200 At University Days Hear of Developing Senses

People spend nearly half their waking time hearing someone or something, yet very few listen, said Dr. Robert Haakenson, manager of community relations at Smith, Kline and French Laboratories, Philadelphia. He told nearly 200 women attending University Days for Women at the University of Delaware, Sept. 9 and 10, that listening is hearing with understanding — a vitally important art.

"The finest thing one human can do for another is to listen with sympathy," Dr. Haakenson added. Sympathetic listening is an important factor in all areas of human contact. The art of listening must be developed by anyone who hopes to communicate ideas or to persuade another to take a particular course of action.

Dr. Haakenson described the bad habits of poor listeners. "Do not decide the subject is dull or too hard. Your attention is lost before the speaker has a chance. Do not create or tolerate distraction—even if you must be rude occasionally," he recommended.

Bias or prejudice, or any over-enthusiasm, will interfere with understanding. Dr. Haakenson asked, "Do you 'see red' when you hear about a particular idea? You have stopped thinking and listening at that point."

Understanding the importance of listening and how much we all need to improve is the first step forward. Pay sympathetic attention, the speaker advised, but do not lose your own objectivity. Be a creative listener; decide what is significant, test the speaker's reasoning for yourself, but always be sympathetic.

"Silent Cal" Coolidge is supposed to have listened his way into every elective office he held, including the presidency," Dr. Haakenson concluded. "Develop your own art of listening."

To further develop the theme of University Days for Women, "Developing Our Senses," Robert Ennis, instructor in the department of art and art history at the University of Delaware, spoke on the "art of seeing."

Miss Beth Peterson, home economist, E. L. DuPont de Nemours, related many and varied fabric textures to the rarely mentioned but very important "sense of touch."

In another program highlight, Mrs. Ernesta Ballard, executive secretary of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, explained the rewards of "Gardening Indoors." In a later workshop she explained in more detail the kinds of house plants appropriate for various homes.

Workshops and classes both days developed specific areas of particular interest to women. Listening to music, selecting paintings, refinishing furniture, managing money, decorative stitching, adding food glamour and using color decoration, were some of the classes the women could attend.

A tour of several Newark homes, modern and traditional, and a bus tour of the campus also highlighted University Days for Women.

Women from 18 to 80 participated in this year's program, according to Mrs. Alice King, state leader of home economics extension, which sponsors the annual event.

Discover Wonderful Del.

Couched in the heart of Brandywine Hundred in New Castle County is perhaps the most unique community in the east. It is known as Arden, Delaware.

Touring Arden, the visitor will find a quaint assembly of black-ribbon roads weaving through a crest of trees of great variety and lawns which reflect individual pride.

Founded in 1900 by a sculptor, Frank Stephens and an architect, Will Price, Arden was established basically on the theory that land being God-given, should not be the property of any one individual. But it was determined that those using the land should pay for the use. And, if the full earning power of the land was taken no other taxes would be needed to operate the community. This theory has been upheld until this day.

Friends of the founders, many of them artists and writers formed the nucleus of Arden Village in its earlier days.

Arden is widely noted for its fine history in the field of community theatrical work. Its outdoor theatres formed the settings for many of Shakespeare's plays and the Guild Hall stage was the scene of many of the modern productions of George Bernard Shaw and many other Irish playwrights.

Geographically, Arden is located about six miles north of Wilmington, and covers an area of approximately 163 acres. Nearly half of this area is devoted to community use—roads, greens and woodland parks.

The land is held in Deed of Trust and there trustees are responsible for seeing that the provisions of the deed are observed. No one in Arden owns his land. He is a leaseholder for a period of 99 years. He pays an annual rent to the community for the amount of land his lease embraces. There are no other taxes except personal ones, such as income taxes.

In its early days, Arden was a colony of artistically-bent individuals, mostly summer residents. They were people of strong beliefs, and some defied convention. Among them could be found pacifists, athletes, communists, agnostics and anarchists. As a result, Arden has been dubbed "radical" and its residents as "eccentric."

