

$500,000 MOSQUITO CONTROL BILL PASSES HOUSE

Legislation to appropriate $500,000 to the State Highway Department for permanent mosquito control work passed the House Wednesday after much maneuvering.

It is not likely to become law too soon, since the Senate recessed before the House completed action on the bill. It is possible the Senate will not return at all this session, although Earle M. Tull, D-Seaford, chairman of the Executive Committee, said he thought the governor would ask senators back either for a day next week or in September.

The House did not pass the bill until it was amended in such a way that it may be impossible to implement it. The amendment, adopted by a vote of 21-9 with five absent, would require the highway department to "formulate and coordinate plans with federal authorities occupying or owning lands within the state" before any of the funds could be expended. It also would forbid any expenditures "until the Game and Fish Commission, the State Park Commission and the highway department shall have met and jointly approved a plan of permanent mosquito control for those lands over which the named state agencies have control."

No spokesmen of the highway department or its mosquito control division, which would have specific jurisdiction over the expenditure of most of the $500,000, were on hand, nor was anyone from the entomology department of the University of Delaware, which would get $10,000 of the money for research.

The House rejected a motion to defer the bill. Rep. Harvey P. Fifer, R-Rising Sun, asked the delay "until an expert from the University of Delaware can be on hand to explain it."

Later the House adopted a motion to defer by Rep. J. Reynolds Pratt, D-Clayton, who wanted time to prepare the amendment that eventually was adopted.

During the long recess that followed deferment, the bill picked up support.

Another amendment offered by Rep. Wilbert E. Hocker, R-Millville, was defeated by a voice vote. It would have required the highway department to get permission from landowners before moving onto their property to do the ditching and filling work called for in the bill.

Low Level Flying Now at Dover Air Force Base

Low level tactical training flights are presently being conducted over a large portion of the Delmarva Peninsula by C-124 aircraft based at Dover AFB.

These aircraft fly at altitudes of 1000 to 1500 feet, both singly and in formations of 3 to 6 ships.

Due to evolutionary changes in the Military Air Transport Service (MATS) and 1607th Air Transport Wing missions, Dover AFB, aircrews must remain current in troop and equipment drops. In order to maintain a constantly current airdrop capability, air crews must practice and train under conditions similar to those that would exist in an airlift, exercise or combat airdrop situation.

Airdrop training on the local scene consists of occasional miniature parachute drops at Sussex Airport, Georgetown. These parachutes weighing a total of 28 ounces, including a 3 x 4 inch canvas sack are dropped into a pre-calculated drop zone.

By dropping these small parachutes, crewmembers get training that employs the same principles and techniques used in an actual situation. The navigator must calculate the precise point for releasing the cargo, the pilot must fly to that point and the loadmaster must release the load at the instant the point is reached.

Installation of Water Main Begins On Del. Avenue

Installation of a 10-inch water main, on Delaware Avenue, began this week.

As of Thursday morning, the contractors, A. P. Isakson Inc., of Salisbury, had reached Simmons Street. The project is progressing from near the City limits to Clark Street and will replace 4-inch and 6-inch mains which have been an almost constant source of leaks.

It was deemed advisable to do the work at this time as the State Highway Department will soon let a contract to improve Delaware Avenue, a state-maintained road, and the State stipulates the road is not to be broken within five years except in an emergency.

City Manager Alfred G. B. Mann said Wednesday night they believed the chief water main would be installed before the end of next week.

After that lead-ins would be installed to each property. This explains why a leak at 230 Delaware Ave., has been permitted to exist a couple weeks or more.

The Delaware Avenue project, part of an overall community improvement of water mains, is to cost $36,923.60.

It could be financed from a bond issue of $150,000 on which a referendum will be held. Voting, however, is being held up until the City attorneys prepare a resolution.

Scout Council Names New Executive

James E. Walters has been named as District Scout Executive of the Chester District, Del-Mar-Va Council, Boy Scouts of America, it was announced this week by Forrest J. Sadler, Scout Executive.

Mr. Walters will serve Kent and Queen Anne Counties, Md., filling the vacancy created when C. Rodney Horner resigned recently to enter private business.

The new district executive is well known to many scouts as a long time member of the Rodney Camp staff. He is a former Boy Scout and is interested in aquatics, hunting and fishing.

Urior to joining the Del-Mar-Va staff, Mr. Walters was employed at Haverford Junior High School as a music teacher. He is a veteran of four years in the Security Service of the United States Air Force, and a graduate of West Chester (Pa.) State College.

Mr. and Mrs. Walters and their twin son and daughter will move to the Chestertown area in the near future. Following a 45-day training course at the National Training School for Scout Executives at Mendham, N. J., which he will attend in September and October, Mr. Walters will be working in the district.

Veterans Pension Program Passes House

A major revision of the veterans pension program passed the House August 12, by a vote of 388 in favor, none opposed.

Congressman Harris B. McDowell, Jr., a member of the House Veterans Committee, and Chairman of its Housing Subcommittee, sponsored H. R. 7320, one of the bills which was considered by the Veterans Committee.

In a speech recently to his House colleagues in support of H. R. 1927, the bill to revise the pension program of veterans of World War I, World War II, and the Korean Conflict, and their widows and children, Congressman McDowell said:

"This worthy legislation is needed to fill the long existing need, in the otherwise quite adequate veterans program, to take care of the veterans of World War I, World War II, and the Korean Conflict, and their wives and children.

"This bill represents a compromise of the provisions of a number of bills which were before the Committee on Veteran Affairs, including my bill, H. R. 7320. As a member of this Committee I have been most enthusiastic in joining with my colleagues and the distinguished Chairman of our committee, the gentleman from (Continued on Page 8)

Contests for Delegates Go To Primary

The deadline for candidate withdrawals passed Friday, so Democrats will go to their convention either to nominate Ernest E. Killen, Robert H. Reed or draft and nominate Charles L. Terry for governor.

Earlier, Robert Reed, a Dover businessman indicated he would withdraw if Terry announced his candidacy, but last week Reed said he is definitely in the race to the end.

Killen, state auditor, has never entertained any notion of withdrawal.

