For example, a 20 cubic foot freezer stored in a warm room should not have more than 80 pounds of food added at one time.

Remember that zero degrees is recommended for storage of frozen foods. Ice cube compartments in refrigerators are not as cold as this, so don't take foods from your freezer and store them in your ice cube compartment for more than two weeks.

Keep a thermometer in the storage compartment and make sure the temperature remains at zero or below. Food stored at temperatures above zero lose flavor and nutritive value rapidly. Ice or snow inside the package usually is a sign that temperatures are fluctuating above zero.

It's up to you to keep track of what's in the freezer. Use a crayon or waxy marking pencil to note date and contents on the outside of freezer packages. Waxy marking materials are preferred since they won't smear when exposed to dampness.

Develop a system for keeping inventory. Then you'll know what items are in short supply, are overstocked, should be used quickly, or should be substituted for in the future. Try using a board with nails in it. Label each nail for a freezer item and hang current rings on it to show how many packages are in the freezer. Remove or add rings as foods are used or put in. Keep the board near the freezer so you can take stock at a glance.

Having a freezer can be like having an extra pair of hands in the kitchen—but you have to supply the brain power.

We've all heard that the more food you store in your freezer, the less expensive your freezer operation becomes. The basic costs of operating the freezer are going to be about the same whether it's full or holds only a few items. So, it's really to your advantage to keep it full at all times—to cut down on your cost per item.

In your effort to keep the freezer full don't overload it with too much unfrozen food at once. You could raise the temperature of foods already stored. Overloading also keeps the new items from freezing quickly enough for best quality. The usual recommendation is that you freeze three pounds of additional food to one cubic foot of freezer space.

Poems from Paradise Pastures
 By W. Cliff Miller

MEDICARE

Maybe some of us oldsters who seem to be taken care of in current plans for Medicare, could offer advice to youngsters on ways and means to get around mounting bills and doctor bills until they and their's reach the ripe-old-age. As one with many years big city, small town and country living, my advice is to see Farmer Brown about:

COUNTRY MEDICINE

Had a spell and all run down,
 Went to see Doc Cur'em
 He told me that I needed rest,
 So pains I could endure 'em.

He sent me to the countryside,
 Away from noise and bustle,
 And told me just to lie around,
 And don't dare sweat from hustle.

He gave me lots of pills to take,
 And warnings by the dozen,
 To not do this and not do that
 Until my head was buzzin'.

I've been there 'bout a month or more
 Feel fitter than a fiddle
 Eatin' three square meals a day,
 And surely solved the riddle.

First day I got out on the farm
 I start my tongue a-waggin'
 To "Farmer Brown" about my ills;
 You'd think that I was braggin'.

But "Farmer Brown" just looked at me,
 And took me by the shoulder;
 "Come on with me, young man," he said,
 "Before you're getting older."

That day we raked the melon patch
 Beneath the baking sun
 My clothes were wet, my hands were sore
 Before the day was run.

That night I ate a hearty meal
 And off to bed I went Forgetful of the pills to take
 So badly was I spent.

We hoed the patches far and wide
 We rose each day at dawn
 I lost my box of little pills
 That guaranteed me brawn.

I'm never going back to town
 I'm staying on the farm
 Where honest toil and well-earned rest
 Will keep a man from harm.

'Tis the season for planting flower gardens, vegetable gardens and shrubbery. With delicate care we nurture these plants to bring forth fruit and sit back and watch the wonders of nature take place. Just imagine how you would feel if the one plant you had nursed along so tenderly might suddenly disappear. It could be summed up like this:

MY PUSSYWILLOW TREE

I was walking early one night,
 And lo and behold but what to my sight,
 Was a hole where something should be,
 By golly, someone had taken my pussywillow tree!

It was unknown at the time,
 Who would commit such a dastardly crime;
 Who would destroy a girl's art,
 And break her poor, poor heart.

Even though the tree had no soul,
 It did leave an empty hole,
 And even though the thief is unknown;
 The crime cannot be condoned.

I searched high and low,
 And I looked to and fro
 But not a trace did I see,
 Of my little pussywillow tree.

What I had actually lost,
 Wasn't even in the cost;
 But my pride in, you see,
 My little pussywillow tree.

—Leah S. Wheeler

Council Meeting Postponed

With Mayor Luther P. Hatfield out of town, a quorum of councilmen did not show up for the Tuesday night meeting.

The opening of bids for improving several streets was postponed, largely because of an addition to specifications.

The original specifications called for a gravel base. The City would also like to ascertain the cost of a soil-cement base.

4 Building Permits Granted by City

Four building permits were recently issued by the Planning Commission. They are as follows:

Clarence Rash, garage on Weiner Avenue, $750.

Solomon Anderson, house on Milby Street, $900.

Pauline Lord, storage shed on High Street, $300.

William Sneath, 211 Weiner Ave., enclosing porch for bathroom, $400.

What Is Inflation?

We have been reading and hearing a lot about inflation lately. Everyone should know what inflation is, what causes it, how it can be prevented and how it affects them. Let's think about some of these things.

In economic discussions, inflation generally means an excessive increase in the supply of money in circulation. As people spend the excess money, supplies of commodities become scarce and prices rise.

If the output of goods and services keeps pace with the increase in buying power, there will be no general increase in prices—no inflation.

Sid Tietema, extension economist, has pointed out that buying power, or demand, appears when and where people have two things: (1) desire to buy, and (2) ability to pay. Most people have a bigger desire to buy in ability to pay for what they want. Ability to pay, then, is generally the factor that limits demand.