The unconventional is still present in Arden contributing to its charm, but the great majority of Ardenites today have nothing to set them apart from other Delawareans except the beauty of their surroundings.

Narrow, winding streets bear picturesque names such as Lover's Lane, The Sweep, The Hiway and Sherwood Road. Once every 20 years each street is barricaded for a few hours and a sign "Private Road — No Throughfare" is a legal reminder that the State has no claim on these byways.

As Brandywine Hundred grows in great proportions, Arden remains a pacific oasis of green. Quietly active, personal yet detached and quaint in its customs, Arden is another small wonder and another good reason to discover Wonderful Delaware.

Summer Session U. of D. Enrollment Sets New Record

Enrollment in the University of Delaware's 1965 summer session smashed all previous records, Registrar Robert Gebhardt disclosed this week.

A total of 4,801—31% and 1,139 students higher than last year—attended either the first or second semester on-campus classes or enrolled for courses in the Rehoboth Beach and Winterthur programs.

"The extent of this growth is perhaps best understood when compared to the total university enrollment of the fall of 1955-56, just ten years ago," Gebhardt said. "Our first semester enrollment for the regular academic year then was only 55 students larger than this year's summer school."

Comparisons with previous summer school enrollments are even more startling. In the summer of 1955 only 876 students enrolled and by 1960, the enrollment had not yet doubled that number. The first major jump came in 1963, from 1,786 to 2,650, and more than 1,000 have been added each summer since that year.

1965 Corn Price Support Announced

Price-support loans for the 1965 corn crop will average $1.22 per bushel in Delaware, Paul Hastings, chairman, Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation State Committee, has announced.

The 1965 total county corn support rates are based on a national average total support price of $1.25 per bushel, consisting of a price-support payment of 20 cents per bushel and a loan rate averaging $1.05 per bushel. Since the price-support payment is uniform, the difference on levels of price support among counties and individual farmers is reflected only in the loan rates.

The average county loan rate of $1.22 per bushel is for 1965-crop corn grading No. 3, or No. 4 on the factor of test weight only but otherwise grading No. 3 except for moisture. Premiums and discounts for other grades and qualities are unchanged from those in effect in 1964.

The chairman reminded growers that price support on the 1965 crop of corn is available only to farmers participating in the 1965 feed grain program. The support will be carried out through farm and warehouse-stored loans, purchases and price-support payments. Loans will be based on actual production, while the price-support payment will be based on the normal production of the harvested acres.

Application for price-support loans and purchases may be made at the ASCS County Office. Unless demand is made sooner, loans will mature on May 16, 1966.

Terry Taps Brother For State Post

Gov. Charles L. Terry Jr. has appointed his brother to the Commission on the Modernization of State Laws and a Wilmington city councilman to the Wilmington Public Building Commission.

N. Maxson Terry, Dover attorney who resigned as chairman of the State Highway Department after his brother became governor, fills a long-standing vacancy on the Commission for Modernization of State Laws. He serves at the pleasure of the governor.

Wilmington Councilman Marcello Rispoli fills a vacancy on the Public Building Commission which was created by the death last month of Edward R. Hensel, director of the City License Bureau. The term runs until April 25, 1968.

Terry's office also announced the reappointment of five members of state commissions, including three to the Commission on Children and Youth.

Renamed to four-year terms on that commission were Dr. Ruth M. Laws of Dover, state supervisor of research and planning for vocational education; Dr. James T. Baldini of Newark, former president of the Delaware Association for Retarded Children, and the Very Rev. Msgr. Thomas J. Reese, director of the Catholic Welfare Guild.

Thomas W. Murray Sr. of Dover was reappointed to a three-year term on the Delaware Aeronautics Commission and State Archivist Leon deValinger Jr. to another 10-year term on the New Castle Historic Buildings Commission.

