. She is also chairman of the Commission on the Status of Women for Delaware.

The Harrington B.P.W. Club will be hostess for the State Tea to be held in the Fellowship Hall of St. John's Church, Seaford, 3 p.m. to 5 p.m., April 26.

The State Convention, which is to be held at the Hotel duPont, May 22 to 24, has a theme in accord with the times and following the lead of President Johnson and Governor Carvel, "Status of Women in 1964." It is also a tribute to the hard working B.P.W. women, Mrs. Rosella Humes, Senator Evelyn Lord, Mrs. Wilhelmina Miller and Blanche Cahall, who are members of the Governor's Commission on the Status of Women. The theme was originated by Miss Marie McNulty.

The committee for the state convention have been selected by the chairman, Miss Charlotte deB. Abbott of Dover and her co-chairman, Margaret Lowery of Penny Hill Club and convention secretary Doris Coughlan, Brandywine Club. Entertainment will be in charge of Mrs. Sophie Luoma, hostesses Mrs. Betty Ann Hammond and Miss Ruth Ellen Reihm, nominations and elections, Edith Newton and keynote speaker, Dr. Elizabeth Phillips of Sussex County Club. Brandywine and Mid-county will be in charge of Saturday luncheon, Saturday's banquet will be managed by Sussex County and Rehoboth Clubs, Sunday breakfast will be under Seaford and Laurel supervision and the final meal, Sunday dinner, will be organized by Penny Hill and Kalm.

KENT CO. SPENDS

over the previous year was due to a change in the program, instituted this year, that included unemployed parents.

While county welfare payments to the state jumped almost $80,000 over the previous year, the percentage of the total budget given to the welfare dropped slightly. Remley recommended modernization of the county's bookkeeping systems through:

—A more efficient method of recording delinquent taxes, keeping them in one record book instead of retaining them on the regular tax rolls.

—A special record of collectible delinquent taxes.

—Legislation to put the county's three bookkeeping systems on one time schedule. At present, the accounting year ends Nov. 30, the budget year June 30 and the tax year on April 30.

Remley also recommended the county remove $10,000 from its special sinking fund and invest the money in interest-bearing government bonds. The sinking fund is comprised of money from assessments for improvements made by the county in rural areas. Remley said these funds should be used to draw interest.

He also recommended that the prothonotary's office establish an interest-bearing account for a portion of the more than $22,000 accumulated from fees. These funds presently are idle, and cannot be transferred into the county's general fund. Interest from the funds could be used by the county.

Levy Court commissioners and county officials agreed to examine the recommendations and try to put them into practice.

The county presently has a bonded indebtedness of $335,596.73, to be paid from future revenues.

Remley also noted that the county, with $710,000 worth of insurance, is well above the $480,000 minimum requirement.

He suggested updating some of the policies, however, to avoid possible complications in case of loss.

BLOOD PRESSURE

mercury is high in the glass at this point. As the doctor lets the air out of the cuff, the mercury drops. When the blood begins to flow through the artery with each beat of the heart, it produces a distinct sound which the doctor can hear through his stethoscope. At the first moment he hears this beat he notes the height of the mercury. This is the systolic or the maximum pressure produced by the heart.

As he continues to let the air out of the cuff, he notes the moment when the beat sound disappears, which occurs when the blood is flowing steadily through the artery. This is the diastolic or lower pressure. The blood pressure reading is a combination of these two readings: the systolic over the diastolic.

The systolic pressure is the pressure when the heart is contracting, forcing more blood into the vessels; the diastolic is the pressure that remains in the vessels when the heart is relaxed, between contractions.

A high systolic pressure occurs when the blood vessels are hardened, as by age. Increased spasms of the muscles in the blood vessel wall causes elevation of the diastolic pressure as well as the systolic.

Army's Enlistment Program Good For College Grads

Now the Army's "Choice not Chance" enlistment program provides the opportunity for a limited number of male college graduates to fulfill their military obligations as officers.

Under the officer candidate school option, potential candidates are thoroughly tested and, if qualified, receive their choice of option guaranteed in writing before enlistment.

To qualify for OCS, individuals must be college graduates or within 135 days of graduation; between 18½ and 27 years of age; US citizens and able to pass Army mental and physical examinations as well as a special OCS board composed of active duty officers.

If selected, candidates will be enlisted for two years with a guaranteed space in the OCS course of their choice. They may select either the infantry or artillery officer candidate school. Upon successful completion of basic training, trainees will be promoted to sergeant (E-5) prior to attendance at OCS. They receive the pay and allowances of a sergeant during OCS and are commissioned second lieutenants upon graduation.

