

$25,000 Pay OKd For Next Governor; Six Other Bills Also Signed

The next governor of Delaware will be paid an annual salary of $25,000 — up $7,500 from that paid to Gov. Elbert N. Carvel. Carvel's office announced Tuesday he had signed the pay raise bill (SB 33) along with six others including ones to increase school boards from four members to five and to permit the Kent County Levy Court to borrow $950,000 to build a courthouse addition.

The school board measure (HB 561 with SA 2) will take effect next spring when all districts (except some specifically exempted such as vocational and comprehensive schools) will elect two new members instead of one to their local boards of education. The man receiving the most votes will serve a five year term and the next highest a four-year term. Thereafter, one person would be elected to a five-year term each year.

The Kent Courthouse addition was authorized as an "emergency" project in SB 357. It permits the Levy Court which met Tuesday in Dover, to borrow up to $950,000 for acquisition of land and the actual costs of the construction of a courthouse addition.

Also signed by the governor, according to the release from his office, were four supplementary appropriation bills.

SB 335 provides $35,000 for repairs and replacements to the Benjamin Banneker School in Milford.

SB 338 provides $582.43 for the Bingo Control Commission.

SB 342 increases the salary of the state librarian by raising the amount of federal funds which can be paid to him or her. The bill allows for a top salary of $9,000, of which $7,000 is paid by the state. The bill rewords the old law which allowed a top salary of $7,500, the same amount paid by the state.

SB 343 provides $4,000 to the Philip C. Showell School in Sussex County to meet obligations incurred during a prior fiscal year.

The governor's office said Carvel's action is pending on several other bills recently enacted by the General Assembly and that he will probably consider them today when he returns from the Democratic National Convention in Atlantic City.

Mrs. Hattie M. Biddle

Arguments Expected by Dukes

The nomination of Daniel L. Herrmann as chief justice will create arguments, but will be confirmed, two Democratic leaders predicted Wednesday.

Secretary of State Elisha C. Dukes, Democratic state chairman, said "Whether the chips are down, they'll do it." He referred to the senators and their action on confirming the nomination.

H. Edward Maul, a Georgetown attorney, said "he'll be confirmed but there will be a lot of argument."

The prospective arguments have nothing to do with the qualifications or personality of the nominee, but with three other points.

The first is that the senators and many other political leaders were not consulted or even informed before Gov. Elbert N. Carvel made his announcement Tuesday of his choice for the post.

The second point is that with a vacancy at the top of the judicial heap there was an opportunity to promote from within and thereby improve the position of up to six persons including the five present judges, all of whom would get new terms plus one new appointee added at the bottom.

The third and least of the objections is that Herrmann was a state judge once and resigned.

All these arguments are being heard here among the Delaware delegates, alternates and other political figures.

State Sen. Walter J. Hoey Wednesday again said he did not know what action he would take on the nomination, but he was annoyed that the Governor had sent him two apparently conflicting telegrams Tuesday.

The first invited him to a meeting of senators Friday to discuss judicial appointments. The second announced the selection of Herrmann and the calling of a special Senate session Sept. 8 to consider confirmation.

Carvel needs the backing of a majority, or nine of the 17 senators for confirmation. The Senate has 10 Democrats and seven Republicans.

Reynolds duPont, R-Greenville, Senate minority leader, refused to commit himself or any other Republican senators as to how the vote might go in confirming Herrmann.

He indicated he thought Herrmann was the poorest choice from among four persons mentioned for the post (the others were Associate Justice Daniel F. Wolcott, President Superior Court Judge William Duffy Jr., and Chancellor Collins J. Seitz.)

"I think the appointment should have gone to someone who is non-political," duPont said. "Herrmann has been right in the middle of politics, particularly since Carvel has been in power."

Carvel Urges Caution During Labor Day Holiday

Governor Elbert N. Carvel today urged police and others concerned with highway traffic "to do everything possible to insure the safe movement of young people on our highways" from now through the Labor Day holiday period.

In a statement issued at Dover, the chief executive pointed out that many young people are presently traveling Delaware highways enroute from camps and vacation sites to their homes. "Awaiting them," he said, "are their loved ones, friends and neighbors, along with classmates who anticipate their return to school in early September."

Noting that "some of these young people may not reach home as a result of becoming innocent victims of preventable accidents," Gov. Carvel urged all motorists using Delaware highways to exercise special caution throughout the holiday period.

Workshop Names Fund Drive Chm.

Dozens of adjectives could be used in describing the many qualifications and attributes necessary in the selection of a good fund drive chairman—most important would be enthusiasm, dedication, drive and determination.

Golden Opportunity Center Inc. lower Delaware workshop for the handicapped, is indeed fortunate to have secured the energetic and vivacious Mrs. Hattie M. Biddle for this most important post. Not only does she possess all the necessary qualifications, for the job; she has a co-chairman who is equally qualified. He is, of course, Millard F. Biddle, of Dover, who has graciously accepted a large part of this responsibility.

The Biddles are very active in church and civic activities. Mr. Biddle served two terms as a councilman for the City of Dover. He is the assistant superintendent of Sunday School at the People's Church of Dover. He has worked for over 10 years for a candy and tobacco company out of Wilmington. He is active in the management of the Little School, a private nursery and kindergarten, owned and operated by the Biddles. Mrs. Biddle is a director of the Kent General Hospital Junior Board and very active in raising funds for the hospital. She is also a member of the Soroptimist Club of Dover and a mission chairman of the People's Church of Dover.

The Biddle's have two sons: Grover A., 28, an optician with a well known Wilmington company; Lawrence J., 23, a college student at the University of Delaware, majoring in psychology and social work, and a daughter, Nancy Jo, 12, a student at Dover Central Junior High School.

Although "The Little School" and her many other activities takes up most of Mrs. Biddle's time, she is always willing to lend a helping hand to any worthy cause. Her comment on accepting the general chairmanship of the workshop's fund drive: "I enjoy doing what I can to help create an opportunity for the handicapped individual to become an employed worker."

The Center's goal is $10,000. This is the workshop's first fund drive in over two years' operation. The workshop's objective is to train the handicapped for jobs in competitive industry. GOCI has served 20 different types of handicaps, have placed 21 handicapped men and women in competitive jobs and have 7 more ready and waiting to be placed.

The Center is currently training 30 handicapped individuals at the workshop and have four "homebound" handicapped persons for whom they supply work and training at home.

Contributions are tax deductible. Checks should be made to Golden Opportunity Center Inc. and mailed to Post Office Box 265, Dover, Delaware, c/o Mrs. Millard Biddle. Donations will be acknowledged.

Vane Named Kent Jury Aide

Ridgely Vane of Harrington, was named Republican jury commissioner for Kent County Wednesday by the Superior Court judges.

Vane, a retired salesman, has served on many juries during his residence at Harrington. He succeeds Andy Foltz, Hartly Insurance man, who resigned July 1, after he became chairman of the Republican Party in Kent County.

Judges had not named a successor previously since there had been no need to impanel a jury, but with the fall term of court coming up it was necessary to fill the position. The seven-judge court followed the recommendations of Kent Resident Judge William S. Storey and Associate Judge George R. Wright in picking Vane.

The job pays an annual salary of $1,000 and expenses up to $500.