FENCE TALK

with George K. Vapaa

Rural areas planning got a boost at the White House Conference on natural beauty this spring. Out of it has come a report to the president which lists the recommendations of 15 panel groups.

The panel on "The Farm Landscape" chaired by Dr. Edward H. Graham listed ten recommendations. They are aimed at creating a more attractive America thru planning and management of our rural resources to provide for the needs of our people.

1. Use of land capability classification and other resource inventories be made a condition for local and area planning, land-use determinations, and zoning.

2. Total land-use planning be a means toward orderly development and enhancement of the landscape.

3. That guidelines be developed for zoning, tax structures, ordinances, easements, development rights, etc., that would protect open space and prime agricultural land.

4. That consideration be given to a system of grants or tax concessions on land retained in agricultural or open space use.

5. That in all land retirement and cropland adjustment programs, preservation, and enhancement of natural beauty be considered an associated purpose.

6. That preservation of natural beauty be made an associated purpose of Federal programs of resource development and management.

7. Local leadership initiate and make more effective rural-urban cooperation through soil and water conservation districts, small watershed projects, resource conservation and development projects, planning boards, and other local organizations.

8. Professional training, research, and education services in our college and university system be expanded to deal with problems of landscape as a part of the total human environment.

9. Public land-administering agencies include natural beauty as a purpose in the management and treatment of all public land and water resources.

10. Nationwide recognition of outstanding farm landscapes as "agricultural landmarks", comparable to the recognition accorded historic and natural history sites.

A nationwide search for the largest "spud" in the United States has been launched, according to word in the American Vegetable Grower. A prize of a $100 government bond will be awarded to the grower of the winning potato. The potato will be exhibited at the 29th annual conference of the Potato Chip Institute International to be held in January 1966, at Las Vegas, Nev.

The contest is open to any grower. Entries should be sent to Potato Chip Institute International, 1940 Hanna Building, Cleveland, Ohio. All entries must be delivered to that address Jan. 1-15, 1966.

Our University of Delaware agronomists are recommending these small grain varieties for fall planting:

Rye—Balbo, Abuzzi.
Winter Oats—Lee (cold-proof), Norline, Forkedear.

Barley—Wong, Early Wong, Pennrad.

Wheat—Redcoat, Tayland, Seneca, Pennoll.

They are also urging Delaware farmers to buy good seed that is: Cleaned to remove weed seed, other crop seed and inert matter. Treated to prevent the carrying of seed-borne diseases. Tested and tagged. Certified by all means.

California has successfully tested a machine that can pick sweet corn without injury. Rubber bars strip the ears from the stalk, dropping them into foam rubber padded chutes leading to rubber conveyor belts.

A new fluorescent lamp has been developed which may play an important part in plant growth, where added (artificial) light is needed; and in after harvest ripening of such crops as tomatoes.

This is called a wide-spectrum lamp which gives a more even and constant distribution of the waves of light found in the spectrum.

In the case of green tomatoes the light causes certain chemical changes which permit the tomato to develop a true vine ripened color. The ripening process, under this wide-spectrum tube, also appreciably increases the shelf life of the treated tomatoes.

A potato harvester, developed in Great Britain, uses X-rays to separate stones and clods from the potatoes. A description of the operation of the harvester was broadcast by BBC as follows: "The mixture (potatoes, stones, clods, etc.) discharged by the harvester drops through horizontal beams of X-rays. The X-rays pass through the potatoes but are interrupted by stones and clods.

"When the beams are interrupted, sorting fingers move aside and allow stones or clods to fall to the ground; the rest of the time these fingers stick out and deflect the potatoes down the chute."

