Plant New Lawns This Fall

Many Delaware homeowners are planning to replace drought-damaged lawns this fall. Whether you are planting a new lawn or repairing an old one, fall is the best time of the year to seed, according to Dr. William Mitchell, extension agronomist at the University of Delaware.

Speaking at the recent Lawn Field Day, Mitchell said to insure a good lawn it's important to seed at the right time, plant a recommended seed variety in the right amount and do a good job of preparing the seedbed.

Poor seedbed preparation accounts for many lawn seeding failures. Don't cut corners here, Mitchell warned. The surface of the soil should be even and well broken up. Be sure to remove stones and other debris. Old leaves, weeds, dead grass or thatch should be removed or mixed into the soil thoroughly.

Apply a complete chemical fertilizer just before seeding and rake lightly into the soil. Use 20 pounds of a 5-10-10 or 10 pounds of a 10-10-10 fertilizer for each 1000 square feet.

If you haven't limed for three or four years or if a soil test shows the need for lime, it should also be applied before seeding. Use ground limestone and be sure to apply enough.

The seed must be distributed evenly in the recommended amounts. A fertilizer spreader will do an accurate job, Mitchell said. "It's a good idea to sow one-half the seed in one direction and the second half at right angles to the first, he told the lawn day audience. Cover the seed lightly by raking and firm with a light tamping or rolling.

Keep the new lawn moist until the seed has germinated and the seedlings are well started. Bluegrass often takes two weeks to germinate, fescue takes ten days and ryegrass takes five to seven days.

Protect the seedbed with a covering of clean straw or clean burlap, Mitchell recommended. The mulch holds the moisture in, speeds germination and keeps the ground warm. Also, less watering is needed with a mulch.

The kind of grass you should use depends on the soil and growing conditions, what use the lawn gets and the amount of care it will get, Mitchell pointed out to those attending the lawn meeting. Despite the many kinds marketed for turf use, only a few will produce a dependable, permanent lawn with average care.

A list of recommended lawn seed varieties is contained in the University of Delaware extension bulletin "A Shoppers' Guide to Selecting Grass Seed" written by David V. Tatnall, assistant New Castle County agent for ornamental horticulture. Copies are available from the Mailing Room, Agricultural Hall, University of Delaware, Newark, Delaware 19711.

4-H Club Notes
With Marion McDonald
Kent County 4-H Agent

Congratulations to our Kent County 4-Hers who have successfully completed another 4-H year. Record books are in and county and state winners are being selected for announcement at our Achievement Banquet — October 15.

Parade-time is 1:30 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 24. 4-Hers from Kent and Sussex County will Club Week. Under the guidance of Mrs. Arlene Walls, our 4-Hers will vie for 1st place trophies. Kent County leaders will provide refreshments for the participants at the end of the parade where the awards will be announced.

Displays will be in place by Tuesday for our window display contest. Clubs throughout the county will vie for awards presented by the Kent County Order of Links at the Achievement Banquet.

A goal for all Kent County Clubs would be to turn in their enrollment cards by November 15th at the latest. The early-birds will be sure of getting their record books right away.

Variety show has a new date. Our County Variety Show will be held on November 5 this year. The Kent Light Horse 4-H Club recently elected new leaders for the coming 4-H year. They are as follows: President Jack Kling; vice-president, Stephanie Tarburton; secretary, Jody Martin; treasurer, Andrea Griffith; and reporter, Cathy Campbell. Let's all support our new club officers.

The club has also volunteered to supply all jumps and equipment for the jumping classes, pole bending and barrel racing at the First State 4-H Horse Show to be held on October 2 at the Harrington Fair Grounds. A committee was picked for the window display. Jody Martin, chairman; Cathy Campbell, Sharon Emmert and Kathy West will be helping with the display. Having many new members, we are looking forward to a good year.

Consumer Forums Feature Program On Wills

"Wills and Estates" will be the theme of the seventh annual series of Consumer Forums being held this fall, according to Miss Coral K. Morris, extension home management specialist at the University of Delaware and chairman of the Forums.

