

C. OF C. LEARNS COST TO USERS FOR SEWER IMPROVEMENT

The Chamber of Commerce, at its August meeting Tuesday at The Wonder R, found exactly what a proposed sewer-improvement program would cost and exactly how it would cost the individual user of sewage facilities.

The City will hold a hearing Sept. 29, on the sewer referendum and one to build a City hall. The date of the former election will be determined at the hearing, but Mayor Hatfield thought it would be Oct. 22 or Oct. 29.

In a symposium Tuesday, the mayor estimated cost of the sewer program at around $980,000, with the City bonds being $500,000, the maximum presently available. The remainder of the cost of the project, which included sewer improvements and a new sewage disposal plant, would be borne by federal and state appropriations he explained.

Continuing, he pointed out the City's share of the cost would not be borne by increasing taxes but would result from an increase in sewer usage fees.

To enable the users of sewer water to know exactly what they would have to pay, Mayor Hatfield took a typical example, as follows: The average householder pays $6.50 per quarter for water. He pays 50 per cent of this amount, or $3.25, for sewer usage. To finance the sewer improvement program, the sewer usage fee will be increased 133 per cent of the water rent, or $8,645 per quarter. Total sewage usage fee would then be $11,895 to a householder who pays $6.50 for water.

The Water and Air Resources Commission has been "bugging" the City for some time on the need for sewer improvements here, especially at the disposal plant. "We'll either have to do it voluntarily or be forced to do it," explained the mayor in reference to the improvement program.

City Manager Alfred G. B. Mann will write a brief prospectus of the program which, after approval by the Chamber, will be published in this newspaper. After the September hearing, it is hoped the Chamber will take an active part in promoting the referendum, said Carrington H. Burgess, Chamber president, Tuesday.

The meeting further revealed an annexation referendum will probably be held after the sewer referendum. Mayor Hatfield explained that, if the annexed territories desired sewers and water, they could still be provided where feasible. The postponement of the annexation referendum was caused by legal technicalities, the mayor commented.

In other business, Mayor Hatfield, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce's By-Laws Committee, said the revisions and bids had been made and were being made by committee members.

Despite the hot weather, talk turned to the Christmas program. The Christmas Decorations and Program Committee will decide on lighting, parade, and a site for a tree. The City is interested in putting up permanent outlets where feasible, for the lighting. Chairman of the committee is Vice President Joseph Madenspacher. Other members are Kesler M. Farrow, Madalyn Sharp, Donald McKnatt, Samuel A. Short, Jr., Albert C. Price, and Walter Lang.

Local Crash Injures 2

Two area men were hurt Saturday morning when their car was demolished as it veered off Delaware 14 near here, hit a pole and overturned, state police said.

State Police said the car was driven by Melvin Eddie Causey, 25, of near Houston Riding with him was Isaac William Robert Tribbett, 52, of Harrington, police said.

Causey was admitted to Milford Memorial Hospital with a possible hip fracture and severe head cuts. He was listed in fair condition Sunday night. Tribbett was released after treatment for a forehead cut.

Police say Causey was driving west at 5:35 a.m. when his car went off the left side of the highway about 1.4 miles east of Harrington. The car traveled 258 feet, hit a pole and came back to the roadway where it overturned, police say.

Transplant Dormant Perennials in Fall

Early fall is an ideal time of the year to plant or move many favorite perennials. Madonna lilies, oriental poppies, peonies and iris are dormant and should be planted now, according to Robert F. Stevens, extension horticulturist at the University of Delaware.

Although most lilies are planted in September or October, madonna lilies should be planted in late August. Madonna bulbs need time to root and make new top growth this year. They should only be divided and moved when they are so overcrowded that the flowers are small and few in number.

Plant the bulbs two inches deep and if the garden soil does not have excellent drainage, put a layer of clean and under the bulb.

Oriental poppies make a bright display in flower gardens. Hybrids are available in a wide variety of colors from soft pastels to brilliant reds. They should be planted while dormant in August.

Since these poppies are deep-rooting with a long tap root, they must be dug up at least 18-inches deep for transplanting, Stevens warns. They also require a well-drained soil for best results. Old plant clumps may be divided every four or five years.

The root into pieces approximately two inches long and be right side up, Stevens cautions. Careful to plant the roots the next spring. Spring plantings will grow, but the peonies will not flower the first year.

Iris should be divided now, according to Stevens. They will produce better flowers if divided every four or five years. Cut the rhizomes or thickened roots with a spade or knife and replant with the rhizome just below the soil surface. Check the roots carefully for borers and discard all affected parts.

Poems from Paradise Pastures

By W. Cliff Miller

"THE POET"

A poet sees rhymes in woodlands,
 Rhymes in falling rain;
 Beautiful verse on flowers that grow
 Verse in the waving grain.

The homeliest weed holds music,
 The creepiest thing in the pen;
 Hold verses that only a poet,
 Might put into words again.

I believe that God as a poet,
 Made verses that we might see;
 But the poet puts them on paper,
 To be read by you and me!

"What Is An American?"

He is the guy who yells for the Government to balance the budget, then takes the last dime he has to make the down payment on his car.

He whips the enemy, then gives them the shirt off his back.

He yells for speed laws that will stop fast driving, but won't buy a car if it won't go 100 mph.

He knows the lineup of every big league team, and doesn't know half the words to the Star Spangled Banner.

