Delaware Food Market Report

August is one of the leading months for melons and the leading melons are cantaloupes, honeydews, and watermelons. Though these melons do not all reach their seasonal peak in August, they are plentiful and as the season progresses prices decline, reaching lowest levels at about this time of year. As far as cost is concerned, here are a few figures to work with. Cantaloupes provide 2 servings per pound and the average melon now weighs about 1 3/4 pounds. Honeydew melons will serve 3 per pound and their average weight is 2 to 2 1/2 pounds. As far as watermelon is concerned, the average serving is 1 1/2 to 2 pounds and at 69c for a whole melon, this means only a few pennies per serving.

Other fruits are plentiful now, choose from bananas, plums, and peaches. Local peaches are "in" and are an excellent choice for every meal in the day, including snacks. When buying peaches, don't pinch or poke—just take a good look. Quality peaches are firm, mature, well-formed and are free from decay and injury. If the peaches you buy are not quite full-ripe, let them stand at room temperature (not in the sun) for 3 or 4 days. Ripe peaches should be kept in the refrigerator. How many to buy? Well, one pound of peaches equal about 3 medium size peaches and will give you 2 cups of sliced peaches. It takes two pounds of fresh peaches for an 8 or 9 inch pie. For 2 pints of canned or frozen peaches, you will need to buy 2 1/2 pounds. One bushel will yield 34 to 48 pints of canned or frozen peaches, depending on quality and size, whether peaches are sliced or halved and how closely they are packed into the containers.

Dry and rather cold weather has taken its toll on fresh vegetables, for we don't have the usual summertime abundance and low prices that is common for this time of year. True, prices are much lower than during most of the year. Vegetables to check this week are green beans, eggplant, cucumbers, lettuce, peppers, and tomatoes. More new potatoes are reaching the market and quality is improving. Prices, however, remain on the high side.

Broiler-fryers and frozen turkey continue to be good buys and an excellent way to stretch the food dollar. In red meats, your best buy continues to be beef. Prices at the wholesale levels are edging up on beef but the increase is not too evident at the retail store as yet.

We are at the peak of the season for fresh shellfish. This week you will find a wide choice, including crab meat, lobsters, sea scallops, and shrimp.

Houston

U. of D. to Offer Eight Lectures

A series of eight lectures on computer applications in chemical engineering will be offered this fall at the University of Delaware.

The lectures are under the joint sponsorship of the departments of chemical engineering and statistics and the university's extension division.

All lectures will be Monday nights, starting Oct. 5. Subsequent dates will be announced at the first lecture. Classes will meet for two hours starting at 7:30 in Room 140 of DuPont Hall on the Newark campus.

Instructors for the course will be Dr. Robert L. Pigford, chairman of the chemical engineering department; and Dr. David E. Lamb, chairman of the statistics and computer science department. The latter department was approved by trustees in June as an addition to the university's curriculum.

The lectures, designed to provide a means of professional improvement for chemical engineers in the Delaware Valley, will deal with examples of computer application in the areas of process design, process control and optimization, and chemical kinetics. The university's digital and analog computing facilities will be used in conjunction with the lectures.

The fee for the series is $25. Enrollment forms are available by writing to Extension Division, Raub Hall, University of Delaware, Newark, Del., for an application form.

With George Vapaa

The farm of the future exists today. Or at the very least, certain well defined characteristics are present:

1. It is reasonably large and uses a team of specialized workers.
2. Machines and capital are replacing manual labor.
3. A well kept system of records and planning is used.
4. Marketing techniques are highly refined.

We will probably always have the subsistence farm, the part-time operation, the retirement or hobby farm. But these will be, in essence, rural dwelling units.

There is reason to believe that family farms will continue, just as family business enterprises compete and complement corporate enterprises.

The northeastern area of the American Society of Farm Managers and Rural Appraisers recently visited three farms, the office of the Delaware Produce Growers Association and the W. H. Wheatley plant, all in Kent County.