The ability to pay, in turn, depends upon how much income we have—and how much we can borrow (or buy on credit). Inflation comes when we borrow and spend too much in relation to what our nation produces.

If people borrowed only from one another, there would be no inflation. If someone borrow from you, you would give up as much buying ability as the other person gained. But it is a different story when we borrow from banks. For example, when someone borrows $1,000 from a bank, the banker adds that amount to his checking account. No one's account is reduced. Each new borrowing adds to the bank's deposits and to the people's buying power.

Individual borrowing won't add a lot to the nation's spending, but when 10 million families borrow an average of $1,000 each, an added demand of $10 billion is thrown into the cash registers.

According to Tietema, governments are usually the big spenders in inflation. Most governments can, and do borrow from banks, even as you and I do. When our government borrows $10 million from banks, the banks add that amount to government checking accounts. When the government writes checks, the amount is transferred to accounts of the people. The impact of government spending could be reduced by increasing taxes, thus reducing the individual's purchasing power.

One final and very important point: Government borrowing from banks is much more explosive than private borrowing. Here is why: When Uncle Sam borrows from banks, the banks receive government bonds. They can use government securities to obtain government reserves that they are required to keep on deposit with the Federal Reserve Banks. For each dollar of reserves they keep on deposit, they can extend several dollars of credit to businesses and individuals. Thus, when the government borrows from banks, the effects upon buying power and prices are extended many times.

—The Times, Missoula, Montana.

Sunburn

It is hard for some of us to learn that everything we undertake should begin temperately. Everyone should acquire resistance to sunburn by gradual exposure, beginning with about fifteen or twenty minutes of exposure, and then extending the period in the sun each day.

The human skin varies greatly in the amount of sun it can absorb. Dark-skinned, dark-haired, dark-eyed persons can take considerable sun without burning. If you are light-complexioned you must be especially careful about exposing your face and arms to the sunlight. Go at it by easy stages with gradual exposure, beginning with only five or ten minutes in the direct sun.

There are several commercial preparations on the market which will help to protect the skin against sunburn, if applied before exposure to the sun. Suntan pills obtained by prescription can help those who have sensitive skins to avoid burns. A good pair of sun glasses will guard against irritation of the eyes or eyelids. Shade hats and beach robes help to reduce the danger of too much exposure.

Severe sunburn should be treated as if the burn had resulted from other causes. A burn from the sun is a burn fully as much as any other and the victim should consult a physician.

Tanning has no physical value. Exposure to the sun is damaging to the skin. Sunlight speeds wrinkling and aging and long-term exposure can cause serious skin conditions. Too much sun can make your hair brittle and hard to manage. However, the damaged hair will eventually grow out. The only beneficial effect of sunlight on the skin is formation of vitamin D, but the American diet already provides an adequate supply of this vitamin.

State Summary

Extremely hot, dry weather the past week has affected many corn fields and resulted in continuous use of irrigation wherever possible. Migrant crews have begun to move into the state, even though work is not too plentiful at present. The potato harvest is not expected to start for another week or ten days. A temporary office at the Laurel Auction Block for employment of high school youth in harvesting watermelon and cantaloupe will open in a few days.

Wilmington Area

Irrigation of potatoes and other vegetables continues. This area is badly in need of moisture. Some potato growers will begin harvesting between July 11th and July 15th. Migrant crews have started moving into the area. This causes some concern to growers because there is no work at present. Scattered picking of snap beans and cucumbers was reported. The pea harvest is complete. Planting lima beans followed immediately. Harvesting grain continues.

Dover Area

Because of hot, dry weather, irrigation of potatoes and tomatoes continues. Weather affected the yield of the pea crop, which was completed last Saturday. There are 75 to 80 local workers cutting cabbage. Harvesting snap beans and pickles started last week. These crops are using approximately 150 migrant workers. Several migrant crews are now in the area looking for work until their potato jobs start. Growers needing temporary help should contact the Farm Placement Office in Dover, telephone 734-7438.

Georgetown Area

Hot and dry weather is continuing to affect crops. Growers are using irrigation full time to replace soil moisture. Puerto Rican contract workers are picking cucumbers and peaches. Picking apples should start later this week with additional Puerto Rican contract workers reporting to help with the harvest. Local and out-of-state workers are picking snap beans, cucumbers, blueberries and hoeing where necessary. There is ample labor in the area at present, but some crews may be short of workers in about two weeks. Crews have been reported to be short of the numbers for which leaders committed themselves.

Cut Flowers Last Longer With Proper Care

Cut flowers bring outdoor beauty indoors. That beauty can last longer if you take proper care of the blooms, according to Robert F. Stevens, extension horticulturist at the University of Delaware.

Late afternoon or early evening is the best time of day to cut flowers, he points out. Flowers produce their food through photosynthesis during the day and largely use it up during the night. As a result, flowers cut in the morning will not last as long as those cut in the evening because their food supply is lower.

Sharp cutting tools in good condition should be used to cut flowers, since a dull-edged tool tends to block the water-conducting tubes in the flower stems. The angle at which the stem is cut makes very little difference in extending flower life, according to Stevens.

As soon as the flowers are cut, place them in water that is at room temperature. The warm water prevent plants from losing too much moisture. To condition them, keep the plants overnight in the water in a cool room or in the basement. Remove all the foliage that will be under water after the flowers are arranged because this foliage will decompose rapidly.