Scheduled for four locations throughout Delaware, the forums will be held October 25, in the Wesley Methodist Church, Georgetown; October 26, at the Wesley College, Dover; November 1, at the Student Center, University of Delaware, and November 2, at Brandywine YWCA Center, Ardentown.

The program will feature a panel discussion of the laws governing wills in Delaware and the building of an estate. Panel members George Reece, vice president of the Bank of Delaware in charge of wills and estates, and William B. Vaughn, of William B. Vaughn & Associates, Newark and Lewes insurance agents, will also be available to answer audience questions. Henry Horsey, deputy Delaware attorney general, will take part in the Consumer Forums in Georgetown and Dover only; James McKinstry, attorney, will participate in the two New Castle county meetings.

Special invitations have been issued to civic and service clubs throughout the state; however, the public is also invited to attend. Advance registration is recommended. Further information is available from home economics extension agents in Dover, Georgetown and Newark.

Consumer Forums are sponsored annually by the Home Economics Extension Service at the University of Delaware.

Little Bulbs Create Early Spring Garden

Spring begins with the little bulbs. Crocus, snowflakes, snowdrops and winter aconite are a welcome sight after drab winter months. Although not as well known to gardeners as tulips and daffodils, the little bulbs help create an interesting and colorful garden, according to Robert F. Stevens, extension horticulturist at the University of Delaware.

Excellent for naturalized plantings, they are often planted in clusters among trees and shrubs or in natural woodland settings. But they are equally attractive along a driveway or massed against the foundation of a suburban house. Stevens says there is a place in every garden for these bulbs—in beds, borders, shrubbery, rockeries, orchards, lawns or even window boxes. For a naturalized effect, scatter the bulbs and plant them where they fall.

Crocus bring color to earliest spring. Only four inches high, they sometimes bloom through the late snows, especially in a southern exposure. Blue, purple, gold or white—whatever the color, crocus are always beautiful. Scillas or wood hyacinths produce drooping, bell-like flowers in blue, white or pink. Also excellent for naturalizing, they grow in the sun as well as the shade in almost any soil.

Snowdrops (Galanthus) bloom even earlier than the crocus. Preferring light shade, they are particularly attractive under shrubs or trees or in a rock garden. Once settled, they shouldn't be moved, Stevens advises.

Spring snowflakes resemble snowdrops, but they bloom a little later in the spring. Growing from six to eight inches tall, they have dainty white flowers tipped with green.

Winter aconite (Eranthis) is one of the earliest, brightest spring bulbs. It flowers at the same time as crocus with little yellow flowers about three inches above the ground. Winter aconites thrive in dense shade under trees and soon form colonies from self-sown seed.

Glory-of-the-snow or Chionodoxa produce a mass of white, pink or blue miniature flower spikes in early spring. They should be planted in a sunny location or half where they can stay undisturbed, Stevens advises.

Dogs-tooth violets are small, lily-like woodland plants that bloom in early April. The blossoms are cream, rose, pink or purple and the leaves are attractively mottled. They should be planted about four or five inches deep in a damp but well-drained soil and mulched with leaf mold or peat moss.

Grape hyacinths have small spikes of bell-shaped flowers in violet, white or blue. They thrive in a wild garden or even in the grass if it is not too dense. For superior blooms next spring, plant these little bulbs in the fall. Even though they don't show any action above the soil surface until spring, the bulbs are growing below the soil this fall. The later you plant them in the fall, the less time the bulbs have to develop root systems and become established, Stevens points out.

Bulbs do well in any well-drained soil, and they will flourish beautifully even in a brand new garden. Fork in sand, peat or vermiculite to improve the drainage if necessary.

The small bulbs should be planted three to four inches deep. The depth depends on the size of the bulb—the larger they are the deeper they should be planted. Plant them as far apart as they are deep. Water the planted areas well and cover the beds with a mulch to keep the moisture in and to keep the soil from heaving during the late winter, Stevens recommends.