Your county agent had warned the group to expect a plane take off about every fifteen minutes at the air base next to the Jacob W. Zimmerman farm near Little Creek. But it seemed to happen every fifteen seconds—C133, C124 and two jet interceptors scrambling, and so on. Potato harvest was underway, but the workers scarcely noted the planes overhead.

Dr. George Webster, farm director of WFIL-TV at Philadelphia, had his camera crew at the Woodrow Raas farm west of Dover. The visitors learned that Woody has given up on pasture feeding of his cows and now relies on silage or green chop corn for roughage feeding. Dr. William Crosswhite and Bill McAllister, of our University staff, had prepared a "linear program" of the farm. The University computer revealed that it would be profitable to expand the herd still further with the same facilities. Profits can be further increased with free stall housing. The computer is coming into greater use for weighing farm decisions. Woody credits his IBM-DHIA record for his fine herd production average of 14,000 lbs. of milk and 500 lbs. of butterfat per cow.

The Papan Brothers farm west of Dover shows the degree to which a family partnership can be refined. Here 600 acres of vegetables are grown. Sweet corn, cucumbers, and snap beans were being harvested and packed while we were there. Three separate irrigation systems were also in use at the same time. One of the brothers, Howard, handles sales. Most of this is by telephone to food chain stores.

Quality control in sweet corn processing seemed to be the key interest at the Wheatley plant visit. We followed newly harvested corn as it was unloaded into the plant, thru the husking operation, the trimming, the cutting or shelling, and on through the freezing and packing. We saw the federal grader make his analysis of quality and sampled the final product which scored close to perfection. Jim Bradley, the plant manager, reviewed the planting and harvest schedules, the radio control of field crews, the disposal of sewage, and a host of other management decisions.

Dr. William McDaniel, our dean of resident teaching at the University of Delaware, summed up the Delaware farm picture at the closing session. He emphasized the importance of the broiler industry and its relationship to other community growth. The broiler industry gives us a market for our corn and soybeans. And without broilers, there would be less commercial business activity within the state.

A new pesky fly is bothering the Dover area homeowners. It is roughly half the size of the common housefly, but can be much more of a nuisance. It is very hairy and is readily identified by two white bands on each leg.

We're talking about the filter fly, or sewer fly, because it flourishes in storm and sink drains.

Dr. Dale Bray, our entomologist at the University of Delaware, tells us the fly is hard to control. Ordinary household sprays have little effect, because the insect moves very quickly from sprayed areas. Too, it can be troublesome most of the year when the temperature is high enough.

So Dr. Bray has come up with these recommendations. First, thoroughly clean out all drain traps to get rid of the scum lining the pipes. Next, seal off all vented openings with masking tape. Put UDB moth crystals in a small cloth sack and suspend in the drain. Seal off this opening too with the masking tape. So the control is a type of fumigation.

A regular lawn fertilization program is necessary for high quality lawns. Dollar for dollar, fertilization will do more to improve poor quality lawns or maintain good quality lawns than any other single management practice.

Grass plants need nitrogen, phosphorous, and potash. Nitrogen is important for growth and good turf color. Phosphorous helps insure a deep healthy root system, and potash is essential in many of the plants' physiological processes. Potash also helps to promote disease resistance.

The numbers on a fertilizer sack may at first seem confusing but they are really self explanatory. For example, a 10-6-4 fertilizer contains 10 per cent of actual nitrogen, 6 per cent of actual phosphoric acid, and 4 per cent of actual potash. We can recommend a rate of application which is suitable for your particular situation.

Don't blame termites for all the damage to your house. Carpenter ants may be the culprits. Carpenter ants are black or reddish brown, and are common in Delaware. The ants range from one-quarter to one-half inch in length. The galleries or "mines" they excavate in wood resemble the work of termites. These galleries can be distinguished by the fact that they are entirely clean and have an almost polished appearance. This is in contrast to the mud-like material found in termite galleries.

Signs of infestation are: large black ants running about the house; swarms of large, black, winged ants in or on the house in spring; piles of sawdust-like borings, slit-like holes in woodwork; and faint rustling sounds in walls, floors, woodwork and flush-panel doors.