He will spend half a day looking for vitamin pills to make him live longer, then drive 80 mph. on slick pavement to make up for lost time.

He ties up his dog, but let's his 16-year-old son run wild.

An American will work hard on a farm so he can move into town, where he can make more money so he can move back on the farm.

He is the only fellow in the world who will pay 50 cents to park his car while he eats a 25-cent sandwich.

He is never ready for war; but he has never lost one.

"Hell Bent For Election"

By W. C. Burgess

It seems like I ran across an old heading I had up; and it fits this time and tide like nobody's business. The politics that lost in the election—I understand—are looking forward to a slight refund;—and the winners—in the primaries—I mean—are girding up for a little action later.

When I was a little child—I borrowed ideas off my father and mother—Lookit, they're walking—I'll try it—going; a busted snoot. This probably sounds like deep water to you; but what I am getting at is this—I don't know who coined this phrase—but I'm plagiarizing—which means borrowing someone else's idea, or writing—because it fits the sitchiation—as the Pennsylvania Dutch sometimes call it.

Go git 'em boys—"We're all hell bent for election."—both Democrats and Republicans!

Leadership Training Night For W.S.C.S.

C. King. The local society has definite need for this training effort to discover the potentialities of its members. The 1966-67 program book—"Dialogue and Design"—will be presented by Mrs. Charles Dukes, vice president, who will give an explanation of its special title and its content. The other district officers and secretaries will use other ideas that will help make it possible for members to communicate with one another, enabling the local member to become thoroughly acquainted with her responsibility, including her relationship to various committees of the Woman's Society. At the close of the program a brief session will be held for all members on Committee of Nominations, since this will be "election year" for most societies.

Mrs. King continues: A leadership training session is not planned just to discover how to make the local society's programs run more smoothly but to discover ways in which the society's program can better serve its members and the church membership as a whole. Some objectives: better trained leaders; meaningful program foundations; more effective relationship of the society and the church; increase in knowledge in the total program of the church and its boards and commissions; and discovery of the full meaning of Mission emphasis in all its programming.

There will be sales of handbooks, program books and other materials for use in the coming year, prior to and following the meeting says Mrs. Emerson Sapp, secretary of program materials.

Lawn Meeting Scheduled

A Lawn Field Day is scheduled for September 7, at Agricultural Hall, University of Delaware, according to David V. Tatnall, assistant New Castle County agent for ornamental horticulture. There will be two meetings covering the same material beginning at 3 p. m. and 6:30 p. m. In the event of rain, the meeting will be held on Sept. 14.

A tour of the turf plots near Agricultural Hall will include areas with different lawn grass mixtures, ground covers and varieties of fescue and bluegrass. The sprinkler irrigation systems on the four feature pop-up sprinkler irrigation systems on the four feature pop-up sprinklers, quick-couplers for rotating sprinklers self-moving units and Sub-surface irrigation systems are used on several of the turf plots.

All the steps in the establishment of a lawn will be demonstrated, including the use of sterilanes for weed control seed bed preparation, lime and fertilizer applications, selection of grass seed, seeding and mulching.

According to Tatnall, a tour of the University's soil testing laboratory will provide an opportunity for home gardeners, professional turfmen and seed dealers to inspect the recently modernized and enlarged facilities.

A discussion session will follow the tours to enable the specialists to try to solve lawn problems.

Mrs. George W. Jones Sr. Mrs. Bessie L. Jones, 84, of Milford, died Tuesday at the Fletcher Nursing Home in Felton after a long illness.

Mrs. Jones was the widow of George W. Jones, Sr.

She is survived by one son, George Jr., of Milford, and one grandson.

Services will be Saturday afternoon at 1:30 at the Berry Funeral Home in Milford. Friends may call at the funeral home Friday night.

Later Harvest For Silage Corn

Drought-damaged corn should not be harvested for silage until the rains come. Delaying harvest may increase dry matter yields and reduce the possibility of nutritional problems from wilted corn, according to Dr. William Mitchell, extension agronomist at the University of Delaware.

Some of the corn crops may not make grain this year, but if rains do come, most of the feed value will be in the fodder. Late in the fall, corn will make more forage than almost any other crop, since dry matter will continue to increase as long as the leaves are green.

Corn that has not been as severely damaged and has made grain should be in the dent stage before being harvested for silage. The grain yield will be higher and there is less water to handle, Dr. Mitchell says. Corn cut in the milk or roasting ear stage has only half as much grain in the silage compared to corn cut when the grains are well denting.

If there are large fields to cut, the harvest will have to start in time to save the crop for silage. But, not too early.

Dr. Mitchell advises harvesting the corn quickly, packing the air out of the silage and sealing out the air. This requires a roof on upright silos, with a plastic cap on top of the silage.

Hold this plastic cap tightly against the walls of the silo with sawdust, chopped weeds or any material that will hold the cap down and can be easily thrown out of the silo. A six-mil black plastic cover on trench or bunker silos weighted down protected by five inches of sawdust, will help preserve high quality silage, according to Dr. Mitchell.

"The Courtmartial At Benning-Rohrbach"

By W. C. Burgess

Time: 1944. Theme Song: "Oh Where Is Our Wandering—Pardonne, Moi—Wandering Boy, Tonight?"

I think one of the Raughley boys was in Benning-Rohrbach, but possibly not at the same time.