All indications now point to a heated floor fight between Killen and Terry. Reed, although not considered as a serious threat, is apt to take votes away from Killen in a floor fight.

The Kent County Democratic primary election will be held tomorrow and there will be contested delegate seats in 12 of the 25 districts.

Since there is a contest for a county-wide office as well as numerous district offices, the primary election will be held in each election district.

On the Republican side of the ledger, the only contests are for delegate seats to the GOP convention, requiring voting in two districts only.

Only registered Democrats can vote in the Democratic primary, and only registered Republicans can vote in the Republican primary.

Candidates for the various Democratic nominations, to be decided at the primary election, include the following: For county comptroller, Harry S. Hanson, Raymond Welch and Laura Belle Wilson.

For Levy Court commissioner in the Second Levy Court District, Irving Garton and Winfred Hughes.

For state senator, 13th District, Allen J. Cook, Leon C. Donovan, and George Exley; 15th District, George A. Robbins and Jacob Zimmerman.

For representative in the General Assembly, 25th District, Glenn W. Busker, J. Reynolds Pratt and Carroll B. Staats; 28th District, H. Dawson Shulties and Wallace P. Wooten.

The contests for delegates and alternates to the Democratic primary from this area are as follows: From the new 29th Representative District, using election district best identified by their connection with the former representative districts: Second of Sixth—Delegates—Ellwood Gruwell, Lloyd Minner, Harry M. Seene, and Raymond Welch, Sr. (vote for two).

First of Ninth—Wilson G. Bradley, Franklin Hendricks, Benjamin Hughes, Jr., and Thomas H. Peck (vote for three). Alternates—Mary L. Brown, Franklin E. Derrickson, Anna Lee Hitchens, Harold P. Minner, and E. A. Rutledge (vote for three).

Richard Roach Wins State Tractor Contest

Richard Roach, 15-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Roach, Route 2, Townsend, will represent Delaware in the Eastern United States 4-H Tractor Operators' Contest next month in Richmond, Va. He will compete with 4-H tractor winners from more than 20 other states at the regional event Sept. 29 at the Virginia State Fair.

Roach earned the opportunity to represent Delaware by winning the state 4-H tractor operators' contest last week at the Delaware State Fair, where he competed with seven other county contest winners. He has been a member of the Stump Corner 4-H Club for two years.

Second place winner in the Delaware contest was Sam Dixon, 17-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Dixon, Route 1, Clayton. Third place went to G. Robert Moore, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Moore, of Bear.

Accompanying Roach to the regional event as coach and chaperone will be Ernest N. Scarborough, agricultural engineer at the University of Delaware.

The contest includes a written test, a test on tractor safety procedures and a driving test. Top three winners will receive trophies. Last year's Delaware winner, Tom Baxter, of Middletown, won fourth place in the regional event.

Money Flowing In Ferry Wake

Money is flowing into Delaware's coastal resorts in the wake of the Cape May-Lewes Ferry.

That's the consensus of town officials and business leaders although almost all admit it's hard to be specific in dollars. Ferry traffic has mounted to 1,100 vehicles - mostly cars - daily, according to Nolan C. Chandler, manager. This exceeds the estimates.

One new business aimed directly at the ferry service—a shuttle bus from the terminal to Rehoboth Beach—started with 25 passengers the first weekend day and jumped to 100 passengers Monday, Says P. W. Hitchens, general manager.

A 50-unit motel on Lewes Beach is proposed by Charles Royce, of Rehoboth Beach.

Mayor Otis H. Smith, of Lewes is dubious on what will be its impact in the winter.

Town Commissioner Thomas J. Orr says the ferry travelers are "bound to make a difference. Somebody has to stop sometime with all that traffic going through town."

And stop they do at restaurants and service stations. J. Kenneth Hudson, owner of a service station on Savannah Road, estimates his station gets three or four cars from each ferry run.

Another station operator, Granville Hastings, on East Market Street in Georgetown, about 14 miles west of Lewes on Rt. 18, says his business has picked up and that patrons often mention that they have come to the Peninsula on the ferry.

Harry L. Fisher, Lewes Chamber of Commerce president, said "I can only see where the ferry has done good."

Restaurants and motels feel it too. Mayor James C. Popham of Bethany Beach, part owner of a restaurant there, says he has had customers who tell him they rode the ferry.

Outside Millsboro on U.S. 113, a waitress says that her eating place has had "a few" from the ferry. Francis Short, owner of a restaurant in Georgetown, says his trade has picked up and he's discovered some clues. He finds ticket stubs from the ferry in the ash trays.

At a large motel on the Rehoboth boardwalk, Preston Godfrey, a part-owner, says he's turning down requests for lodging from ferry travelers since the motel is booked solid two weeks in advance. "I don't know how they found out about it so quickly," he says.

As for the winter, some express concern, others think it will mark a new beginning for the resorts. In 30 days the ferry traffic will end, says a filling station operator, J. Kenneth Hudson, when the people stop "riding around" in the summertime.

But to Godfrey, "It's going to be a big help."

"In the wintertime," he says, "we're going to be a little Atlantic City—we hope."

Dukes Says Terry Sure To Accept

Chief Justice Charles L. Terry Jr. was still silent, but Democratic State Chairman Elisha C. Dukes said Tuesday "it is a foregone conclusion" Terry would accept the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

Terry's office Tuesday issued a statement saying he would have no comment "at this time" on the action of the Democratic Policy Committee in assigning the party's gubernatorial nomination to Kent County provided Terry is the nominee.

Dukes replied to charges of bossism raised by the two announced candidates after the policy committee acted last Saturday.

Answering State Auditor Ernest E. Killen and businessman Robert H. Reed, Dukes said the Kent County Democratic Committee in 1960 agreed unanimously to support a gubernatorial candidate out of Sussex County provided the candidate were Elbert N. Carvel.

Although the policy committee meeting was held in the governor's office with Carvel present, Killen said Tuesday, "I don't believe that Gov. Carvel would condone such action. I expect a majority of the delegates in Kent County to be for me; I think I can win the election and I don't know what else the Democratic Policy Committee could expect or ask for."