Del. Youth Enter Poultry Contest

Teams representing Delaware 4-H Clubs and Future Farmers of America will compete against teams from 13 other states at the three-day exposition of the Northeastern Poultry Producers Council in Harrisburg, Pa., Oct. 4, 5 and 6. Allen Drummond, 17, Greenwood, will compete for the title of "Star Poultry Farmer of the Northeast" at the meeting. Beverly Lucks, 16, Wyoming; Roland Hill, 17, Lewes; and Richard Roach, 17, Townsend, will represent Delaware in the 4-H regional egg grading contest.

Ray Lloyd, associate extension poultryman at the University of Delaware's Georgetown Substation, will accompany the 4-H'ers. He is serving on the youth committee and acting as chairman of the banquet committee.

James Whaley, James Lecates, and Gary Marine, all 17-year-olds from Laurel, will represent Delaware in the FFA poultry and egg judging contest. Frank Elliott, agriculture teacher at the Georgetown High School, will accompany them.

Drummond was named as Delaware's "best poultry boy" by the Delaware Poultry Improvement Association. He gained the right to compete in the exhibition for his leadership in farm youth work and through work with poultry. William Dannenhauer, teacher at Greenwood High School, is Drummond's FFA advisor.

The Delaware contestants will visit Gettysburg, as well as attend meetings on the career opportunities in the poultry industry and take part in discussion sessions.

More than 5,000 people from the 14-state northeastern area are expected to visit the Farm Show Building in Harrisburg for the event. Commercial displays of the latest in poultry management technology and the selection of a "Poultry Princess" are also scheduled for the exposition.

James Ferri Named Ocean Hiway Director

James Thomas Ferri, commissioner on the Delaware River and Bay Authority, has just been named a director of the Ocean Hiway Association, made up of bridge and tunnel authorities as well as hotels, restaurants and service facilities located along the primary automotive route from New York City to Florida.

The appointment of Mr. Ferri as director of Ocean Hiway further establishes the importance of the authority in the modern highway picture. As more and more super highways and large bridges are built, the long range effects of each will require the cooperation with one with another that will span years of planning.

Mr. Ferri is president and general manager of F. F. Slocumb Corp., 15th and Popular Sts., Wilmington. He is a graduate of the Pittston, Pa. High School and Cornell University.

In addition to his position as director of the Ocean Hiway Association and the Authority, he also is chairman of the Wilmington Parking Authority; vice president of the United Cerebral Palsy of Delaware and Pushmobile, Inc.; past president of Riverside Hospital, director of Ridgewood Hospital, and member of the American Bridge, Tunnel and Turnpike Association as well as the Health and Benefit Committee of the National Association of Manufacturers.

He is married to the former Ann E. Pokadoski. They live with their three daughters in Brandywine Hills, Wilmington.

FENCE TALK

By George K. Vapaa

The dairy farm picture is one of the brighter spots in the farm outlook for the near future. The demand for milk is strong. The farmer who can mechanize most of the labor should do very well.

Such a man is Henry Kozicki, a dairy farmer who lives just north of Clayton. His story is told in the September issue of "The Cooperative Farmer" magazine.

It's the story of a man who we describe as an innovator—a person who takes a new idea and applies it to his own situation.

The article speaks of the many changes made by Henry in recent years: free stall housing, double six herringbone milking unit, bunker silos, paved feed lots, electric fencing, liquid manure handling, and a farm mix mill.

The story further points up his service as a cooper with other farmers in milk marketing and farm supplies.

Henry's farm is one that visiting farmers like to see. He is quite willing to share his ideas. For Henry realizes that cooperative effort is one way to build a stronger dairy industry for all.

Hay is in short supply this year. So it is timely to pass on the results of a research study by our University of Delaware workers, headed by Dr. G. F. W. Haenlein.

The question was this: Is pelleting or wafering of hay as good as feeding loose hay to horses or to sheep? The study was made with a third cutting of alfalfa and I happened to meet in person, and she leaned over to my ear and whispered: "My, you have a lousy barber."