I remember the little deal, of course, but what I remember most, is: "It was the day the Luftwaffe wanted to play!" By the time us boys got through gawking; they were gone! An American Mustang (not a horse, a plane), hugging the trees. It had American markings; the next one—No. 2 had no markings at all. Number three, oh! pardon, me! A Mustang with the German Cross on her. In other words, the Germans wanted to let us know that they captured a few of ours once in awhile, too. You see, they flew right over the house tops; so you couldn't shoot at them. What a show! Gawk, brother; gawk brother, gawk. We didn't even have time to squawk before they were gone. What a show, little Jo."

Back to where W. C. got his lumps, again.

Now the boys were all ordered by the Commanding General to take a little trip to a rest camp. But who wanted to go! Not little Junior! It seemed like the corporals and the sergeants all got to go to Paris; while the Pfc's and the yardbirds all got to go to a little beat up old town called Morhange, away back. The boys said that place is no good. So here comes Lieutenant Senselman, and gives me a direct order to go. I didn't want to go! go! go!; but I had to, you know! know! know! I get on the truck, and what do you know, know, know. Right there in the blankety-blankety truck was "Cuzz" Lanier—the same guy who was with ole' daddy in the courtmartial at Luneville.

Now the captain knew that was sure dynamite, and it wuz'. "Morhange, here we come; Morhange, here we go!" "Bed check, aw heck!" "Me and "Cuzz" heads or better diggin's. Now Nancy is "the Paris of the East." So, Cuzz and I pays 'em a sociable call. We come back that night and find out there is no bed check. The next morning, we head back to Nancy, "the Paris of the East, and we don't go back to Morhange, no mo'. To start off with, all the other outfits had blanket passes—of course you had to get your own blonde, brunette or redhead — you see, they weren't GI issue.—Us, our passes said Morhange, and that is all."

Now the MP station was in the railroad station in Nancy. Incidentally, Clarence Cohee, of "the rattlesnake on the Mexican border, was also there, and Metz, both.

Lanier and I couldn't get a ride to Metz, so that is why we went back to Nancy. Right across from the railroad station in Nancy was a high class joint. It was so high class that you had to drink your vodka out of tea cups. The city had been bombed, but good, and it seems like they had bombed out all of the glasses, too. "Oh! well, why be different, we can drink out of tea cups, too—just like the other boys do!"

The last night came along, and we could have caught a ride back to Morhange, where the truck would pick us up and take us back to our outfit; so I said to "Cuzz"; let's stay, we got passes!" "Cuzz" said ok! Bombs away." And so, we stayed."

When we got around to it, we turned in to the M. P.'s.

Man, I hate to walk home, when I can ride. The M. P.'s didn't know what to do. They tried to pawn us off, on some officer at a hospital, but he wouldn't take the 'whatcha-ma-callit' — the responsibility — so they take us down to the M. P. station, but don't book us. Boy, what a joint! Audey Murphy's 3rd Infantry division had gone back to the front the day before, and naturally had left a few of the troops behind—you see, I don't have a patent on going A.W.O.L. The 82nd Airborne boys were there, too; but if they had left any awol's there, I never heard 'em squawk. But one guy was screamin' bloody, murder. He said, "Ole Colonel Charles will take my medic's band and give me a rifle. It seems like that there only got to be standing room only in that ole' M. P. station; so soon they came back and booked us all; and called up our outfit to come and get us. Now everything was all "copacetic" so far, which I think is Harrington slang for 'ok'. But the lieutenant didn't like to have to come so far to get us. He went back, so they say, and raised hell in the ole' hunting grounds. So, here I go, on "The courtmartial at Benning-Rohrbach. This time, Major Dunbar.

"How low can a man git?" "If they had kept 'em coming, the pfc's would have been trying me sooner or later!" Moskal, out of Chicago: "Burgess, you're only going to get $10, this time." "So, I'm tried before I even go in." I used to relieve Moskal on the switchboard, and he forgot, of course, to un the toggle switch, to cut off the conversation, and he heard it all."

The officers know sometimes, that you are listening in on them; and they will tell you politely, to turn off the toggle switch. If they tell you that, you turn it off; and if they have something else on their minds — one track mind, of course—why then you just listen in. You know, one of those neighborly jobs. I've done it many a time. How you gonna get caught? Just tell 'em you were busy doing something else, and forgot to turn it off!

For instance, Captain Joe Delaney to one of the officers: "I wants me a good southern boy to send to England."

Burgess started to holler: "Captain, I'm your man." After all, the captain was from West Memphis, Ark., and that was where I was born. I decided maybe, I just better not, though. The captain might have let me go; but the chewing I would have got for monitoring his calls sure wouldn't have been worth it. Later on, the poor old captain didn't have enough points to get home on, so he got transferred, and old Churchill got to go to England, anyway!

"Burgess, report to the battery commander." "Now, let's see, now, now! now! now!" "Have I been awol?" No! no! no!" "Maybe the Croix de Guerre?" "No! the officers voted themselves that."

"Pfc. Burgess!" Oh! yes! I got that stripe back again—it seems like we're old buddies—"Would you like to go back to England, and see Jeannie with the light brown hair?" "Now, how did he know, that?"

Either the Welch dames that ran around with the officers told him that; or the officers themselves told him.