To help coarse-stemmed flowers absorb water, press the lower two inches of the stem with a piece of wood or hammer. Chrysanthemums, phlox, stock and lythrum will have difficulty taking up enough water unless the stems are pressed.

Use a clean container and flower holder for your arrangement, suggests Stevens. Keep the arrangement out of sunny or drafty places to slow down the loss of water through the foliage, he says.

Cramps

A cramp occurs when a muscle contracts involuntarily and will not relax again.

Cramps in the muscles of the leg or foot occur in many people. On getting into bed, or in the middle of the night, these spasms come on with rather severe pain. Massage is useful. A cramp in the leg sometimes occur when the limb is not receiving sufficient blood. The flow of blood will be increased if you will get out of bed and stand up until the pain subsides.

The most common and painful form of cramp is bowel pain. For the attack itself there is no better application than heat. Sometimes the pain is caused by a telescoping of the bowel, or by the catching of a small fold of the bowel in a rupture. If the cramps are not relieved within a reasonable time, a physician should be called.

On the first day of a woman's menstrual period stomach cramps may occur. The application of heat will often afford relief. Also there are various drugs now available that are helpful in relieving these cramps.

In an occupation when a given muscle, or set of muscles, is called upon for unvaried effort, there may be a cramp which will make it impossible to continue work. Baseball pitchers and musicians are liable to this kind of attack. In literary persons it is called "writer's cramp." The sudden or prolonged stretching of a muscle is likely to cause the muscle to seek relief by going into a cramp. In the course of certain diseases, such as Bright's disease of the kidneys, cramps in the muscles and sudden spasms of pain are not uncommon.

There is a form of cramp due to excessive labor in a very hot place. There will be spasms of the arms and legs and sometimes abdominal cramps. The attacks last for hours, and for days later there are soreness and lameness of the muscles.

Whatever the nature and location of the cramp, seek the underlying cause if the attacks are frequent.

one. Such a task is often thankless and sometimes subject to tremendous criticism.
This has been a most important position as we consider that for a number of years approximately 50% of the budget for the State of Delaware has been assigned to education and within the structure of State Board responsibilities and State Department of Public Instruction assignment, the responsibility for the distribution and management of these funds has been placed in the office of the Assistant Superintendent for Business and Finance of Administrative Services.

The State Board of Education confirmed their telephone vote of May 26, 1966, which awarded the bids for purchase of Title II Library books to: Baker and Taylor Company (Hillside, N.J.), Baltimore News Company, and Imperial Book Company (Philadelphia, Pa.).

The resignation of Miss Anne E. Cheavens, supervisor of art education, effective August 31, 1966 after 32 years in Delaware education. The Board adopted the Board adopted the following resolution regarding Miss Cheavens' retirement:

Reassignment of Speech and Hearing Therapists and Psychologists
The State Board of Education approved the motion for assignments of speech and hearing therapists and psychologists for the 1966-67 school year. The assignments were accompanied by the provision that vacancies not filled by October 1, 1966 shall be reassigned.

Amendments to State Plan for Vocational Rehabilitation
The State Board of Education adopted the amendments to the State Plan for Vocational Rehabilitation, as recommended by the Rehabilitation Committee. The amendments concern personnel for determining disability, statewide application of the plan, deletion of residence requirements for social security beneficiaries, economic need of clients, supplement to the compensation schedule, and other miscellaneous changes in the revised State plan.

Teacher Training Programs
In separate actions, the State Board of Education approved a teacher training program in foreign language instruction and in kindergarten instruction at Delaware State College. Both programs were approved subject to the provision that adequate staff be employed by the college for conducting such a program.

Athletic Commission
Particular and important constitutional amendments and by-law changes for the State Athletic Commission were approved by the State Board of Education. These changes involve the following:

1. A complete re-structuring of the responsibility pattern for the Commission, changing it from a commission of the Delaware School Administrators to a separate association related to the secondary school principals. The relationship of the Commission to the State Board of Education remains the same.

Textbooks
Approval was granted by the Board of Education for a supplemental list of textbooks recommended by local school authorities, the supervisory staff of the Department of Public Instruction, and the Director of Secondary Education. The textbooks deal with the subject matter of science, home economics and social studies.

Personnel
The State Board of Education approved the following:
1. Authorization for the State Department of Public Instruction to appoint a substitute for Richard Koch, supervisor of mathematics, who is going on sabbatical leave.

The State Board of Education voted to commend Governor Charles L. Terry, Jr. for his recent appointment as Chairman of the Education Commission of the State. Such a position of leadership and responsibility on this Commission, established by the Compact for Education, represents a great honor to the State of Delaware.

Reaffirmation of Position
The following statement was adopted by the Board:

The State Board of Education reaffirms its position that all matters concerning retention or dismissal of personnel employed by the State Board of Education should be carried out within the provisions of Delaware laws.

These laws assign staffing responsibilities in the State Department of Public Instruction to the State Board of Education, and also include the Fair Dismissal Act, which provides that a certified professional person be removed from a position by the responsible board, only for professional or moral cause.

Approval was granted by the Board for the resignation of Dr. C. Lalor Burdick as a member of the Scholarship Advisory Council. The approval of Dr. Burdick's resignation was accompanied by a commendation for his outstanding contributions in the initial development of scholarship loans. In a separate motion Dr. Alston Morris, a member of the Delaware Academy of Medicine, was approved as Dr. Burdick's replacement on the Scholarship Advisory Council.