The results showed horses would eat 17% more wafers and 24% more pellets than loose hay. Sheep ate 9% more wafers and 73% more pellets. Horses did not differ much in the digestion of the three forms of the hay, tho the physical form did affect the digestive value. Sheep did not seem to digest the pellets as well as loose hay, tho the nutritive values were proportional to the intact of the various forms.

We have had several people try pellets and wafers in the past. The point seems to be that they can be a good buy, other factors being equal.

Your outlook is mostly what you want it to be. The story is told of Tom who saved his money for six years to take a trip to Europe. But he went to his barber for a haircut just before he left.

While in the barber chair, Tom babbled over with the prospects of his visits to Venice, to Paris and to see the queen of England. The barber countered with: "You won't like Venice—it's full of sewers and smells. As for Paris—they will steal you blind. There will be so many people in the queen's audience that you won't get near her."

"Hardly," said Tom. "I rented a gondola in Venice and had a splendid guided visit to all the sights. Paris is truly the city of light, and the people were most gracious. As for the queen, she

Community Singers Needs Women Vocalists

Women who are interested in singing with a choral group are invited to come and join the Community Singers. The group practices each Wednesday morning from 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. at the Dover Public Library. No audition is necessary, and a free nursery is provided for mothers who have small children.

This year, the community singers will present several programs in the local schools during the holiday season. They are also planning to sing at one of the nearby Veterans Hospitals.

Mrs. Verona C. Schiller will accompany the singers. Mrs. Schiller, former professor of piano at Augustana College, Sioux Falls, S. D., has studied at Juilliard in New York and in Munich, Germany. She is presently organist at St. Andrews Lutheran Church in Dover.

Further information can be obtained by contacting Mrs. William J. Storey, director of the singers at 734-2094 or Mrs. Albert Laporte, 734-5197.

Poems from Paradise Pastures

By W. Cliff Miller

I want to take "time-out" to thank my many friends for the nice things they say about our efforts in this column, to which others have so ably contributed. Grace Breeding's recent poem, "MY FATHER," is a wonderful tribute to Christian living; and I'm sure, must be highly prized in the home and by all who knew him.

Sam Short's reference to "Beautiful Paradise Pastures," brings up the question: where did the name, (Paradise Alley) originate? Maybe he can enlighten us on this.

Leah Wheeler's "The Good Old Days," has been an inspiration to many of us old-timers and we are still going to hear more about it because it was treasured on "Memory Lane when he said: "They Are Gone Forever." That lane was the scene of our childhood, adorned with:

POETIC VISION

The poet paints us pictures,
 He was given eyes to see,
 Some things we never notice,
 Though they're near as can be.

He catches gleams of sunlight,
 That he weaves into a rhyme,
 Or they dance upon the waters
 In the good old summer time.

The clinging vine around the stump,
 Unnoticed by the throng,
 Is part and parcel of his theme,
 When woven into song.

The little wild flowers in the Spring,
 The clover, when in bloom,
 Is woven into tapestry,
 By his poetic loom.

He sees the paintings in the sky,
 The pictures in the stream,
 He even sees some goodness,
 In a youngster's prankish scheme.

He seems to know the pathways,
 That lead back to Memory Lane,
 For we can read his verses
 And be a child again.

Last week saw the first rainfall in several months as the worst drought in three years was finally brought to an end. For some farmers, it was too late, but still an ever-welcome sight to all.

It brings to mind the joke I heard on TV last week about two cowboys who were riding in the desert: One cowboy was hit in the face by a drop of rain and the shock knocked him off his horse. His partner quickly revived him tho, by throwing a bucket of sand in his face.

The joke was supposed to be funny, but it actually matched the situation around here to a tee. It was welcome news to hear someone say—

IT'S RAINING

The farmer worked hard at his labor of toil,
 To bring forth fruit from the soil,
 And as the hot sun sent forth its ray,
 The farmer prayer "Please, let it rain today."