To control, enlarge nests' entrances and flood with generous amounts of insecticide dust. Use 5 per cent chlordane, 2 per cent dieldrin or 2.5 per cent heptachlor.

The outside foundations should be sprayed thoroughly with a water emulsion containing .5 per cent dieldrin, 1 per cent chlordane or .5 per cent heptachlor.

Baseboards and door frames should be sprayed in a similar manner. If there is a full basement or crawl space, the mud sill and any timbers between it and the subfloor should be thoroughly sprayed.

In addition, a barrier strip 10 to 20 feet wide around the outside of the house should be sprayed with 7 1/2 ounces of actual dieldrin or 15 ounces of actual chlordane per 10,000 square feet. Unused attic areas should also be sprayed.

The magic figure in greenhouse tomato production is 100 tons per acre. Producers doing a good job can reach the 100 ton barrier with a spring and fall crop. But this year a single spring crop grown in a Hylar-covered house produced the equivalent of 104 tons per acre, in a University of Illinois test.

The barrier-breaking yield was made with two greenhouse tomato varieties that have been consistently high yielders, Michigan-Ohio Hybrid and Ohio WR-7. All tomatoes in the 104-ton yield were marketable, and about 70 per cent graded U. S. No. 1.

To make the magic 100 tons, each plant spaced at 415 square feet must yield 10 to 11 clusters, with four or five tomatoes on each cluster.

Farm Research Publication Available at Univ.

A publication describing field tests being conducted by the Delaware Agricultural Extension Service has been released by the University of Delaware. The booklet, "Research on the Farm", describes 20 demonstration sites located throughout the state. These plots have been established through a joint effort of the extension service, the Delaware Crops and Soils Advisory Council and participating farmers.

Dr. William Mitchell, extension agronomist at the University, says new chemicals, varieties and production practices that look promising are tested in these plots to check their performance under practical farm conditions. "Such things as soil type, moisture and fertility levels contribute to the effectiveness of certain production practices. A weed killer that has been found effective on the high-fertility soil of the University farm at Georgetown may not do the same job in a less ideal situation farther north."

The present list of practices being field tested includes corn hybrid varieties, fertilization and weed control; hay production and drying; the use of lime, fertilizer and weed control chemicals on soybeans; and systems of maximum grain and forage production.

Copies of the publication, "Research on the Farm," are available from the Mailing Room, Agricultural Hall, University of Delaware, Newark. Mitchell says the farmers who are participating in the demonstrations welcome visitors.

Fenwick Island Growing Resort

Sharing in the current record-breaking influx of vacationers to the Delaware Coast area is Fenwick Island, a small but growing resort that straddles the line forming Delaware's southern boundary.

Despite its name, Fenwick Island is not an island although at one time there existed inlets—some created by nature and some by man—that served to link the inland bays and creeks to the west with the Atlantic Ocean to the east and water-lock the sandy coastal strip that is the site of the present resort. This, combined with the name of the area's original proprietor, is the basis for the now somewhat erroneous name.

Barely accessible in earlier times, Fenwick Island initially had few inhabitants and these few hearty souls depended largely upon the sea for their existence although some livestock were raised on the fenceless, water-locked tract. A largely seafood diet was supplemented with flour, sugar and other foodstuffs purchased during infrequent visits to the "mainland"; local legend has it that these staples were frequently paid for with coins that had been washed up from the wrecks that rested on the offshore ocean bottom.

Initially called Cape Henlopen (the present day Cape Henlopen, marking the entrance to Delaware Bay, is twenty miles to the north), the area was, at one time, claimed by both William Penn and the Calverts of Maryland, and ownership was not resolved until 1750-51 when surveyors ran a straight line from the "cape" westward to a point midway of the Delaware Peninsula (near present day Delmar) thereby forming the southern boundary of what is now the State of Delaware. Stone markers, set in 1751 and bearing the coats-of-arms of the Penns and of the Calverts, may still be seen in the area.

