Negligence Raises Boating Death Toll

"Boating is rapidly becoming the national recreational pastime, outranking all other sports in total family participation," according to Francis J. Jamison, assistant manager of the Delaware Safety Council. "Today, nearly 40 million people in approximately eight million small craft, powered by paddle, motor and sail are taking to the nation's waterways."

"Crowded waters, inexperienced and overly adventurous boaters will contribute to the growing increase in water fatalities," warned Mr. Jamison. "About 1,300 persons die each year in boating accidents resulting from capsizing and operator negligence, falling overboard, reckless operation, making too sharp turns, standing and overloading a boat. Delaware always contributes its share to the national total."

"Many of these deaths could be eliminated if the rules of safe boating were observed," Mr. Jamison said. He gave these suggestions on how to help prevent boating accidents:

1. Check the condition of your boat before leaving shore. Take along a bailing can and an extra oar. Carry tools for minor repairs.
 2. Take along life preservers. Make sure everyone wears one including the children.
 3. Don't overload the boat.
 4. Never stand in a boat or sit or stand on the bow or stern. Be cautious about changing places in a boat while in deep water. Better to come into shallow water first.
 5. If your boat capsizes, stick with it. Even most small boats will support several persons for hours. Keep calm and wait for help to arrive rather than trying to swim ashore.
- "Above all," Mr. Jamison said, "use good common sense in operating a boat."

Annex Proposal Resumed in Kent

With the end of a six-month moratorium on the subject, the proposed Kent County Courthouse addition is due for renewed attention—if only the talking stage.

Levy Court Tuesday agreed to hold another conference with State Planning Director John A. Bivens Jr. and Dover officials to find out just what's to be done.

Levy Court has been waiting for action from Bivens and the latter has been waiting for action from Levy Court, a joint situation which delayed the addition first proposed two years ago.

Plans have been drawn by architect Walter L. Carlson of Wilmington for an addition to the rear of the present courthouse, using all available land near the building.

Bivens and the city, however, don't like the plan, and would rather see the county put planning and zoning offices and engineering offices in a separate building somewhere near the courthouse and The Green.

Bivens has proposed a joint city-county venture for planning, zoning and engineering offices on Water Street between South State Street and South Governor's Avenue.

Both city and county have been relatively non-committal on the proposal. The city also has indicated it might not approve applications by the Levy Court to build the addition as drawn by Carlson, because of the lack of parking space.

Levy Court Attorney N. Maxson Terry, however, said there's a bug in the proposed city-county center. The bond authorization for $950,000, passed last

Dr. Evelyn Orton, Georgetown, Sussex County health officer, was one of three new board members elected for two year terms at the Delaware Division, American Cancer Society's annual meeting last week.

Named as new president for the statewide organization is Dr. Oscar N. Stern of Wilmington, succeeding Dr. Joseph A. Arminio. A new vice-president is Dr. Robert W. Frelick, Wilmington; Mrs. Emily Womach, of Laurel, will continue as a vice-president and Franklin B. Drumheller was renamed board chairman. Other holdover officers are F. A. C. GETTING UP IN THE WORLD—The old 150,000 gallon water tower, built in 1919, is being scraped, cleaned, and repainted by Roanoke Tank & Steel Company, H. H. Wills, engineer, of Roanoke, Va. This tower has been left sitting idle since erection of new 200,000 gallon water tank in 1955. City Council deemed it advisable to put it back into use as a storage reservoir under the city new $150,000 water system improvement project now under construction. Price photo

Work May Resume Soon on Mains

With the arrival of a load of pipe recently, it appears work may be resumed soon on the expansion and improvement of the City's water system.

The $150,000 project has been held up by a strike involving the manufacturers of the pipe.

In the meanwhile, a City informant said he expected drilling of a third well to begin this week. This factor, with the reactivation of the standpipe, should give the City more than enough water.

In other improvements, the City has purchased a sewer rodder, a device for cleaning sewers.

Also this week, weeds are being cleaned from Harrington Avenue. Lots are being cleaned in Harrington Manor, with Franklin Hendricks as the contractor.

American Legion Elects Woman Com. In Delaware

Mrs. Ruth Bell Egan, 2205 Inglewood Drive, Fairfax, Wilmington, was nominated by Sylvester H. Walter, past commander Laureate Roberts Post No. 21, for the office of department commander. She has served the past year as department vice-commander and was elected unanimously to the office of Department Commander at the closing session of the department convention recently at Laurel Post No. 19.

Mrs. Egan, a World War II veteran, is a teacher in the Wilmington public school system and has devoted part of her extensive career to teaching the exceptional child. She has been most active in child welfare and rehabilitation work. This interest was amplified through her marriage to the late department service commander, Thomas B. Egan. He had been secretary-treasurer of the National Association of Service Officers of the American Legion for many years.

The present commander has participated in her post activities in many offices and continues to do so. She has been district vice commander and chairing department committees during the past several years. Mrs. Egan has also been active in regional and national programs and has attended many conventions and conferences, all adding to her knowledge of the American Legion.

H. E. Clubs Join Crusade Against Cancer

Home Economics Extension Clubs of the state are conducting their own "insurance against cancer" effort.

This "Conquer Uterine Cancer" effort is being promoted by the extension groups to help fight one of the leading types of cancer among women; a 100 percent checkup participation by members is the goal for each club.

Head Start Program Begins Here June 30

Harrington will join with the White House here and in 2300 other communities throughout the nation on Wednesday, June 30, to mark the launching of project Head Start.

On the same day, in a ceremony at the White House, Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson, honorary chairman of the project Head Start, will receive from Sargent Shriver, director of the Office of Economic Opportunity, a flag symbolizing the thousands of flags which will be flown across the country to mark Head Start day.

OEO officials say that it is planned later to award flags to individual centers on the basis of their achievement and merit in attaining the required standards and objectives of the program.

Project Head Start is administered by the Office of Economic Opportunity, the federal agency which coordinates the war on poverty. It is designed to provide more than one-half million children of the poor with an eight-week pre-school training, to prepare them for entry into school in the fall. Without this training, these disadvantaged children would find it hard to take their place beside their more fortunate classmates. They will literally be given a "Head Start."

The children will be enrolled in more than 13,500 Child Development Centers across the country using the services of nearly 40,000 professionals. More than 42,000 neighborhood residents will assist the professional staff in paid capacities. Half a million volunteers are being called for to fill approximately 100,000 non-paying jobs. The cost of the program is $94.4 million of which the federal share is $85 million.