"Why, but of course, and away we go." Some day, maybe—awol in London, England, Dungannon, North Ireland, Berchtesgarden, Germany, Neurenberg, Germany, Nashville, Tenn., Lebanon, Tenn., and "Awol In The Ozarks." "More one night stands than a carnival." Never take two, though, because they think you might really mean it!"

These articles are written mostly for the boys who are in the service, or who have been. So, I'm already tried, huh! now, with apologies to the public on what I am going to say. This phrase is GI, Gyrene, Seabees, Waac's Waves—any branch of the service—but usually not for consumption by the public. If you want to talk about it—see your congressman. "I am going to r-m somebody a new f-- for sentencing me before I am even tried. And so, the story goes.

"$10; that is all!" "Sir, I am the prisoner before the bar; I have rights as a defendant before the bar!" "What bar, I don't see any whiskey around." "Oh, now, don't tell me lawyers never stand in front of a bar—Both kinds."

The Major said, "Pfc. Burgess, say your piece!" "But of course, broke from pfc. down to private again!"

"Alright, sir. 'How come the corporals and the sarge's get to go to Paris, and you send us pfc's, and us yardbirds to an old beat-up town with passes only to that town.' Why all the other outfits had blanket passes (without any dames to go in 'em, of course.) "Now the major, I knew he would have to go back to the Lieutenant Colonel to give me more, but he laughed his head off, and left me standing right there in the middle of the room. He went down to my captain and liked to have chewed his head off.

I guess I'm still standing, there, as far as I know. However, on the next truck to Paris, it seems like they must have ditched the Morhange, idea. On the next truck to Paris, you should have seen my boys. The yardbirds were so proud. They don't know how they got there; but Mama's and Papa's sons were all going to Paris, with the rest of the boys. They don't know how they got there, but I do! I got in the middle of the Major's, the Colonel's, and the Captain's private war.

Oh yes, Brazitsky, the truck driver, a pfc., was one of the first to go to Paris. He owed me six bucks, too. He came back from Paris so crooked they thought he was crazy, so they sent him to the nuthouse. Now, where do you think the nuthouse, was?" Back in Paris, of course, it sounds to me like a put up job.

Now, one sergeant was on the captain's back, all the time. The captain got tired of his begging; so he sent the sergeant back to the hospital. Where is the hospital? Back in Paris. If a guy don't want to fight; he is no good to anybody in the armed services; so, send him back.

Of course, both of these boys are probably getting a nice pension, too. Who was the man who fished in a water bucket during World War I? He was quite cagey. He got out of the service and got a pension, too. Crazy, like a fox.

I don't know who changed the orders, but I know who asked for the boys during the "Court martial at Benning-Rohrbach."

Incidentally, Bobby Hobbs was in Nancy, "the Paris of the East," himself.

The Light Colonel and the Major was always ganging up on my captain anyway. I didn't know who gave the order, but maybe the Colonel and the Major may have cut the orders themselves; and they got a good chance to chew the captain through me; I don't know."

But I do know this, every once in a while, the captain would get in the kitchen and dish out gurb to the boys; you know, to show you are a man of this world and also one of the boys, even if you are "the big Indian on the post."

Le Capitan was dishing out gurb with the cooks, and up comes ole Winnie fer his mashed potatoes. The captain turned his back and liked to missed the mess kit. With a lot of saving, ole' Winnie managed to catch the 'taters before they hit the floor.

"Burgess, report to the orderly room."

"What fer."

"Why to get your good conduct medal."

"Aw! Nuts, I don't want any blankety-blankety good conduct medal." "I've been through enough action." "They ought to give me a bronze star."

Coming Up: "The half-track from Oran"

"Who stole the half-track out of the M. P. station in Oran?"

"The T-5 that never hit the bulletin board?"—so on, etc., far into the night.

"Jeannie with the light brown hair."

"The coal miner's daughter."

"Your cheatin' heart"—my views on it."

"One nose too many — take a recount—a German soldier!"

"The little drunk from Fontainblu"

"The little drunk from Berchtesgattenn."

"Who slurped up Hitler's wine?"

"Weeine in the minefield."

"King Ludwig's 26-foot bathtub."

"The steam messed up the murals on the wall."

"The broken first sergeant."

"Please sergeant, get back in the ranks with the other boys. They couldn't read your records while you were on furlough. The new sergeant came along and took the role call. This sergeant was a king, too, but they broke his heart, anyway. Occasionally, there is a miscarriage of justice, but not too often. They were right all the way when they throwed it on me, though. "Where is Burgess?" "He fell on a snake—pardon me, stake last night during the battery party. He is in the heater room, roasting. The lieutenant with the black eyes and the staff sergeant came in and looked ole' W. C. over, just to be sure I was there and not awol. What a party."

"Headquarters Battery, 13 men awol, sir." "Make it 12 sir, Burgess is in the heater room roasting."

Jefferson City, Mo., certainly has a good police department and a good fire department. The police was loading 'em up, and the fire department was hosing 'em down."

"Good bye battery parties. The lieutenants all ran around with souvenirs—black eyes— and was hollerin' "whee! let's go back again."

"Would any of you enlisted men like to go to the wood shed with ole' daddy, with the dukes, too. Andso ended the battery party at Jeff City."

Not one man was left standing that night. When they went through the M.P. gate; nobody was standing up but the driver.