Summer Scouting Trips By Explorers To Be on Chan. 12

A look at two unusual summer trips by Explorers, the high school boys in Scouting, will be featured on "Delaware File" this Friday at 6:45 p.m. on WHY?, Channel 12, Wilmington.

In a show called "Exploring on the Go", a three-week skin diving trip in Florida and a nine-day goodwill visit to Puerto Rico will be described in words and pictures by the boys who went.

Explorer Post 29 of Mill Creek Hundred, near Wilmington, recently returned from its Florida trip, which will be shown in pictures taken above and below water. The post specializes in skin diving, with the majority of its activities featuring this sport. Several of the Explorers, complete in skin diving attire, will be interviewed by host Sid Shaw.

The Puerto Rico trip was staged by Explorer Post 99 of Brandywine Hundred, north of Wilmington. This segment of the show will feature a word-and-picture story produced by the boys, describing their experiences as guests at the governor's mansion, living with Puerto Rican boys, and visiting various communities on the island. In contrast to the skin diving specialty of Post 29, the Explorers in Post 99 take part in a wide variety of activities.

"Exploring on the Go" illustrates the types of adventure trips that Explorers throughout the Del-Mar-Va peninsula have been taking this summer. Each of the peninsula's 120 Explorer posts has the opportunity of planning and carrying out its own big "summer highlight" trip each year.

Policeman Nabs 2 In Closed Club

A quick-thinking policeman has been credited with trapping two suspected looters in the Shawnee Country Club on the Milford-Rehoboth Highway early Saturday.

The capture of two Milton brothers inside the country club shortly after 2 a.m. climaxed an exciting few minutes for Patrolman David R. Richards who sped to the scene after a burglar alarm sounded at the Milford police station.

Charged with burglary and committed to the Sussex Correctional Institution in default of $3,000 bail each by Magistrate Eldridge Prettyman, of Milford, were Joseph W. Farrell, 33, and Victor Farrell, 25.

Milford Police Chief Sidney N. Steinback said the area has been plagued in recent weeks with a number of breaking and enterings.

When the policeman arrived, he said, he saw two men moving about inside the building. He entered and when the intruders spotted him they tried to flee by way of the north door through which they had entered.

Richards shouted a warning, and said one of the suspects came at him. He drew his service gun, fired a single shot as a warning and kept the men bottled up in the hallway until Officer Dale Kelly, another Milford patrolman, and state police arrived from Georgetown and Dewey Beach, accompanied by police dogs.

Police said the interior of the club was a mess. The cash register was forced open and demolished and the interior of the bar and club were a shambles.

In searching the scene, police found a tire iron and pinch bar they believe were used to force the door.

BUCKSON GETS GOP NOD FOR GOVERNOR

The Republican party late Thursday night, Aug. 20, chose David P. Buckson, Delaware attorney general, to head its state ticket and run for governor.

Buckson's nomination went from probability to certainty after the Wilmington delegation gave only seven votes to his opponent, National Committeeman, Harry G. Haskell Jr.

Nominated unanimously and amidst thunderous applause earlier in the evening were U. S. Senator John J. Williams of Millsboro to an unprecedented fourth term and James J. Snowden of Wilmington to seek the state's only congressional seat.

The only other candidate for either of the Washington offices, John M. Mervine of Greenwood, did not contest the nomination for the House seat and, in fact, was the one who moved that nominations be closed after only Snowden's name had been offered.

Haskell ended the gubernatorial fight after the Wilmington contingent had voted. He had figured that he needed to realize a certain strength in his home district to have a chance and that required strength was not evident in the roll call.

At its end the former Congressman, who had been waiting in the rear of the Dover High School Auditorium, requested the floor and walked to the stage amid cheers.

With his wife, Mimi, at his side, Haskell asked the convention to make Buckson's nomination unanimous and made it clear that he is still interested in serving the state.

Buckson, of Dover, a former lieutenant governor, will face Charles L. Terry Jr., who resigned as chief justice of the State Supreme Court to accept a Democratic draft the day before.

Williams will be challenged by Gov. Elbert N. Carvel and Snowden will face incumbent Harris B. McDowell Jr. of Middletown, who is seeking his fifth two-year term.

Snowden tried to get the nomination to oppose McDowell two years ago but lost out to former State Sen. Wilmer F. (Rudy) Williams.

In conceding, Haskell said: "I want to take this opportunity to thank my many friends. It is only at times like this that a man finds his true friends and my God they're wonderful."

Elizabeth M. Hayes Marvel

Elizabeth M. Hayes Marvel, 66, wife of Harvey J. Marvel, of Houston, died Thursday morning in the Milford Memorial Hospital.

She is survived by two stepsons, Joseph Marvel, Wilmington and Harvey G. Marvel, Milford; one step-daughter, Mrs. Doris Maxwell, Wilmington; one sister, Mrs. Della Harrington, Felton; one brother, Clarence Morris, Harrington; 14 step-grandchildren; several nieces and nephews.

GOP Nominates Best For Lieutenant Governor

Republicans picked an all downstate top of the ticket on Thursday night, Aug. 20, as a Sussex Countian, Rep. William T. Best, was nominated for the post of lieutenant governor.

But the minority floor leader of the House was given the job, according to reliable sources, only after at least four New Castle Countians had turned it down.

It was early in the morning before the GOP rounded out its slate by selecting a man instead of a woman in a floor fight for treasurer and wrapped everything up by naming a former Newark mayor for auditor.

The Treasurer's job went to Glen Matthews of Smyrna as the convention ignored the pleas of Mrs. Dorothy Elston of Odessa as president of the National Federation of Republican Women, to find room on the ticket, for a woman candidate "who for a woman candidate 'who can beat Belle Everett (the incumbent Democrat who is running again)."

Matthews easily defeated Mrs. Henrietta Schoonover, also of Odessa, as all convention districts except New Castle County gave him all their votes under the unit rule. New Castle County cast only 36 of its 61 votes for Mrs. Schoonover apparently because the other 15 delegates and their alternates had left the convention or chose to abstain.

Frank Durnall of Newark was acclaimed the candidate for auditor without opposition.

Best also became candidate for lieutenant governor without opposition on the floor but there was obviously some difference of opinion among the leadership as it took well over an hour to get the job done.

Actually Best was given the spot on the ticket when he received nearly unanimous backing from both the Sussex and New Castle County delegates and thereby had the strength to make a floor fight of the issue, which he threatened.

New Castle County Levy Court Commissioner Harry Lambert, whom some wanted to take the post, refused to slug it out on the floor.

Earlier, according to many sources, the gubernatorial candidate, Atty. Gen. David P. Buckson, offered the runner-up spot to GOP National Committeeman Harry G. Haskell Jr., while the latter was on the podium making his concession speech to Buckson on the governorship race. Haskell declined the honor.

So did State Sen. Reynolds Du Pont, R-Greenville, although some of Buckson's supporters claimed he volunteered to take it "if drafted." Du Pont said at no time did he agree to take it.

Others who said "no" were State Sen. Margaret R. Manning, R-Marshallton and Mrs. Louise (William) Comer, unsuccessful candidate for treasurer two years ago.

Best's selection was opposed at least part of the time, by some of Buckson's top lieutenants including former Lt. Gov. John W. Rollins.

Best during the pre-nomination maneuvering, quoted Rollins as saying that he (Best) would never be on the ticket."

Among the conciliators who helped hammer out the last three spots was U. S. Sen. John J. Williams.