Killen also made public a letter to the governor pointing out that Mrs. Belle Everett, state treasurer and Democratic National committee woman; Mrs. Blanche Cahall, Kent County vice chairman, and Francis Downs, president of the Federation of Democratic Clubs were absent from the policy committee meeting Saturday.

Meanwhile the movement to draft Terry was backed Tuesday by Raymond V. West, Sussex County Democratic chairman.

West said in an interview that he thinks it is "important for the Democratic party to present the best possible candidate to the voting public, and this is a matter for the entire party and not just Kent County."

Dover Cadets Rebuilding CAP Headquarters

This rebuilding program has given new initiative to the Dover Squadron and has attracted many new members. The cadets have been briefed of many new and exciting plans for future programs in the Civil Air Patrol at Dover. Among these, of course, is to be offered in Aero-Space Education by Captain Larry S. Rogers, II of Dover A.F.B.

Felton Man Wins State Grand Prize In Pepsi Contest

Norman W. Wilkins, of Felton, who entered the six-week long Pepsi-Cola Shopping Spree sweepstakes, won the grand state prize in the Maryland-Delaware-Virginia area with only having submitted two entries.

The Wilkins were informed of their good fortune by William Morgan, president of the Pepsi-Cola Bottling Company of Salisbury. The family will receive a year's supply of groceries, a year's supply of automobile equipment and service, and a year's supply of their choice of Pepsi-Cola products. Mr. Wilkins chose the Acme Market, Harrington, to get his groceries from and Tieman's Esso Station near Dover, to supply his automotive winnings.

Mr. Wilkins is a carpenter, employed by the Sinston Company of Camden. Mrs. Wilkins is a secretary for the State Police Headquarters. There are three children in the family, Mark, 11; Rachel, 6, and Jonathon, 3.

Mrs. Wilkins sings soprano in the Church of God choir. Her hobby is reading, and when asked what type of reading, she wrapped the answer in one word "anything". Wilkins is an ardent gardener, and spends his spare time with cultivating both vegetables and flowers.

During the course of the $1-850,000 Shopping Spree, Pepsi Cola awarded some 150,000 prizes throughout the nation.

The Board decided to make available student insurance as provided by the Nationwide Insurance Company for the 1964-65 school year. It also accepted the offer of the Nationwide Insurance Company for football coverage during the present year.

Ft. Miles Funds OK'd By Senate

Legislation that should clear the way for the return and partial development of Ft. Miles Wednesday passed the Senate.

It now goes to the governor for his signature.

The measure (HB 638) will provide $172,650 to the State Park Commission for maintenance and to begin developing the area on Cape Henlopen, near Lewes, for recreation.

Sen. Walter J. Hoey D-Milford, explained that even though the Assembly already had provided up to $100,000 for the purchase of the land, declared surplus by the Army, Delaware cannot receive it until provision has been made for its maintenance.

Action by the Democratic State Committee on the gubernatorial nomination brought charges of bossism Monday from the camps of the two announced Democratic candidates.

The committee had assigned the gubernatorial nomination to Kent County, "Provided its candidate be Chief Justice Charles L. Terry Jr." and allocated the lieutenant governor nomination to the City of Wilmington, "provided the city produce a satisfactory candidate."

Dover businessman Robert H. Reed, one of the two announced candidates, denounced the action on the gubernatorial nomination as "another very brazen act of bossism at its worst."

"A blatant example of bossism," said James G. Smith Jr. of Dover, campaign manager for State Auditor Ernest E. Killen, of Harrington, the other candidate.

Democratic leaders previously had expressed their desire that Terry be the party's nominee for governor but the statement Monday by State Chairman Elisha C. Dukes indicated that if Terry is not chosen, the nominee may come from elsewhere than Kent County.

Under the rotation system, it is Kent's "turn" to have the gubernatorial candidate. Killen and Reed are both from Kent.

Terry has said repeatedly that he is not a candidate but has not ruled out a draft at the Aug. 19 state convention.

Told of the policy committee's position, Reed said in part:

"If this report is true then it is another very brazen act of bossism at its worst."

"The policy committee is certainly wrong. Their attitude or reasoning of you can have the governor if you take our candidate is just about as undemocratic as a party can get. People in Kent County are fed up with our local bossism and certainly will not tolerate being told by people of the county who they must pick . . ."

"We shall not lessen our efforts. I call upon all Democrats in Kent County to go to the polls this Saturday and repudiate these would-be bosses . . ."

Smith, speaking for Killen, said:

"If these men on the policy committee speak for themselves we welcome their thoughts although we disagree."

"However, if they allege that they speak for the delegates in their area and do commit their areas to the program outlined in the statement, then we call upon the individual delegates in each district, in each hundred, in each county and in the City of Wilmington to reject this blatant example of bossism. We sincerely believe that Kent County wants Killen and that he will receive a majority of the votes of the delegates."

"After careful consideration," Dukes' statement read, "it was resolved that the nomination for the office of governor be assigned to Kent County, provided its candidate be Chief Justice Charles L. Terry Jr."

National Committeeman William S. Potter said his position was that Kent get the office regardless of the candidate. He said he would support the nominee of the Kent County caucus.

Letter to the Editor

In reply to the letter last week in your fine newspaper, we are pleased to give our reasoning behind the Draft Terry Committee.

Perhaps the most important election in Kent County in this decade will be held on Saturday, August 15, 1964, between 7 a. m. and 8 p. m.

At that time, delegates to the Democratic State Convention will be elected.

The issue is who will lead our party and our State for the next four years.

We believe that a political party which does not nominate for Governor a man who is a strong leader and dynamic speaker, and who is known throughout the State, invites defeat in November.

Our party, therefore, must select as its candidate for Governor its strongest available man, one who will be a great leader and strong campaigner.

We believe the strongest candidate for Governor in the Democratic party is Chief Justice Charles L. Terry, Jr.

He is a powerful speaker; he has both administrative and judicial experience; he has the integrity and leadership necessary to lead our rapidly expanding State in the next four years.

He has served as Secretary of State of our State. His success in obtaining progressive legislation relating to the judicial system of the State is legendary.

He is the one Kent Countian who is sufficiently well known in northern Delaware (where the votes are) to be elected.

