STEAKS AND CANCER

No telling where the human cancer scare will strike next. Now we're hearing a lot of talk about the possibility that charcoal broiling steaks produces hydrocarbons that can cause cancer. The inference is that it may be dangerous to eat charcoal broiled meat.

Don't believe it! And if you value the steak market as important to livestock prices, squelch this kind of talk whenever it comes up within your hearing.

Dr. Phillip L. White, secretary of the American Medical Assn's. Council of Foods and Nutrition and widely regarded as an eminent authority on foods and their effect on man, says "no ill effects resulting from charcoal broiled food have been reported in man. For that matter, research with appropriate animals has likewise failed to demonstrate any hazard."

Dr. White, in a recent interview in Chicago, explained these stories about the charcoal-cancer link arise from the fact that when fat is partially decomposed by heat it produces hydrocarbons which, when applied to the skin of experimental animals in National Cancer Institute tests showed evidence of producing cancer. However, feeding of these same substances did not produce cancer.

Charcoal broiling meat does cause the fat to melt, of course, and as it does so, it is partially decomposed or burned. But the same is true of any fat that is burned, which is what is happening when frying fat in a skillet begins to smoke.

Dr. White says that good meat cooking practices dovetail with proper precautionary practices for anyone who is interested in avoiding the production of these hydrocarbons. He suggests that the outdoor chef make sure that the Monday. broiling is done by the heat from the coals, not the flames from burning fat. Cooking experts list these steps as help- entertained at a birthday dinner of the characteristic whoop. ful: Start the fire well ahead of broiling time and let the in honor of K. P. Outten. Good cooking methods will help make the cook-out more fun and food better. Sloppy chefs whose steaks go up in flames seveal times during the preparating should be hooted right off the patio.

"I very deeply appreciate the honor of the invitation to address for a second time the representative citizenship of your progressive community, who accorded me such a royal welcome one year ago.

"The mystic chord of memory. stretching back to my visit in your midst, tonight yields sweet music, when touched by the angel of my better nature, and I can only say of the delightful impressions that linger with me of your small but entrancingly beautiful commonwealth:

'Long, long may my heart with such memories be filled, Like the vase with the scent of roses stilled. You may break, you may ruin the vase if you will, But the scent of roses will hang 'round it still.'

"It has been suggested that my response to the honor of your invitation should very appropriately be on the theme of SERVICE. This is the deal of the 20th Century, just as Liberty was the ideal of the 19th Century.

"He profits most who serves the best' is the maxim of International Rotary and is a concept most challenging and commanding in this era of depression, cynicism and discouragement. The highest tribute ever paid the lowly Galilean was not that of Prince and Potentate, nor even that of Lord and Master, but 'He went about doing good'. It is interesting to reflect that the thirty miracles of the Christ were performed not to reveal His power nor to charm and hypnotize the people wih His Majestic sway. but rather to relieve human suffering. The transformation of water into wine at the marriage feast at Cana, the hurling out of the ten lepers on the way to Ephraim, the feeding of the four thousand, the feeding of the five thousand, and the raising of Lazarus from the dead were all manifestations of the Christ's human sympathy and represents His heart-throbs for suffering humanity.

'Not in a strange portentious way