In 1859, the Fenwick Island Lighthouse, located on a low scrub-covered dune about one-third mile inland, was completed. Still in use, this lighthouse is a favorite with photographers—amateur and professional—and has appeared in many publications as well as in many tourists' albums.

While a few dwellings were added at about the time that the lighthouse was being constructed, the area remained sparsely settled until 1898 when approximately fifty small cottages were built near the lighthouse as part of a camp meeting. Additional cottages were also built along the beach front.

The annual camp meeting was discontinued about 1916 and many of the cottages were subsequently abandoned and eventually disappeared. The still remote and little publicized area had few residents—and even fewer visitors—until a later day when Delaware Route 14 was extended southward along the Delaware coast to the state's southern boundary, offering, for the first time, easy access to Fenwick Island.

It was then that Fenwick Island was "re-discovered" by some of those seeking sites for summer homes along a quiet seashore and new cottages soon made their appearance. Several state-owned tracts were subsequently sold, providing sites for more summer homes. By 1953, the community had grown sufficiently to warrant incorporation and, for the first time, Fenwick Island attained status as an organized community.

Fenwick Island has experienced a somewhat more rapid growth in recent years and now boasts modern cottages, motels and restaurants adequate to the needs of the increasing number of vacationists coming there each summer for enjoyment of its fine beach and peaceful atmosphere.

Large developments have recently sprung up to the north and to the south of Fenwick Island. Some of these feature man-made lagoons that provide small boat passage from "backyard" to nearby inland bays. South Bethany, a comparatively new development between Bethany Beach and Fenwick Island, has more than eight miles of these artificially created waterways.

Completion in 1958 of the dredging of the nearby Assawoman Canal, a vital link in the inland waterway system connecting the Delaware Bay, at Lewes, with the Chincoteague Bay, in Virginia, served to further increase the area's popularity

Corn Farms Bigger, Harvesting A Problem

The recent moisture abundance has assured Delaware farmers of another abundant corn crop. They planted more corn this spring, cutting down on soybeans, and in general did a better job of getting the crop planted.

Unfortunately, growers do a better job of planning their production than planning the marketing function. Often this leaves them in a difficult position at harvest time. W. T. McAllister, farm management specialist at the University of Delaware says it is not unusual to find farmers growing 200 acres of corn or more as a cash crop. This trend to large volume operations makes it possible to utilize field shellers and other labor saving devices. But it brings up the problem of wet corn.

McAllister says buyers discount wet corn three cents a bushel for each one per cent of moisture above 15.5%. So, corn containing 28% moisture would bring only 72.5 cents a bushel instead of the quoted price of $1.10.

When will a dryer pay? McAllister lists these points:
—Farmers that have 15,000 to 20,000 bushels of corn each year can make money by doing their own drying. The amount they can make will depend on the quantity dried and the moisture content, but will range from 8 to 13 cents a bushel.

—Farmers that have between 20 to 150 acres might find drying in storage bins with fans and supplemental heat most practical.

—Farmers that are set up with corn pickers and crib storage will find that using these facilities is more economical than shifting to shelled corn.

Another question that farmers wanted an answer to was: "Does corn storage pay?" McAllister believes storage is a necessary and logical operation for those who have drying facilities. It enables a farmer to get an extra 10 to 12 cents a bushel over costs of storing. There is, however, some price risk involved in storage. In the last ten years, prices have advanced each year enough to cover holding costs. But in two of the ten years farmers made very little profit on corn storage.

In a corn deficit area such as Delaware, the price risk of storing corn is fairly small. But in recent years the size of the price increase had declined, indicating that storage is not as profitable now as it was several years ago.

McAllister feels there is still some question as to whether corn drying and storage is the most profitable of all the investment opportunities available to farmers. McAllister says, "I would urge a corn farmer to investigate all of the alternative uses for his capital before he buys a combine-sheller or a dryer or builds a 20,000 bushel storage."

Superior Melon Variety Developed At U. of D.