Letter of Commendation to Gov. Charles L. Terry, Jr.
The State Board of Education voted to commend Governor Charles L. Terry, Jr. for his recent appointment as Chairman of the Education Commission of the State.

285 Gallstones

The following news item came from Mrs. C. H. Burgess, whose father, the late Dr. L. E. Walton, was a surgeon:
(Approx. '41 or '42) In Parkersburg papers; Pennsboro News, Harrisville Gazette:
City councilman, Fred Kiger, was operated upon at Parkersburg, yesterday for gallstones and for appendicitis. Dr. L. E. Walton, assisting with the operation, reports that 285 gallstones, ranging in size from a grain of wheat to a hickory nut, were removed. Mr. Kiger is reported to be getting along satisfactorily.
*Probably at St. Joseph's Hospital, or possibly at one of two others there.—Dad and Dr. T. L. Harris, head surgeon at St. Joseph's, could remove dozens of tonsils and through at less than 15 minutes!

Greenwood Girl Attends Conference

Maribeth Cannon of Greenwood has just returned from the National Youth Conference on Natural Beauty and Conservation, which was held in Washington, D. C., June 26-29.

Maribeth was one of more than 500 delegates representing the nation's leading youth organizations with a total membership of over 20 million. They came from the 50 states, Canada and Puerto Rico. Other Delaware delegates were Arba Henry, Laurel, FFA; George Hale, Newark, FMCA; Eleanor Shaw, New Sastle, 4-H; Ann Connair, Wilmington Girl Scouts; John Burke, Wilmington YMCA; Paul Harwitz, Wilmington Red Cross; and Kathleen Taylor, Wilmington Girls Clubs.

Highlight of the conference was the opening ceremony on the White House lawn, Monday morning, June 27th. Mrs. Johnson addressed the delegation and was joined by President Johnson, who made a surprise appearance.

The First Lady urged the youths to "dream impossible dreams," particularly in their determination to do something about conserving America's natural resources. She said they would be surprised to find that their dreams may not be as impossible as they thought. The President and Mrs. Johnson joined in congratulating the young people for their enthusiasm and pledged to support their efforts.

There was sightseeing in the White House for the delegates before they returned to conference headquarters at the Sheraton-Park Hotel for a series of workshops and various other activities which included visits to the National Arberetum where they were addressed by Mrs. Orville Freeman and were joined at lunch by Mr. Freeman, Secretary of Agriculture. Tuesday morning the delegates breakfasted with Senator Boggs. Before the workshop began, the delegates heard a speech by Secretary of the Interior Udall who told them they would have to answer the question: "Can we populate and enjoy our country without spoiling it?"

Leaders from industry, conservation foundations, research and civic groups acted as panelists within the workshops and advised the delegates and answered specific conservation problems. Each workshop came up with recommendations for action which the youth plan to implement in their home communities.

The conference formulated a variety of proposals, ranging from conservation education on the kindergarten level to the promotion of litterbugs in every auto. Other recommendations called for screening junkyards from the motorist's view to contacting disc jockeys with their ideas about conservation. The emphasis of all the workshops, however, was on education of the public about all the specific problems of conserving our natural resources. The youths agreed that they would participate fully in constant efforts toward this end. For example, they pledged to organize letters-to-the-editors campaigns in their local newspapers, and that they would contact their legislators and community leaders urging action in conservation and natural beauty.

Russell E. Train, president of the Conservation Foundation, gave the final charge to the conference. He told the delegation: "Tackle the big problem, both at home and across the nation. Many in our generation have not feared the big issue of our day such as: Freedom NOW, in Our Time. I give you another challenge—environmental quality—NOW, in Our Time."

Evening entertainment was provided by the delegates themselves along with the professional help of the Serendipity Singers on Monday night and the Bitter End Singers on Tuesday night.

The entire event was planned and executed by the young people themselves after a suggestion for such a conference by the Girl Scouts, U. S. A., to Mrs. Johnson ignited the idea.

The youth organizations involved in the conference included: American National Red Cross, Youth Activities; Boys' Clubs of America, Future Farmers of America, Future Homemakers of America, Camp Fire Girls, 4-H Clubs, Boy Scouts of America, Girl Scouts of U. S. A., Girls Clubs of America, Office of Economic Opportunity, Job Corps, Neighborhood Youth Corps, U. S. National Student Association, and Young Women's Christian Association.

The cost of the conference was underwritten by some of the nation's major businesses. Those were: American Conservation Association; The Coca-

Cola Company; The Conservation Foundation; Eastman Kodak Company (who gave each delegate a camera kit); Hoover Foundation, North Canton, Ohio; Texaco, Inc.; and the Zerex Corporation.

Motorists Overlook Two-Step Precautions

"Most motorists overlook a simple precaution that could cut traffic deaths and injuries substantially over the summer months as well as throughout the year," James T. Ferri, president of the Delaware Safety Council asserted today. "The annual traffic death and injury toll could be reduced sharply if motorists would only take a moment to lock all car doors and buckle their seat belts snugly."

Ferri stated that both measures are designed to keep motorists within the car in case of an accident. Years ago it was believed that a person was less likely to be injured in a crash if he was thrown out of the car. Extensive research, however, has proved that just the opposite is true.

"Today seat belts and safety door latches are among the most important safety devices now available," Ferri continued. "But neither are used to their full potential."