Mortgage Burning at Greenwood Church

Mark Bowman, district superintendent, will preside at the mortgage burning ceremony, in which other district officers will take part.

The Rev. Etta Clough, who has pastored the work for the past ten years, has resigned, and will be giving her farewell, the following Friday night, Sept. 11, at 7:45 p.m.

The new pastors, Rev. and Mrs. C. L. Lambert, of Allentown, Pa., will assume their duties, Sun., Sept. 13, at a special installation service, conducted by the district superintendent, during the morning worship hour at 11 a.m.

Wollaston's Has Best Display

At Wollaston's in Quillen's Shopping Center, Laurabelle has tempted every young miss with a dashing new wardrobe. Judges selected this window for the best back-to-school display for it certainly suggests the coming campus season and fall sports.

Clarence Collins' school room scene with an array of smart fashions for young men was judged as second winner.

Madalyn's Boys and Girls at Star Lite Shop have put their summer pastimes aside to emphasize their new fall fashions.

At Clendening's Irene is featuring the Beatles at the little red school house.

Everyone is ready for back to school. In September the merchants are planning to welcome the firemen with an all out effort to decorate every window. Judges will select the best on Wed., Sept. 9.

Killen Asks Party Reorganization

An unsuccessful candidate for the Delaware Democratic gubernatorial nomination Wednesday called for the rebuilding of the party.

And one way to begin, in the eyes of State Auditor Ernest E. Killen, would be to replace Vernon B. Derrickson as Kent County chairman when his term expires in February.

Derrickson has been county chairman since 1949 and was a supporter of Chief Justice Charles L. Terry Jr. for the nomination. Terry accepted a draft and retired from the bench.

Killen had tried to get the nod himself but withdrew when the Kent County delegation to the State Convention voted to support Terry.

Killen, a delegate to the national convention in Atlantic City, was asked about his political future.

"I have no plans," he said, adding that he would remain active. "Anybody whose heart's in something can't lose touch."

He said he will support the ticket this fall and do anything he is asked—he does not expect many such requests—but thinks that however the election turns out, the party should be rebuilt.

Killen indicated he might be willing to run for elective office again—he refused offers to seek another term as auditor—but when asked if he were interested in being county chairman, he said "definitely not!"

"I think we've got to start rebuilding the Democratic party," said Killen, who has said he feels he was beaten because his opposition used pressure on job holders.

"Our friendship never ceased", Killen said about his opponents of the past few weeks and months. "They were sincere in what they were doing."

He predicted that the contest for governor will be close. Derrickson, also a delegate to Atlantic City, was asked whether he plans to seek another term as county chairman.

"I have no comment on that," he said. "I haven't even given it a bit of thought."

Several highly placed Democratic politicians in Atlantic City say there could be a real fight for the chairmanship.

150-bushel yields... easy All you have to do is harvest half-pound ears from 21,000 plants per acre. That's the formula for 150-bushel yields. So why don't you do it? Probably for the same reason you can't match all those top yield claims you hear about. Top efficient yield on your farm might be 120 bushels, or less. Instead of trying to break records that P-A-G can shout about, we'd rather you'd try for top profits. That's why we talk about Selective Planting. This is simply selecting seed for a planned harvest, for resistance to disease and insect damage, for standability, for drying characteristics, and for easy harvest using your harvest methods. P-A-G offers 37 Four-Way Crosses and 12 Special Crosses. All have special characteristics spelled out so you can select varieties with the right combination of factors to make you the most profit. We have single crosses we recommend for populations up to 24,000 (some of our customers plant them at 30,000) and we recommend you load on the fertilizer because they'll take it and give you those extra high yields. And then we have some Four-Way Crosses that do best at around 12,000 population. So take your pick... high, low, or anything in-between. The important thing is, plant for profit... not for prizes. Your P-A-G dealer can tell you which varieties will match your need... your conditions... your end-use requirements. Call him today! Pfister Associated Growers, Inc. Carlton Porter Is New Head Fieldman

Carlton Porter has been promoted to head fieldman at Greensboro, says the August issue of Pet Dairy Chats. He succeeds Wirt Foster, who has resigned to accept another position. Carlton is well qualified for his new work.

Born and reared on a farm at Greensboro, he holds a B.S. in agriculture from the University of Maryland.

He is a Marine veteran of World War II and the Korean conflict, and was discharged with the rank of major.

With the exception of during the Korean conflict, Mr. Porter has worked with Greensboro and Dover producers since he joined Pet Milk Company in 1946. Before joining the company he served briefly as assistant to County Agent William Henderson, in Sussex County, Del.

With his long service in the dairy industry on the Eastern Shore, he is well known by dairy farmers and the industry.

Carlton is active in church and civic affairs. He is past Lay Leader of St. Paul's Methodist Church, a past president of the Greensboro Lions Club and is president of the Caroline County School Board, a post he has held for the last four years. He is married to the former Kathleen Brubaker, of Denton. They have two children, Mary Ann, 11, and Michael, 9.

Van Dexter Farm Has Large Iris Garden

For the past 18 years Pet patrons Mr. and Mrs. N. R. Van Dexter have lived on their 46-acre farm two miles northwest of Greensboro, says the August issue of Pet Dairy Chats.

Six years ago Mrs. Van Dexter planted some iris seed in her garden. The iris turned out so well that Mr. Van Dexter suggested that his wife get some name varieties. This was done, and he was growing 30 varieties three years ago.

Now, six years after Mrs. Van Dexter planted the first seed, the number of varieties has increased to 318. "My ambition is to have at least 400 different kinds," said Mrs. Van Dexter. "There are at least 6,000 various kinds of iris in the world," she added.

The Van Dexters also have an increase patch which has 30 varieties. These consist of two-year clumps.

"Prospective buyers come to our permanent patch in May when the iris are in full bloom and select the varieties which they want," said Mrs. Van Dexter. "Then, from July through September the rhizomes are dug out of the increase patch, if possible, and sold to the customer. We plan on having every variety in the increase patch which we have in the permanent patch so that the permanent iris garden will not have to be interfered with," she said.

The Van Dexters apply an adequate amount of 7-14-14 fertilizer and an adequate amount of lime to the iris every year.

"Water drainage and air drainage are very important," explained Mrs. Van Dexter. "We weed our iris garden regularly. Like any crop, it is necessary to keep the weeds out."

She also feels that iris plants should not be placed too close together and recommends that they be planted three feet apart in the row and four feet between rows.

Mrs. Van Dexter is a member of the Maryland Chapter of Region Four of the American Iris Society and also is a member of the Eastern Shore Iris Society. The Van Dexter garden is called the Maple Croft Iris Garden. It is state-inspected yearly so the iris can be sold out of the state. Anyone who visits the Maple Croft Iris Garden cannot help but admire it and take pleasure in viewing the very beautiful iris blooms.

The Van Dexter Guernsey herd consists of nine cows, some of which are registered. The Van Dexters have been milking cows for 15 years. Mrs. Van Dexter helps with milking the cows and cleaning the utensils.

Cholesterol Import Limited In Artery Disease

A study of 1700 patient with hardening of the arteries revealed no definite correlation between the level of cholesterol in the blood and the nature and extent of their disease, a Baylor University research team reported today.

Eight out of 10 patients, or 78 per cent, had cholesterol levels within the normal range for Americans, according to the report in the current Journal of the American Medical Association.