Sudden Showers Rainout Rehoboth Outdoor Concert

Sudden showers—the nemesis of outdoor concerts—plagued Rehoboth Beach for the second straight Saturday night, when a concert by Rehoboth Beach High School was rained out.

However, Band Director William J. Hayes informed everyone the concert would take place Sunday night—which it did—with a good audience in attendance.

Featured during the concert was Liane Beth McDowell, first clarinetist—and the young lady who just last Friday was runner-up to Miss Delmarva Poultry Queen at the eighteenth annual Delmarva Chicken Festival in Salisbury.

Miss McDowell, who has a summer job in a Rehoboth Beach drug store, has been offered several modeling opportunities since winning the $500 Delmarva Poultry Industry scholarship.

She will use the scholarship toward her education at the University of Delaware where she will study elementary education and music, beginning this fall.

The Rehoboth Beach Chamber of Commerce announced that another musical treat is in store for the public this Saturday night, June 26, when the Thomas Jefferson High School Stage Band of Alexandria, Va., will be the boardwalk attraction.

According to Mrs. Mae Hall McCabe, music chairman, the concert should be entirely different in nature and, weather permitting, a record audience is expected. Many Virginians plan to come to the resort town for the weekend.

Reservations For Del. State Fair Being Received

Although the Delaware State Fair doesn't open for a month, advance reservations for grandstand seats are already being received.

George C. Simpson, fair general manager, reports that requests are coming in for tickets to Irish singing star Carmel Quinn's performance on Thursday night, July 29, and Friday night's grandstand show featuring stars of the Lawrence Welk TV Show, dancers Barbara Boylan and Bobby Burgess, along with deep-voiced singer, Larry Hooper.

This year's fair will be held Saturday, July 24 through Saturday, July 31.

"Last year we had a record 5,000 advance reservations for grandstand tickets," Simpson said, "but I don't believe we had any as far ahead as 30 days. We find that more and more people are assuring themselves of good grandstand seats by making advance reservations. This can be done by visiting or calling the fair office at Harrington."

Simpson also reported that individual exhibit entries are heavy, especially in the horse and pony departments. Despite the building of several new exhibit barns last year, stall space was severely taxed, he said. This year we may be forced to turn down exhibitors once our facilities have been exhausted.

Special Summer Work Plan Studied For Vocational Students

Pens Now OK On Mail Ballots

Pens may now be used to mark absentee ballots and registration transfers may be made by mail in Delaware.

Four election and registration bills passed by the 123d General Assembly, and approved by Gov. Charles L. Terry Jr., have "contributed much to assuring that no legitimate voter will be disfranchised," according to one election official.

Edward W. Hutchison, secretary of the New Castle County Department of Elections, Wednesday explained some of the key provisions of House Bills 28, 83, 162 and 178 as they affect Delaware voters.

Hutchison pointed out that H. B. 28 permits registration of voters in the office of the Department of Elections every day of any year with no general election.

Registration in the election districts is still permitted only in election years, after Jan. 1. Mobile registration is also provided in election years.

H.B. 83 permits the use of pen, pencil or crayon for marking absentee ballots. Previously the use of a pen was prohibited.

H.B. 162 repeals the law providing for voter identification cards, eliminating the need for such cards by voters who transfer. This is a companion measure to H.B. 178, which provides for changes in the voter registration procedure.

Hutchison said the department will still provide the voter registration cards to citizens who may want them for traveling purposes.

He added, however, that elimination of the voter registration procedure.

Small Resigns State Post

J. Ornum Small, president of the State Board of Education, has resigned, citing the press of private business.

Small's resignation—after 10 years of service on the board, six as president—was accepted "with deep personal regret" by Gov. Charles L. Terry Jr.

In his letter of resignation, dated Monday, Small left its effective date up to Terry. The governor, in replying to Small, said it will be effective "at the time of my announcement of a successor."

Terry's office announced Wednesday that three members of the State Highway Commission whose terms have expired will be reappointed, subject to Senate confirmation.

They are Republicans C. Warden Gass and Frank H. Mackie Jr. and Democrat William G. Dorsey, all of the greater Wilmington area.

Those appointments, and others, were released after a luncheon meeting between Terry and GOP senators. The governor held a similar session to discuss appointments with Democratic senators Monday.

Also named: Mrs. Hazel Harrington, a Republican, to succeed Mrs. Marian Smitheman on the Kent County Department of Elections for a four-year term.

Wallace F. McPaul Jr., a Dover engineer and businessman, to the Water Pollution Commission, succeeding W. Leslie Wheatley of Clayton, who is now a member of the State Highway Department. McPaul is a Democrat, Wheatley a Republican.

R. Glen Mears, of Seaford, was reappointed to the Water Pollution Commission.

And M. Haswell Pierce of Milford has been renamed to the Atlantic State Marine Fisheries Commission.

All appointments require Senate confirmation.

In resigning from the State Board of Education, Small simultaneously resigned as a member of the State Office Building Commission, the Educational Television Board and as an ex-officio trustee of the University of Delaware, all posts related to his presidency of the State Board of Education.

Small said his "personal affairs have been neglected to some extent during my long tenure of office and it has now become necessary to devote some time to my private business."

Small was appointed twice to the board by former Gov. Elbert N. Carvel. The first time was in 1949 with Small serving until 1955.

He was appointed by Carvel in 1961 and was elected president of the board in 1964.

Educator Urges Support For Free Kindergartens

Public support for free kindergartens in Delaware was urged Tuesday night by Dr. Howard E. Row, assistant superintendent of public instruction.

He spoke at the first commencement of Delaware's adult evening school, the James H. Groves High School.

Recalling a visit to the Soviet Union, Row said the Russians have a long tradition of effective adult night schools.

"Much of Europe, including the Soviet Union," he said, "is still ahead of Delaware in another educational program, and that is kindergartens."

"As a public, we should get busy and put some money into the other end of our school program and give our youngsters a chance at publicly supported kindergartens."

Row addressed 37 students ranking in age from 18 over 50 who received their diplomas. The commencement followed at a dinner at Wesley College.

The 37 are downstate residents who studied at centers in Dover, Georgetown and Seaford, or under a correspondence program. The school was established by the 122d General Assembly to permit adults to complete interrupted high school educations.

P.R.R. Names New Train "Blue Diamond"

That new Pennsylvania Railroad train to run between Delmar and Wilmington, beginning July 1, now has a name.