He cited recent survey statistics disclosed that 40 per cent of the fatalities during the last four years could have been prevented if seat belts had been used. Projected nationally, that would indicate that use of seat belts could have saved 40 per cent of the 31,500 passenger car deaths last year or 12,600 lives.

Ferri said that seat belts for both front and rear seat passengers have been available as optional equipment for years and are standard equipment on all 1966 model cars. Front seat belts have been standard equipment since January 1, 1964.

"The practice of locking car doors from the inside before driving can also curb traffic deaths and injuries," Ferri stated. "By helping to keep motorists inside the auto in case of a serious mishap."

According to Ferri, major advances by automobile manufacturers during the last decade have significantly increased the extent to which car doors stay closed during accidents. Many motorists fail to take full advantage of improvements in doors and related components by neglecting to lock the doors. Locking up helps prevent the doors from accidentally unlatching in side-impact or roll-over crashes. It also gives auto passengers, especially women, important security in their travels, aside from safety benefits.

"Unfortunately, most motorists neither use their seat belts nor lock car doors regularly," he continued. "Less than half of today's motorists are regular seat belt users. I would estimate that the practice of locking car doors is even less prevalent than seat belt use."

Ferri indicated that motorists were much more prone to use seat belts on long trips rather than on drives around town, although 80 per cent of traffic accidents happen within 25 miles of the driver's homes.

In conclusion Ferri said, "In addition to locking up and buckling up, motorists should follow a sound program of vehicle safety maintenance and defensive driving to make motoring safer and more enjoyable."

Delaware Food Market Report

By Anne Holberton

Shopping for food has become a complicated task at best. Our modern markets are continually adding to dropping and changing their already bewildering array of brands, varieties, and quality level of foods. For many of us, the complexity of food buying may well become an even greater chore.

However, a large segment of our population of those lived only in a time of fast change. For today over half of the population is under 28 years of age. They're the ones getting married and setting up households. They are also the ones who have grown up in an age of affluence and convenience. These young people are now establishing their buying practices and habits which they are likely to follow the rest of their lives. They will continue to expect more amenities of life than the older generation.

Regardless of the age group, the desire to improve our standard of living is of primary importance. This means higher incomes or wage increases. This in turn creates a spiral that also increases the cost of consumer goods or food in this case. True, when supplies of foods are large prices will usually fall—all other things being equal such as demand being less than the supply, etc. This works in the reverse also. When supplies are short due to demand, prices usually climb.

How do you achieve this goal of better living? One way is careful shopping which does save money and give greater satisfaction in the end.

How do you improve your shopping—first, understand your particular family's finances, nutritional needs, and food preferences. Next make a shopping list and take it with you. If you roughly plan your menus in advance your list will be more meaningful. It's also a great help to choose a store that has a convenient layout and has a planned traffic pattern that will help you shop.

Now you are ready to choose from the bewildering array of food available to us in our markets. First, buy foods that are in season. Remember there is a season for nearly everything, including processed foods.

Second, use foods for which there is comparatively little demand. For instance, with our present hot weather heavy meals and oven cooking are definitely not popular. Thus, the prices for roasts when compared to steaks are lower.

Consider fresh versus frozen forms of foods. An example is the cost of fresh peas—frozen peas are usually cheaper per serving even when peas are in season. In the case of cauliflower, broccoli, and asparagus, fresh is often a much better buy.

Regardless of what you buy, always read the label to make sure of what you are buying. Last but not least a MFWYPvbgkqrdwlu non food items such as soap, bathroom tissues, hair spray, etc., to the cost of your food bill.

Keeping Cool Becomes Summer Challenge

Escaping the summer heat practically becomes a national pre-occupation each July. Certainly, modern home air conditioning makes it easier to keep cool and comfortable. Nonetheless, there are other ways to help keep the house cool, according to Miss Coral K. Morris, extension home management specialist at the University of Delaware. Some of these methods can even increase the effectiveness of air conditioning systems.

Keep the windows and blinds or drapes open during the night when the air is cooler, but keep them closed during the heat of day. Venetian blinds on south windows cut the heat from the sun in half, Miss Morris points out. Louvers on the outside of the windows are even better; they can cut out almost all the direct solar heat on the south windows. Bamboo curtains on the outside of the windows will also effectively reduce the heat inside the house.

Awning is another good idea for a cooler summer. Use metal or canvas in a light color with open sides, recommends Miss Morris. All awnings should be wider than the window to screen out the sun for longer periods during the day.

Fans are a summertime necessity for homes without air conditioning. Attic and floor fans circulate air and help keep the entire house cooler. Large window fans should include a reverse cycle or be easily turned so they can either bring in the cooler outside air or blow out the hot air inside the house.

Miss Morris suggests using a kitchen fan as soon as you start cooking. If possible, do some of the cooking outside or prepare mostly short-order meals on hot days. Do as much cooking as you can during the cooler early morning hours. A dry basement with good ventilation lowers the humidity throughout the house. A dehumidifier may be needed to keep the basement dry.

If you are putting on new roofing or building a new home, remember that light-colored composition shingles absorb only half as much heat from the sun as black or dark shingles. A house with a high-pitched roof is cooler than one with a low-pitched or flat roof, Miss Morris states.

If possible, she says, avoid having blacktop or concrete next to your house. The air temperature may be 80 degrees over the lawn area, but it will probably be 120 degrees over the adjacent blacktop. Blacktop and concrete areas reflect and re-radiate heat from the sun into the house.