For further information about this and other options offered through the Army's "Choice Not Chance" enlistment program, see your local Army Recruiter, M/Sgt. Walter R. Frazier, 218 S. Governor's Ave., Dover, Phone 736-6937.

Good grooming is important. It not only makes you more socially attractive, but it makes you feel better about yourself. When you feel that you look well, it will put you at ease with yourself and so make you feel more comfortable with others.

Small Towns And Customer Problems

Small towns may find some interesting reading in a report by the Texas Good Roads Association.

For example, the report said that people as a general rule will not travel beyond 25 minutes driving time to a regional shopping center to buy food, drugs and some other items. Applied locally, this leaves a lot of people to buy things close to home.

Like the big city centers small towns need to consider the problems of a buying public on wheels. For one thing, T. G. R. A. points out, better highways and streets are—ought to be—a first objective for able businessmen.

Secondly, the traffic safety situation should not be a dread for the motorized customer.

Finally, when the customer reaches the destination, he should be able to find a parking place reasonably close to where he intends to buy.

The good roads people say parking should be adequate for those limited hours—perhaps no more than 10 per week—when the high volume of customer trade is available.

Small towns have got to concern themselves with such things, even though there is hardly ever a time a community will be unanimous on a particular move.

But as we've all observed it is very easy for a small town to become a smaller town. All it has to do is ignore the problems brought on by change.

Bicycle Accidents Caused By Carelessness

The bicycle rider, and the pedestrian or motorist who get into an accident involving a bicycle, deserve sympathy and, may be, some help.

The bicycle rider in the forgotten element in modern transportation planning. He interferes with pedestrians when he rides on the sidewalks. He interferes with motorists when he rides in the streets or on the highways. Since many bicycle riders are boys and girls of school age, there are substantial reasons why they should have the right to ride their bikes somewhere. The bicycle, by tradition, is the vehicle of youth, and youth should get sympathy, protection and discipline.

Bicycle accidents continue to happen, fortunately few of them serious. Too many riders, however, are careless with their wheels. They do not look where they are going. They may run into a child or an old person through inattention, or in turn into the path of a car without realizing it.

The situation grows worse all the time, since there are more youngsters and more cars, year after year.

Every parent who gives his child a bicycle should also provide clearcut instruction and apply enough discipline to see that the instructions are followed, so that the youngster acquires safe and courteous habits.

Beyond that, it might not be a bad idea to institute a system of tests for bicycle riders, with the loss of riding privileges for those who do not learn to ride without Students Never Had It So Good Students mostly those in the teenage brackets, never had it so good. In this country they're demonstrating against integration, they're demonstrating with the whites, they're demonstrating with the negroes, and all the time they're able to remain out of classes. Elsewhere across the world in various nations they're demonstrating either for or against a leader, a government or a regime, and also remaining out of classes. Of course we criticize their actions, but the chances are that without parental restrictions or prohibitions, we would have done the same thing when that age. There are still several people who recall how students at Paris went on strike against a school superintendent who took down a picture of Woodrow Wilson and how others did the same thing when a picture of Lincoln was removed. Some also recall a "stay-at-home" by Paris students who were protesting against the suspension of several teenage boys who played hockey and went to Holiday to play pool during the school hours.

Human nature is about the same in one generation as in another.—Monroe County Appeal, Paris, Mo.

St. Bernadette's Church Notes

Mass Sunday morning will begin at 9:30. Confessions will be heard before Mass. Religious instruction classes for the high school students of the parish will be held Sunday evening at 7 o'clock. Catechism classes for the other children of the parish will resume on Thursday at 3:30.

Each week two mission helpers of the Sacred Heart are at St. Bernadette's to supervise the instruction of the grade school children. These are sisters of a Pontifical Congregation with mission centers throughout the United States and in Latin America. They were founded in 1890 in Baltimore, Md., for the purpose of helping bishops and pastors extend the faith and deepen the spiritual life of the flocks under their care through teaching Christian Doctrine to the Catholic child of public elementary and high school; to the Catholic adult who is spiritually in need; to the non-Catholic in classes for inquirers and converts.

They train and supervise lay catechists and establish other activities of the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine. Also part of their work is the publishing of teacher aids, manuals and student texts for religious education and visiting public institutions. The Sunday after Easter is Low Sunday. It is also called "Quasimodo" Sunday after the first word of the Introit, and Sunday "in albis" (deposits) or White Sunday because it was formerly the first day on which those baptized on Holy Saturday did not wear their white baptismal robes. It may have received the name "Low" Sunday because Easter is of such high rank.

Shoplifting Major Problem of Businessmen Shoplifting is becoming a major problem for businessmen in Wynne as well as in other cities. It adds to the cost of merchandise, it increases the number of habitual thieves, and it degrades our entire society.