Jack Lemmon's "GOOD NEIGHBOR SAM" At Reese Aug. 14-15-16-17

With "Flipper's New Adventure" - "THE UNSINKABLE MOLLY BROWN" To Play Aug. 19 thru 25

Slam! Bam! Hold your breath! According to the management, announcements may come and go, as is expected in the theatrical field-but none in the past can compare with this week's expose of two of the greatest Slam! Bam! top attractions listed for showing in the Reese Theatre program to be found in the back page of this newspaper.

Slam! Bam! Here comes Sam! Jack Lemmon with Dorothy Provine in the hit now engulfing the entire entertainment world, "Good Neighbor Sam," is listed for showing at the Reese Theatre this Friday, Saturday, Sunday, and Monday, August 14-15-16-17. And one cannot imagine, but it's true, the extra added feature is MGM'S "Flipper's New Adventure," making two top features on a single bill.

To cap the climax, so to speak, the triple hit, now taking the theatrical world by storm, "The Unsinkable Molly Brown" with Debbie Reynolds and Harve Presnell makes the Reese Theatre open its doors for a seven day engagement, starting Wednesday, Aug. 19 and continuing thru Aug. 25.

With such a 'slam bam' explosion of entertainment bombshells, a street corner gossip was heard to say, "Look out Reese, you might go broke."

Across the street, Reese was heard to reply, "If I do, it'll be down the 'happiness' trail.

Fence Talk

With George Vapaa

The Kent Soil Conservation District invites corn and soybean farmers to attend the Minimum Tillage Field Day at the Schmidt Brothers farm near Sudlersville, Md., August 20.

This unusual event is sponsored by the Queen Anne's County Soil Conservation District. The program will start at 10 a.m. with registration and inspection of the demonstration plots and minimum tillage equipment. At 12 o'clock a lunch will be served by the Queen Anne's Club Park Board for $1.50. You may have all you can eat of pork burgers, corn on the cob, fresh tomatoes, hot rolls and beverage.

Guest speaker will be J. T. McAllister, former Conservation Equipment Engineer, Soil Conservation Service, Orangeburg, S. C., now retired. Mr. McAllister, the "father" of "mulch tillage" will speak on "mulch tillage in the southeast."

There will be a panel discussion by farmers who have used mulch planting in Queen Anne's County in the last two years.

The afternoon will be concluded with demonstrations of the Lister Planter used in "Mulch Tillage" and the cultivation of Lister-planted crops.

If you plan to attend and would like further details, contact our Extension Service office, 736-1448 or Frederick T. Mott, Soil Conservation Service, 697-3376.

Many spring seedings of permanent pasture and alfalfa have failed because of the drought in May and June. If you will need more forage for next year and the years to come, now's the time to submit soil samples and sign up for lime, fertilizer and seeding payments through the ACP. Fall seedings, completed before the end of September usually have a better chance of becoming established than spring seedings. This is a reminder from Lister V. Hall Jr., manager at the county ASCS office.

Now is a good time to check your hog self-feeders. Are they allowing feed to be wasted? Many self-feeders regularly allow four to five per cent of the feed to be wasted.

This may seem like a small amount of feed but it is equivalent to increasing your selling price of hogs by 55 cents per hundredweight based on average feed prices. Most hog producers would jump at the chance to market their hogs on a 50 cents higher market. Make sure you are getting this bonus by eliminating the feed that is lost.

Check that feeder to see if the throat opening is too wide. Adjust it downward so that the hogs have to work a little to get the feed. This will cut down wastage and increase profits.

Rising prices have made farm property more valuable. Many farmers need to increase their insurance coverage accordingly.

Construction costs have more than doubled since 1945. Building a barn, or replacing a barn that burned, requires twice as much cash as it did fifteen years ago.

Farmers commonly insure against the risk of loss due to fire, windstorm, and other causes. If an insured building is damaged, the farmer does not bar the whole loss, because his insurance company makes a cash payment to him. The amount of payment depends on the amount for which the building is insured. Fire may cause a total loss, so then the insurance company makes the maximum payment.

If your structure is not fully covered, you're bearing more risk than necessary, and more of the replacement cost would come out of your own pocket. Insurance is not a substitute for caution. Just the same, better review your farm building values, so that you can get more insurance protection if it is needed.

One of the first requirements of good salesmanship is to let folks know that you are in business. If they can't find you, they surely can't buy from you.

A farm sign tells prospective customers and interested dairymen where you are located. It says you are proud of your herd. It is a friendly invitation to stop in and see the animals.

Have you ever tried to locate a dairyman in a certain area only to find out you may have driven right by the farm merely because there was no attractive sign to say, I'm in business—here is my farm and herd.

There isn't a merchant or a salesman in your area who doesn't advertise his products with signs and attractive displays inviting you to stop in and see what he has to offer. These people realize customers are important. Yet, many of these same merchants may not have as much an investment as you have in your herd and operation.

An attractive sign, however, is only the beginning. Once your customer finds you — what does he see? Attractive, well kept buildings and surroundings create a favorable impression. Your customers must be favorably impressed with what they see if you want to keep them as your customers.

Today, one-fourth as many farmers, using one-half as much land, are producing one-third more products than in 1960. A farmer today produces five to six times as much food and fiber as his grandfather.

This kind of progress is the result of technology growing out of research and education and of the free competitive system which assured its adoption. Fortunately, farm research workers believe this remarkable progress will continue.

Since gains in agricultural efficiency are eventually passed on to the consumer in the form of lower prices, it's not difficult to visualize the long term importance of farm research.

ACP Reaches 2 Million Farms Each Year

Over two million farms throughout the country are participating in the Agricultural Conservation program each year, according to William H. Brady, State Executive director, Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation State Office. This includes farms where practices receiving ACP cost-sharing are under way and those where recently completed ACP practices are being maintained by the farmers.

Farms receiving ACP practice assistance during 1963 alone totaled 1.1 million, of which 23 percent or 254,000 were "new" farms which had not received cost-sharing during any of the previous three years.

In Delaware, Mr. Brady pointed out, ACP and farmers cooperated in conservation measures during 1963 on 1,574 farms, and 127 of these were "new" farms.