It was the driest year in three years hence,
 And things were getting mighty tense,
 The farmers will, in years to come, recall,
 The year that they go no rain at all.

When the fields of bean and corn, baked by the sun from the sky,
 Were left standing there to die,
 And the grass turned to brown,
 Because no rain touched the ground.

Hurrah, hurrah, it rained today,
 But, too late, the farmers say,
 To help the beans, hay and corn,
 As some look at the fields in scorn.

But, many a well will not have to be driven,
 Because of the blessed rain He hath given,
 But if the dryness you were tiring,
 Don't hold your breath, maybe it's just a cloud perspiring.

It's raining! What a welcome sight,
 As the farmers get relief from their plight,
 And the ground quickly soaked up the water in its thirst,
 Because the rain, in a long time, was its first.

The ground now has lost its crust,
 Where the top soil had turned to dust,
 In the long, hot, dry weather,
 Because the storm clouds finally got together.

Oh, it's finally raining now,
 And, maybe, the farmers can somehow,
 Pick up the pieces and start anew,
 To produce food for me and you.

The grass has turned from brown to green,
 And what was a trickle is now a stream.
 All of us here are mighty gay,
 Because, you see, it rained today!

—Leah S. Wheeler

"A Letter To 'Winnie' From 'Buck Bradley'"

Time: 1:30, Sept. 17, 1966

Dear Winnie,

Well, how are things in Harrington holding up since I left? I have been getting "The Harrington Journal, and I have been enjoying it. I enjoy 2 parts of it very much even though I don't know very many people anymore that's growing up and going through school. The best part is the "sports" and "of local interest," but overall, I enjoy the whole paper.

I've only met 2 boys from home and they are George Jerread and Frank Fowler. I sure was glad to see somebody I know, anyway. I guess that is the last I will see of them until I get home—if I ever will make it back!

My old ship from Long Beach, Calif., pulled in 2 weeks ago. I went over and had to cheer up the old gang.

I guess paper work is just fine with you so far, I hope. I'll tell you one thing about this place over here about living; it just isn't the best way. People in the States just don't know how lucky they are—the places they live in and what they eat. I've eaten quite a bit of what they call food, but it makes some people sick just talking about it. Take a "bilute," which is a duck egg about 7 days before it is hatched, boiled in saltwater for 1 day and then they will sell them for 3 for 1 peso, 5 centavos. While you are eating it you can see the baby duck which is already formed with little feathers and head and the works, but they are delicious. Tastes just like a hard boiled egg.

Or else, eat fish eyes or saw fish and rice. What I like best is fried rice and plain rice with gravy.

Living conditions here are the worst I have ever seen, but I guess they are worse back in the jungles here.

Overall, I love it here because everybody is just about equal in all ways of living where I am at. I guess it is different in Manila and Baguis.

Well, I guess I'll sign off for now, so keep the presses rolling and KEEP sending papers. Tell Keith I said to keep the boys running.

Sincerely,
 Dennis "Buck" Bradley,
 Olongapo, Zambales, R. P.

I am quite sure this boy would appreciate some letters from his many friends back home. Can't you read between the lines—all correspondence from home would be appreciated. R. P., I am quite sure, is the Republic of The Philippines.

says Marine Recruiter Sergeant Noll.

Each of the services have special programs which are offered for enlistment incentives, such as the Marine Corps Aviation Duty Only.

To process enlistees through the necessary paper work takes time. By taking a man already slated for the draft, it would be difficult to enlist the man for a specific program and then have the local board replace him in the draft.

If young men wish to enlist in the Marine Corps for a program that that service offers, the individual must contact the recruiters prior to their draft notice.

"A good barometer to go by to find out if you are going to be drafted is this: When you receive your pre-induction physical notice—Stand by! You usually have six to eight weeks before you receive your draft notification. Of course, the time will vary depending on the local draft boards," the sergeant said.

Another recruiting requirement that young men fail to realize is that recruiters are allowed to accept only a certain amount of enlistees a month. Many times a recruiter will turn away individuals who have received a draft notice because the allowance for the recruiter is filled.