SAILING ON DELAWARE BAYS

It's a wonder of Wonderful Delaware to go for a sail. Delaware Bay, Rehoboth Bay, and Indian River Bay are ideal for sailing—there's almost always a good steady wind, the water is clean and clear, and the sailing clubs are all easy to reach.

Delawareans are fast discovering that sailing is the absolutely perfect family sport. The largest sailboats in ordinary use on Delaware Bays require no more than a three-man crew, and mother and the kids can easily learn to crew while dad minds the tiller. And then there are the sailfish, no bigger than you are, which can be lifted into the water by one man or two small boys, and easily sailed by anyone who can swim. In fact, the bays are so shallow near shore that it's a common sight to see kids standing knee-deep righting their sailfish after they've accidentally dumped over.

But not only children and families love Delaware sailing—the British Embassy boat is kept at Lewes.

Since Delaware bays are shallow, all the boats that sail them have center-boards—a keel boat cannot operate in shallow water. The classes of boats to be seen on the bays are easily recognized, although the tiny sailfish is seen everywhere.

Lewes likes Mobjacks. This is a very new class of boat, 17 feet long and weighing only about 330 lbs. because it is of all fiberglass construction. It is sloop rigged and carries a spinnaker. Mobjacks have caught on fast because of their self-bailing characteristics and because the light weight makes it possible to get the boat into the water, or onto its trailer, in about 10 minutes.

There are at least a hundred Sailfish at Lewes, where Junior Division races are held each Sunday, and the interest of the young in sailing has been stimulated by the donation of a perpetual trophy. Six Catamarans, a double-hull sailing boat, are based at Lewes, and in the canal there are two Trimarans (three hulls, about 30 feet long—almost like a houseboat).

The Lewes Yacht Club, at Lewes Beach near Roosevelt Inlet, is far and away the oldest in Delaware, having been founded in 1930. At present it has 230 members, not all of whom sail. The club plans, in the near future, to build launching ramps and slips on the Lewes-Rehoboth canal side of its land, near the present public launching ramp.

The Rehoboth Bay Sailing Club, at the head of Rehoboth Bay at Dewey Beach, has about 90 members. Here Lightnings are the preferred boat. A Lightning is rigged like a Mobjack, but is two feet longer and weighs more than twice as much—therefore the club has built many slips, and a sturdy block-and-tackle hoist to get boats into the water. There are 10 Lightnings based there, and about 80 Skipjacks (a 14-foot sloop-rigged boat), 6 Celebrities (a more elegant version of the Lightning), 4 O'Day Sailers (slightly smaller) and 2 Catamarans.

Most Delaware sailing enthusiasts have their own boats, but it is possible to rent a sailboat—particularly a Sailfish—at the Rehoboth Bay Sailing Club.

About 60 families are members of the New Castle Sailing Club, which was organized in 1953. The club owns six Thistles (a 17 foot sloop-rigged boat that might be called the granddaddy of the Mobjack) which it keeps at New Castle Common, just south of Battery Park. Members sail from April to November, with races every Saturday during the summer. The New Castle club is unique in that it keeps going during the winter with meetings for dinner and movies or other programs on sailing.

Indian River Yacht Club, at Oak Orchard where Indian River becomes Indian River Bay, has about 10 or 15 members who sail. They have four Lightnings, and some Penguins (a two-man racing dinghy).

Sailing is a joy in itself, but the excitement is in racing, and weekend racing is the great thing at all of these clubs. Not only the trim of the boat and its captain's sailing skill counts, but also his quick thinking and good judgment in planning ahead.

Not only do club members race against each other every weekend, but there are invitational meets with other sailing clubs in Delaware and elsewhere. Each class of boat has a national organization which holds national races each year. Lightnings, very popular not only in Delaware, have regional races to qualify for the national race, and the "Dixie Districts" including more than 40 boats, were held at Rehoboth a few weeks ago. Several members of the Rehoboth club also raced recently in the Sailfish Nationals on Long Island.

Since Mobjacks are so new, with only about a dozen racing fleets so far, they have no qualifying races, and several members from Lewes will be participating in the Mobjack Nationals in Virginia.

A race is a thrill to watch: The racing committee lays out the course with buoys just before the race begins, since wind conditions determine the direction, and the first leg must be into the wind. After that, it all depends—there can be straight downwind legs, and what is called a "windward reach" where spinnakers can be used at an angle.

The white flag from the committee boat at the starting buoy signals that the race will begin in ten minutes, the blue flag means five minutes, and the red flag means "Start!". Boats race windward to round the first buoy, perhaps a mile-and-a-half away. It is on the approach to Kaffeeklatch with Eleanor K. Vosnell. It's great to be young at heart. But, if you're no longer young in body be wise enough to know your limits and take life a little easy. Falls take their greatest toll among the older set, so watch your step. Wear your prescription glasses so you can see where you're going. Let there be light (overhead or flashlight) in the darkness. What you can't see can trip you at dusk or after dark. It's a word to the wise that scatter rugs should be anchored and the tub equipped with a grab rail. If an electric heating pad is a comfort to stiff joints, stay awake while using it. Never put pins into such a pad or into electric blanket either. Be sure hands and body are dry when you have the electric pad or blanket in operation. If you're forgetful, keep a chart of what pills you took and when. Never trust your memory. If you must take medicine during the night, leave the prescribed dose—no more—one the night table, lest you accidentally over do it. Don't try to carry heavy or clumsy bundles, especially don't carry them up or down stairs. Don't climb. Let younger folks fetch and seek for you. A fall is dangerous at any time but doubly so when you're older because bones are brittle and breaks take longer to heal. Don't let a needless accident tarnish the enjoyment of what should be really your golden years.