Major practices on local farms for which ACP in 1963 shared the cost included 56,679 acres of permanent and temporary vegetative cover, 33,300 acres of improvement to permanent vegetative cover, 199,718 feet of permanent open ditch and tile drainage, 22 ponds for irrigation, livestock and wildlife.

Mr. Brady explained that the high participation in ACP by "new" farms where no significant conservation work had been done in recent years has been due largely to the personal efforts of ASC community committeemen. On their own time and without pay, these committeemen assumed the responsibility of encouraging operators on such farms to carry out a needed conservation practice. This effort is continuing in 1964, and results thus far are most favorable.

"It would be hard to set a value on the benefits resulting from this 'new' conservation work," Mr. Brady said. "Many of these farmers thus have a chance to add to their income through better use and management of their soil, water, and woodland, and to form 'conservation habits.'"

"And, of course, the benefits are not limited to agriculture. Farmers, urban communities, and the public generally gain from good land-treatment measures, which greatly reduce major sediment damage downstream by restricting runoff and erosion from the Nation's farmland."

4-H News

With Marlon MacDonald

Karen Brown, Houston Cardinals member had great success with her feeder pigs this year. In the medium weight class, Karen's 210 market hog took 1st place honors and went on for reserve champion. Jay Robbins, Paradise Club took first place showmanship followed by Karen in 4th place. Jay also placed second in the medium weight. Other Kent County 4-H'ers placing in the judging were: light weight, Harvey Thomas, Westville, 2nd place; and Kevin Charles, Whiteoaks, 5th place. In the heavy weight class Earl Thompson, Andrewville, placed 4th.

Forty-one Junior Council members, 4-H leaders and friends have been to the World's Fair. The group took the one-day trip August 11.

All 4-H'ers carrying foods projects have been sent material announcing the favorite foods show Sept. 19 at the Delaware State Fairgrounds. This activity sponsored by the Suburban Propane Gas Corporation provides the opportunity for our 4-H'ers to practice their culinary skills as well as originality in service. The new divisions are: Junior—main dish, breads, desserts. Senior—main dish, vegetables, dessert, bread. Entries are due by September 11.

Record books are due in 4-H leaders hands by September 1st to be eligible for County awards. Late books will be accepted but not eligible for award consideration. Only three weeks left and it will take most of that to do a good job. Remember your record should show all you've done in your project during the year as well as your participation in other 4-H activities.

1450 Attend Southern States Joint Meeting

Approximately 1450 members of Southern State Cooperative, their families and other farm people heard reports of their cooperative's services for the 1963-64 fiscal year at a joint meeting held at the Delaware State Fairgrounds at Harrington August 5.

The session was held jointly by nine of the cooperative's retail outlets in Delaware and Maryland. These were:

'64 Feed Grain Payments Soon To Be Made

Payments soon will be made in Kent County to farmers taking part in the 1964 feed grain program for corn, grain sorghum, and barley Russell C. Bowdle, chairman, Kent Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation County Committee announced yesterday.

Total program payments earned in Kent County amounted to $5,111 for diverting acreages from wheat production into approved conserving uses and $61,369 for "domestic use" and "export" wheat certificates.

For feed grains, the chairman explained, a part of the diversion payments was made in advance to producers at the time they signified their intention to participate in the program. This was done as a means of helping them to meet their production expenses. The feed grain payments soon to be made represent the balance of the diversion payments due and the total price-support payments available to growers who took part in the '64 program.

No advance payments were made for wheat in 1964. The wheat payments currently being made therefore include the diversion payment for shifting wheat acreage into a conserving use and the value of marketing certificates earned through participation in the program.

The wheat certificates have a value of 70 cents per bushel for the part of the farm's marketing allocation representing wheat for domestic use and a value of 25 cents per bushel for the wheat for export.

The chairman reminds farmers that provisions of the '64 program extend throughout the 1964 calendar year; receipt of the final program payments does not mean an end to the program. Farmers who diverted land from production under either the wheat or the feed grain program agreed to protect it and not harvest from it throughout the whole of 1964. Such diverted acreage may be grazed starting November 1st.

Edible Soybeans Featured at U. of D. Field Day

Soybeans may find a place on the dinner tables of America within the next year, Americans have used the crop for cooking oil and livestock feed. In some of the less prosperous nations soybeans are a big part of human diets because of their high protein content. But here in this county we get our protein from other sources.

A researcher at the University of Delaware feels that soybeans will become a more valuable crop as human food. At the University's Farm and Home Field Day at the Georgetown Substation Wednesday Dr. Henry W. Crittenden displayed varieties which he says will prove to be excellent vegetable beans. And he feels these beans will be ready for production within the year.

Research work on this new vegetable bean has developed to the point of selecting seeds from two crosses that have proved to be most suitable. Offspring from the "Aoda X Kanrich" and "Aoda X AO-7445" are the ones Crittenden has the most faith in. He says not only are these strains quite edible, but they are resistant to the many blights and mildews that infect soybeans. They are also resistant to a condition known as "purple stain", which colors beans and makes them unsuitable as food.

Crittenden is also working on another soybean variety that should be of particular interest to growers. This bean can be left in the field all winter, thus avoiding the costs of storing. The problem is one of developing a plant that will withstand the rigors of winter without sheeding its seed, and will remain in an upright position for harvesting.

Visitors to this plot at the Field Day saw strains which Crittenden says have the ability to hold almost all of their seed until March or April. In addition, they are relatively high yielding, resistant to pod and stem blight, and with a very small amount of purple stain. He feels that within three years a new variety will be available to growers that can be harvested at the growers' convenience.

Other crop research displayed at the annual Field Day included:

Tests on the tolerance of certain grains to the weed killer Atrazine.

A project to see if a combination of herbicides is better in controlling weeds in soybeans than a single chemical.

An investigation into the causes of root rot in soybeans.

A test of several corn varieties to determine the ones most suited to local conditions and varying amounts of moisture.

Farm and Home Field Day is held each year at the University of Delaware's Georgetown Substation to display the research work that is being done there. More than 80 different projects with thousands of individual tests are under way. Included in the list are projects in vegetable production, poultry, field crops, and fruit. Problems in weed control, disease resistance of varieties, new varieties and the effects of new chemical compounds on the different crops are tested at the substation farm before they are recommended by the University.