If peach trees were not sprayed for borer during the summer, use paradichlorobenzene crystals (PDB) between Sept. 20 and Oct. 5. Poor control will result if treatment is delayed until the soil temperature becomes low. Remove weeds and level soil around trunk. Apply the PDB crystals in a band around the tree trunk, keeping the material 1 1/2 inches from the trunk. Mound the soil around the base of the tree to a depth of 5-6 inches. Use 3/4 ounce of the crystals for 3-4 year-old trees. On older trees use 1-1 1/2 ounces. Level the mound next spring.

Try to store new corn under insect-free conditions. Brush walls and ceiling of storage area and vacuum floor to remove old grain from cracks. Spray walls and ceiling with methoxychlor or malathion. A grain protectant (premium grade malathion or pyrethrum) can be added to the grain as it is placed in the bin. Use according to the manufacturer's recommendations. Screen out rats, mice and birds. Untreated corn that becomes infested with insects should be fumigated. Use commercially available fumigants and follow directions on label. Follow safety precautions listed by manufacturer.

Blue to gray colored slime molds are appearing. Control by mowing, removing heavy grass clippings, and raking infested areas.

A lawn heavily infested with chinch bugs was observed north of Wilmington this week. A large portion of the lawn had been killed and the remainder was under attack by great numbers of adults and immature bugs. Spray with Diabion (3 oz. actual/1000 sq. ft.) in at least 5 gallons of water. A second spray may be advisable in a week or 10 days.

Roses—Cane cankers are common; prune and burn. Rhododendron—Canker and die-back are increasing; prune and burn.

Tuliptree scale crawlers (the stage susceptible to insecticides) were observed Sept. 4 on tulip trees. Treat at once with a mixture of DDT and malathion. Repeat spray in 7-10 days. Wet all twigs and branches thoroughly. The magnolia scale should be producing living young at this time. Control with the same materials.

Gals Saddle Pals 4-H Club To Sponsor Parade

National 4-H Week begins Saturday, September 25. It is on this date that the Guys and Gals Saddle Pals 4-H Club of Milford has decided to sponsor held in Milford and will begin a parade. The parade will be promptly at 3:00 P. M. This is open only to 4-H Club Members and leaders in the Kent and Sussex Counties. Invitations have been sent to all of the many clubs with the hope that all will participate. The idea has been well received and it is felt there will be a good response. It is planned to have four divisions: Fancy Floats, plays, and Mounted Groups. Anyone not receiving their invitations should promptly call Mrs. Arlene Walls of Milford. (422-9773-evenings).

The Saddle Pals Club is quickly becoming well-known throughout these two counties as a real pace setter! Only two years old, this club has already sponsored two very successful horse shows. Their third how will be in the coming spring. Why not plan to watch for their notice and either exhibit your horse if you are a 4-H member, or plan to come and see the many young people so interested in horse showing?

Meanwhile, do enter our parade. If you are not a 4-H member, then by all means do attend the parade. We will be happy to have you visit Milford.

FFA to Hold Meats Judging Contest

The Delaware State FFA Meats Judging Contest has been set for September 23, at the White Packing Company in Lewes. In announcing the date, Ralph P. Barwick, executive secretary of the Delaware Future Farmers of America Association said the annual event is used as a teaching tool to help FFA members become judges of livestock, and have a broader understanding of the relation of the live beef animal to the finished product.

Teams from vocational agriculture classes from throughout the state will compete in the event. They will judge classes of beef, pork and lamb, and attempt to identify various meat cuts.

Collison Candidate For Regional FFA Star State Farmer Award

GEORGE A. MORROW

Livestock Specialist Named In College of Ag.

George A. Morrow, former research assistant with the Department of Agricultural Economics at the University of Delaware, is returning to the university as an assistant professor of animal science and extension livestock specialist. His appointment was announced by Dr. W. E. McDaniel, Dean of the College of Agricultural Sciences. He will teach livestock courses; conduct research in the department of animal sciences and agricultural biochemistry and carry out his extension service assignment in the College of Agricultural Sciences.