Thefts of merchandise from stores are usually so small individually that even when the culprit is caught the store manager hesitates to prosecute. Yet the thefts add up to thousands of dollars a year for large stores. Merchants hesitate to prosecute because of the bad publicity the loss of a "customer" and the nuisance of carrying through on the case. Shoplifters are taking full advantage of these facts. They know what to do with them when he catches them, and that usually he won't prosecute if they give his property back. Youngsters are especially vulnerable to the lure of shoplifting. They take small things at first, then become bolder and bolder, and unless something intervenes risk becoming habitual thieves. Even the "best" people find it hard to resist taking something for nothing. Yet it is amazing how many of them are well known for their guilt. Every merchant has a list of good citizens who must be watched carefully every time they visit his store. Some merchants have methods of recouping their losses directly but often they just absorb the cost of the stolen goods, add it to overhead and distribute the expense among all customers. All of us are victimized by the thieves. The police cooperate fully in cases of shoplifting, providing they receive cooperation from the merchant. Too often, however, when the culprit is arrested the merchant cannot resist being a "good fellow" by refusing to prosecute if he gets his property back. The police accomplish nothing worthwhile for their time and are likely to become cynical about shoplifting.—The Wynne (Ark.) Progress

Toasted Soybeans Major Development Growers Told

Soybean growers are fundamental plant scientists. That's what 200 farmers were told at a soybean meeting held at the Georgetown Substation recently. Dr. M. R. Teel, research director of the American Farm Research Association, told them they were as deeply involved in the scientific process of plant growth as any laboratory technician. He said they were dealing with photosynthesis. This is the basic plant process of building aid and water into sugars and the use of the sugars by the plant to produce flowers, and finally beans.

Teel talked to the group about plant physiology and breeding, explaining their need to know and ability to understand by saying, "I don't think I can get too technical for you farmers. You can tear down a tractor motor, install a new pinion gear or repair a complicated piece of machinery. I don't think the things I'm going to say are any more technical than the thing you are involved in every day on the farm."

Teel said he is expecting a red hot new development in the soybean industry—toasted soybeans. In experimental work, scientists have bombarded soybean seeds with infrared rays. They kill the parts of the seed that cause them to become rancid and bad tasting without actually killing the plant cell. These toasted beans were fed to hogs with some promising results. He said the main problem encountered was too much oil and not enough protein in the beans. "Scientists are going back now looking for beans that have a low oil content and a large amount of protein. As I see it this is a major breakthrough. When these beans are developed, people around the world will be eating toasted soybeans. The world is demanding more protein. This may be the way to get it."

Teel likened the parts of a plant, that enable it to live and grow, to a dry cell battery with plus and minus charges. If you get too much calcium or magnesium you may not get enough potassium. If you get too much potassium, then you may be short on calcium, magnesium or any one of 14 other elements that are found in a soybean plant. As near as science can tell, he said, the nutrients have to be balanced inside the plant. An overdose of any one element can cause a disorder that will mean lower yields from the plant.

Teel's final advice to the soybean growers was to encourage their children to attend an agricultural college and become agricultural scientists. He said, "We need farm-bred boys and girls as scientists. If they don't take up the challenge, city youngsters will fill the vacancy. This is bad for agriculture. We need agricultural scientists with a background and a feeling for farming."

In an impromptu question and answer session that followed the formal program, University specialists answered questions on corn and soybean production problems. When asked about the value of tissue testing, Dr. William Mitchell, extension agronomist, said these tests have been indicating a very definite relationship between potash level and soybean yields. "When the percent of potassium gets down to 1 percent you're in trouble (two percent is considered optimum). Potassium goes to the top of the list as our most important fertilizer problem."

Mitchell explained a seed problem that is cropping up around the state. He said the 1963 bean crop was harvested during a very dry period. Many of the beans were damaged internally during the harvesting operation because of the extremely low moisture content of the seed. He said this damage is showing up in low germination percentages. Many of the beans tested by the state board of agriculture and by the university indicate germination as low as 50 or 60 per cent. He advised the growers to get a germination test on any beans they intend to plant. If the germination is below 80 per cent, don't plant them. And, he said, if you don't intend to get a germination test, sell the beans and buy back certified seed with a guaranteed minimum 80 per cent germination.

One question that drew particular attention was the method of application and kind of lime to use. Ed Ralph, Sussex associate county agent, commented on lime test plots in the Millsboro area where ground burnt lime and ground limestone were applied on soybean ground. The results indicated that over a two-year period the ground limestone reduced the acidity of the soil as fast as the burnt lime. Since the ground limestone costs less, he said growers should plan to use the less expensive, slower working product whenever time permits. But, he made it clear that there is a definite place for ground burnt lime. Since it goes to work faster, it can be applied right up to planting time and still give good results.

