"The Thief From Tidney"

By W. C. Burgess
K17089

Now it goes just like this. The 3 FAOB—Army—was parked on private property, 85 miles from London; and they wouldn't let the boys dig latrines. The people who owned the property wouldn't let us dig—it must have been an old battle ground or something of historical interest. So, out comes the honey pots. Now a honey pot is a gigantic can — something like a bed pan in a hospital — and used for the same purpose. In other words you used them instead of a latrine. Now it was just like guard duty. You stayed on this detail for one day at a time, and it sure was a smelly job. You get a big, long pole, and tote these honey pots off the private property, and dump 'em and then bring 'em back and replace 'em again. So it was my turn to officiate. One of the guards, pardon me; one of the sergeants comes around and says W. C. would you like to go on a detail for a week. Sure, why not; I never refuse to work, nor do I growl or grumble, either.

Call it self punishment, like the cons do. It's just the cost of living—they say—but, let us cut down on the cost of living then and on the time too. Amen.

Now Britian is known as the "Misty Isles." Quite correct. So we have to have the curtains down to keep out the dampness.

We are going to a British supply dump to help them out!

Right away the mercenary—desire for money, or the cold green—comes out in old daddy! Nah! Nah! Nah! Me and my dog, Sparky, he doesn't understand English — but he knows what Nah! Nah! Nah! means! It is a sign of friendship; and it sometimes means, "come and get a piece of meat or something to eat!"

We get to the supply dump, and they have English Bobbies guarding the gate. We go in—Boston Tea Party and all—we'll never finish paying them poor boys back for that one little ole load of tea we hijacked!

The supply dump was All-American. It goes just like this—our folks couldn't leave the surplus from the Italian and Sicilian battlefronts in Italy and Sicily—so they brought it over and gave it to the British—and here is Wild Bill Burgess of the Miami Springs Golf Course helping them sort it out for them. Now the Limeys; or Cockneys — didn't have enough men to sort out the stuff—I think most of them boys was really off to the war—so don't sell 'em short. I know a lot of 'em.

So, some of George Washington's men from the Revolutionary Army—descendants of, that is—help them poor boys sort out the loot. There were bloody overcoats with bullet holes in 'em; pants, shirts, anything you could think of—all lying out in the rain—mountains of clothes.

Lunch time, boys! So Hobo Burgess takes off. Well, plihese—Miss Somebody; a combat jacket; it fits just right! With apologies to the Saints above, of course. And, oh! my! the zipper is stuck on this thing; and here comes an American lieutenant! "What are you doing here?" Why sir! We have come in today, and I was looking the place over." "OK" This place is off limits! Haul Able Sugar Sugar." I didn't know that was in the manual; but I guess you have to improvise once in awhile!

When day is done—written by Carrie Jacobs Bond—I think—go home you son of a gun. So out the gate we go; and the Bobbies look the other way. We get back to camp, and, "Burgess, report to the captain; you have left your gun out in the rain for two days and somebody turned you in.

Oh! Yes! We have our own set of brown-nosers, too. The captain was in his bunk, so I go and report anyway; and he says forget it! So, I did. I never did find out what stoolie turned me in; the gun was right by my tent.

The boys said, "h'm. "Where did you get the combat jacket, private B?" Stole it, why?" How about getting us one or two?" "OK."

The officers began to take a look. "H'm! Mr. Warrant Officer, where are all the combat jackets coming from? They are American issue, you know!"

"Why sirs, private Burgess is stealin' 'em at the supply dump off the British. The officers said, "Now here we are a bunch of officers, and we ain't allowed to do nothing. "Oh! Well, we guess that is just the price of being an officer; us poor officers can't do nothing but salute!"

Trot! Trot! Trot! Here comes Warrant Officer Mackenzie—the leadoff man for the officers.

"Private B." "Yes. Mr! What can I do for you. If it is a chewing, the officers always come

FENCE TALK

with George K. Vapaa

Want to see yourself on TV? This is the last call for reservations for the marketing our of the Peninsula Horticultural Society on Dec. 15 and 16.

The TV performance will be with Dr. George Webster, farm director for WFIL-TV and radio. We'll see their new circular studio in Philadelphia on City Line Avenue. Doc says we'll use the bog studio rather than his regular TV desk for farm news.

Mohr's Orchard Roadside Market near Allentown will be our second stop. This is one of the most modern in operation. Mr. Mohr built a second unit rather than redesign his old market.

Glenn Ellenberger, the Lehigh county agent, has arranged a visit to the Berks-Lehigh Fruit Growers Cooperative. There we'll see processing, packing and storage facilities owned by 150 growers. Several Delaware growers are members.

We're going to look at a pretzel plant while we're in the Pennsylvania Dutch country.

The tour starts at the Elks Hall in Salisbury about 1 p.m. on Wednesday, the 15th. But Kent Countyans can catch the bus coming north to Philadelphia. We'll stay at the Ben Franklin Hotel and will have the first evening to see the town or shop.

We usually have several couples along. Costs for bus, double room and one group meal will be less than $20. Call our office at 736-1448 for reservations or more information.

The ears of corn were eight feet tall. Visitors were asked to guess the bushels of corn left in a stubble field laid out on the Capital Grange Hall meeting room. This was the scene at the 1965 Delaware Crop Show last week.