It's the Blue Diamond. The winning name in the "Name the Train" contest, was submitted by Thomas W. Murray, III, of Box 136, Cheswold, Tom, who is 11 years old, was the only one to pick the name, "Blue Diamond." He stated that he thought the train should be called the Blue Diamond because Delaware is known as the Blue Hen State and the Diamond State. So combining the two he came up with Blue Diamond.

More than 250 entries were submitted. After the judges had gone over every entry, each narrowed his choice down to three names. The voting then was on the basis of three points for each first choice, two points for second choice and one for third.

Blue Diamond got 12 points, the First Stater ten points and Red Diamond eight points. There was a scattering of points for other names. The First Stater was a popular choice of the judges since Delaware was the first state. Red Diamond was submitted by several who combined Delaware, the Diamond State, and red, the color of the train's cars. Once the name Blue Diamond was chosen, the judges went through the entries to determine how many persons submitted the name Blue Diamond. There was only one, which simplified the judges' task no end. That one entry was on a postcard signed T. Murray III.

Then the question was, "Who's T. Murray III?" Harold Remley, chief accountant of the Delaware Public Service Commission, supplied the clue. "He could be Tom Murray, son of the State House custodian." Several phone calls confirmed this.

But Thomas W. Murray III was not to be reached. He was in Canada—Montreal to be exact—on a train trip.

It develops that young Tom Murray is an old hand at railroad trips. He rides the train every chance he gets. So well known is the young rail buff that he might well be the No. 1 rail man on the Eastern Shore. When not riding trains, he has two at home with which to play.

When informed that her son's entry was the winning name, Mrs. Murray was overjoyed. "You couldn't have picked a more avid rail fan," she declared.

So Tom Murray for his prize-winning effort will be given a $25 U. S. Savings Bond and will be "Engineer for a Day," riding the cab of the Blue Diamond on a day of his choosing.

That could be any day except July 2 when Tom and his family ride the special train to the World's Fair to help celebrate Delaware Day there. Tom also will be a guest at a breakfast on a railroad business car in Dover, July 1, when Governor Terry, Public Service Commission Chairman Derrickson and other Delaware officials break bread with PRR officials to mark the inaugural run of the Blue Diamond.

Entries for the contest came from such distant points as Buffalo, N. Y., and New York City and from Radford in Southwest Virginia. There were almost as many names as entrants.

Among the more popular selections were Blue Hen Special and The Diamond State. Many thought the name should be Caesar Rodney, the Delawarean who rode the train to Philadelphia to cast his state's vote for the Declaration of Independence July 2, 1776, thus breaking a deadlock. The supporters of Caesar Rodney outdid themselves in their cause. One even set the ride of Caesar Rodney to verse.

And then there were other contestants who were starkly realistic. They chose "Last Chance." Others, following the contest, whereby the public would select the name, submitted, "Peoples Choice."

"We're sorry that everyone couldn't have been a winner," the PSC and PRR said in a joint statement. "We want to thank everyone who took the time and effort to help select a name for the train."

"We're hopeful that the same enthusiasm will be exhibited in support of the train."

The Blue Diamond will begin its regular run July 1. It will leave Delmar each morning Monday through Friday at 5:56 a. m. for Wilmington, arriving there at 8:20 a. m. Returning, it will leave Wilmington at 5:20 p. m.

At Wilmington it provides connections with New York and Washington trains. One-way, round-trip, 10-trip, monthly commutation, Ladies Day and special children's tickets will be sold for the train, which will operate on a trial basis for a six-month period.

Farm Wives Play Major Role in Business Decisions

How much does the average farm wife have to say when it comes to making farm business decisions? In some cases it may be much more than they husbands would like to admit.

The farm wife who helps with the chores and drives the tractor is likely to have more to say about buying equipment for the farm than her housebound counterpart, according to a recent sociological study. The study, based on interviews with more than 500 farm operators and their wives reveals characteristics of the farm, the husband, and the wife that may make it possible to predict the amount of influence farm wives have in management and financial decisions.

E. A. Wilkening, rural sociologist at the University of Wisconsin, found that the farmer who has a high school education and agricultural training and who operates a large farm and is married to a girl from town is more likely to make the big decisions himself on such things as buying land and equipment and constructing new buildings.

The farmer with a lot of experience, higher education and a larger farm income, may also make these major decisions by himself although he is more apt to discuss them with his wife.

Considering the part-time farmer, one with work off the farm in roadwork, custom work or a town job, his wife is likely to have a much bigger say in how the farm is operated.

The farm wife who keeps the books for the farming operations and pays the bills will probably have more to say about farm management decisions according to the study.

Wilkening indicates that the more educated wife on a big farm with a good income is more likely to make independent decisions about the family and household. But if the farm wife has several small children home, she is less likely to be involved in the farm business regardless of the situation.

Wilkenings report is part of a long range study to find out how the farm family is involved in the many decisions and duties that affect the farm business. He already knows that farm wives are actively involved in many farm operations, and that children start helping with farm work at a very early age.

Safety Precautions Can Prevent Lawn Mower Accidents

As necessary as it is on most home grounds, a lawn mower can be an extremely dangerous piece of equipment. In fact, there are more than 75,000 lawn mower injuries every year in the United States. E. N. Scarborough, agricultural engineer at the University of Delaware, offers some suggestions to help prevent lawn mower accidents.

Keep the lawn clean. Pick up stones, sticks, toys, bones, wire and other debris before starting to mow the lawn.

Keep all people and pets away from the mower while it is operating.

Stand away from the mower when starting the engine, and be sure your feet cannot be struck by the whirling blade.

Use the slowest blade speed possible. High blade speeds are not only dangerous, but they cause excess mower wear.

If mower travel is powered, adjust its speed to your walking speed; never let the mower pull you.

Mow across the embankments—never up or down.

Always push the mower; if you pull it backwards, objects struck by the blade will fly to the rear and are likely to strike you.

Never leave the engine running when the mower is unattended.

If the mower becomes clogged, shut off the engine and disconnect the spark plug wire before unclogging the blade.

Store and handle gasoline safely. Never fill the tank when the engine is hot.

Don't operate electric motors when the ground is wet, because the operator will be in danger on wet ground if the cord is cut, or if the mower has a short circuit.

Follow the same safety rules for riding mowers, since these machines present the same problems as push type mowers. And never let an extra rider sit with you on the mower.

Running a power mower is no job for children, Scarborough points out. Only a person familiar with the mower should operate it.