Extension Home Economics Offers Exciting Careers

In all the 50 states, there are opportunities for college graduates in home economics to enjoy versatile careers, as different from "9 to 5" jobs as flying is from walking.

Careers in home economics extension often seem like a different job every day, home economics students at the University of Delaware were told last week by Mrs. Alice M. King, Delaware home economics extension leader, and extension specialists at the University.

Basically, the extension home economist teaches better methods of homemaking. She uses demonstrations, displays and discussions to present her message. She helps homemakers learn about research that helps them in their own homes.

Her teaching is usually done informally, and her ingenuity plays a big part in how well she succeeds. One advantage that the extension home economist has is that her "students" are volunteers women, and sometimes men, who come to meetings because they want to learn. Her interesting, dynamic method of teaching is therefore as important as the information she teaches, says Mrs. King.

Although some weeks on the job may seem to require 10 days to accomplish everything, this is not always the case, said Janet Reed, extension clothing and textiles specialist. She added that flexible working hours and freedom in scheduling and working methods are attractions found in few other jobs.

Mrs. King noted many changes in extension offerings during her many years in extension service. With so many people now living in urban areas, extension work has expanded to meet the needs of these homemakers. As women receive more formal education and many work outside the home, their needs in homemaking undergo great changes, she stated. With new food products, new textiles and new time saving methods, homemaking becomes a more complex operation. Knowing how to use time and short cuts becomes more valuable. The homemaker is really a home manager, and extension workers show her better ways of doing this from their studies and research.

At the county level, home economists work directly with homemakers. Almost every county in every state has at least one home economics extension agent; in some states, counties with very large populations may have as many as six.

A four-year college program in home economics, with additional courses or experience in teaching, qualifies the graduate for county extension positions. Teaching helps you organize your time, stated Coral K. Morris, extension specialist in home management. You learn to fix clearly in mind what has to be done, and a teaching background helps you get it done.

When the county agent needs assistance, specialists at the state level provide her with information. Specialists are required to have advanced college degrees in one or two areas, such as food, nutrition, home management, family economics, clothing, home decoration and child care.

In general, the extension specialist works with people who carry information to the homemaker such as the county extension agent or other agencies and organizations. In Delaware, the specialist frequently conducts training meetings for leaders, but she also has special classes, clinics and workshops for homemakers.

The extension home economist is an employee of both a land grant college and the U. S. Department of Agriculture. While her job extends as far as the state or county, she also has the advantage of having the resources of other college faculty in keeping up with new developments.

Her responsibility to keep homemakers informed sometimes calls her to write pamphlets and bulletins, Janet Coblenz, extension foods and nutrition specialist, pointed out. Articles for newspapers and magazines are another way the extension home economist keeps homemakers informed, and some have regular radio and television shows.

In Delaware, the county home economics agents have offices in Newark, Dover and Georgetown, and their advice on homemaking problems is available to all who request it.

Democratic Clubs To Meet at Dover

The 11th annual convention of the Delaware Federation of Democratic Clubs will be held at Dover High School Wednesday. The schedule calls for registration from noon to 1 p.m.; business meeting, 1 p.m. to 4 p.m.; view exhibits, 4 p.m. to 5 p.m., and banquet at 6:30 p.m. Tickets are $4 each. Door prizes will be awarded.

Merle Price To Head Cancer Drive

The appointment of Merle Price, manager of Wanamaker's store in Wilmington, to lead the 1964 Cancer Crusade in Delaware was announced yesterday by the Delaware Division of the American Cancer Society.

Dr. Peter VanWyck, chairman of the board of the Delaware Division, in naming the new chairman, said that "under the vigorous leadership of Mr. Price, we hope to have our most successful educational and fund-raising Crusade ever."

The Crusade is conducted during the month of April.

In accepting the top crusade post in the state, the chairman called on everyone "to do his part in the fight against cancer."

He noted that the disease will eventually strike some 48 million Americans now living, according to present rates.

"All of us," he said, "either directly or indirectly are destined to be touched by the suffering caused by cancer. Therefore all of us must unite against the disease."

The new chairman said that cancer was giving way, slowly but surely, to the world-wide attack against it.

"A generation ago, fewer than one in five were saved from cancer," he pointed out. "Today we are saving one in three, and, under the best conditions, we are now capable of saving one in two."

He defined "best conditions" as getting people to their doctors in time from prompt, proper treatment of those forms of the disease which are now considered curable.