Recruiters usually work ahead two or three months seeking enlistees which leaves only a few openings each month.

Sergeant Noll states that he is available to talk to young men and their families about enlistments into the Marine Corps and induction at any time. Notify

SHOP AND SWAP IN THE WANT ADS

Discover Wonderful Del.

The traveler who follows Main Street north out of Smyrna a mile or so to the tiny village of Duck Creek will discover a wonderful Delaware.

Here, at "The Lindens", the Delaware State Archive Commission and the Duck Creek Historical Society of Smyrna are cooperating in the commemoration of a typical early Delaware village.

In 1718 the town of Salisbury was laid out on the banks of Duck Creek. The location was favorable for the development of a thriving village, since Duck Creek was navigable to the small boats of the time which carried grain and other produce to the Delaware river ports. There was a tavern, a blacksmith shop, a Quaker meeting house and school, an Episcopal church, and a mill. The mill, and the miller's house, "The Lindens", are the only buildings that remain today.

"The Duck Creek Historical Society is in the midst of restoring "The Lindens" to its former charm. The original house was built before 1725, and is a small gambrel-roofed Dutch style dwelling made of brick, containing four rooms. In the 1800 a wooden wing was added at the back.

At present, only the original part of the house has been restored, but it contains much of interest. The two rooms on the first floor have touches of elegance quite unexpected in such a small country house—the woodwork in the fireplace mantels is a simplified version of the kind of carving and paneling found in the great houses of Philadelphia, and in one room, the wall (beneath the chair rail) is finished in a mixture of plaster and lamp-black intended to simulate marble.

The rest of the house, although it has not yet been restored, is appropriately furnished with antiques, the property of Mrs. Mary Young, the curator, who lives there. Mrs. Young, who has a great store of knowledge of Delaware history, is also a quilt-maker, and does her quilting on a 250-year-old "parlor" frame. Besides her own work, she has a collection of more than 200 antique quilts.

"The Lindens" has quite a reputation as a haunted house. According to Mrs. Young, when she first arrived there, one could sometimes hear the sound of a baby crying, and the rocking chair going to and fro. There was also the sound of a heavy-footed man walking down the stairs at 7:30 every morning—and a mysterious lady in a blue dress who was only glimpsed on summer evenings. The laying of these ghosts is Mrs. Young's story—not to be told here.

The old mill near "The Lindens" is a fairly modern structure which encloses the original mill built in the early 1700s.

Next to "The Lindens" is the Old Plank House—a tiny cabin which was rescued from Smyrna and moved to this site in order to preserve it.

On a rise of ground across the creek is the Quaker cemetery, where only a shallow depression in the earth shows the site of the meeting house. Tombstones date back to 1750. The old Episcopal cemetery, between Duck Creek and Smyrna, also contains interesting old graves.

At present, just a little over an hour will suffice to discover all these little wonder of wonderful Delaware. As restoration progresses, and a large area is involved, Duck Creek will be a great wonder—it's nice to discover it now, so as to watch the work go forward.

"The Lindens" may be visited at any time—there is always someone there to welcome guests; but a discoverer who wants to talk to Mrs. Young will do well to telephone in advance — the number is 302-653-7021.

Trinity Methodist Church Notes

Church School at Trinity Methodist Church, Harrington, will be in session this Sunday from 10 to 11 a.m. Manlove Bradley is superintendent.

Morning Worship will be conducted by the pastor, Rev. William J. Garrett. The sermon topic as announced by Mr. Garrett, is "Solving The Unknown." The message will be based on the scripture text, Matthew 16:3 "You know how to interpret the appearance of the sky, but you cannot interpret the signs of the times." The organist, Melvin Brobst, will play "Improvisation Schonster Herr Jesu" by Curry as the interlude and "Song of the Ransomed" by Hughes as the postlude music. The Senior Choir anthem will be "The Lord Will be a Refuge" by Benson. The altar flowers are to be presented by the O.U.R. Class.