Emblem Warns Of Slow Moving Vehicles

A conspicuous emblem attached to slower moving farm machinery will warn motorists of the danger of collision. Fluorescent yellow-orange in the center and reflective dark red on the outside, the triangular slow-moving vehicle emblem can be seen and identified by higher speed motorists at 500 feet or more under practically all driving conditions.

Vehicles traveling at 20 miles an hour are about 100 times as likely to be involved in collisions as vehicles traveling at the speed limit, according to the U. S. Department of Agriculture safety specialists. Two out of three of these accidents are rear-end collisions, say D. N. Scarborough, agricultural engineer at the University of Delaware. Often, he says, the oncoming motorists simply do not realize until too late how slowly the vehicle ahead is moving.

To help reduce the incidence of this type or traffic accident, the National Safety Council, the American Society of Agricultural Engineers and the Automotive Safety Foundation are sponsoring the use of the SMV emblem. This distinctive sign was developed by Ohio State University research and extension specialists.

The emblem should be centered on the back of the machine, approximately three to five feet above the ground, recommends Scarborough. This location is within the normal range of headlight beams and is readily noticed during the daytime. The sign is inexpensive, easily mounted and does not interfere with the operation of the machine.

An additional safety device, the sign is not intended as a replacement for the usual flags, reflectors and red warning equipment. It should be used on farm machinery such as tractors and wagons, and on highway maintenance

Delaware Food Market Report

Prices continue to be higher on all red meats and promotions are somewhat limited. Livestock receipts are low and are bringing continual increases on pork in particular. Two weeks ago, the prices of live hogs made the sharpest gain for a 4-day period in 8 years and this means further boosts in the retail prices. As far as an increase in supply, there is no hope since many months ago farmers cut production because of the very low prices they were receiving.

The management of the Reese Theatre calls the present and coming hits "The Summertime Galaxy of Hits".

The average theatre fan, after closer observation, might come up with, "It's a Bonanza of Super Entertainment".

In anybody's language, it's a great rollicking, joyful screen-fare at the Reese this Friday and Saturday, June 25 and 26, with Kim Novak and Geo. Sanders in "The Amorous Adventures of Moll Flanders", the topsy turvy story of a ribald century that really should have been ashamed of itself.

What might be called the picture all the ladies would like to see is set for presentation this Sunday and Monday, June 27 and 28.

The ever popular Richard Chamberlain in "Joy in the Morning" with Yvette Mimieux graces the Movie Center screen.

Richard Chamberlain received the "Most Popular Actor of the Year" award from Photoplay Magazine for the third year in a row. "Joy in the Morning" is making a tremendous hit in all the large cities.

Another top all family weekend show treat is set for July 2 and 3, with Walt Disney's "Cinderella" as the top hit with Linda Saunders in "Mara of the Wilderness" in De Luxe color.

From Plato to the present, men have turned to the censor to suppress the expression of ideas which they considered hostile or dangerous.

Increasingly, however, the right of men to be heard, however unpopular their cause, has had its defenders.

New plantings of lettuce in the Salinas valley (salad bowl of the U.S.) are being cut severely because of lack of labor to harvest crops.

Tomato planting is also expected to drop sharply as the crop losses of growers mount.

California heretofore, has been supplying 30 per cent of the fresh tomatoes and 60 per cent of the processed tomatoes in the U.S. What the outcome will be since Congress is investigating Subsequently American courts have attempted to delineate exceptional circumstances in which freedom of expression may properly be limited. In so doing, they have preserved a broad area for the expression of dissent.

Once again the question has come up. New Hampshire is considering a bill which would prohibit "subversives" from speaking at state institutions, including universities.

President Eisenhower, have registered their opposition. Opponents of the measure spoke for academic freedom, even for ideas they themselves consider anathema.

One difficulty with such legislation is that it is hard to tell who is barred and who is not. There is also the ultimate question whether any opinion, however distasteful, should be barred if it does not create a clear and present danger to society.

We believe that the strength of America, including its university population, is such that it can withstand occasional exposure to the expression of political opinion with which virtually all Americans would disagree. We doubt that the dangers involved in such exposure are nearly as great as the dangers involved in such exposure are nearly as great as the dangers created by the attempt to suppress the expression of unpopular political opinion through censorship.

For roughly the same reasons we support the decision of postal authorities to destroy the lists of those receiving Communist propaganda from overseas. The authorities will return to a separate inquiry system. This should go far to alleviate the fear of possible harassment on the part of those who, for legitimate, scholarly, and non-ideological reasons, choose to receive such material.

One difficulty with such legislation is that it is hard to tell who is barred and who is not. There is also the ultimate question whether any opinion, however distasteful, should be barred if it does not create a clear and present danger to society.

School of Ag. Administrative Reorganization

Administrative reorganization of the University of Delaware's School of Agriculture will become effective July 1, President John A. Perkins announced today.

The changes will free the present dean, Dr. George M. Worri- low, from his administrative responsibilities in agriculture so that he may devote full time to his duties as vice president for university relations.

The new dean and director of the experiment station will be Dr. William E. McDaniel, currently director of resident instruction and chairman of the department of agricultural economics.

Dr. Donald F. Crossan, associate research professor of plant pathology, will become assistant dean and assistant director of the Agricultural Experiment Station.

Dr. Samuel M. Gwinn will continue a director of the Cooperative Extension Service.

Also effective July 1, in accordance with a trustee resolution, the School of Agriculture will change its name to the College of Agricultural Sciences. President Perkins also announced the establishment of the S. Hallock duPont School of Applied Agricultural Science and a Food Business Institute both within the framework of the College of Agricultural Sciences.

The establishment of the S. Hallock duPont School of Applied Agricultural Science provides special identity for students in the associate degree program in agriculture. This two-year terminal program is designed to give students a scientific background which will prepare them for technical positions in businesses servicing agricultural producers as well as in the production and distribution of agricultural products. Students may prepare for work in agricultural engineering, sales, marketing and food distribution, ornamental horticulture, animal and poultry science, plant science and soil and water conservation.

The Food Business Institute, to be conducted under the direction of Robert L. Bull, associate professor of agricultural economics, will offer a program in food business in cooperation with the College of Business and Economics.

"It is not widely enough known that the University of Delaware has gained a position of national and international leadership in food marketing and distribution," President Perkins said. "This program, financed largely by grants from benefiting businesses and the U. S. Department of Agriculture, assists food store chains and independent grocers and wholesalers. Educational programs in this important area are few, and it is our plan to continue not only our research and extension activities, but to seek financing for undergraduate and associate degree students in this field where good jobs are plentiful and trained applicants are few."