Price said that this was one objective of the Crusade. "As part of our educational campaign we seek to persuade more adults to have an annual health checkup by a physician and to learn the seven danger signals that may mean cancer," he said. "These two important steps can prevent needless cancer deaths."

The fund-raising aspect of the Crusade, he said, provides the support for the Society's programs of research, education and service to cancer patients.

To assure the success of the 1964 Crusade, he appealed for a record number of volunteers to join him in the work of conducting the campaign.

"It is through cooperation and personal effort that this disease will be conquered," he said. And by working together we can make the 1964 Crusade the best yet in Delaware."

Mr. Price came to Wilmington in 1932 from Uniontown, Pa. where he had lived and attended school for several years. He began his retail career there with Wright Metzler Co.

He came to Wilmington to accept a position as a buyer with the Crosby and Hill Co. and later joined Kennards of Wilmington in a similar capacity. In 1937 he became associated with John Wanamaker, Philadelphia, and held several positions of responsibility in the Philadelphia store before leaving for military service in 1942.

After several years in the European Theatre of Operations, he returned to Wanamakers as assistant buyer in the book department. While there he attended Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania, and in 1950 was appointed assistant manager of the new Wanamaker Wilmington store. In 1958 he was appointed vice president and general manager of the local store, succeeding the late William P. Conklin.

He is active in many community projects, including the Salvation Army, Junior Achievement,

Chamber of Commerce and Grace Episcopal Church.

Convenience For You Tells The Food Story

Three hours in a grocery store? Not every homemaker would be willing to spend that much time at her shopping. But almost 20 per cent of your family income is spent for food, and it might pay to spend a little extra time once in a while, investigating where the money goes and whether there are better purchases you can make, says Janet Coblenz, foods and nutrition specialist at the University of Delaware.

Once every other month or so, she suggests, take some extra time to look at new products, read the labels and know what you are getting. With so many new convenience foods arriving on the markets each day, it pays to keep up with them.

It has been estimated that 14 cents of each dollar spent for food is spent on convenience foods. These are foods which have had some form of preparation done to them before they reach the market. Some are fully prepared and ready to serve, others have to be cooked, or the homemaker has several steps to carry through to finish their preparation.

Convenience foods, says Miss Coblenz, have to be interpreted in terms of what is convenient for you. Busy homemakers use them to save time. Others have found actual money savings by using convenience foods. Miss Coblenz reports that of 158 convenience foods examined in one survey, 42 were less expensive than if prepared in the home.

Instant coffee is an excellent example of a money-saving convenience food, states Miss Coblenz. Four cups made with regular roasted coffee cost 6 cents, while four cups of instant (one level teaspoon each) cost 2 cents. The saving is 4 cents for every four cups of coffee. Multiply that by 365 days and the number of cups you drink each day, and you can see how savings mount up.

The extra cost of convenience foods is often off-set by the time you save in preparation. Home-made apple pie may cost only 22 cents for four servings, but it takes more than half an hour to prepare. A complete pie mix costs 3 cents more, but cuts preparation time in half.

Another factor which boosts the cost of home cooking is that homemakers put more of the costlier ingredients in home products, such as meat in homemade stew, or eggs in cakes. However, the added cost is off-set by a higher degree of nutrition. Miss Coblenz notes that comparison shopping will show you that this is also the reason behind higher prices for some convenience foods.

Convenience for you may be a matter of time. If this is so, try partially preparing meals at hours when it is most convenient for you. Another method is to make enough for several meals and freeze meal-size portions.

The conformity of convenience foods can be avoided when you use your own special touches. Garnishes can be added to prepared frozen dinner. Before heating, sprinkle chicken with savory, ham with orange juice and a bit of orange rind, meatloaf or shrimp with oregano. Then reheat the foil wrapping and heat.

Instant potatoes can be varied by adding one teaspoon minced onion and one-quarter teaspoon oregano or basil to the liquid.

'Agency' Label Put on U. of D.

The office of the attorney general has ruled that the University of Delaware is a state agency and subject to most of the laws governing such agencies.

In an opinion to Budget Director F. Earl McGinnes, released last week, Chief Deputy Attorney Gen. Thomas Herlihy III said the university "is an agency within the definitions (of the Delaware Code)."

Herlihy quoted from a 1950 Court of Chancery ruling that said the statutes "demonstrate beyond any reasonable doubt that under common law tests the State of Delaware has created a state agency at the university."

McGinnes had requested the opinion, Herlihy said.

Specifically, the budget director asked the attorney general's office if the university can be forced to fill out official estimate blanks required of all state agencies submitting requests for state appropriations.

By ruling that all sections of Title 29, Chapter 65, apply to the university, Herlihy in effect answered "yes." The opinion was countersigned by Atty Gen. David P. Buckson.