The Woman's Society will present new altar candlesticks, to be dedicated during the hour of worship.

The MYF will meet on Sunday evening at 6:30 o'clock.

The choirs will rehearse, as follows: Junior Choir, Thursday, 6:30 p.m.; Senior Choirs, Thursday, 8 p.m.

Century Club News

The first fall meeting of the Harrington New Century Club is scheduled for Tues., Oct. 11. Mrs. Joseph Brinster will be chairman of the afternoon's program which will be on conservation. The sewer treatment facilities, and the referendum concerning our city will be discussed during this time.

October 25 is the date for the covered dish luncheon, which is held every fall. Oct. 7th and 8th is the weekend for the rummage sale to be held in the club house. While fall housecleaning, keep in mind the rummage sale, if you have anything to donate call Mrs. Charles Rapp or Mrs. George Mahony. Last year's rummage sales were very successful due to the cooperation of the club members. Let's do a repeat performance on this again this year!

To children play is full-time business, not just a frivolous pastime.

If that's true, it's the most hazardous occupation in the world. Your child must learn to protect himself when he's out of your sight.

Children play along the way to school. Know the length of time it takes your child to walk to and from school. Forbid them to accept rides from anyone without your approval.

Plan the safest route to and from school and teach your children to follow it. Then you will know where to look for them if they should be delayed.

Teach them how to walk against traffic. Sometimes children brought up in developments with light traffic do not know how to stay back from the curb and be on the alert.

Bicycles top the list of injuries to small fry. Although experienced rider of 10 and 11 have their share of trouble, the younger set from 5 to 8 are most often hurt on bikes. A few 4 and 5-year-olds are even riding in the street when injured!

The National Safety Council recommends that a child should be eight before he owns a bike. As he learns to ride, help him and watch him until he gains skill and confidence. Most important teach him the rules of safe bike riding—to ride on the right side of the street single file, never several abreast; to obey traffic signs; to give proper arm signals when turning and stopping; never to ride two on a bike, and not to indulge in horseplay.

The Asbury Methodist Chancel Choir composed of 35 voices will present a sacred concert at Houston Church Oct. 9 at 7:30 p.m. This choir is from Wilmington Manor.

The services last Sunday morning were largely attended, 103 being present. The minister delivered two fine sermons. The Junior subject was "Bird Life in the World—Moonstruck" and the sermon of the morning's text was found in Ephesians 4:11-13 and its title was "Why the Church?"

Kenneth Prettyman, from Seaford, favored with a solo entitled "There is Someone Bigger Than I."

Miss Beverly Denney, of Milford, also sang a number entitled "The Prayer Perfect."

George Denney returned to his home Saturday from Milford Memorial Hospital where he had been a patient for many weeks and he is so glad to be home again.

Christine Jump, Gary Simpson, Tom Parvis, Eugene Sharp III, and Bill Simpson have gone to the U. of D. to take up their studies for the coming year.

Mr. and Mrs. Vaughn Warren have returned home after enjoying some time in Ocracoke, on the outer banks of North Carolina.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Simpson were Sunday guests of their son and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Simpson, in Newark.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Chamberlain and son, Ellis Jr., of Arlington Va., spent the past week visiting Mrs. Chamberlain's sister, in Detroit, Mich. They also visited friends in Indiana and her brother in Pennsylvania.

Rev. and Mrs. E. C. Prettyman, of Hollywood, Fla., were Thursday and Friday guests of his cousin, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Prettyman.

Mrs. George B. Thistlewood spent Saturday night and Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Neiger and daughter, Judy. She also visited her mother, Mrs. Anna Sharp, and her sister, Mrs. Albert Anglin, in Wilmington, and on Saturday evening they all attended the graduation exercises of Salem County Technical Institute in Pennsgrove, N. J., where their granddaughter and niece, Miss Ruth Ann Sharp, became a graduate nurse. Ruth Ann is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Sharp, of Pennsville, N. J.