The curriculum in food business will equip graduates for employment with firms involved in food manufacture, wholesaling, retailing and allied fields which require food marketing specialists. The course of study will also include a background in arts, humanities and social sciences, together with a foundation in business administration. Special courses in food distribution during the junior and senior years and specific training experiences in food firm management will round out the program. The Institute also will continue to conduct research in wholesale and retail areas of food distribution. Service and educational programs will be conducted in cooperation with business firms and trade associations.

Although devoting full time to his responsibilities as vice president for university relations, Dr. Worri- low will also be a University Professor of Agriculture. Worri- low also coordinates the activities of the Divisions of University Extension and Urban Affairs and the Office of the Alumni and Public Relations and is the university's liaison officer with the General Assembly, state departments and other off-campus agencies.

A graduate of the University of Maryland, Dr. Worri- low came to Delaware in 1927. His initial university appointment was a temporary one as an assistant county agent in New Castle County, but the temporary job has spanned more than 38 years and has included positions as county agent, state 4-H club leader, director of the Agricultural Extension Service, dean and vice president.

In 1954 Dr. Worri- low received the honorary degree of Doctor of Agriculture from the University of Maryland for distinguished and effective service in furthering national education and research programs in the field of agriculture. Last year he was awarded the coveted annual award of the Philadelphia Soci-ty for Promoting Agriculture in recognition of his "outstanding contribution in agricultural education."

Dr. McDaniel, the newly appointed dean, holds his bachelor's degree in agriculture from the University of Missouri, his master's degree in agricultural economics from the University of Illinois and his Ph.D. from Minnesota. He has been a Delaware faculty member since 1951 and taught for four years prior to that time at the University of Minnesota. He was a captain in the U.S. Army during World War II and served in the airborne infantry.

Author of a number of publications in agricultural journals and professional publications, he was chosen the featured teacher of the year in the School of Agriculture in 1956. He is a member of the American Farm Economics Association, the American Society of Farm Managers and Rural Appraisers and the agricultural honorary society, Alpha Zeta.

Assistant Dean Crossan, a Delaware alumnus, returned to the faculty of his alma mater in 1954 as an assistant research professor of plant pathology.

A native of Wilmington, Dr. Crossan earned his undergraduate degree with distinction in 1950. He received his master's and doctor's degrees at North Carolina State University, where he was a research assistant.

In 1961, Dr. Crossan received the Lindback award for excellence in teaching. He also has represented the School of Agriculture on the Honors, Student Personal Problems, Library, Parent's Day, and Self-Study Committees and held a three-year term on the University Council.

A member of Sigma Xi, he served as Delaware chapter vice president in 1962-63 and as president in 1963-64. He also is a member of Alpha Zeta, the American Phytopathological Society and Phi Kappa Phi. During World War II, Dr. Crossan served with the U.S. Air Force, earning the Air Medal and the Oak Leaf Cluster.

Pesticide Residues Insignificant

Farmers are doing an excellent job of keeping unwanted pesticides out of the foods we eat, according to Frank E. Boys, extension specialist in agricultural chemicals at the University of Delaware.

Amounts of pesticide residues in the American food supply are insignificant from a health standpoint. This was borne out by recent findings of the Food and Drug Administration, U. S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. Pesticide levels found in test samples were generally less than one percent of the safe legal tolerance. Many of the most commonly used pesticides were not found at all.

The Food and Drug Administration made public the results of the latest of its continuing "total diet" studies undertaken to discover the quantity of pesticides in all kinds of food and drink consumed daily. Through the tests they evaluate the results of all efforts made to keep pesticide levels below those required by law. If any pesticides are getting into the food supply in excessive amounts, prompt action can be taken, says Boys.

The studies are made of samples collected from grocery stores in Boston, Kansas City and Los Angeles. The groceries that are selected are representative of those found in a nutritionally satisfactory diet of a typical 16 to 19 year old boy. A boy of this age is usually the biggest eater in most American families.

New procedures, says Boys, have made the Food and Drug Administration tests for pesticide residues even more sensitive. Therefore, the results of the 1964 tests, showing pesticide levels to be lower than in earlier studies, are particularly significant.

FENCE TALK

with George K. Vapaa

Agriculture on the urban fringe needs the protection offered by good planning and zoning, says Professor Mark E. Singley of Rutgers University in New Jersey. Too often farmers have taken the negative attitude and argued that planning and zoning result in a loss of freedom of action, without examining the alternative. Also, all too often planners neglect the needs of agriculture, he adds.

The full text of his talk can be obtained by calling our County Extension Office, telephone 736-1448. A mere listing must suffice here:

1. Agricultural Zoning of top grade farm soils.
2. Purchase of development rights (easements) to continue the "open space" uses of land—preferably in tax paying crop or livestock uses.
3. Density zoning to reduce possible rural-urban conflicts. Recreation "buffer areas" then become possible between homes and farms.

"Farmers in New Jersey are the guinea pigs of rural America when it comes to encroaching developments," says Singley. He told our State Planning Conference at Newark that we can expect the same problems in Delaware before too long. I was tremendously pleased to find that he agrees the problems can be solved. We can have a strong competitive agriculture with compatible industry for many years to come with planning.

American Agriculture is a huge user of energy, reminds Malcolm McVickar manager of a large chemical company. The engines used by U.S. farmers have more than 200 million horsepower. This is more than the combined power of mechanical engines and turbines in the Nation's factories, private and commercial aircraft, railroads, merchant ships and mines.

When you come right down to "brass tacks," farming is an energy-consuming industry. Growing plants convert solar energy through photosynthesis. The grain in a 100-bushel corn crop contains somewhere in the neighborhood of 0.4 percent of the radiant energy falling on the crop during its growing period. Each bushel of corn in turn contains approximately the same number of calories as a third pound of crude oil.

The wise use of fertilizers can increase the "farm energy conversion factor" in two ways: (1) a more healthy plant system and (2) an increase in size of plant, including leaf surface.

"Before condemning the use of chemicals by American Agriculture, we should look at conditions in the Soviet Union, our principal competitor in the international arena. One of Khrushchev's big worries was the lack of agricultural production and that failure still is a problem in Russia and other Communist nations. A major reason for the lag in food production in these countries is evident. All lack pesticides. The average Russian consumer spends more than 50 percent of his disposable income for food."