McGinnes' letter to Herlihy stated that Dr. John A. Perkins, president of the university, "returned these blanks with no information but a request for funds."

"The university officials have taken the position that they are not a state agency and do not come within the provisions of the above-mentioned (Chapter 65) sections of the Delaware Code."

McGinnes told the attorney general.

Herlihy quoted the definition of a state agency from Title 29, Section 6301: "Agency" includes every board, department, bureau, commission, person or group of persons . . . to whom any moneys are appropriated under any budget appropriation act or supplemental appropriation act."

"Since the Budget Appropriation Act appropriates moneys to the University of Delaware, the university is an 'agency,'" the chief deputy concluded.

Herlihy noted that the legislature has specifically excluded the university from the provisions of Title 29, Chapter 61, which establishes the state's general fund. However, he said no such exclusion has been made in Chapter 65, the law McGinnes questioned.

Easton Hosts Chicken Festival Three Miler

The excitement of the forthcoming Delmarva Chicken Festival to be held in Talbot County, Md., June 18, 19 and 20, will be increased by a three-mile foot race. This novelty will be supervised by a committee headed by James O. Lohr of the faculty of Easton High School, who was named for this responsibility by John W. Noble, general chairman of the festival.

Mr. Lohr states that the race will be open to all comers, and he is issuing the invitation to all parts of the Delmarva Peninsula, as well as elsewhere, to become participants. However, he asks that potential contestants write him their intentions, stating name and age.

Distance running has been a growing sport in Maryland, Lohr reports. Running has been increasing both in high schools and colleges. When Lohr took up his teaching duties in Maryland seven years ago, there were only 30 distance runners participating in state-wide competition. Today, there are 300 and in a state meet in 1962, the cross country runners numbered 672. The state ranks high in the nation.

The race will begin at Glebe Rd. and Goldsborough Neck, northwest of Easton, and will be completed at the reviewing stand in Easton. It will be scheduled for completion just prior to the parade, and the streets will be clear of runners when the parade begins. He anticipates 30 to 40 runners and believes the winners will require 15 to 16 minutes to cover the three-mile course; while the tail-enders, if they stay in the race, will require a half-hour.

Lohr teaches chemistry and other sciences at Easton High School, and coaching the runners is a side occupation. However it is an activity in which he has long been interested and considers it a healthful as well as interesting sport. He declares that various ages can be runner, and some of the best runners are in their thirties.

Southwestern Pennsylvania was the birthplace of Mr. Lohr. He attended high school in Connellsville, Pa., went to Bridgewater College, near Harrisonburg, Va., following which he took up teaching in Easton.

The Foot Race will be one of several score activities in the Chicken Festival, which is expected to attract 40,000 men, women and children.

Sports Editor's notes:
Jim Lohr is well known to Harrington High cross-country runners, former runners and fans. Back in 1958 H.H.S. started lower Delaware's first cross-country team and then persuaded Greenwood, coached by Jim Hawpe, and Milton, coached by Pete Guest to start teams so that the Lions would have close-by competition. Shortly after, it was learned that Easton, South Dorchester and Centerville, all Maryland schools, had cross-country teams.

Jim Lohr brought his Easton squad to Killen's Pond and was beaten by one point by an all-sophomore Harrington team, which proceeded to rack up an unbeaten season in its first try at the harrier sport.

Coach Harold McDonald's Lions beat Easton the first five times they met before bowing twice to the Warriors in 1961. The Lions have beaten the Marylanders four times since 1961 and now have a 9-2 bulge in meetings between the pair of friendly rivals.

The town of Harrington has furnished perhaps 25 or 30 entries in three mile races held on the peninsula in the last six years. Local boys have brought home many trophies from these races. Consequently, we look for at least a dozen Harringtonians in the race at Easton.

73 4-H'ers Enroll In Pig Project

Seventy-three Delaware 4-H'ers have enrolled in the 1964 Swine Feeding Program, according to Don Burton, extension livestock specialist at the University of Delaware.

Members from all parts of Delaware will receive two eight-week-old pigs on April 3 and 4 and raise them until July 31, when awards will be made for finishing and showmanship at the Delaware State Fair.

The program is sponsored by the Delaware Swine Producers' Association and the Agricultural Extension Service to train members in selection, feeding, management and marketing of pigs.

Local Surfer Gets International Exposure

Bill Wise, local post office employee and surfboard impresario, has an article in the April-May issue of "The International Surfer." This magazine has 120,000 subscribers all around the globe. The Eastern Surfer as Wise is known professionally, was the author and photographer of a piece called "Delaware? Where's That?"