The people of St. Stephen's affectionately refer to "Father Hinks" as their Vicar Emeritus as he served St. Stephen's for many years in the past. Since retiring he has been counselor and friend to the vicars of St. Stephen's and has always been ready to serve the people in every way. He has expressed his willingness to be called in the event of any emergency during the vicar's time away. Father Hinks will have both the Sunday and mid-week services during this time. The St. Stephen's Episcopal Young Churchmen sponsored dances have been a great success during the summer. They will conclude their Tuesday night schedule on August 30. All of the young people who have been attending the dances are reminded that the St. Stephen's E.Y.C. will begin their fall schedule the Sunday after Labor Day at 7 p. m. They are all invited to stop by on Sunday evenings.

Veteran's News QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q—I am a member of the National Guard and have served three years in this capacity, including a 15-day active duty period each year. Does this service qualify me for educational assistance under the new G.I. Bill? A—National Guard drills and 15-day tours of training duty do not qualify a person for the new G.I. Bill. Eligibility requires at least 181 days active military service (as opposed to training), or if service were less than this period of time, it must have been terminated by reason of service-incurred disability. The veteran must have also served on or after February 1, 1955. Q—Would a doctor participating in the VA Career Resident Program as a full time physician in the Department of Medicine and Surgery be eligible to schooling under the new G.I. Bill? A—No. Those participating in the residency and internship program under 38 USC 4114(b) would be entitled. Q—I am a serviceman now on active duty. I previously served more than 180 days, part of this period after January 31, 1955, and honorably discharged. I plan to continue my education at a nearby college and my duty schedule will permit me to carry an academic load of 10 semester hours. What is the rate of educational allowance payable to me by the VA. I have a wife and one child. A—You will be entitled to the same 1/2 time rate of $115 per month which is payable to a discharged veteran with 2 dependents (VAR 14136(B)).

Truck Traffic Gives Highways Bad Beating

Increased size and weight of truck traffic are giving Delaware's highways a beating according to the 1965 Loadometer Survey recently released by the DSHP.

Although representing slightly under 20% of all traffic, truck traffic is a major factor in determining the paving thickness for new facilities. Each year since 1941, a truck weight and characteristic survey has been conducted by the Delaware State Highway Department in cooperation with the Bureau of Public Roads. During the past decade, the report points out, there has been an increase in 5 axle tractor-semitrailers and a decrease in 3-axle tractor-semitrailers resulting in a dramatic increase in the average total weight of loaded vehicles.

Five-axle loaded truck combinations range in weight from 20,000 to 85,000 pounds—the kind of weight that plays havoc with road surfaces.

As a connecting link between the north-south corridor, Delaware will continue to experience increased heavy truck traffic, a factor that will have major influence on road design criteria.

Oilers, Taylor & Messick, Lead Softball Tourney

Local entries, Harrington Oilers and Taylor & Messick are currently leading in the Moose Softball Tournament after two weekends of play. Each as 2-0 Slim's Health Club of Dover is next in line after a 6-5 victory over Manlove of Seaford.

Last Friday night Harrington Oilers rallied in the late stages to defeat Coca-Cola of Dover, 5-2. Long for the Oilers and Adams of Coca-Cola were reached for six hits each. Goldsborough and Usilton of Coca-Cola had two safeties apiece. Ron Collison had two hits in two trips for the Oilers.

Slim's edged Manlove in the second game, but had to stave off a last-inning rally to do it. Manlove, with several Greenwood players in the lineup, scored three times in the last frame. Winning pitcher, Mercer Short, had two bingles in as many at-bats. George Langford had three of Manlove's six hits.

Saturday's single contest saw Taylor and Messick put Redi-Mix of Dover out of the double elimination tourney, as T & M banged out 23 hits and 31 runs. Collins held Redi-Mix to one run, seven hits and four runs. Each member of the winners hit safely at least once. Bob Collins, Carl Wright and Leonard Outten had four bingles each. Steve Motter and Leslie Wix added six more.

Cross-Country Practice Started Wednesday

Coach Harold McDonald's Harrington High cross-country team started practice on Wednesday afternoon. On a percentage basis, the harriers, since the inception of cross-country here in 1958, have far outstripped all other sports at H.H.S. Eight straight winning seasons have been chalked up. Four of these campaigns saw the galloping Lions finish unbeaten. Long, winning streaks are commonplace here.

The 1963 team was a state champion outfit. Harry Knotts was individual state champion in 1960 defeating 120 rivals. No other runner or team outside of New Castle County has ever won a state title.

The 1965 team lost only one meet, the opener, against a powerful Easton, Md., septet, but rebounded to win 12 meets in a row and annex the Henlopen Conference Championship. The Henlopen trophy has wound up in Harrington's trophy case each time one was put up for grab.

Quite a few local lads have been working out on their own prior to the official opening of practice. Some ran in summer track meets in Wilmington.

Chris Wetherold, Nick Morris, Ron Morris and team captain, Dan Hicks, are the leading varsity candidates at present.

Newcomers, Allen Parker and Jim Redden, are setting a hot pace in the junior high section. Dan Hitchens is a proven performer from last year with a swift 13.38 clocking for 2.4 miles to his credit.