The values for patients with widespread atherosclerotic disease were not remarkably different from those among patients whose disease was more limited. H. Edward Garrett, M. D., Evan C. Horning, Ph. D., Billy G. Creech, Ph.D., and Michael De Bakey, M.D., Houston, wrote in the Journal.

Furthermore, there was no marked difference in cholesterol values between patients with occlusive disease in which arteries become blocked and those with aneurysmal disease in which arteries develop bulges, they said. The study group included 1,416 men and 284 women, ranging in age from 20 to 85. Fifty-six per cent had occlusive disease and 44 per cent had aneurysmal disease. All patients required surgery and in this sense the degree of atherosclerosis was severe in all cases, it was pointed out.

Additional cholesterol determinations were made for 200 of the patients for comparison with healthy men in Finland, Finnish men with coronary artery disease, and a group of healthy Minnesota business and professional men. Cholesterol values of the Houston patients were generally higher than those for the healthy Minnesotans, but were lower than those in the Finnish coronary group, and not very different from those of the normal Finns. "These observations support the judgment that, at best, the basal cholesterol level in an individual patient is a valid predictive factor as regards the presence and extent of atherosclerotic disease only when placed in relation to other and perhaps more consequential factors," the authors concluded.

In populations relatively free of atherosclerotic disease, blood cholesterol values are usually low and are well below the average values found among Americans who have "an alarming degree" of atherosclerosis, they commented. From these studies, they said, it has been concluded that cholesterol level, as an index of altered fat metabolism, may be related to the incidence of the disease in various populations. Current efforts at reduction and control of blood cholesterol levels by means of diet or drugs, or both, are based on this concept, they added.

However, the researchers said, their investigation suggested that studies which focus on blood cholesterol levels to the exclusion of other possible determinants of hardening of the arteries carry "only the remote likelihood of contributing additionally or significantly to solution of the problem" of the causes of this disease.

The authors are affiliated with the Cora and Webb Mading Department of Surgery, the Lipid Research Center of the Department of Biochemistry, and the Goldston Cardiovascular Research Unit, Baylor University College of Medicine, and the laboratory service of the Methodist Hospital.

Body Build Predisposes To Obesity

A study of obese adolescent girls indicates that body build, and hence genetic factors, are a predisposing factor in obesity. Among 180 girls, most of whom were aged 12 to 17, all but 5 were predominantly endomorphs, Carl C. Seltzer, Ph.D., and Jean Mayer, Ph.D., Harvard University School of Public Health, Boston, reported today in the current Journal of the American Medical Association.

The endomorph has a roly-poly physique with the abdomen larger than the chest and relatively small hands and feet.

"Presumably, the prime prerequisite for the development of obesity is a physique with at least a moderate amount of endomorphy under normal nutritional conditions," the researchers said.

"Endomorphy predisposes to the laying on of fat unless insufficient diet, excessive activity, disease, or voluntary weight control supervenes."

However, they added that even among endomorphs there is considerable individual differences in the tendency to accumulate fat and not all endomorphs become obese.

"While these results in no way detract from the concept that caloric intake in excess of caloric expenditure is the immediate cause of obesity, a recognition of the constitutional individuality of the person may well give a greater understanding of the common observation that, under similar environmental circumstances, some of us become obese and other do not," the researchers commented.

The findings, they stressed, may not hold true for adult obese men and women, or perhaps even obese adolescent boys.

"In adults, particularly, the problem is much more complex since one must deal with those physical types which are prone to a sudden blossoming into middle-age obesity," they pointed out. "Any study of adults, therefore, must distinguish between those whose obesity is long standing, going back to childhood and adolescence, and those whose obesity is a singular characteristic of midlife."

The authors said they believed endomorphy would still predominate among the overweight girls studied even if they shed enough fat to be of normal weight for their age, sex, and height, although final proof would rest on lengthier studies.

The study also uncovered a somewhat greater tendency to mesomorphy among the obese girls than is found among girls of similar ages in the general population. The mesomorph has a larger chest than abdomen, is muscular and has prominent body joints.

On the other hand, there was an extremely low rate of ectomorphy, the lanky physique with delicate bony structure and stringy muscular development.

"Not only are our obese subjects less ectomorphic than the general population or even the highly endomorphic elements of the general population, they also reflect the total absence of a wide variety of ectomorphic physical types," the researchers commented. "Apparently, nature is intolerant of obesity in ectomorphic types."

Those in the study group, aside from being overweight, were apparently healthy. Most were girls attending a summer weight-control camp (Camp Seascapes, East Brewster, Mass.), while others were seen at the outpatient clinic of the Adolescent Unit of Children's Hospital Medical Center, Boston.

"Genetic factors are known to play an important role in the development of obesity among experimental animals, yet relatively little attention has been focused on the genetic factors in the development of obesity in humans," according to an accompanying editorial in the Journal.

U. of D. Receives Research Grants

Studies ranging from how a mushroom breathes and what infects oysters to behavior of metals under changing conditions are included in recent research grants to the University of Delaware.

The National Science Foundation has informed the University it is supporting the research projects with a total of $67,060 for work under the direction of Drs. Irwin Greenfield and Albert Schultz, assistant professors of mechanical engineering; Dr. Charles B. Cooper, associate professor of physics; Dr. John H. McClendon, acting chairman and assistant professor of agricultural biochemistry and food technology; Dr. Don Dennis, assistant professor of chemistry; and Dr. Marlene R. Tripp, assistant professor of biological science.

Funds from the grants are used to acquire graduate students to assist in the research, provide equipment, and help defray other costs involved in the research.

Greenfield and Schultz received grants under the National Science Foundation's new program of initiation grants in engineering, designed to help younger staff members start research projects. One of the stipulations of the initiation grant is that the researcher has received his Ph. D. within four years of the grant.

Greenfield has a two-year grant. He will be using the university's new high-powered electron microscope to examine how the surface of copper single crystals react to changes in the atomic structure. Strain fields set up by physical changes in copper will be viewed and analyzed in more detail than ever before possible. Complete understanding of these effects can lead to better materials or better use of present materials.

Schultz has been given a one-year grant to determine how steel, aluminum, and other metals perform under rapidly applied stress. Material performance under a steady load, such as that found in most structures, is well known. Schultz will use high speed recording techniques to probe reaction to rapidly applied stress, such as that possible in a crash landing of a space vehicle.

More work with metals is being done by Dr. Cooper, with a grant extending his research through September. He's looking into sputtering, which describes the breaking away of particles from a solid under bombardment by ions. A mass spectrometer is used to determine the exact composition of the pieces broken away. Sputtering has applications in thermonuclear devices, space travel, and vacuum tubes. It is beneficial in depositing thin films on solids and can also be used to prepare ultra clean surfaces.

Two of the research projects deal with enzymes, the springboard of changes in all living matter. Enzymes can produce good and bad results, and complete knowledge about the enzymes can lead to enhancement of the good results and elimination or control of the bad.

McClendon is in the midst of a two-year project supported by N.S.F. to investigate the respiratory or breathing mechanism of the cultivated mushroom. An enzyme known as polyphenol oxidase is responsible for the browning of mushrooms that have been cut or bruised. Discovering its role, if any, in the respiratory process is the target of McClendon's research.

Dr. Dennis has a two-year continuation of an earlier grant in support of his work on a new approach to isolate and purify specific enzymes.