The sport of surfing has few exponents in this area and this comparative isolation is very desirable compared to the crowded situations which exist in California, Hawaii and other better known surfing arenas. A picture taken at one congested spot on the west coast showed eight surfers on one wave. That's about as many as can be found from the Indian River Inlet to Ocean City, Maryland, except for the months of June, July, and August when vacationers swell the total somewhat.

Wise states that a suitable spot for surfing can be found most of the time between the Inlet and Ocean City, with waves sometimes as high as 14 feet.

However, newcomers planning to take up this sport might be wise to talk to Wise.

Well-Balanced Diet Controls Overweight

Statistics show that about one out of every five men and women over 30 in the United States is overweight. Since too many pounds tend to shorten our life span and increase our susceptibility to many diseases, such as heart trouble and diabetes, it is important to maintain the correct weight for one's height and frame.

When a person eats more food than his body can use up in a day, the surplus is stored as fat. In order to lose this accumulation of fat, it is necessary to eat less food than the body needs. This is accomplished by eating a well-balanced restricted diet.

The so-called "miracle" diets, drugs or mechanical exercisers rarely have long-lasting effects, since they do not correct the bad eating habits which caused the increase in weight. The best way to lose weight and to keep it at the correct level is to change your eating habits. A balanced diet, which is one that includes something from each of the basic food groups: milk and milk products, vegetables and fruits, meats and eggs, bread and cereals, will be most effective in doing this.

Your sex, age, activity, and how fast you want to lose all must be taken into account to determine the safe and effective dietary plan for you. No matter how many pounds you need to lose, a diet of less than 1200-1500 calories per day is not recommended. No one should undertake an extensive diet without his physician's advice and consent.

Some regular exercise taken every day can be very helpful in burning up calories and in maintaining a good emotional balance. One of the most effective forms of exercise is walking an hour each day. Dancing and bowling are also good. These activities help to improve muscle tone and speed up circulation, thereby increasing the sense of well-being.

Blue Shield Plan B And Fee Disputes

Physicians have been reminded by the Medical Society of Delaware to make allowance for increased fee indemnities under Blue Shield's optional "Plan B". In a letter mailed to each member, Dr. Floyd I. Hudson, president of the Society, pointed out that the new program, going into effect this month, pays a substantially higher proportion of medical and surgical fees, in most cases, than the standard schedule. He emphasized the importance of physicians' recognizing the new schedule when billing for the difference between their own fees and the Blue Shield allowance.

Dr. Hudson pointed out that each Blue Shield subscriber's contract carries a statement that the Blue Shield fee schedule is not meant to have any specific relationship to physicians' fees. The new schedule, he said, is not intended to cover all medical costs any more than the old one was. However, it does represent an attempt to pay a larger part of the doctor's bill. He asked the doctors to be aware of this and make sure the purpose is achieved.

Commenting on medical fees, Dr. Hudson said that the most common cause of patient dissatisfaction is failure between doctor and patient to agree on what service is being paid for. Sometimes, however, dissatisfaction arises from frank abuse of one party by the other.

Both patient and doctor have two basic defenses against fee disputes, Dr. Hudson explained. The first and best is a frank discussion of fees before the procedure is undertaken. This is almost always possible except in emergencies. It gives the patient an opportunity to express any dissatisfaction, and the doctor a chance to explain the basis of the fee. Contrary to many opinions, he said, most doctors have one standard fee for a procedure, rather than varying fees for different levels of patient income. However, most doctors will discount from this fee if it represents a hardship to the patient.

The second defense is the medical society grievance committee, Dr. Hudson said. These are maintained in Delaware on both state and county levels. Composed of respected local doctors, their function is to arbitrate between doctor and patient and recommend equitable settlements. Their services are available, without charge, to any patient who feels he has a grievance.

Tuberculosis is a major health problem in the nation. Over 50,000 new active cases were reported in 1961, and nearly 10,000 people died of the disease during the same year.

Much research has been done recently in the spread and treatment of tuberculosis. Efforts are being made to channel this knowledge to public health working serving in the tuberculosis field.

U. of D. Dedicates Morris Library Tomorrow

The University of Delaware will dedicate its new Hugh M. Morris Library Saturday afternoon following a luncheon meeting of the University Library Associates.

The new library, an open-stack library with a variety of facilities required in the modern university, was financed by a bond issue approved by the 121st General Assembly of the State of Delaware. A handsome building of contemporary design in a tree-studded setting, it blends well with the overall design of the campus.

The building was pressed into service at the beginning of the 1963-64 school year and completed soon after. Its 400,000 volumes are readily available to students and faculty and the use of the library has risen sharply in the new building.