Nausea And Vomiting

There is nothing more agonizing than terrible nausea and the retching of violent vomiting. It makes little difference what the fundamental cause may be; the symptoms are practically the same.

An occasional episode of nausea or vomiting does not necessarily indicate any serious illness. Repeated instances of vomiting can be the first warning of serious internal disturbances or brain involvement. Vomiting may be accompanied by abdominal pain. Whenever severe pain accompanies nausea or vomiting, this should be sufficient warning to consult your physician.

There are, however, many causes of vomiting that are not particularly dangerous. Vomiting by a person who is seasick is caused by the disturbance of certain parts of the internal ear.

Emotional distress such as unpleasant smell, a displeasing sight, or even an unkind remark, may also produce vomiting.

Alcoholism and poisoning from sewer gas are capable of producing violent vomiting. In kidney disease there may be such poisoning of the system as to cause violent vomiting.

Vomiting may be produced by eyestrain, either from the need of glasses or because of lack of balance in the muscles of the eyeball. Holding ice in the mouth is a simple procedure which may arrest the vomiting. Sips of iced carbonated beverage will often relieve the distress and be retained.

While vomiting is not a disease, it is often a symptom of illness. When the symptoms persist or the matter ejected has traces of blood a medical search for the cause is necessary.

Links Induct 12 New Members

The Order of Link, an honorary 4-H organization, received 12 new members at induction ceremonies June 27 during the 45th annual Delaware State 4-H Conference at the University of Delaware.

The Order of Link recognizes older 4-H'ers and former members who have made outstanding contributions to 4-H work. Those selected each year continue to serve in the 4-H program, since Link sponsors many 4-H activities, including leadership conferences and the International Farm Youth Exchange scholarships.

Miss Connie Moore, Link member from Dover, spoke on the meaning and history of the Order of Link. Laurence Jestic, Laurel, president of the Links, served as chairman of the induction ceremony, and Mrs. Mildred Williams, Seaford, secretary, introduced the new Links.

Roberta Hopkins, Newark; Beverly Wiebe, Wilmington; Cecil Holland, Townsend; and Tom Sandbach, Wilmington, are the inductees from New Castle County.

Honored from Kent County are Bette Jo Clinton, Magnolia; Marjorie Hudson, Wyoming; Beverly Luks, Westville, and John Hall, Paradise.

New Links from Sussex County are Janet Smith, Bridgeville; Janice Warrington, Bridgeville; Kenneth Whaley, Laurel, and Dorothy Hopkins, Lewes.

Roberta Hopkins, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hopkins, has attended the National 4-H Club Congress twice, in 1962 as the entomology winner and in 1964 as the achievement winner. She also attended the 1964 citizenship conference in Washington, D. C. In her eight years of club work, she was active in 49 projects.

Miss Wiebe, 18, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter W. Wiebe, and is a sophomore home economics major at the University of Delaware. She was one of 10 youngsters from the United States chosen as 4-H ambassadors to the 1965 Canadian National 4-H Conference. She was the state public speaking champion in 1963 and attended the National Congress in 1964 as state home economics winner.

Eighteen-year-old Cecil Holland, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Kimmy, has been active in club work for nine years. He went to the National 4-H Congress in 1964 as the automotive winner; he was also a delegate to the citizenship course in Washington, D. C. in 1964. A senior in Middletown High School, he is now a 4-H club leader.

A student at the University of Delaware, Tom Sandbach, 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Sandbach, won the state public speaking contest in 1965 and attended the 4-H National Congress in 1964 as the electricity winner. He organized a county citizenship project and attended the National Citizenship conference in Washington, D. C. in 1964.

Miss Clinton, 18, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Clinton. Active in 4-H work for nine years, she was the 1965 state leadership winner. She is a junior leader and is on the 4-H junior council. She also was camp counselor and helped organize a new 4-H club.

Sixteen-year-old Marjorie Hudson, the 1965 state bread project winner, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Hudson. In her six years of club work she has carried clothing, poultry, garden, home beautification and junior broiler projects and has taken part in demonstrations and foods and crops judging contests.

Beverly Luks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Luks, has been an active junior leader in club work for five years, she has participated in dress revues, public speaking contests, judging contests and food projects. As a junior leader, she assisted with many county activities.

John Hall, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lister Hall, has been in 4-H club work for seven years. He has been interested in a variety of projects, including swine and electricity. As a junior leader, he helped form the Kent County Youth Council.

Dorothy Hopkins, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Hopkins attended the 1965 National 4-H Congress as state foods winner. She was 1965 governor of Delaware Girl's State, and was named outstanding 4-H'er from Delaware at the American Institute of Cooperation. She won scholarships for 4-H judging and demonstrations at the state fair, is a vice president of her 4-H county council and has been sagamore and chief at the state 4-H camp.

Miss Smith is the 4-H leader of the Dublin Yellowjackets. A ten-year 4-H member, she attended the National 4-H Congress in 1960 as home improvement winner.

Miss Warrington, 18, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel I. Warrington. She twice attended the National 4-H Club Congress, in 1963 as clothing champion and in 1965 as achievement winner. In her nine years of club work, she has been president of her club and of the Sussex county council and chief and sagamore at state 4-H camp.

Kenneth Whaley, 18, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Linwood Whaley. He attended the 1964 National 4-H Congress as swine winner. He is president of his club and secretary of the county council. In seven years of club work he has carried swine, junior broiler, handicraft and garden projects.