Miss Edith DeLong

Newark Girl Describes Trip To Ceylon

(Editor's note: Miss Edith DeLong, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William B. DeLong, 36 Sunset Road, Newark, is spending six months in the island country of Ceylon as a U. S. representative in the International Farm Youth Exchange program. A college graduate and biological technician, she is one of several hundred young people from 43 countries participating in this year's exchange program, designed to promote better understanding among people of many nations. Following is Miss DeLong's third report on her visit, which began last month.)

Right now I'm causing somewhat of a disturbance because I'm writing to you with my hair up—"space style"—and wearing a sari. I'm wearing it Ceylonese style—different from Indian. It's cotton, which is best because they are hot. I feel like a real lady. I am now with my first host family. It is a poultry farm in the uplands. It's hilly but not the highest hills of Ceylon. Gampola is the town if you can find it on the map. They raise layers and have a hatchery, too. It's the biggest one in Ceylon.

But don't get any dilutions of grandeur. Living is rough. No one has a plush life in Ceylon except for the very few. It's a good life, but hard. I'm enjoying every minute except for the hole-in-the-ground latrine.

This is the home of last year's IPYE to the U.S. She just returned from six months' travel in Europe and Asia two weeks ago. She and her brother manage the farm. Her parents are very old and live somewhere else. The grandmother also lives here, along with two more sisters and five more brothers. Everyone who isn't in school (16) has a job here.

They have 1,900 layers, for table eggs and 300 for hatching. They have a big incubator and hatch about 3,000 chicks once a week which are sent all over the island. They have a franchise from Babcock chick in Ithaca, N. Y. They also have boxer and dalmation dogs and pens of wild, beautiful birds of Ceylon.

I am beginning to learn Senhalese just a little. It is an unbelievable language. Two and a half million people speak it here and are very patient with us.

The farm is right in the middle of this small town. They have a long, narrow strip of land. The brooder and incubator are right in the house.

The small sitting room has a wooden painted bench and plastic covered couch and coffee table. One bedroom is off this. An office is in the very front, then the insubator. The living room is off this. Next back is a table and stairway upstairs to two rooms with four beds. Now next to the table is the kitchen. This has cupboards for dishes and a hearth (built up).

We eat off plates but with our hands. I've become very fond of the food. They give you enough for all day—four times a day. Already I've gained five or six pounds. We have rice or something made from rice every meal, plus curries, "relishes" and vegetables. Dessert is fruit. We, of course, have lot of eggs and poultry here but this is the only place, I guess, where this is true. I've learned to make some of the dishes—but we just don't have all the ingredients at home, or if we do they are too expensive. They use lots and lots of coconut water, milk, and hot chillies.

Our pictures have been in the papers oodles of times. People in the hotel even stopped us and asked us about the program and about ourselves. I could hear drums from the Buddhist temple every night in my room in Kandy.

It has rained a lot—it's the monsoon season. Tropical rains are really something. It comes down in small drops really hard for an hour or so and in 15 minutes it's all dry again.

I learned in orientation about the Young Farmers' Club movement, marriage customs of the Hindus, Buddhists and Moslems. Have seen places of worship of each of these. All quite different. I went to a British Methodist Church on Sunday; had communion, and blessed the Queen, too. Service was in English.

The articles about the U. S. that make the papers are unbelievable! (Usually anything but good!)

The Buddhist temples are really beautiful. Sunday we explored Kandy. Went to Temple of the South. The flowers and incense in front of the statues create a sensational atmosphere. Went to the museum and saw ancient things, writings in palm leaves, Buddha statues, etc. Have pounded rice to make flour and have sifted it. You bathe in the back "court yard" next to their "tank" water supply with a sarong wrapped around and pour buckets of water over you. It really feels good.

There are people in and out all the time to meet us and just to visit. Everyone goes to see anyone and talks. You don't have to know the people at all. We've taken several long, long walks so we could see homes from all economic classes and types. We just stop and go in. In every one we are welcome and are fed. This isn't just because it is us, but they just do it all the time. We went yesterday deep on paths back in the jungle.

In all the homes, no matter how poor, the family is clean as can be with dirt floors and walls. All are neat, and the cooking things are all set together and well kept. Most are full of pictures and statues of Buddha and his disciples.

All have a garden with tropical fruits and vegetables. I like Ceylon tea very much. One house we stopped at gave us "King" coconuts. You whack off the top of a young coconut, drink the water, then crack it and eat the kernel. The water is very sweet and the kernel is very soft and yummy good. I really like it.

We went further into the jungles and through paddy fields to a "reservation" where the untouchables are. They are now being allowed out some. They make fancy drums. We were even received well there. They played for us and danced. I can't buy these untouchable things.

All in all we are having a wonderful time. We aren't working at all, though. I always eat with the men while the kids and women wait. I am well and having a great time.

Tomato Harvester A Success At U. of D. Field Day

Tomato producers who were skeptical about the ability of a machine to harvest tomatoes, are having to revise their opinions. A large crowd gathered at the University of Delaware's Georgetown substation during Farm and Home Field Day Wednesday to watch a mechanical harvester being demonstrated on a variety of tomatoes developed at the substation especially for machine harvest.

While the machine, which looks like a large potato digger was warming up you could hear remarks from the crowd like, "where do you catch the juice", or "it's a good catsup maker". But the skeptics had to change their view when the big machines went into operation. The tomatoes were harvested, in good condition. And it took less than half the time as the same number of workers picking by hand.

Machines are having their share of problems in the struggle to replace man in the tomato field. The biggest one is the development of a tomato variety that will ripen uniformly so the plants can be pulled by the machine and relieved of their fruit. Most commercial varieties now available ripen over an extended period of time and require several manual harvest for maximum production.

Professor Eugene Brasher, horticulturist at the University of Delaware, is developing tomato varieties that meet the requirements of mechanical harvesting. In the field demonstration at Farm and Home Field Day, an experimental variety, Delaware 65S3-2 was used. Brasher explains the variety as a four way cross among Mustang, Chesapeake, Delaware 13-2 and KC146. He admits this variety needs further development but that it could well be the basis of a break-through in tomato harvesting. Once a suitable variety is perfected he feels machines will make rapid inroads.