University of Delaware crops researchers are approaching several major breakthroughs in the development of improved vegetable and fruit varieties. Some of these were displayed at the University's annual Farm and Home Field Day at the Georgetown Agricultural Substation recently.

A cantaloupe variety, Del. 24-59S2-3, described as superior to all other varieties has been developed by Professor Eugene Brasher, horticulturist at the University. It is in its final stages of development, and Brasher is currently producing it for seed stock which will then be made available to seedsmen.

He says it offers "great possibilities for a good commercial variety in Delaware." The product of a four-way cross that combined the desirable qualities of the parent stock, this new melon is resistant to downy mildew, powdery mildew and a bothersome disease called "alternaria". This resistance permits the variety to be grown in Delaware without a disease control program.

According to Brasher, none of the varieties tested at the substation approaches Del. 24-59S2-3 in color, thickness of flesh, sugar content or flavor. It has also produced higher yields than any standard variety.

The next step in the development program is the production of enough seed to make it available to growers and the selection of a name.

All-Star Football Game Tomorrow

The cream of the state's senior high school football crop of 1964 will be in action at Newark, Saturday. It's the Golds meeting the Blues in the ninth annual Delaware All-Star High School Football Game. Kick-off at Delaware Stadium is 2 P. M., with pre-game ceremonies starting at 1:30. This will be the first stadium attraction since construction of the towering 8000-seat main concrete grandstand.

The contest, which brings together 60 of last fall's schoolboy players, all June graduates, again benefits the Delaware Foundation for Retarded Children. The past eight games have netted the foundation over $235,000.

The Blue team, consisting of players from schools above Wilmington's southern city limits, is coached by Archmere Academy's John Walsh. The Golds, from all the other schools in the state, are being readied by Jim Harf of Bridgeville High.

Walsh, 27-year-old former Delaware fullback, has had tremendous success at Archmere and this will be his debut as an All-State coach as it will be for Harf, too. In four years at Archmere, Walsh's teams have lost only two games. Harf, 24, came straight from Millersville (Pa.) State to Bridgeville, where he has compiled a record of 14 victories, 11 losses and two ties in three seasons.

The teams will go after 10 days of extensive training on the University of Delaware campus. The Blues, with six first-team All-Staters on the squad, loom a slight favorite over the Golds, who have five all-Staters as selected last fall by the Wilmington Sportswriters and Broadcasters Association. The Blues have a strong and heavy line.

But the on-paper analysis of the late-summer spectacle means nothing. Last year, for example, the Blues were overwhelming favorites and were lucky to get away with a 12-0 victory. The Blues enter Saturday's encounter with a 5-2-1 record. They won the first four, the 1960 game was 6-6 tie and the Golds won in 1961 and '62.

Archmere and Salesianum dominate the Blue roster with six and five players respectively. For the Golds, Blue Hen Conference champion Newark High and Conrad each have four players on the squad. Thirteen schools are represented on the Blue team and 14 on the Gold.

The Blue All-Staters and end Al Green of Claymont, tackles Wilmer Brown of Howard, and Andy Bartholomew of Salesianum; center Jack Holloway of the Sallies, quarterback Charley Mikolajewski of Salesianum, and fullback Ralph Donofrio of Archmere.

Jim Layfield, 205-pound All-State halfback from Millsboro High and one of the best backs ever to come out of lower Delaware, leads the Golds. Others are quarterback Bill Clark, who steered Middletown to two undefeated seasons; Jason's Charley Graham, one of the biggest All-Stars at 6ft.-4, 204 pounds, and guards Dan Suppe of Newark and Ed Roberts of Seaford.

In addition to the first-team All-Staters, both teams are loaded with second and third-team selections.

Tickets for Saturday's game are still available at a number of store outlets through the state. Tickets will also be on sale at the University of Delaware stadium at game time.

Lion Harriers Start Practice Tuesday

Coach Harold McDonald in 1963 saw his charges romp through a ten-meet schedule in fine style as his Lions were never really extended in winning eight regular season meets, captured the state championship and waltzed to an easy triumph in the Harrington Invitational Meet. A Lion jayvee seven won the junior varsity championship as Bob Matthews was the first runner to finish.