"In contrast, the ability of American agriculture, with chemical controls, to produce in abundance is a potent weapon in the ideological struggle now in progress between Democracy and Communism. It holds out hope in a world where hunger and the threat of hunger pursues hundreds of millions, relentlessly and without mercy."

The quotes are by Representative Jamie Whitten of Mississippi, who is chairman of the House Agricultural appropriation subcommittee.

Innovation (a new idea) is a delicate flower. It nearly always germinates into a hostile world. So we need tact and intelligence to bring a major change to fruition particularly when it involves people.

Luckily, there are five easy guidelines for change. Call me and I'll spell them out on a special postal card.

Ever wondered why so many successful purebred breeders have such attractive farms? One reason is that they can spend part of the money they get from livestock sales to beautify their farmstead. Another reason is that they beautify their farms to help achieve success in selling their purebred livestock.

One of the first requirements of good salesmanship and success is to let folks know you are in business. A farm sign tells prospective customers where you're located. It says you're proud of your herd. It's a friendly invitation to stop and see the herd.

We keep getting more good roads and along with them apparently more bad manners. The Commerce secretary says that in 1963 Washington State spent over $400,000 picking up trash, Maine over $300,000 and in New York, the bill runs as high as $300 a mile in certain areas. The figures for Delaware: $63,168.00 for 4,235 miles.

The USDA will hire "at least 1,150" boys and girls (aged 16 to 21) for the summer to provide them with jobs and work experience. Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman said that USDA agencies will contact their local State Employment Security Offices and begin hiring immediately. All positions are to be filled as soon as possible. The secretary noted that preference will be given those "who need jobs the most because of educational or economic disadvantages."

Farmers were reminded today to take care of conserving-acreage provisions of the 1965 diversion programs. These apply to those who signed up for feed grains or wheat.

Russell C. Bowdle, chairman of Kent Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation County Committee, explained that the participating farmer agrees to devote acreage to conserving uses equal to the farm's normal base acreage in addition to the acreage signed up for diversion in the programs.

If the farmer signed up in both the feed grain and the wheat programs, he would need to increase his farm's 1965 acreage of cropland devoted to conservation use above the conservation base by no less than the sum of the acreage signed up for diversion to conserving uses under both programs (including the basis 11.11 per cent of the wheat-allotment acres for which no diversion payments are available).

Failure to meet the conserving use or any other provision of the diversion programs could mean loss of all program payments for that crop — price-support loans and payments, wheat marketing certificates, and diversion payments.

Services to Kent County farmers will be improved while administrative and operating costs are reduced if "Project Simpler" attains its objectives.

Instead of relaxing efforts already yielding results, the Kent County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee and their office staff at Dover, aim to intensify their search for simpler and more economical ways to give even better service in the farm programs.

This is the objective of the nationwide ASCS "Project Simpler," now being launched, according to Russell C. Bowdle, chairman.

"With a bigger workload in the county," said Chairman Bowdle, "we've managed by simplification and increasing efficiency to maintain our employment without any increase."

"That's not going to keep us from continually asking ourselves, as President Johnson recently requested: "What is it costing to do this work? Is there a way to do it as well or better that would cost less?"

Besides asking all ASCS employees to suggest practical simplifications in their own work, Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman has invited farm and business organization leaders throughout the country to make suggestions. The Delaware ASC State and Kent County Committees have followed this up with invitations to leaders of State and County organizations. The Kent ASCS Office welcomes such suggestions from all of our farmers and others it serves too. All suggestions received will be considered.

Highlights Sighted For 1965 Feed Grain

Final reports on the 1965 feed grain program sign up confirm a new record in numbers of enrolled farms, intended acreage diversion and amount of feed grain base acreage on signed farms, according to Paul Hastings, chairman, Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation State Committee.

Throughout the nation, sign up totals for the program show 1,489,222 farms enrolled, 36,722,900 acres for diversion, and base acreage of 87,024,400 acres on signed farms.

In Delaware, 1,235 farms are enrolled in the 1965 feed grain program. 30,423 acres are to be diverted, and base acreages on signed farms total 54,962 acres. Of the agreed total diversion, the majority is from corn base acreage.

The chairman pointed out that participating in the feed grain program is voluntary. If producers carry out the program provisions as signed up, they qualify for acreage - diversion payments, price - support loans and price - support payments. Substitution of feed grain for wheat is possible, but the extent to which the substitution provision is used won't be known until program performance is checked prior to harvest this fall.

If farmers keep their intentions of diverting 36.7 million acres, production of around 2 billion bushels of feed grains will have been averted, and carry-over stocks could be further reduced by the end of the 1965-66 marketing year. Peak end-of-marketing year feed grain carry-over for 1960-61, was 3,188 million bushels. At the end of the current 1964-65 marketing year, the estimated carry-over is 2,145 million bushels, a reduction of more than a billion bushels, or more than one-third. The 1965 program should result in additional reduction in feed grain stocks, officials have said.

With Eleanor Voshell

Why starch anything anyway? We use starch to make our clothes look fresh again. A person's face is noticed first when first impressions are formed. The second part of appearance noticed is a person's clothing. Looking fresh is always in fashion.

There are three types of laundry starches available today: dry, liquid, and aerosol. Generally speaking, their formulations all include a perfume, an ironing aid and a preservative, in addition to the washable, vegetable base starch sizing agent.

What does consumer preference show about these different types? Studies have shown that 80 per cent of all women in the United States use laundry starch. Forty two per cent of all women use dry starch. The percentage of all women who use liquid starch has dropped a bit, to 17 per cent. And during the past four years, the percentage of all women using spray starch has risen from one per cent to 31 per cent, where it appears to be leveling off.

Why does it seem that so much starch is left in the aerosol can with no way to get it out? The aerosol system is assembled with enough gas to force out the product. When a starch can is properly held, the gas, being lighter than the starch, sits atop it and forces it down, then up the tube and out the nozzle. If the can is tilted too far from the vertical position or if the nozzle is not pointed toward the red dot, only the gas is around the bottom of the tube and it is ejected instead of the product. Then the product, in this instance starch, remains in the can and there is no way to get it out. So, in this case, it's very important to follow directions carefully.

What can be done about starch build-up on the iron?

A new report states: coating the iron results not only from the starch formation and iron temperature, but also from the method and material of the last cleaning of the iron. Research has shown that if an iron is cleaned with a detergent or household cleaner, and not thoroughly rinsed, it is very likely to coat when starch is next used. This must be a result of chemical interaction between the detergent or household cleaner, and not thoroughly rinsed, it is very likely to coat when starch is next used. This must be a result of chemical interaction between the detergent or cleanser remaining on the iron, the iron sole plate and the starch.