Most of the mechanical harvesting now being done is on small paste type tomatoes on the west coast. These varieties yield small, firm fruit that withstands mechanical harvesting difficulties. Brasher predicts it will be a few more years before a variety is perfected that is completely suited to mechanical harvesting.

One approach to the problems of uniform ripening has been the use of chemicals to control the fruiting patterns of the tomato plant. This may offer an alternative to the much slower process of breeding plants that are suited to single harvests. Chemicals are being applied to the plants at a certain stage of development to prohibit additional fruit setting. This allows the plant to devote its energies to the fruit already, thus insuring maximum size, quality and a single harvest.

The first mechanical harvester was built by Michigan State University in 1958. Although refinements have been made on the original prototype, most machines follow the same general principles; there must be a device for cutting or pulling the vines, a separator, a grading table and a means of getting the fruit into a container. To work successfully, a machine must remove the fruit from the vines gently so that there is no bruising or cracking. There is also a critical problem of getting the tomatoes into containers without including soil, and other contaminating material. There are also problems of grading the fruit before it goes into the containers, and preventing damage to the fruit while it passes through the machine.

Another area of concern to tomato producers is a suitable method of packing the tomatoes as they come from the machine. Three methods are currently in use, lug boxes, bulk handling using large bins, and a system of placing the tomatoes in containers partially filled with water. So far bulk bins seem to have an advantage.

Widespread use of mechanical harvesters is causing some concern among processors. As the machines gain acceptance, they are being forced to reschedule their packing operation to handle normal production in as little as one fourth the amount of time. As a solution to this problem researchers are trying to develop strains that will ripen at different times throughout the season.

Another problem that is causing great concern, is when is the optimum time to harvest a field and get the maximum yield. Since the plants are destroyed in this once-over operation, it becomes especially important to find the optimum harvest date. One method that is being perfected is a system of measuring the diameter of the stems twice a week during the critical flowering period. When the stems reach their maximum size, it can then be determined how many more days will be required to get the largest yield with a once-over picking.

The acceptance of these machines seems to be hinging more on the costs of the operation and the perfecting of a suitable tomato variety than on the question of "will they work?" It is generally felt that a machine is just about equal to manual harvest on a dollars and cents basis. But as improvements continue to be made, and the cost of manual harvest increases, machines will start to find their place. Brasher predicts that by 1970 20,000 men operating 3,000 machines will do the work now being done by 100,000 workers. This could well amount to a $15 million annual saving to the industry.

Delaware Food Market Report

Despite the long dry spell in many of our growing areas this summer, roadside stands and grocery stores are showing plenty of fresh locally grown vegetables now, thanks to the increasing use of irrigation by truck farms says the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

There is certainly nothing quite like fresh vegetables—ones that are newly picked and delivered to our stores the same day. This is the way it is with many tomatoes sold now. They are locally grown, top quality, and prices are "sliding down" to where they are economical. This vegetable is certainly one of the most versatile vegetable known and it is an old time favorite. They are ideal for salads, either served alone or with lettuce, asparagus, celery, cucumbers, onions, peppers and a wide variety of other leafy greens. Tomatoes are also a standard item in sandwiches, they are delectable in soups, and the base for many delightful sauces and dressings. Beside all of these, this vegetable is low in calories and high in food value. When used fresh, tomatoes are rich in Vitamin C and are a good source of Vitamin A.

When selecting tomatoes, be sure to look for ones that are firm but not over ripe to insure flavor. They should be free from blemishes to reduce waste and of a good color whether red or yellow. Three or four medium size tomatoes will weigh approximately one pound and one pound will yield four servings. This should give you an idea of how many you will need when you buy tomatoes this week.

There are other fresh vegetables on hand this week and these are also top buys, so consider such items as sweet corn, cauliflower, celery, cucumbers, dry and green onions, yellow squash, green beans, green peppers and new cabbage.

Fruit choices are also wider during the summer and this week is no exception. Best values include: Cantaloupes, watermelons, lemons, limes, summer apples, and plums. Peaches are becoming more plentiful as nearby areas begin their harvest. Quality is much improved and the flavor is one that couldn't be better. Prices, however, are still a bit high but as supplies increase this should adjust.

If you haven't bought any beef liver lately, you may want to give this inexpensive and quick-cooking cut a try soon. Beef liver yields about 5 servings per pound and it usually averages only 12 cents a serving.

Poultry and beef continue to be excellent buys. Turkeys of all sizes are available as well as fryers and Cornish hens. Beef roasts and cuts that require a longer cooking time are the better beef buys this week.

Caesar Rodney F.F.A. Active During Summer

While most students enjoy a vacation from school during the summer, students of vocational agriculture who are members of the Future Farmers of America continue their educational program. During recent weeks several of the Caesar Rodney members have participated in F.F.A. activities and won numerous awards.

At the Delaware State Fair the Caesar Rodney F.F.A. members combined to win first place among chapters in statewide competition. This was achieved by having the largest number of prize winning entries in the F.

F.A. division. This group of exhibitors included: Edwin Alexander, Samuel Benedetti, Jay Clark, Robert Dill, Erskine Gillespie, John Hall, Larry Horvath, Clifford Hudson, Kirby Jones, Donald Kling, Jack Kling, Carl Melvin, David Moore, John Moore, Ricky Nechay, James Papan, David Rash, Wilson Shulties, Fred Stites, Harvey Thomas and Derby Walker. Their combined winnings totaled $209. Carl Melvin was the leading individual winner in the state.

In the F.F.A. judging contest the Caesar Rodney members excelled, winning first in the state in four different contests.

In dairy and dairy products judging the winning team consisted of Fred Stites, Clifford Hudson and Robert Dill. This group will represent Delaware in the national contest to be held this fall at the National Dairy Congress in Waterloo, Iowa.

The first place livestock judging team of Jay Clark, Harvey

Thomas and John Hall will represent Delaware in the National Contest which will be held in Kansas City, Mo., during October.

The vegetable judging team of Derby Walker, Ricky Nechay and James Papan was also a first place winner.