Captain Wayne Carson, the Lions No. 2 runner, was the only harrier on the two-state championship squads to graduate, so prospects are good for another clean sweep.

Last year's No. 1 harrier, Dennis Rogers is aiming to retain that spot for 1964. George Bonniwell and Bob Smith are previous holders of the No. 1 ranking who are strong runners capable of coming home first on occasion. Roger Redden as a freshman two years ago was an immediate success in cross-country and defeated every other Lion at one time or another except George Bonniwell. Last year he was sidelined four times by accidents and illness but still managed to come up with a good performance when it was needed. One of these was a fine effort against then undefeated North Carolina which helped Harrington to a 24-23 victory.

Ellis Myer and Marshall Hatfield had terrific seasons last year in their barrier debuts. As sophomores they finished ninth and tenth respectively in the state championship race to give the Lions five of the first ten men across the finish line. Myer's best clocking of 12:32 for the 2.4 miles Killen's Pond course trailed only Roger's 12:10 and Carson's 12:26 among the H. H. S. runners.

Bob Matthews, Roger Betts and Dan Hicks could be no. 1 harriers on many peninsula cross-country teams. But with such an imposing array of talent here, these tough competitors must fight it out for the seventh and last spot on the first team. It is possible that in the heat of the battle, they might just push one or two of the veterans aside and if that happens more than one of this trio would have jobs.

Frank Cain, Henry Minner, Bob Dean, Donald Wells and Nick Morris ran on the jayvee state title team, and it takes a heap of running to get by any of them.

Larry Bonniwell, Donald Minner, Dennis Spicer, Bob Beene and Bill Abbot sat out last year after competing in previous years. Now two years older and stronger, they will show dust to many of the runners from other schools.

Randy Coleman, Roger Hicks, Roger Dean and Lewis Kemp are seventh-graders who can go the distance. This type of planning has resulted in six consecutive years of the hill and dale sport here and insures that the end is not yet in sight. When 1964's heroes are all graduated, these boys will have enough competition and experience under their belts to take over a winning tradition.

Lester Green, a freshman from East St. Louis, Illinois, is a transfer student who looks like a comer. Lester, like some of the others, has been getting in shape on his own to be ready for Tuesday's first practice. Harrington will open at Easton Thursday, September 24.

Ocean Downs Raceway News

Ocean Downs Raceway is headed for the home stretch. After this weekend there will be just one more week of harness racing at the shore oval.

Friday night, August 21, was Ron Weber Night honoring the popular sports director of WOBC Radio and TV. He will be a guest of the track and will present trophy to the winning owner of the Ron Weber Special.

Another invitational race will top Saturday night's card and there will be a blanket and trophy to the winner presented by a brewery.

The winner of the annual Name and Colt contest and the formal christening ceremony will take place next Wednesday night and representatives of the American Cancer Society will be present.

The Exchange Club of Salisbury will have a dinner in the Club Terrace Thursday evening and the meeting will close Saturday, August 29.

Little League Football To Hold Meeting

The Little League Football organization will hold its first meeting of the season, Monday, Aug. 24th, at 7:30 p.m. over the First National Bank. All parents of boys eligible to play are invited to attend this meeting, and also anyone interested in seeing this organization progress.

Courthouse Variance OK Seen

Kent County Levy Court was told Tuesday it will get zoning variances for its new courthouse as a "hardship case."

City Building Inspector Jack T. Roe predicted the Board of Adjustment and Planning Commission would waive city requirements concerning height and setback because of the county's need for the new courthouse.

In granting a hardship variance, Roe said, the city tries to determine if the building is necessary and if other land isn't available.

"This criterion seems to fit the courthouse," he said.

Roe said the only variance that might create a problem is the parking requirement. The courthouse, once the addition is completed, will have no parking area and Dover requires at least one space per employee.

A three-story structure is planned, and Dover's zoning permits only 2 1/2 stories.