125 Attend State 4-H Conference At U. of D.

Nearly 125 club members attended the 45th annual Delaware State 4-H Conference at the University of Delaware, June 27 to 30. Using the theme, "My Purpose," the conference challenged older 4-H members to make greater contributions to their society, according to James O. Baker, state 4-H Club leader.

The four-day event featured speakers, a flag pageant, a trip to Fort Delaware, various recreational activities and the delegates' banquet and dance.

In his welcoming message to the 4-H delegates, Dr. Donald Crossan, assistant dean of the College of Agricultural Sciences, said 4-H clubs are one source of needed communication between rural and urban people. Communication is particularly necessary because agriculture is more important than ever.

He told the 4-H'ers that agriculture is now almost too large a field to even define. "The real challenge for today and tomorrow is found in agriculture," Dr. Crossan said.

The featured Monday evening speaker, Robert Wheatley, vice president of the Maryland National Bank, Hurlock, Md., said every person has two names, one given by his parents and one earned by himself alone—his good name or reputation. He told the teenagers that in ten years they would shape the destiny of this country and the world, for good or bad. "The world needs steady leadership by men and women who have earned their good name," he concluded.

Twenty-seven cadets from the Naval Air Basic Training Command, Pensacola, Fla., presented a flag pageant at the conference. Authentic period military uniforms—ranging from colonial uniforms to modern space suits—and 17 flags portrayed significant influences in American history. The 50-piece Command band, under the direction of Arthur L. Symington, accompanied the pageant.

Many teenage needs are filled in 4-H work, according to conference speaker George Foster, Tennessee state 4-H Club leader. The 4-H clubs help young people develop as independent, self-confident individuals. However, individuals must also develop an understanding of the other people in their society. He told 4-H'ers, "You must give out as well as take in, and the ideal opportunity for service is in your 4-H work."

Francis Pressly, international program leader for National 4-H Club Foundation, spoke Wednesday morning on the international character of 4-H work. He said the world is as wide to each person as his own involvement with other people. Many people in the world are too busy trying merely to keep themselves alive to be involved in the world outside. However, in the United States, teenagers and adults alike should be keenly aware of the world's people and problems, Pressly believes.

He told the delegates that teenagers must involve and commit themselves to an investment in peace; they must step up their efforts to help solve the world's problems on a person-to-person basis.

The world is 95 per cent non-American, and it is likely to remain this way, according to James Bostain, scientific linguist for the United States Department of State. Speaking at the conference delegates' banquet, he said we must learn to operate efficiently with them without either trying to convert them or go native.

To operate efficiently with anyone, Bostain said, it is necessary to learn to communicate effectively. But, 95 per cent of the world uses non-American symbols, and, unfortunately, they read us as if we were communicating in their symbols, and vice versa. "It's nice if you can love your neighbor, but learning to understand his symbols—to communicate—may do more good in the long run," Bostain concluded.

Learning to communicate is a very important part of living with other people, agreed the final speaker at the 4-H conference, Polly Hanst, high school instructor in Oakland, Md. Living with other people is an adventure, a challenge and a necessity, she believes.

Mrs. Hanst urged the 4-H'ers to develop an awareness or sensitivity to the needs of other people and an involvement with those people, throughout the world. "There's more to mankind than

FENCE TALK with George K. Vappa

Shortened wheat yields will be a problem for some Kent County farmers this year. The reason is a fungus disease called scab that is present in the Maryland area for one.

You can recognize the signs by the scabby appearance of the wheat head. Many of the grains will be shrunken or poorly developed. Some people will confuse scab with frost injury.

The most common cause of the damage is continuous cropping of corn with wheat. Too, corn stalks should be buried by thorough plowing rather than merely discing before seeding wheat.

Where the disease is present, we suggest a farmer should use certified seed wheat on ground where neither corn nor wheat have been grown recently. It will be better to plant wheat after soybeans in crop rotation.

J. E. "Reds" Lofland, of Smyrna, asked me about the value of cover crops compared to commercial fertilizer for added plant food. It's a kind of trick question if phrased this way. Because most cover crops do not add much in the way of plant food.

Don't sell cover crops short. They can work for you. They help conserve soil moisture, reduce wind and water erosion, add organic matter, improve soil structure or tilth. Clovers may add some nitrogen to the soil. Cover crops also prevent leaching of fertilizer residues, and act as indicator crops for herbicide residue.

Some will argue that using more fertilizer is all that is necessary. This is the short run view. Fertilizer can only build tilth with the crop grown. Cover crops work while the soil is otherwise idle. Personally, I would like to have cover crops as a part of my "soil bank" account.

Ed Ralph, our associate agent in Sussex County, has prepared a leaflet on cover crops. Tel. 736-1448 if you want a free copy.

Molly Vaughn, secretary of the State Board of Agriculture, was host last week to the annual meeting of the other state boards in the northeastern region of the U.S.

He proudly showed the group the still unfinished laboratory and office facilities located south of Dover on U.S. 13. We are told the State Board expects to move in within the month. The livestock building appears to be completed. This will permit the state veterinarian to isolate and otherwise examine suspected sick animals.

Cocoa bean hulls, a by-product of our local chocolate manufacturing, are being used by many local gardeners for a mulch and for plant food. They are fine if used properly. A headache if used too liberally on some plants.

I looked at some fonsythia and some hemlock that I feel quite sure were burned by the plant foods released from cocoa hulls. They analyze about the same as poultry manure. Both are twice as strong as other animal manures.