In the tractor driving contest where safety and skill is considered, Erskine Gillespie, the Caesar Rodney contestant was declared the winner.

Each of the boys have also been carrying on agricultural projects to gain experience in agricultural production and related occupations.

All of these activities were under the direction of Horace E. Short who serves as the Caesar Rodney instructor of vocational agriculture and F.F.A. advisor.

MOSQUITO BILLS

in vain a section of the bill which would provide for the highway department to secure easements through purchase "if necessary."

Best said that such a stipulation only lends itself to political usage, since some landowners would give easements freely where others, more savvy about such matters, would require and get payment for doing the same thing. "We should either pay all or pay none," Best told the House.

He also objected to the provision that the bill would "initiate" a permanent mosquito control program. "If it is only to be initiated now," he said, "then we in the Joint Legislative Finance Committee have been misled." Best said the $99,000 appropriation in the current budget of the mosquito control division for salaries and wages is "for permanent work since the spraying is handled on a contractual basis." He continued, "If that money isn't being used for permanent work, then what is it being used for?"

Best also argued that the money should be turned over to University of Delaware entomologists, "since they are the real experts." At the end of the day he introduced a bill which would appropriate $500,000 to the university for mosquito control work. It was assigned to the Appropriations Committee.

Rep. James R. Quigley, D-New Castle Hundred, who barely lost a fight against considering the bill, contended the highway department should build roads, "not worry about bugs and mosquitoes."

The bill had the support of Gov. Elbert N. Carvel and finally passed with 19 yeas, 11 nays (Annett, Atkins, Bartleson, Best, Casey, Correll, Downs, Fisher, Casey, Keenan, Walls) and five absent (Hale, Isaacs Quigley, Shulties, Younger).

The bill would provide $45,000 for salaries and wages of employees, $10,000 for research at the University of Delaware, $15,000 for supplies and materials and $430,000 for other contractual services.

The money would be used for ditching, filling, impounding and marshes.

2 GOV. HOPEFULS

West abstained from voting, although he made it clear he does not oppose Terry.

Otherwise, the resolution was passed unanimously.

The policy group was unanimously in favor of nominating Gov. Elbert N. Carvel to run for the U. S. Senate and U. S. Rep. Harris B. McDowell Jr., to run for another term in the U. S. House of Representatives.

The nomination for treasurer was assigned to Kent with the incumbent, Mrs. Belle Everett, of Kenton, unanimously endorsed. Sussex was allotted the auditor's nomination, again provided it produces an acceptable candidate.

The only announced candidate for lieutenant governor from Wilmington is attorney James L. Latchum. However, it is believed there are others interested in the job and there are other announced candidates from other areas.

Attending the session in Dover were Dukes, Carvel, Potter, West, former State Chairman John M. Conway, State Vice Chairman William J. McClafferty, Wilmington Chairman Michael Poppitt, New Castle Chairman Francis Dolan, Kent Vice Chairman Sam Fox, Christiana Hundred Chairman F. Earl McGinness and attorneys Alexis I. duPont Bayard and Daniel Herrmann.

Hagley Museum to Reconstruct Full-Size Water Wheel

A full-sized, wooden water wheel of the type which powered mills and factories in past centuries will turn again on the Brandywine this fall. The Hagley museum announced recently that it will reconstruct a sixteen-foot diameter, breast-type wheel on the former Du Pont powder mill property near Wilmington.

Already under construction by the Fitz Water Wheel Company at Hanover, Pa., the wheel will replace one known to have been used more than a century ago at the Birkenhead Mills in Hagley. The pair of mills were built by E. I. du Pont in 1822-24 and were probably the first powder mills to be equipped with rolling wheels, rather than the mortars and pestles used prior to the 1820's. The original water wheel was replaced later in the nineteenth century by a metal turbine.

A wooden roof will also be restored on one of the mills, and a flume and sluice-gate reconstructed to control water flow from the mill race to the wheel. Robert A. Kane, the museum's engineer who is supervising the construction, has made use of a number of old photographs and drawings in duplicating the original appearance of the mill.

According to Kane, locating a white oak tree of sufficient size to provide a finished main shaft for the wheel, twenty-six inches in diameter and twenty-one feet long proved difficult. One was finally found in Pennsylvania, but when cut proved unsound. Eventually a second was located which proved to be perfect. Other parts of the wheel are being fashioned of oak, gum, and white pine.

The bucket section of the wheel will be nine-feet wide, but the longer shaft is required

VETERAN'S PENSION

Texas (Mr. Teague), in working out the provisions of the legislation now before us.

"H. R. 1927, when signed into law by the President, will be a landmark in the determination of the Congress and the American people to meet now, as in the past, the needs of our war veterans.

"As we have faced the crisis of the past week caused by the communists of North Vietnam and the Mainland of China who attacked the naval forces of the United States on the high seas, we are reminded of the great sacrifices of the veterans of World War I, World War II, and the Korean Conflict. While we prayerfully hope that it will not be again necessary for our young people to have to go to war, we know that the lessons of the past have taught us that those who have died have not died in vain. Today, because of our victories we enjoy the greatest amount of freedom and liberty and prosperity that has ever accrued to any nation in the history of the world."

CANCER

"The Million Club"—23 min., color, high school, college and adults. On loan from the American Cancer Society.

This film focuses upon seven people who discover a bond among them — all have survived cancer for five years. Though done in story form with suspense building up right to the very end, the message comes through with clarity — the importance of learning the seven danger signals and that cancer can be cured if treated promptly and properly.

FIRST AID, SAFETY CIVIL DEFENSE

"Children At Play with Poison"—12 min., color, high school, college and adults, particularly parents of young children.

The National Safety Council reports that every day last year, an average of four persons accidentally swallowed enough of some harmful substance at home to cause death. Such deaths are only one part of the picture. Evidence is now accumulating that indicates there are hundreds of non-fatal home poisonings for every death. More than one-third of the deaths from accidental poisoning occur among children under five.

One of the recent developments, on a nation-wide basis, has been the creation of poison information centers.

GENERAL HEALTH

"Right From the Start"—22 1/2 min., color, high school, college and adults.

On loan from Public Affairs Film Committee.