Roe took a set of the plans and said he would prepare a list of the steps needed to obtain full approval for the proposal addition.

56 Students From Kent To Enter Wesley College

Fifty-six students from Kent County will enter Wesley College, Dover, this September, Joseph R. Slight, Jr., director of admissions, announced this week.

The new freshman class at Wesley, numbering 348 in all, will report to the college for a week of freshman orientation on Thurs., Sept. 10.

Members of the freshman class are:

4-H News

With Marlon MacDonald

Richard Davis, Andrewville Speedies 4-H member drove off with the first prize in the automotive contest at Farm Field Day. Three phases of the contest covered a written exam on safety rules, visual tests and reaction time along with driving skill. Other Kent County participants in this event were: Chris Stump, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Stump; Wayne Argo, Chestnut Grove; and Ronnie Breeding, Andrewville Speedies.

The World's Fair trip made by the Junior Council members was most successful. Although the lines were long for some exhibits, the 4-H'ers covered much ground.

Favorite food fliers have been mailed to all foods members. Anyone not receiving the information should be in contact with their leaders soon.

Hope those record books are being worked on. Remember anyone interested in submitting their record for state award consideration must have their photographs. This takes time so should be done now.

KILLEN DELEGATES FARE WELL IN KENT PRIMARY

Supporters of Ernest E. Killen for governor claim a little better than half of the Kent County Democratic delegate contests Saturday.

The Kent fracas, which saw the Democratic organization forces of County Chairman Vernon B. Derrickson split, left uncertainty about which way the group was to go at Wednesday's state convention.

Samuel J. Fox II of Leipsic, an ally of Derrickson, said Kent would have 42 or 43 first-ballot votes for Chief Justice Charles L. Terry Jr., whom the Derrickson forces are backing for the gubernatorial race.

However, both State Auditor Ernest E. Killen, of Harrington, and Robert H. Reed, Dover businessman, claimed together they would have a majority of Kent County's 60 delegates.

Reed said Sunday he and Killen would have at least 31 and perhaps 35 pledged to one or the other. Killen agreed with that estimate.

Killen said his group might contest the election of Paris C. Kirby as a delegate in the 1st Election District of the 10th Representative District in Kent County. Kirby is a member of the Kent County Department of Elections and Killen said he was sent a copy of an attorney general's ruling saying that Kirby must either withdraw as a candidate or resign from the Department of Elections.

Kirby did neither and won easily, along with Andrew P. Reynolds, over Killen delegates E. Wilson Cannon and Marvin J. Davis.

Other significant delegate victories were scored Saturday by James G. Smith, Jr., Killen's campaign manager, and Cauffman and Maynard Reed, brothers of Robert H. Reed.

In the one Republican delegate contest in Kent County, a Bucks supporter, former State Senator Robert Yerkes, defeated a Haskell delegate, Charles Dutton. The delegate contests in Kent County went as follows:

Football Practice Starts Tuesday

Harrington High football head coach, Frank Glazier, will start football workouts Tuesday, Aug. 25. He urges all interested boys to meet him at the H.H.S. gym Monday, August 24 at 9 a.m. Shoes, uniforms and notebooks may be picked up at Glazier's home, 212 Harrington Ave., this Sunday. Senior football candidates desiring to attend the Blue-Gold All-Star game at the University of Delaware on Saturday, Aug. 22 may pick up their tickets at the Harrington Ave. address. Signed parental permission slips to play football this fall must be turned in to get these free tickets which were made available by the Harrington Lions Club. As of Tuesday afternoon 39 tickets have been sold at Peck Brothers Store plus the 20 given to the team and coaches thus assuring that this community will be well represented Saturday.

The Lions will also be represented on the field since Frank Glazier is an assistant coach on the Gold squad and Barry Fry is a second-team halfback who narrowly missed winning a spot on the first team.

The locals open at Delmar on Sept. 18. Coach Glazier hopes to create a tough, defensive unit by that date since defense figures to be the Lions' best suit this season.