Dr. Tripp's research is designed to isolate agents which infect oysters, one of Delaware's key industries. His project was launched in 1961, with support from the University of Delaware Research Foundation and N.S.F. The recent grant extends his research for a year.

School of Ag. Revising To Meet Change

The University of Delaware has the responsibility to see that agriculture makes the maximum contribution to the state and national economy, according to its dean of agriculture.

In a speech prepared for the University's recent Farm and Home Field Day, Dr. George M. Worriow said agriculture must continue to make progress in the production of high quality food and fiber at a reasonable price, and in the processing and marketing of agricultural products. "The University must do more research in product development and in finding industrial uses for farm products and in serving the food processing, marketing and distributing industries. And, all of us must realize that we must not measure agriculture's contribution to the economy by stopping at the end of the farm lane."

Worriow told more than 1,000 people assembled at the University's Georgetown Substation that the school of agriculture is seriously at work re-evaluating and revising its programs to meet the changing situation that exists in Delaware. He lists people, land and water as the main ingredients in this "changing state".

Pointing to Delaware's relative position as an agricultural state, he cited these statistics:

—In 1963 Delaware was second only to Florida in net income per farm—$8,136 for Florida, $4,917 for Delaware. The eight north-atlantic states averaged $2,242.

—Delaware cash receipts from farm marketing increased 17.1 per cent between 1950 and 1960.

—Cash receipts per farm in Delaware average $19,204 in 1960. This figure was exceeded only by Arizona and California.

—The 1959 agricultural census revealed that Delaware had 92 farms grossing over $100,000 annually. Sales from these farms accounted for 25 per cent of the total value of commercial farm sales in the state.

—Total land devoted to farming in the state has declined from 923,000 acres in 1945 to 762,500 in 1959. During this time the acres per farm increased from 99.3 to 146.4. The number of farms decreased from 9,296 to 5,208.

Looking to Delaware's future as an agricultural state, Worriow said land values would increase and would probably be three times as great by 1970 as they were in 1950. This he said, will be forced by an annual population increase of about four per cent. This compares to a national average of 1.8 per cent.

"Competition among different users for land, water and air will increase. Urban residents will likely exert their influence to change zoning laws which may adversely affect agriculture. This suggests the need for representation of all interests in a careful planning approach as to optimum use of these resources throughout the state."

Citing prospects for specific commodities, Worriow made these observations:

—The fate of corn production rests largely on continued help in the broiler industry.

—Soybean production would be strengthened by improvements in quality and yield.

—Dairy production will shift to lower price land and eventually to dry-lot operations.

—Crop production will continue to shift to intensive high-value crops.

—Rising land values may accentuate a shift to fresh market vegetables.

—A strong potential exists for the production of ornamental and nursery crops.

—Delaware population expansion provides a greater demand for recreational facilities. Farm people may find an opportunity for supplemental income in this area.

U. of D. To Offer 200 Extension Courses In Fall

Delaware Valley residents have more than 200 University of Delaware extension courses from which to choose this fall.

For persons who miss the mail registration deadline of Sept. 11, there will be three registration dates at three different locations in Delaware.

The first will be Sept. 14 at Dover Air Force Base School, from 7 to 8:30 p.m. The school is located on Lebanon Road, about a half mile west of the Air Base's main gate.

The following day, the university will register extension students from 7 to 8:30 p.m. at the Sussex County Vocational-Technical Center, four miles west of Georgetown on Georgetown-Lauriel Road.

Extension students may also register at the university's undergraduate registration on Sat., Sept. 19, at Carpenter Field House on the Newark campus from 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Extension classes will begin the week of Sept. 21. Most of the 215 courses meet one evening each week for 15 weeks. Some meet before 6 p.m. during the week, however, and there are others which meet during the day on Saturdays. More than half of the classes will meet at Newark.

Others will be held at Wilmington and Dover locations, with one course scheduled at Georgetown.

The courses offered this fall include representative selections from the entire range of the university curriculum, from highly technical courses for professional engineers to those for people who wish to broaden their knowledge in such subjects as English, language, literature, and other art forms.

Extension students at any given time might include a grandmother, a business executive, a housewife, a supermarket employee, or a young fellow two years out of high school who wants a sampling of college level courses. Their only common denominator is a desire to further their education.

Extension bulletins listing registration procedures, courses offered, and other information are available from the University Extension office, Raub Hall, University of Delaware, Newark.

Costs depend on a number of variables. Extension students from Delaware pay $15 per credit hour. Those from out-of-state pay $35 per credit hour.

Part-time graduate and undergraduate students pay $13 and $26, depending on their home state. Students taking courses as listeners only, for which they receive no college credit, pay $15 per credit hour regardless of their home state. Part-time undergraduate students taking courses as listeners pay $13 per credit hour.

U. of D. To Offer Public Speaking Courses In Fall

Courses in public speaking for residents of Sussex and Kent Counties are being offered this fall by the University of Delaware.

Each course will last seven weeks and will provide instruction, practice, and criticism leading to effective speechmaking.

The Sussex County section will start Monday, Sept. 14, at 7 p.m. in the University of Delaware Agricultural Substation at Georgetown. All class periods will be two hours.

The Kent County section will start Mon., Nov. 2, at 7 p.m. at the Dover Air Force Base School.

Among topics included in the instruction will be purpose, motivation, choice of topic, gathering material, clearness, and development of personal poise and confidence.

Dr. Turner Edge, assistant professor in the department of dramatic arts and speech, will be instructor for both sections.

The two sections will gather for a final session Mon., Jan. 4.

Art McDaniel, supervisor of continuing education at the University of Delaware, said the courses are excellent for club presidents, chairmen, and those persons contemplating leadership roles. He said the split sections will enable south Delawareans to learn public speaking on a college level without long distance travel.

The course fee is $20 for either section, plus the combined meeting. Enrollment forms are available from the Extension Division, University of Delaware, Newark.

Golden Opportunity Center To Sponsor Fashion Show

Golden Opportunity Center's second annual fashion show, to be held at the old Rehoboth Beach Country Club Wed., Sept. 2, at 2 o'clock, will not only feature fashion candidates of the 1964 fall season, but also will present three sets of mother and daughter debutantes.

Carol McNeilly, Rehoboth; Carol Price, Smyrna, and Mary Terry, Dover, with their respective mothers, Mrs. John McNeilly, Mrs. Warner W. Price, and Mrs. Max Terry, will model some of the featured gowns of Benjamin's, Salisbury. The three young debutantes will make their bow at the Holly Ball this coming Christmas season.

Escorts from the Dover Air Force Base will be another highlight of this unique fashion show, especially since they will be wearing their full dress summer uniforms. Escorts will be: Capt. C. M. Lowe; Lts. Jos. M. Simpson, Robert H. McCaw, Robert E. Lejeune, Pat E. Knott, John E. Tripp, Frank G. Stone III, Fred Dietsch, Rick Spencer, Richard Scott, Richard Barthelemy, Chester Baffa, James Duager and Alan A. Bergeron. Mrs. James E. Jackson, Dover, with her cochairmen, Mrs. William Holden, Dover, and Mrs. J. L. Spang, Rehoboth, report a great interest in the pre-ticket sales. Since the club has not been in operation this summer, there will not be the usual luncheon served this year. Sammy Ferro promises some of the lively tunes of campaign days to accompany the models, since fashion candidates is the theme of the entire show. It is expected that both the Republican and Democratic hopefuls will be present on this dramatic occasion.