Charlie Brown and Joey Gray are in fine early-season fettle and appear ready to set new personal marks in the next few days.

Others to start running early are Tony Kibler, Brinley Brode, Mike Davis, Gary Redden, Brad Morris.

At present, this is a young squad with only one senior, Captain Dan Hicks. We don't have the number of candidates yet, but it is not expected to approach last year's high-water mark of sixty. Harrington High's brand new junior high football team will siphon off some of the heavier, slower boys.

But everyone loves to be part of a winning tradition, so it is expected that cross-country will still get a good number of the smaller, lighter lads.

Ocean Downs Raceway News

Ocean Downs Raceway starts its final week of racing Monday night and race secretary Don Roberts has come up with another outstanding card of racing Friday and Saturday for this weekend.

The track, through its chairman of the board, J. C. Robinson, is now giving away $250 each week to the three leading drivers of the week.

The first awards of $150, $75, and $25 went to Chuck Ferranto, West Islip, L.I.; Louis Floyd, Exmore, Va., and Guy Lockerman, Jr., Middletown, Del.

The awards made Monday night went to Roscoe Rodgers, Springfield, O.; Ed Crowson, Jr., Harrington, and Williams Spencer, Sr., Lancaster, Pa.

Of course the big "fish" is the $1,000 check that goes to the leading driver of the entire meeting.

Rodney Warren from the Eastern Shore of Virginia has been the leader in that department for the past two weeks but is being closely pressed by Roscoe Rodgers.

Although Warren comes from the Capeville area of Virginia, he has no permanent home. He hangs his hat wherever he races and he has a son and a daughter overseas in the armed services.

Warren was a catcher for the Cape Charles ball club and also for the Belle Haven Indians in the Delmarva League that was in being right after World War II.

Last Saturday night was a most happy one for Bobby O. Clark, Rock Hall, Md., grocer. Mis Bayside Doll, with Ray Gosman up, won the sixth race and George P. Mahoney, candidate for governor in the Democratic primary, was there in the winner's circle to present a trophy. When Mahoney was being introduced Clark, the latter said, "We know each other: He's been in my store at Rock Hall."

A practice round is scheduled for Friday, September 9.

Method of play will be over 36 holes (18 holes each day) with the winner and runner-up being determined by the lowest 36-hole gross score in the field. Prizes will also be awarded to winners and runners-up in three classes A, B and C, broken down according to handicaps, Dean also announced.

The defending champion, and also the 1962 and 1964 winner is Willard B. McConnell, from the Greenhill Golf Association. KNIT NEWS beautiful and reliable fabrics, available at a reasonable price. Paris designers recognize this is a fabric in tune with the times, and they have inspired many of the new fabric designs, she points out.

Knitwear can adapt quickly to the whimsies of rapidly changing fashions. Modern knitting machines can produce a wider variety of fabrics much more quickly than weaving looms. In fact, it can take only 60 days from idea to sales rack to make a newly designed knit, while it might take from six months to a year for a new woven fabric. Speed has the added advantage of reducing the price a consumer must pay.

The development of techniques for bonding one fabric to another has increased the use of knitted fabrics also. Bonding gives stability to an unstable fabric so that it can be easily cut and sewn. Knit fabrics never before adaptable for garments can now be used in many new ways.

Take another look at the knits this fall and in the future, Miss Reed advises. There are more exciting knit fabrics to come.

Die-Back of Rhododendron

Die-back of Rhododendron and Pieris has been a persistent problem in this area for some time. The fungus Botryosphaeria ribis is a common cause of this problem.

Plants with die-back have browned terminal buds and stems. The leaves are also brown, wilted and rolled up. Infected stems shrivel and a canker forms encircling the stem. All parts above this canker are killed; the surface of the dead plant parts is roughened and usually covered by black fungus fruiting bodies.

To prevent the spread of this fungus, all dead plant parts should be pruned and burned. It is important to cut well below the cankered areas on the stems.

Apply a maneb fungicide at the rate of one tablespoon per gallon of water, with three applications made at ten daily intervals. Thorough coverage of all plant parts, particularly stems, is essential.

Slime Molds

Many calls from homeowners have been received recently about slime molds. Mulches around roses and other plants, including grass, can become covered with slime molds. These are blue, black or orange, crumbly fungal growths. They are harmless to plants, but unsightly in appearance.

Most slime molds will disappear under dry conditions or upon raking. Spraying with any garden fungicide will also help.

"If You Are Good Enough."—U. S. Army News.

One of the greatest challenges ever made was inscribed on the famous Flagg Recruiting poster over fifty years ago. It read "If you are good enough." No more challenging words were ever written and it applies in the U. S. Army as well as civilian life. These dynamic words capture the spirit of the New Action Army today.

Today a soldier has to be good enough in so many more ways than any soldier ever had to be before. We live in a technical age, an age that demands education and training and a soldier who can earn added responsibilities, advancement and prestige. He must be good enough to train for special assignments in an advanced electronic age, where you must be an advanced-minded soldier. The Army asks a lot from a soldier today, education, travel, ability to train and learn, physical and moral courage. Yes, you must know how to handle a rifle and a host of other weapons—but this is only a start—for alone these are not enough. Today in an army where nuclear weapons, missiles, advanced communications and electric systems and processing systems are its tools, you must be able to stand up and be counted with the best and to handle the job assigned you with skill and knowledge.