Cocoa hulls tend to attract skipper flies and their grubs. They are more of a nuisance than anything else. If used too thickly, the mulch tends to cake up. In moist weather, it will also develop a white mold which is unsightly.

Use the cocoa hulls sparingly. Mix them thoroughly with the top soil. Then when you water the soil will have a nice chocolate color and a pleasant chocolate smell.

4-H Pub. Speaking Winners Named At Conference

Seventeen-year-old Dorothy Hopkins of Lewes and Edmond Lincoln, 16, of Wilmington, were first prize winners in the state 4-H public speaking contest held June 28 as part of the 45th annual Delaware State 4-H Conference at the University of Delaware.

Both contestants had already won county 4-H public speaking contests and are now eligible for regional and national contests. Contestants in the public speaking event also included Eleanor Hertz, Wyoming; Helen McQuail, Smyrna; Jeff Mitchell, Laurel; and Blake Powell, Frederica.

Judges for the contest were Dr. Ralph Barwick, associate professor of agricultural education, and W. T. McAllister, extension farm management specialist, both at the University of Delaware.

Miss Hopkins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Hopkins, spoke on the topic, "Polish Your Personality." She said everyone constantly leaves behind clues in his personality.

"Your personality is reflected in your appearance, behavior, emotions and attitudes." It's helpful to stop and analyze your own personality, and, if necessary, polish it, she said. "To gain respect from others, you first must be able to respect yourself."

Discussing urban growth in northern Delaware, Lincoln, son of Mrs. Edmund Lincoln, said the excessive growth of cities is by no means a modern problem. Today, however, there is no clear distinction between city and country; rather, cities blend into suburbs, which blend into more and more cities. The growth of industrial giants has caused the recent increase in New Castle County.

Large cities are decreasing in size; the flight to the suburbs is on, he stated. In fact, this flight exists in such proportions that, while the city is trying to lure people, the suburbs cannot accommodate newcomers as they arrive.

Urban growth demands planning, he said. Urban housing should be attractive as well as functional; new schools will be needed, air pollution must be controlled and law enforcement must be expanded. In urban planning, it is also important to preserve the best of the historical landmarks in the county, he said.

Parity Guaranteed For '67 'Domestic Food' Wheat Crop

Wheat growers participating in the 1967 wheat program will still be guaranteed full parity on the part of their wheat crop which is allocated for domestic food use. Olin Gooden, Chairman, Kent Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation County Committee, pointed out today.

This is accomplished through the domestic marketing certificates, which will be valued at the difference between full parity as of July 1, 1967, and the

$1.25 loan value announced for the 1967 crop. (The certificate value for the '66 crop will be about $1.25 per bushel.)

Legislation authorizing the wheat program provides that price support at parity (not above and not below) be extended only to this "domestic" part of the wheat crop, the chairman explained. Only the loan, which is at a lower level, may be made available for the entire wheat crop of farmers participating in the wheat program. (In effect, the loan protects the market for all wheat growers; the support at parity is provided only to growers who through program participation contribute their part in the national effort to stabilize supplies and prices.)

Since the amount of wheat for domestic food use remains more or less constant (at an estimated 520 million bushels), the marketing certificates to be issued under the 1967 program will represent expected production on 40% of the farm allotments on participating farms. The national allotment for 1967 has been increased by 15% to 59.3 million acres, so the "domestic consumption" share represents a smaller percentage on the larger acreage. (For 1966, this allocation percentage was 45% on an effective national allotment of 51.6 million acres.)

At the national level, the chairman said, marketing certificates in 1967 will apply to a slightly larger amount of wheat than in 1966. An individual wheat producer participating in the 1967 program would receive certificates on a somewhat larger bushelage than in 1966, provided his allotment was increased by about 15%, he planted the necessary amount of his wheat acres this year, and his projected yields were the same for both years.

Sand, Silt Most Abundant Delaware Soils

Sand and silt are the most abundant soil materials in Delaware, according to "Soils of Delaware," a new publication of the University of Delaware Agricultural Experiment Station. Clay is the least abundant soil material, says the author, Leo J. Cotnoir, associate professor in the department of agronomy at the University.

Delaware soils on the Coastal Plain are mostly sandy, poorly developed, highly leached and, therefore, very low in plant nutrients. They are fairly acid, with low moisture-retaining capacity.

These soils may be very poorly drained at lower elevations because there is no fall to carry off the water. When artificially drained, they are highly productive, Cotnoir says.

If more silts and clay are present in low-lying soils, they are more difficult to drain properly. However, silty soils in the northern part of the Coastal Plain of Delaware are usually well-drained, with a high water holding capacity. These are generally the most productive soils in the state.

North of a line between Newark and Wilmington is the Piedmont, the rolling foothills of the Appalachian Mountains. The soils are older and better developed than those on the Coastal Plains, and they are well drained and fairly fertile with a fairly high water-holding capacity. Since the land is sloping, these soils are subject to erosion, according to Cotnoir.

The bulletin, "Soils of Delaware," contains a map showing the predominating soils of each area of the state. The bulletin also includes a detailed explanation of the soils found in these various soil associations. The crops best adapted to the various soils, drainage recommendations and water-holding capacities are given. Copies are available from county agents in Newark, Dover and Georgetown/ or from the Mailing Room, Agricultural Hall, University of Delaware, Newark, Del. 19711.