The fashion show is part of the first fund raising campaign for meeting of the Woman's Society of Golden Opportunity Center, Inc., which was started Aug. 24 and to continue for one month. The center, in the two years of operation, has trained and placed 23 handicap and mentally retarded persons for full time employment and self support. A total of 30 individuals now work at the Center five days each week under the supervision of director, Earl L. Canter and Stan M. Irzinski, assistant director. The public is invited and welcome to visit the Golden Opportunity Center, Inc. at any time.

Calendar Of Events Available

Delaware organizations planning events of general public interest for the period Sept. 1, through Dec. 31, are being urged to make information concerning such events available to David S. Hugg, State Information Officer, at the Delaware State Development Department, 45 The Green, Dover.

This information, according to Mr. Hugg, will be used in the fall edition of the Delaware Calendar of Events, a Development Department publication. Information concerning the state's most significant events will also be supplied by Mr. Hugg to editors of various publications.

The Development Department still has available copies of the summer 1964 edition of its Calendar of Events, which lists many of the outstanding events scheduled for the First State through Sept. 21. The state information agency also has available copies of "Welcome to Delightful Delaware", a brochure extolling Delaware's many attractions, and "Adventure Out-of-Doors in Delaware", which provides current information regarding camping, fishing and other forms of outdoor recreation.

Poultry Short Course Set For Sept. 29

Speakers from seven different states, including staff members of four universities and representatives from four major chemical companies and national organizations of the commercial feed industry, will serve as lecturers during the 1964 Poultry Nutrition Short Course, according to Edgar Quillin, chairman of the Delaware Poultry Industry Association's Educational Programs Committee. This annual nutrition conference is sponsored jointly by the DPI organization and the Short Course Division of the University of Delaware's School of Agriculture. As has been customary for years, all sessions will be held at the University of Delaware Substation, located on the Laurel-Georgetown Highway.

One of the country's leading authorities in the field of poultry nutrition, Dr. Gerald F. Combs, of the University of Maryland, will be the lead-off speaker on opening night, Sept. 29, beginning at 7:30 o'clock. Dr. Combs' topic will be "The Effect of Sex and Environmental Conditions on Nutritional Requirements of Broilers and Laying Chickens". Prof. T. D. Runnels of the University of Delaware will be the other speaker at the opening session, using as his topic "Linear Programming As A Research Aid In Broiler Nutrition".

Three other sessions on consecutive Tuesday evenings, Oct. 6, 13 and 20, comprise this year's poultry nutrition short course, with a discussion period concluding each evening's presentations. Advance registration is recommended and detailed information about this educational project can be obtained by writing to the DPI office, R. D. 2, Georgetown, Del.

Fence Talk

With George Vapaa
It's lawn seeding time. A neighbor called to ask about a most unusual problem. He likes to have ponies grazing on his lawn.

Last call for a one day trip to the Atlantic Breeders Cooperative on Wed. Sept. 2. Willis Ritchey, the local manager, will show us the new bull barns as well as the bulls presently in service.

Opportunity knocks for those wanting to improve management skills this fall. Our extension division at the University of Delaware is offering two courses in Kent County—one on public speaking, the other on local government administration.

The public speaking course starts in November and runs for seven weeks on Monday evenings at the Dover Air Force Base School. Each person will gain personal poise and confidence before groups, as well as develop several topics.

The administration course is a series of six workshops beginning September 24th, primarily for mayors, city managers, and local government officials. Specialists within the Urban Affairs Division will develop the major functions of government: organization, finance, public works, public safety, planning and zoning.

The impact of any tour is hard to measure at the time. Our dairy tour to the Leesburg, Va., area is a case in point. Our bus group of fifty people visited nine farms and the new Dulles airport in a two day period.

You can always learn something away from home. Often it is the chance to see other folks trying an idea for which you have strong reservations. A circular feeding bunk around the base of a silo such as we saw in Maryland is an example. More research is obviously still needed.

The Ed Fry farm near Chestertown, Md., is always a joy to visit. Here is a cow man who is thinking about every change he makes. His farm is a must stop for anyone planning a loose housing dairy program.

Tom Mills and Jim McCabe on the Lamac farm west of Dover have doubled the herd and increased milk production with a new free stall shed. This is no mean feat.

The new Dulles airport west of Washington is a good place for any group or individual to see. It's a brand new jet port and it handles many international flights. Our group had the guided tour which included a ride in the huge lounge cars. These meet the planes at the end of the runways.

It's good business to anticipate the fertilized needs of your crops before deficiency symptoms can be seen on the crop itself. Waiting for a deficiency to develop is a poor practice, for by then crop losses already have taken place.

In present-day farming, the real problems is to know how well a particular fertilizer is meeting the needs of a crop. Once a farmer has embarked on a fertilizer program, its value in meeting the needs of the crop from year to year can be estimated by soil tests. Soil testing is a practical tool that tells you what you want to know about your soil before the trouble appears and before it's too late to correct it.

By following a regular program of soil testing, you can avoid loss in yield and low profits resulting from hidden hunger of your crops. Soil testing is the modern way to determine your fertilizer and lime needs.

Wheat farmers can sign up to plant more than their allotment under the 1965 Wheat Program. Under this new provision, farmers can over plant their allotment up to 50 per cent and store excess wheat under bond. Overplanting for 1965 will not affect wheat acreage history for determining future allotments. By carrying out other program provisions, farmers choosing this overseeding option will be eligible for price support loans on all wheat produced except any excess wheat stored under bond. They will also be eligible for marketing certificates.

Producers may market the wheat stored under bond in future years by reducing wheat acreage below their allotment or producing less than the normal production of the farm allotment.

Overseeding is one of several choices wheat farmers may make under the 1965 program. Other choices include diverting wheat allotment acres to conserving uses and receiving diversion payments, substituting wheat for feed grains or feed grains for wheat, planting wheat in place of oats or rye, or planting oats or rye, instead of wheat or feed grains.

Details on these and other provisions of the 1965 program may be obtained from our county ASC or Extension offices. Farmers must sign up by October 2 at the county ASC office to participate in the program.

4-H'ers Attend Nat'l Conference

Four 4-H club members from Kent and Sussex Counties were among 232 members and leaders who attended a week-long Citizenship Short Course in Washington last week, (Aug. 16-22). They are Mary Frances Davis, 16, of Greenwood; Inez Batson, 15, of Bridgeville; Norman Cirwhithian, 16, of Milton; and Daniel Scott, 17, of Felton. They were accompanied by Mrs. Mary W. Sudler, home and youth agent with the Cooperative Extension Service.

The short course, which is held in the National 4-H Center, covers the various aspects of citizenship and government, leadership and responsibilities of young people. They are conducted by the National 4-H Club Foundation for the Cooperative Extension service of the U. S. Department of Agriculture and the state land-grant colleges and universities.

While in Washington they visited many important sites including the White House, Lincoln and Jefferson Memorials, Washington Monument, Mount Vernon and Arlington National Cemetery where they payed respect at the Tombs of the Unknown Soldier and President Kennedy's Grave-site.

Following a tour of the White House, delegates spent a half-day on Capitol Hill. Then they visited the Capitol, Supreme Court, Library of Congress, and congressional committees.