The Army offers today a challenging career educationally as well as soldier-wise. The Army can assist you in education and training to make you the best of soldiers in the New Action Army.

If you meet all the requirements and pass the tests, you will be given a written guarantee assuring you of the training you select and qualify for. There are selected tests to master in the vocational training program, the graduate specialist program, and the combat arms program. The guarantee comes with all three programs once you have qualified. A career in the U.S. Army can pay dividends in many ways you never realized before. See your local Army Recruiter in your area and find out where

U. of D. Bulletin Substation History

Food, clothing and shelter—three of man's basic needs—come from the farm. American farmers, backed up by research and education, are able to supply an abundance of food and fiber for a rapidly growing population. The University of Delaware's Georgetown Substation has produced many research findings that have helped make this agricultural achievement a reality.

This year marks the 25th anniversary of the purchase of the substation farm. "The First 25 Years," a bulletin written by J. Frank Gordy, substation director, W. T. McAllister, extension economist, E. M. Rahn, associate professor of horticulture and Jerry Webb, agriculture editor, all at the University of Delaware, gives a history of the development of the substation and the services it has offered and continues to offer Delaware agriculture.

The farm that became the substation was purchased in August, 1941, and the first research projects began in May, 1942. Apple soil management studies, strawberry fertilization and watermelon and peach variety trials were among the first experiments. Plans for a broiler house were also made that first year.

Since then thousands of experiments have been conducted. Substation scientists are constantly testing new crop varieties that are important to Delaware, including corn, soybeans, lima beans, potatoes, watermelons, tomatoes and peppers. Research results have helped farmers stay in business by pointing out the best varieties available.

New varieties that gained wide acceptance, including Bethel and Delmar soybeans, Thaxter lima bean, Delsler tomato and Delaware Belle pepper, were developed at the Georgetown substation. The bulletin points out that the Bethel soybean, planted on 20,000 acres in Delaware in 1963, increased gross returns to growers by approximately $100,000.

Research at the substation on poultry disease control has made great strides. The sulfa drug treatment for coccidiosis control was tested at the substation in the early 1940's. Accepted by the industry, the treatment has saved growers millions of dollars in chicken losses. The use of aureomycin to control Infectious Synovitis in poultry was established at the substation and its use is now world-wide.

Poultry research helped the Delmarva peninsula maintain its position as a leader in poultry housing and environmental control, the bulletin states. Studies on insulation and mechanical ventilation made it possible to maintain optimum broiler house temperatures, and experiments with an electronic computer formulating broiler diets raised nutrition levels.

Irrigation experiments conducted during the past ten years showed the profitability of irrigating certain crops, the best times to irrigate and the interaction of irrigation with other cultural practices. Results have guided farmers in the use of irrigation, the publication points out.

The substation continues to serve farmers, agricultural businesses and homemakers in many ways in addition to the research programs. Poultry growers, servicemen and hatcherymen are well acquainted with its poultry diagnostic laboratory.

The staff at the substation also diagnoses many other plant and animal problems; the station serves as a pick-up point for soil tests and provides facilities for hundreds of educational meetings each year. Information on such things as crop production methods, farm management techniques and homemaking skills is made available to the people of southern Delaware by the substation.

The bulletin, "The First 25 Years," includes further information on the history and the future of agriculture as well as the substation. Published by the Agricultural Experiment Station and the Cooperative Extension Service at the University of Delaware, the bulletin is available from the Mailing Room, Agricultural Hall, University of Delaware, Newark.

Delaware Farm Labor News

STATE SUMMARY

The potato harvest continues to be the largest user of seasonal labor; approximately 1,350 workers were employed this week. More than 1,000 workers are employed in the harvest of cucumbers, tomatoes, snap beans, and fruit. Most growers report reduced yields as a result of the dry growing season. The temporary office at the Laurel Auction Block continues to meet the needs of watermelon and cantaloupe growers.

WILMINGTON AREA
(Lower New Castle County)

The potato harvest is moving steadily and smoothly, despite the fact that many crews are short from three to ten workers. Price and demand have remained steady. There are approximately 450 workers in the potato harvest. The crop is below normal in both size and yield. The dry, hot weather also affected the tomato crop. Approximately 200 migrant workers and 15 contract Puerto Ricans are picking tomatoes. Peaches, cucumbers, and sweet corn are employing another 150 workers.

DOVER AREA
(Kent County)

750 to 800 migratory workers and 30 contract Puerto Ricans are harvesting potatoes. Some crews are shorthanded, but the harvest is progressing fairly well. The tomato crop is maturing rapidly now and picking is at its peak. There are approximately 250 to 300 workers picking tomatoes. Another 275 workers are picking cucumbers, peaches, and sweet corn for the fresh market. Harvesting cucumbers should be practically finished by the end of this week.

GEORGETOWN AREA
(Sussex County)

Area growers continue to rely on irrigation; lack of rain and hot weather has depleted soil moisture. Processing snap beans, lima beans, tomatoes and peppers continues, with ample labor at present. Local and off shore workers picking cucumbers, tomatoes, peaches, potatoes, and peppers for processing and fresh market. Laurel Auction Block reports anticipated picking of 90,000 to 110,000 watermelon and 40,000 to 70,000 cantaloupe daily this week. The Farm Labor office at Laurel Auction Block reports over 200 job openings for this week.