Morrow will join the University of Delaware staff on Jan. 1, 1966, after completing requirements for his PhD in animal science at Virginia Polytechnic Institute. A native of Wyoming, Morrow earned his BS degree in animal husbandry at the University of Wyoming. He received an MS degree in agricultural economics from the University of Delaware in 1961. His masters thesis was on the economics of beef cattle production in Delaware. Prior to going to VPI he managed a horse and beef farm on the eastern shore of Maryland.

In addition to duties as extension livestock specialist Morrow will do research and teaching in the area of beef cattle and horses.

He is married to the former Sarah Tesh of Wilmington. They have one son. Mrs. Morrow is a 1960 graduate of the School of Home Economics at the University of Delaware.

Morrow replaces John H. Shropshire who resigned recently to establish an agricultural consulting and estate management service incorporated under the name Agricon. Shropshire has also leased acreage on Limestone Road near Newark where he plans to produce forage crops and beef cattle. Shropshire was on the staffs of the University of Washington and the University of Connecticut prior to coming to the University of Delaware in 1958.

Mrs. Rufus D. Bunting

Mrs. Mary H. Bunting, 68, of Harrington, died Saturday in Milford Memorial Hospital. She was the widow of Rufus D. Bunting.

She is survived by a daughter, Betty Jane, at home; a son, Robert, of Wilmington, and two grandchildren.

Funeral service were Tuesday afternoon in Dodd-Carey Funeral Home, Georgetown.

A Delaware Future Farmer, R. Wayne Collison, 19, of Harrington, is one of twelve candidates for a Regional FFA Star State Farmer award to be presented Sept. 18 in Springfield, Mass., during the Governors' Night program at the opening of the 1965 Eastern States Exposition.

Wayne won the Star State Farmer title at the Delaware Future Farmers of America convention of high school vocational agriculture students held in Harrington High School, last May. In Springfield his farming and leadership record will be matched against those of similar award winners from eleven other states of the North Atlantic Region.

The twelve award candidates already have won cash prizes of $200 each from the National FFA Foundation and expense-paid trips to the Eastern States Exposition. The regional winner will receive a registered heifer calf provided by the Sears-Roebuck Foundation who will also provide the travel awards.

More than 300 Future Farmers of America members dressed in their official blue jackets, will participate in the activities leading up to the presentation of the Regional Star State Farmer award. Kenneth Kennedy, National FFA President, of Cadiz, Ky., will serve as master of ceremonies for the occasion. He will be assisted by Joe Perriego, National FFA Vice President, of Weare, N. H. Governors of six New England States and New York are expected to be platform guests when the awards are presented in the Exposition Coliseum.

Observe Fly Dates, Wheat Growers Are Warned

Wheat producers can avoid the problems of Hessian fly damage by observing the important "fly-free" dates according to a University of Delaware entomologist. Dr. Dale Bray, entomologist in the College of Agricultural Sciences says the date varies slightly between the northern and southern extremities of the state, but in general no wheat should be seeded before October 1. Approximate fly-free dates for each county are: New Castle, Oct. 3; Kent, Oct. 8; Sussex, Oct. 10.

Bray says wheat planted before these dates may be severely damaged by Hessian fly maggots. He explains the Hessian fly cycle this way: The mature flies lay their eggs on young growing plants (especially wheat) in August and September. Maggots hatch from these eggs in a few days and start feeding on the plants. Those maggots that have developed to the pupa stage before cold weather begins, develop into mature flies. Less-mature ones are killed by the first heavy frost, but not before they have caused extensive damage to the host plant. This damage can mean severely reduced yields the following year.

By observing the fly-free dates, Bray says, farmers are taking advantage of a natural-occurring insect control method, thus eliminating the need for chemicals. This is possible because Hessian flies lay eggs only during the early fall. If the proper host is not available no eggs are produced, and the insect population decreases. Complete eradication is impossible he says because of the presence of some wild plant varieties that make suitable hosts.