Edgar Hill

Edgar Hill, 62, a farmer of near here, died in Milford Memorial Hospital Friday.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Gladys Hill; four daughters, Mrs. Jay Fields, Seaford, Mrs. Reedy Rogers, Milford, Mrs. Robert T. Jester, Harrington, and Mrs. Norman Dill, Felton; two brothers, Harry and Randall, both of Harrington; three sisters, Mrs. Elta Lane, Houston, Mrs. Lagatha Farrow, Harrington, and Mrs. Ruth Billings, Felton; eight grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Services were held Tuesday at the Berry Funeral Home, Felton.

The Rev. Charles H. Poukish, pastor of Trinity Methodist Church, Harrington, officiated. Interment was a Hollywood Cemetery.

Coordination, Key To College Clothes Planning

One of the pleasant, but often perplexing, parts of getting ready for college is selecting the right wardrobe. At an age when clothes seem very important, many college bound girls are uncertain about what their wardrobes should include. The new college student is especially anxious about her clothes because she wants to make the right impression in a new and strange environment. She wants to "belong".

And even if she has an unlimited budget for new clothes, a girl can still have this problem, says Janet Reed, extension clothing and textiles specialist at the University of Delaware. "It's possible to spend a lot of money on clothes and still wind up looking—and feeling—as though she doesn't quite belong."

But most girls do have a limited amount of money to spend, so it is especially important to choose clothes carefully, Miss Reed says. Fortunately, indeed, is the girl who can sew. Not only can this college girl have new clothes for a fraction of the ready to wear costs, but they are custom-tailored to her individual taste.

One college-bound girl who agrees completely is 18-year-old Gail Neave of Corner Ketch. Winner of the state Make-It-With-Wool contest and runner-up in the state 4-H dress revue recently, Gail makes nearly all her own clothes—from coats and suits to lounging robes and evening gowns. A June graduate of Newark High School and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Neave, Gail is in the process of organizing the wardrobe she will take when she enters Appalachian State Teachers' College in Boone, N. C., next month.

Miss Reed says one of the best ways to stretch a wardrobe is to include several coordinated separates, especially for classroom wear. Gail has made two casual suits—a brown corduroy and a dark green dacron and cotton. The jackets and skirts are interchangeable, and with either skirt she can wear a plaid weskit and a choice of several blouses or sweaters. In addition, the same blouses and sweaters and the suit jackets can be worn with a gold jumper.

Gail's winning outfit in the wool contest also shows her theory of interchangeable separates. The ensemble includes a two-piece black wool dress and a black tweed coat. A matching tweed skirt gives her a more casual outfit, the black dress offers almost endless opportunities for "dressing up or down" with accessories and either skirt is suitable for classroom wear. The entire outfit—lined wool coat, two-piece dress and extra skirt—cost Gail $27 to make. Miss Reed estimates the ready-to-wear cost for the same type of garments at well over $75.

The ensemble for which she won the 4-H award is another example of the savings possible for a girl who sews. Her two-piece navy wool dress and matching checked coat cost under $30 to make.

The traditional college wardrobe of sweaters, blouses and skirts will probably serve any girl well on nearly any college campus, but Miss Reed recommends finding out the specific kinds of clothes popular at the college you have chosen. At some schools, for example, bulky white "bobby socks" are popular; in other places, socks are "out" and nylons are standard even for classroom wear; girls at other schools have adopted the heavy wool knee-length or full-length textured stockings. Bermuda shorts are accepted classroom attire at some colleges; at other schools, they may not even be permitted on campus.

Most schools provide information on the type of clothing the new student will need, and it is wise to find out before investing in any "fad" items. Miss Reed suggests writing to the dean of women if this information is not given in orientation literature. Better yet, she says, is to ask upperclass girls attending the same college. And just to be sure, set aside part of your clothing budget to use after you get to school, Miss Reed suggests. "After a few weeks on campus, you're likely to find some gaps in your wardrobe, no matter how well you have planned. Most college towns have excellent shops featuring clothes popular on that campus".

While it's natural to want all new clothes for the new experience of college, it definitely is not necessary. Most of the clothes you wore in high school will be perfectly acceptable in college if they are becoming and appropriate for the occasion, Miss Reed points out. "In fact," she says, "upperclassmen often say they can spot a freshman because she's the one who looks a bit too dressed up in all new clothes."

Comfortable shoes are a must for all occasions in college, because students usually do a lot of walking. And this goes for dress shoes, too, Miss Reed notes, because church or the movie theater may be several blocks from campus. Again, the prevailing campus have adopted the "penney loafer", while at others the only "correct" footwear for the classroom may be sneakers with nylon hose. It's wise to check with upperclassmen.

Date clothes, too, vary, with a simple wool dress high in popularity for most events on most campuses. Miss Reed doesn't recommend buying new evening gowns because, often, those from high school days will serve well. And, the term "formal" may mean different things on different campuses. A short cocktail dress may be standard for a "formal" dance at one school, while a full length evening gown with cover-up jacket may be the "uniform" somewhere else. "Wait until you know what you'll need" is Miss Reed's advice.

But here, again, is where the advantages fall to the girl who can sew. Since many of the best designed formals are well above the college girl's price range, the talented seamstress can have the gown she wants at a very low price. Gail made a slim, floor-length gown in a pink cotton-silk blend, fully lined with soft crepe, for an almost unbelievable $2.37. Ready-to-wear, it would have cost at least $40—if Gail could have found the simple uncluttered style she prefers, even in that price range.

And when it comes to price, Miss Reed believes in buying clothes of the best quality you can afford. Some of the inexpensive clothes are actually overpriced for the quality they offer, so you are really money ahead to have fewer good-quality clothes you really like than to have a lot of inexpensive garments that won't wear as long. If you make your own clothes, buy good fabrics and put good workmanship into the garment. Gail's sewing awards and versatile wardrobe are proof of the value of this theory.

Choose the clothes most becoming to you, and don't succumb to the latest fad unless it looks good on you, Miss Reed recommends. "You will look much better if you are tastefully dressed for the occasion, rather than wearing a fad outfit which isn't really 'you,'" she says. And do choose clothes that are comfortable, not only in fit, but in "personality" as well. If you feel right in what you are wearing, you can join the activities without nagging doubts about

KEITH S. BURGESS — Sports Editor

Ellis Myer Leads Cross-Country Drills on Course

Ellis Myer, as a sophomore newsreader in 1963, finished a strong ninth in the state championship 2.3 miles run at Rockford Park, Wilmington. Three of the eight harriers ahead of him were fellow Lions, Dennis Rogers (4th), Wayne Carson (5th) and George Bonniwell (6th). Myer, at this writing appears to have a good chance for a finish in the first five in this year's title test and an equally good chance to take home all the marbles in his senior year.

Last season Myer spent the period between Sept. 25th and Nov. 20th fluctuating between 13 minutes flat and 13 minutes 15 seconds for the 2.4 miles H.H.S. course at Killen's Pond. This year Myer hit 13.15 in his very first try on Aug. 25. This would indicate that he is two months ahead of last fall's pace. We predict that he will approach the course record of 11.58 set by Easton's Jim Harvey before he hangs up his shoes in late November. He already has a 12.32 set in last year's final test, the Harrington Invitational.

George Bonniwell has the next best 1964 clocking. He chalked up a 13.27 although he was running in work clothes which slowed him somewhat.