Named in honor of Judge Hugh M. Morris, prominent Wilmington attorney and former judge of the Third District Federal Court, this is the sixth home of the library which, as recently as 1910, occupied only a single room in Purcell Hall. Judge Morris served on the university's board of trustees for 30 years, as its president for 20. He is an alumnus of the university (Class of 1898) and honorary counselor of the board of trustees.

Some 300 library associates and guests will meet for luncheon at 12:30 p.m. in Russell Hall dining room. Henry B. du Pont, president of the Associates, will speak on the program of the Associates.

Then the scene will shift to the Reference Room of the Morris Library where the Rev. Charles H. Davis, minister of the First Presbyterian Church of Newark, will give the invocation and University President John A. Perkins will speak. The dedication address will be given by Dr. George H. Healey, professor of English and curator of rare books at Cornell University. Dr. Healey is an authority on Daniel Defoe, William Wordsworth, and on James Joyce and his brother Stanislaus. Known among his colleagues for his sparkling wit as well as sound scholarship, Dr. Healey will speak on "The Bright World of Rare Books".

Drive Defensively Urges Safety Council

The advent of spring will bring an increase in highway accidents, Delaware drivers were warned this week.

Spring weather will boost the volume of driving—and that will boost the volume of accidents unless Delawareans are prepared to "drive defensively", said J. James Ashton, manager of the Delaware Safety Council.

"It is clear that an increasing volume of traffic tends to increase the hazards of being on the streets and highways, and greatly increases the need to drive defensively," he said.

That means to take care not to be involved in accidents caused by the poor driving of others, and to take care not to cause any yourself. The object of "defensive driving" is to drive without having an accident.

This requires, Ashton explained, a constant alertness for the illegal acts and driving errors of other drivers and the willingness to make quick adjustments to avoid accidents. "The defensive driver does not expect all other drivers to behave according to the rules of the road to a situation exactly as he would. He is prepared for reckless, illegal and clumsy behavior on the part of other drivers."

Another important quality of defensive driving, the safety official said, is the ability to adjust to the special hazards presented by unusual or changing conditions in the type of road surface he is encountering, or to unusual or changing conditions of weather, the amount of light, and the kind of traffic on the road.

Similarly a defensive driver adjusts his driving to the special hazards presented by unusual conditions of his state of mind. If he is worried about personal problems, he does not let that worry lead to inattention in driving, Ashton explained, because it is known that worry is an accident producing factor.

He said defensive drivers are familiar with the rules of right of way and are willing to yield the right of way to others to avoid accidents.

Maybe said the letters which were sent to non-group subscribers give the rates and a summary of benefits of the new Plan B compared with the standard Blue Shield coverage, known as Plan A. A card-application is enclosed with each letter. This application is to be returned to the Plan office by April 3 if changing coverage from Plan A to Plan B is desired. The new coverage for members will be effective upon payment of their next bill.

Benefits of Plan B are about 50 per cent higher than Plan A in most instances. The maximum payment for surgery in Plan B is $404 as compared with $270 in Plan A. Payment for an appendectomy is $150 instead of $100; payment for doctor's visits in the hospital in medical cases are up to $5 instead of up to $3 per day.

The added cost of changing to the increased coverage of Plan B is 95 cents a month for an individual and $2.04 a month for a family.

Measle Should Not Be Treated Lightly

Measles is the most widely prevalent of the many childhood contagious diseases. Most cases of measles aren't very serious and cause no complications. However, since serious complications such as encephalitis and pneumonia can sometimes result, measles should not be treated lightly.

It is important that your physician be called and an accurate diagnosis be made by him in order to be sure that your child is given the greatest amount of safety and comfort.

Measles usually goes through four stages. The first is the incubation period when the disease is developing unobserved. The second is the invasion, which is the period of the appearance of the first symptoms which often resemble those of the common cold with some fever. This can last from three to seven days. Observable to your doctor is the one undisputed sign of measles, this is the appearance of tiny grayish white dots on the mucous membrane inside the cheeks. Third is the rash which usually appears on the fourth day and varies widely from few to many spots, which begin on the forehead and then progress to the rest of the body. The last stage is that of peeling which consists of fine scales and can persist for seven to eight days.

It is not necessary to keep the patient in a darkened room, but, since his eyes are most likely to be sensitive to glare, he should not face a strong light or over-use his eyes for reading or watching TV, as this can only increase his discomfort.

Since measles lowers a child's resistance to other disease germs, do not let anyone with a cough or cold visit him, and be sure to keep him in bed until your doctor says he may get up.

Two measles vaccines have recently been developed. Your doctor will know which will best meet the needs of his patient and will be the most acceptable in controlling the disease.