Researchers found that if the iron is cleaned with scouring cleanser, it will coat with starch immediately on the next contact, even though thoroughly rinsed. However, if the sole plate is cleaned thoroughly with baking soda and rinsed, no iron coating occurs with good starch products.

KEITH S. BURGESS — Sports Editor

Taylor, Hackett Still Competing In Track

Many times a student in junior high and high school will spend years practicing on a band instrument only to lay it aside after graduation. Usually, they are playing better as seniors than they have done previously. Thus, they quit when they are just starting on the road to musical maturity.

This is often the case in sports in America. One group retires athletically at age 22, when they finish college. Another segment calls it quits at 18 after high school. This greatly hinders our country in international competitions such as the U.S.-U.S.S.R. track meet, the Pan-American Games and the greatest athletic spectacle of them all, the Olympic Games. Many great foreign athletes such as world record holders, Peter Snell, of New Zealand; Ron Clarke, of Australia; and Michael Jazy, of France, are in their late twenties. Jazy, at 29, recently astounded the track world with a blistering 3.53 and a fraction time in the mile run. Other greats continue to set world records for several years after they reach the age of thirty.

Two of the finest track athletes ever developed here, Dwight Hackett and Joe Taylor, are still in competition, although both have to battle the handicap of shift work. Joe works at Seaford's DuPont plant. Dwight, a resident of the New Castle area, is employed at Tidewater, Delaware City.

Hackett and Taylor both did well at the 16th annual Delaware State Open held at Baynard Stadium, Wilmington, last week.

Hackett ran two miles in 10:41 which is his second fastest two miles.

Taylor, at 165 pounds, gives away up to 100 pounds in the weight events. However, he works hard and his technique is good. At Baynard Joe was second in the discus and fourth in the shot put.

The writer is endeavoring to get a few cross-country prospects to enter some of the night Olympic Development meets to be held at Baynard Stadium this summer. Possibilities to date are Gerry Garey, Gary Simpson, and Nick Morris.

Ination of the cards for all registered voters in the state will save at least $20,000 in New Castle County alone since legislative reapportionment would have required the issuance of at least 170,000 new cards in New Castle County.

Under provision of H.B. 178, the application for registration and transfer becomes one and the same form, Hutchison explained.

He said the bill eliminates any possibility of a person making a transfer when he needs a new registration. Persons not on the registration list of a particular county have to apply for a new registration, rather than transferring from the old voting place.

Under the new procedures, a person may request a transfer from one election district to another within the county by mail or another person may request the transfer for him.

In either case, Hutchison said, a transfer card is mailed to the voter with a sheet of instructions and a self-addressed envelope.

The voter himself must provide the information asked on the card and mail it in. Another person, although requesting that a transfer form be mailed to a voter, can not provide the information. This can be done only by the voter.

Party affiliation changes may also be requested by mail or in person, but only by the voter himself.

The department, after the voter provides the required information, checks out voter's signature against the one already on file to determine that the change request was legitimate.

After the transfer is made or party affiliation changed, the voter is notified by the department to assure that there has been no fraudulent attempt by others to make changes in another's registration record.

Although transfers can be made by mail or personal request at any time, party affiliation changes can be made only before the 4th Saturday in July in a year of a general election.

Some technical changes also have been made on the application for registration or transfer. These provide for some additional information and make revisions so that the same form can be used for both purposes.

Stuart Ober, a former discus man for H.H.S. and DePauw University, is touring Europe this summer. Ober's "dream" trip started when he sailed from Montreal recently. His first port of call is Liverpool. Eventually, he will tour by plane, bus, river and lake steamers Belgium, Holland, Luxembourg, Germany, Austria, Switzerland, Trieste, Monte Carlo, San Remo, Italy and France. His itinerary is an extensive one that will take him to practically every major tourist attraction in eastern Europe. The two-month-long odyssey ends on August 15th with a KLM jet flight from LeBerget Airport, Paris to New York.

Frank Glazier is busy mapping strategy for the Blue-Gold All-Star game, which at this writing, is still two months away. Meanwhile, our spies inform us, a big high school, Memorial High, of East Paterson, N. J., is attempting to entice Glazier to cast his fortunes with them. Since he is an ambitious mentor with designs on a college coaching career, it seems very likely that a small school such as Harrington can not hope to hold him indefinitely. In fact, a report reached this desk that the New Jerseyites have offered the successful Lion coach a package deal, replete with fringe benefits adding up to five figures.

After the completion of Monday night's games a look at the standings discloses that the 1964 champion Moose Club nine is back on top again as the result of a victory over the Legion team. The two squads were deadlocked with 4-2 records at the last writing. The leaders also won two other titles to up their seasonal log to seven wins and two losses.

year as an emergency measure by the General Assembly, only provides money for "an addition or additions."

He said the new structure would have to be connected to the present courthouse, or else another bond issue authorization would be required. If so, it would be the third authorization requested by the Levy Court on this project. The first request, for a $500,000 bond issue, was introduced in 1963 and passed in the House, but the General Assembly adjourned before the Senate could take action.

Land acquisition for an addition also would take General Assembly action, for the Levy Court has no power of condemnation to spread either east or south of the present building. Private property stands on both sides.

Meanwhile, no action will be taken until Bivens, the city and the Levy Court meet—probably next week.

Bill Porter, is pitching and playing right field for Kent Correctional Institution in a fast Dover Softball League. At this point we must hastily explain that he is not an inmate there. In fact only three of his teammates are incarcerated. In a recent win over Edgehill Barbers Porter led the batting with two hits in three attempts. Unfortunately, another newspaper reported that "Bob" Porter had the bingles. KCI recently knocked off league-leading Carl Kings, Inc. of Camden. Just after another former H.H.S. athlete, a relative of Bill's stated emphatically that such an eventuality would "never happen".

Let us say that as of June 1st two prospective starters are of approximately equal ability. One lad decides to go to a summer basketball camp in the hope of picking up a few extra pointers. These pointers may strengthen the weak points of his game and may make his strong points even stronger. If this lad then comes home and works on his game from time to time during the summer he will probably get the starting nod over the other boy, who doesn't touch a ball until he reports for practice in November or December.

In short when going out for sports give yourself every advantage you possibly can. You are bound to profit by this course of action.