Roger Betts, Dan Hicks and Bob Matthews are next with 13.35, 13.42 and 13.45. Two of this trio may face another year on the jayvees if Roger Redden and Bob Smith return to the form they have displayed in previous years. This pair is urgently needed for the opener at Easton on Sept. 24th since Bonniwell will be away for two weeks with the National Guards and the Marylanders may be the toughest foe on the Lion's schedule.

Nick Morris is doing very well. Larry Bonniwell set out 1963 after two years of competition in the seventh and eighth grades. He ran the course in 15 minutes in clodhoppers in his first outing since 1962. We think he'll break 13 minutes in a few weeks.

Minor leaguers, who look like they have the stuff to help keep up the Lions' winning tradition in future years are Roger Hicks, Roger Dean, Lewis Kemp and Randy Coleman.

We can recall a freshman, a sophomore and a junior who required 22 minutes to complete the course at Killen's Pond on their first attempts. Randy Coleman, a seventh grader, matched this time on Tuesday night and recorded 20 minutes flat on Wednesday night.

Roger Dean, seventh grade, ran with the added advantage of an older runner as pacemaker and never faltered once as he chalked up a fine 19.20.

Roger Hicks and Lewis Kemp worked out last year on the course while still in the sixth grade and ended up after several attempts in the excellent neighborhood of sixteen and seventeen minutes, respectively. With this quartet of junior high runners plus others expected out after school starts the Lion dynasty may be in for a long reign, indeed.

We have neglected to mention some other veterans, who are either handling their own training, are waiting for school to start, or are not planning to run this autumn.

In this group are: Dennis Rogers, No. 1 harrier in 1963 here; Marshall Hatfield, and Jayvees, Frank Cain, Henry Minner, Bob Dean and Donald Wells.

Others who ran last season and may report later are Harold "Sonny" Russ, Marshall Jackson, Harold Mullins and Jim Rash.

First National, Moose Win Little League Titles

Ted Layton's First National Bank team and Gary Harrington's Moose Club nine won both halves of the Senior League and Little League competitions respectively to end the season as undisputed champions.

This fall for the first time the players will be given a banquet. Efforts are being made to secure a big league player as speaker.

Thus ends a banner season of Little League and Senior Little League baseball that saw the stands filled on many occasions as the people of the community attended in larger numbers than ever before.

Taylor & Messick Win Championship

The pennant winning T&M softball team won the best of five playoff series with the Milford Colts beating them three out of four games. The final victory was due largely to the fine 4-hit pitching of Gary Harrington and the hitting of Ronnie Wright and Bill Lane. A couple of fielding gems by 3rd baseman Leslie Wix kept the Colts from doing some damage early in the game.

Ronnie Wright had three hits to pace the winners and Carl Wright and Bill Lane had two each. Shockley paced Milford with two hits. Milford was hampered by the absence of Ron Coverdale and Bob Messick, their two long-ball hitters.

In winning the pennant and the playoffs it would not have been possible but for the tremendous team effort and spirit of never giving up when things looked so bad. The members of the team and the manager Morris Adams, wish to thank all its fans and followers for rooting the team to victory. They wish especially to thank Walter Messick of Taylor & Messick for sponsoring the T&M team and the Ruritan Club of Burrsville, for furnishing a place to play and sponsoring the league.

This has been a very enjoyable season for all concerned and are eagerly looking forward to next season.

170-Mile 'Rallye' At Rehoboth, Sat., Sept. 19

Sport car enthusiasts are planning a 170-mile "rallye" on Sat., Sept. 19, which will finish at Rehoboth Beach.

The rallye is open to the public, but most of the participants will be members of the Brandywine Motor-sport Club and other sport car clubs in Delaware, Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

Though the "Rehoboth ramble" is called a sports car rallye, the event can be run in any type car, according to T. E. McBride, rallye-master, of Wilmington. Even trucks or motorcycles will be accepted.

A "rallye," McBride will tell you is a timed event in which the participants are given a set of route instructions or clues which they must follow—much like the old treasure hunt game on wheels. The route is measured to 1/100th of a mile.

Participants are also given a series of speeds which they must drive over certain portions of the route so they will pass check points at predetermined times.

These times are known only to the scorekeepers. Score is based on one point for each 1/100th of a minute (6/10 of a second) a car is ahead or behind schedule as he passes the checkpoints.

Speeds run on rallyes according to McBride are well below posted speed limits, and together with the route, are checked and approved by Delaware State Police.

The Rehoboth Ramble Rallye is being presented by the Rehoboth Chamber of Commerce in association with the Brandywine Motor-sport Club. The finish line is located at the Boardwalk and Rehoboth Avenue, adjacent to the bandstand. The last block of Rehoboth Avenue will be reserved from 4 to 6 p.m. for that purpose on September 19.

The Chamber of Commerce expects upwards of 50 cars to participate in various styles and models—even vintage ones—which should lend to the excitement at arrival time. It is hoped to make this an annual event.

All participants will leave the parking lot at the Midway Volkswagen Agency, Kirkwood Highway, Wilmington for the 170 mile trek. The Rehoboth business organization will supply trophies for the winners. Additional trophies will come from area automobile agencies. These will be awarded to those having the best scores on individual legs, check-point to check-point.

MORALE BUILDERS

The cheerleaders of H.H.S., (l. to r.) Linda Sue Richardson, Sharon Walls (captain), Peg O'Neal, Phyllis Robinson and Kitty Burgess, have undertaken the task of painting the goal posts bright, bright gold by Mon., Aug. 24 to show the boys when they started practice that there is someone behind them and to give them morale and spirit. They want to show other schools that they are proud of their new field, school and best of all the "new Lions", who the cheerleaders, representing the student body, know are tired of being laughed and scorned at, will settle for nothing less than the conference crown this year. Absent when picture was taken were cheerleaders Frances Downing and Vivian Torres.

Schelts Pitches, Bats Team to Win In Tournament

Last Saturday night a large crowd attended the Burrsville ball park to see the start of the softball tournament.

In the first game H & R defeated Magnolia 13 to 4 behind the pitching of Snooky and George Collins.

Callaway started on the mound for Magnolia but was relieved in the 3rd as R & H got to him for nine runs featuring a three-run homer by Jack Sapp. Warton and Gillespie finished up for Magnolia allowing only four more runs. Bobby Collins and Jack Sapp paced the winners with three hits each with Ken Outen, Willard Thompson and George Lankford, getting two hits each. Roy Dill paced Magnolia with three hits with Ratray, Freeland and Callaway getting two each.

In the second game T&M, the champs of the Burrsville League ran into someone named Schelts, who pitched and batted his way to victory. Schelts hit two home runs and a triple and fanned six for Smyrna, as he kept the T&M players off stride with his fast ball and fine change up. He also threw a good curve.

Besides Schelts, Smyrna was paced by Davis and Coleman, each getting two hits in the 13 to 10 victory over T&M.
Frank Collins pitched well in defeat. T&M was paced by Leonard Outen and Julian Woodall with two hits each.

This Saturday night Edgehill Barbers take on Greensboro at 7 o'clock in the first game and Milford tangles with Buchanan in the second contest.
There are plenty of seats and parking space. There is no charge for admission, so let's see a big turnout to back up the Ruritan Club who are trying to promote good will and sportsmanship.