Two of the three high winners in the 4-H corn judging contest were from Kent County—Janice Harrison of the Westville 4-H Club and Craig Eliason of the Paradise 4-H Club.

John G. Tarburton and his son Leon were county winners in the Soybean Yield Program with 45.9 bushels per acre. This was a bin measurement from 30 acres of registered Kent seed.

The eight foot high ears of corn were cutouts of plywood to which ears of corn representing kernels were fastened. There were 24 varieties selected from field demonstrations at the James L. Mitchell farm at Smyrna and at the University of Delaware Substation farm near Georgetown.

The purpose of the stubble field exhibit was to demonstrate how much corn is lost due to poor picking practices. One plot showed a 30 bushel loss. The other 5 bushels. Both can be considered as too much for proper harvest practices.

Charles C. Blendt of Smyrna was elected as the new president of the Delaware Crop Improvement Association. James Tarburton of Camden is the new vice president.

Tax savings are possible for farmers who are willing to plan ahead. It is good business to adjust some practices for the best tax benefits.

Here are some examples for those farmers who had a good year. Hold grain produced in 1965 for sale after the first of the year. Buy and pay for some 1966 expenses in 1965—such as fertilizer, fuels, seed, etc. Advance payment of interest or insurance is another. We should say that these practices should be used if you know your income this year is unusually large and may not be so in the next year.

One farmer I know is championing at the bit because he wants delivery of his new tractor as soon as possible. He wants to apply the 7% investment credit for new machines in 1965.

Our Extension Service office has just received a supply of the 1965 Federal Income Tax Forms. These apply for all types of businesses, not just farming. Detailed instructions are also supplied. We have them free of charge. Just call us at 736-1448 or stop by the office on the second floor of the old Dover Post office building.

The Dover Chamber of Commerce issues this warning. Circulars have been received locally, through the mails, offering to consolidate loans. This is apparently another second mortgage racket in which loans are extended and secured by second mortgage.

This advertised service uses the figure of $2,038.17 to show total indebtedness, and monthly payments of $118.65. Reduction in monthly payments to $67.00 fails to tell the customer that his monthly payments are for a period of five years, or 60 payments. Multiplication of the 60 payments at $67.00 discloses that the customer pays back a total of $4,040.00 over a five year period.

As you can see, although they reduce the monthly payments, they double the total indebtedness of the borrower.

Top Crop Producers Named At Banquet

Delaware's outstanding crop producers were honored Tues., Nov. 23, at the annual Delaware State Crop Show, sponsored by the Delaware Agricultural Extension Service and the Delaware Crop Improvement Association.

James Rouse, Harrington, won first place for timothy hay and for the mixed clovers and grasses. William Jester, Harrington, received top honors for lespepeza seeds and corn silage. William Alfree, Middletown, placed first with his heat-cured alfalfa grass. Mrs. Marshall Williams, Newark, won top honors in wheat and field-cured alfalfa. Winterthur Farms, Winterthur, took first place with heat cured alfalfa.

Gilbert Barber, Richmond, Va., was the winner of the field loss estimation contest. Steve Isaacs, 12, Georgetown, placed second, and Harold Carmean, 12, Georgetown, was third.

Miss Janice Harrison, 15, Goldsboro, Md., won first place in the 4-H judging event. Charles Ebbing, 16, Townsend, won second and Craig Eliason, 16, Harrington, placed third. They were awarded scholarships to the state 4-H camp or to the state 4-H conference.

Samples of several of the winning entries in the crop show have been placed in a portable exhibit which will be shown throughout the state.

Dr. Robert Howell, leader of soybean investigation for the U.S. Department of Agriculture, featured speaker at the Crop Awards banquet, said farmers using the proper cultural practices are most likely to break the so-called soybean yield barrier. "Basic research on weed and disease control will eventually result in larger soybean yields. To improve yields now, growers must take advantage of the cultural practices now recommended," he said.

Delaware Crop Improvement Association Officers Elected

Delaware Crop Improvement Association officers were elected for the coming year. Charles Blendt, Smyrna, is the new president. Also elected were William Alfree, Middletown, New Castle County vice president; James Mitchell, Smyrna, Kent County vice president; Robert Rider, Bridgeville, Sussex County vice president; W. H. Mitchell, Newark, secretary, and J. Oliver Koelg, Newark, treasurer.

Better Bus. Bureau To Incorporate Early

Alfred S. DeLuca, chairman of the steering committee of the forthcoming Better Business Bureau, of Delaware, announced recently that because of the overwhelming response of far-sighted Delaware businessmen the BBB has filed its Articles of Incorporation with the Secretary of State one week early.

Members of the Steering Committee acting as incorporators with DeLuca were A. Kirk Mearns, treasurer of the Delaware Trust Company, and J. Harry Power, general manager of Sears-Roebuck & Company.

At the same time, the Steering Committee formally petitioned the Association of Better Business Bureaus International for a charter.

Mearns, the bureau's treasurer, asserted that "the Steering Committee and the responsible business community is to be commended for its efforts in meeting all the prerequisites for a charter in just under four months. In this short period, approximately 250 business companies from every segment of our State economy have formally committed their support to this undertaking as Founding Members. However, to have the support of all responsible business firms in the State is needed."