John Greenhaugh, Sam Knox, Ellis Myer and Bob Matthews had the right idea when they spent several days at Everett Case's basketball school for boys in Raleigh, N. C., recently.

Everett Case is one of the best known and most successful basketball coaches in America. Case stepped down last winter as head coach at North Carolina State.

The boys stayed in dormitories on the North Carolina State campus and worked out daily on three courts at the State Fair arena.

Approximately 150 boys took the course, the week the Harrington youths were there. The cagers were shown how to play the game and instructed to play home and try to put into action the various moves explained. Each boy was given a final test and graded on the various phases of the game such as ball-handling, dribbling, shooting, passing, etc.

Litter's Double Cost

Speaking of the Blue-Gold football game, the place to get tickets is Peck Bros. Southern States on Harrington Avenue.

This is undoubtedly true. But if the leads learned just a few good extra moves they may be able to incorporate them into their games and turn a close contest or two into victory.

Senior League Baseball News

Two weeks ago the 1st National and People's Bank teams were tied for first place with 3-1 logs. In the interim the bank nines have played each other twice and the result has been cliff-hanger baseball. In the first contest Ted Layton's First National unit edged Buck Thompson's People's Bank group 5-4 in an extra inning. In the second setto the People's team rallied in the final stanza to get an 8-8 tie. It's not possible for two teams to wind up a two game series much closer than that.

Jack Dill's Merchants combine made two gallant tries to win their first contest of the year and just fell short. The Merchants dropped a 9-7 duke to Jim Carroll's Shaw's and fought the first-place 1st National Bankers to a 7-7 tie. One of the Senior League tie games will be played tonight (Friday).

Thanks this week to Mrs. Olin Davis for the loan of a mower and to Howard Brown for driving it.

Lion Cagers Attend Summer Basketball Camp

What makes a coach pick one lad over another when choosing a starting lineup? In basketball the leaders look for height, speed, shooting ability, stamina, coolness under fire, perseverance, savvy, dribbling skill, the knack of passing and feinting, the willingness to sacrifice personal glory for the good of the team.

Perfect days come, if ever, in June, according to the poet. Air conditioning makes perfect days all summer long, says Miss Coral K. Morris, extension home management specialist at the University of Delaware.

Comfort is not the only advantage offered by air conditioning, she says. Home-making is far easier because most of the dirt and dust is kept out of the house and also because you feel more energetic in the comfortable atmosphere. The entire family sleeps better and awakes more refreshed with better appetites. Since the majority of irritants are filtered out of the air, allergy and asthma sufferers are given real relief.

The cooling mechanism of all air conditioners is the same, says Miss Morris. Air passes through filters that remove large dust particles, and then over a series of refrigeration coils where it is cooled and dehumidified. A fan blows the cooled air into your house.

To cool your home, you can choose between installing one or several room air conditioners or installing a central air conditioning system. The best type for your particular home depends on the comparative cost and the number of rooms which will require long periods of cooling. If only one or two rooms or one side of the house becomes uncomfortably hot, the added cost of a central system may not be necessary.

The cost of central air conditioning depends partly on the type of heating system you now have, says Miss Morris. Houses with forced warm air heating are the easiest and least expensive to convert because the same fan and ductwork used for heating can be used for cooling. The size of the ducts must be checked since the movement of cool air requires larger ducts than needed for heating. Enough return air ducts and adequate attic ventilation are other factors which must be checked.

The cost of room air conditioners will depend largely on the size of the unit or units needed. A dealer can determine exactly the cooling capacity a unit should have to properly cool your house. The size of the room, the size and number of windows and doors, the exposure to the sun, the extent of landscaping, the wall materials and insulation, the use made of the areas and even the number of people normally using each room—all of these are factors having a bearing on the size of the unit needed.

The cooling capacity of an air conditioner refers to the amount of heat it can remove from a specific space, says Miss Morris. Cooling capacity is expressed in B.T.U.'s or British Thermal Units. One B.T.U. is the amount of heat required to raise the temperature of one pound of water one degree Fahrenheit. In air conditioning, a B.T.U. refers to the removal of this amount of heat.

Comfort during the summer depends on more than a blast of cold air. Your air conditioner should provide clean air, low humidity, and a slight air movement as well. Obviously, if the unit is not large enough, you will get neither the cooling nor the dehumidifying you want. On the other hand, if the unit is too large, it will cool to the desired temperature so fast that the unit will shut off before it has had a chance to remove the humidity. An oversized unit will also be more expensive to begin with and more costly to run.

Before selecting any unit, be sure to check for any restrictions on installation and use. Some municipal governments

Still-incomplete returns from the 1956 Cancer Crusade appeal showed the drive slightly ahead of the same period last year. So far, contributions throughout the state have raised $109,397, against $107,342 in 1964. Of the current total, Kent County has so far raised $6,808.55 and Sussex has contributed $13,555.11. Returns are still being accepted and tallied.

Dr. Frank T. O'Brien, professional education chairman, reported that more than 50 physicians were participating in the statewide speakers bureau; that scholarships had been awarded six University of Delaware undergraduates, and that institutes and professional forums had been held for physicians and nurses during the year. Of special interest is the recent start of the oral diagnosis procedure among state dentists in cooperation with the State Dental Society and Board of Health.

Peter VanWyck was reelected lay delegate to the American Cancer Society for a two-year term. A Felix duPont, Jr. was named new crusade chairman. In addition to the officers, members chosen for the executive committee for one year are: Drs. Arminio, O'Brien, Herbert B. Bagan, Leslie W. Whitney, and Paul R. Reed, Mrs. Stuart P. Miller, VanWyck and duPont.

Principal speaker for the dinner meeting was Dr. John F. King, former medical director of the Delaware Cancer Society, who is now associate director of the Strang Clinic, New York City diagnostic center.

have restricting ordinances. If you live in an apartment, the management probably has rules concerning wiring and installation. Most important, says Miss Morris, check on your available electrical supply.

Some units will operate on 115 volts, but they usually have a low cooling capacity. Be very careful not to overload the circuit if you use a regular household outlet. Larger air conditioners operate on 220 volts and must have special wiring. Consult a qualified electrician or your public utility company about changes in wiring, advises Miss Morris.

Look for NEMA — National Electrical Manufacturers' Association—Certification seal on room air conditioners and the ARI—Air Conditioning and Refrigeration Institute — seal on central conditioning systems when you shop. They represent the manufacturers' guarantees of tested quality.