Mr. and Mrs. George L. Johnson were Sunday afternoon visitors of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Ingram, in Georgetown.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Webb were entertained at dinner at the Dinner Bell Inn in Dover on Saturday evening by their children, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Webb and Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Towers, honoring their 25th wedding anniversary.

Mrs. Viola Thistlewood returned home on Saturday afternoon after spending a week with the Jack D. Kennedy's at their home, Kenwood, on Old Porter Road, near Bear. Monday, Sept. 12, being the 30th wedding anniversary of the Kennedys, they with Mrs. Viola Thistlewood, were dinner guests of their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. William Hart at the Copper Kettle, in Wilmington. They also enjoyed a lengthy drive on the Freeway and Kennedy Memorial Highway.

We are sorry to report the death of one of our townsfolk as James Smack died Thursday morning in Emily P. Bissell Hospital after quite a lengthy illness. Funeral services were held Monday afternoon at 2 p.m. in the Lofland Funeral Home, in Milford.

His survivors, besides his wife, Nora Smack, are a son, Harris Smack, and a daughter, Mrs. Walter Tingle, of Milford; a brother, Calvin Smack, of Berlin, Md.; six grandchildren, and one great-grandchild.

Delaware Food Market Report

By Anne Holberton

Food prices continue to be very much in the news and food budgets need many food stretchers. That all-time meat favorite—commonly called "hamburger" can fill the bill.

What should you buy—hamburger, ground beef, ground chuck, ground round or ground sirloin? All are available and the price changes as the names change. Each name has a distinct and different meaning. And, knowing the right meat to select for the dish you plan to serve will not only save you money, but will also make your meals more delectable.

To be a "pennywise shopper", you should know a little about ground meat in general. First, generally speaking (except for ground round or sirloin), ground meat is made from less tender and/or less popular cuts of beef. Second, nutritionally all beef meat, regardless of cut, has the same amount of protein, vitamin and certain amount of fat—between 15 and 30 percent—is necessary in ground beef to provide tender, juicy and flavorful cooked meat. Lower amounts of fat tend to produce dry, crumbly and tasteless meat.

Federal regulations, and in some cases State laws, set a limit on the maximum amount of fat included in products labeled hamburger or ground beef and sold at Federal or State inspected meat. For instance, hamburger can contain up to 30 percent fat, which may mean additional beef fat over and above that attached can be added. Ground beef, on the other hand, can also contain up to 30 percent fat, but only that fat which is normally on the meat can be used. Additional fat cannot be used. Neither type of ground beef can contain extenders such as non-fat dry milk, soybean products, cereals, water, etc.

Both meats may be used in hamburger but they are best suited for combination dishes such as meat loaves, casseroles, meat sauces, etc.

Ground chuck is the meat from the shoulder of the animal. The chuck is the most popular cut of beef used for ground meat, so it is usually higher priced. It is slightly nearer 15 to 20 percent fat and shrinks less in cooking. This is especially good for use in patties.

Ground round is just what its name implies—ground-up round steak. Since this meat has a fat content of about 11 percent, it may not be desirable for grinding and use in patties. However, ground round may be used by people on low-fat diets. Its best use is in combinations with other ingredients that add moisture.

Ground sirloin is the "king of hamburgers" since it has the rich, fine meat flavor of steak. But why grind it if you can chew it. Regardless of what ground meat you buy, look for meat which has a bluish-red color. This indicates that the meat has been freshly ground. Only purchase what you can use in two or three days unless you have a freezer and freeze it. Ground meat is highly perishable.

1967 Agriculture Outlook Good

This year is turning out much better for agriculture in the United States as a whole than even the most optimistic forecasts made a year ago. According to Rex F. Daly, chairman of the Outlook and Situation Board, Economic Research Service, USDA, net farm income could be as much as two billion dollars above the $14 billion dollar net in 1965.

Speaking at the third annual mid-Atlantic states outlook workshop at the University of Delaware recently, Daly said that 1967 promises to be another high income year for farmers. Since the costs of farm production will continue to rise, however, the net farm income may be hard put to match the net income indicated for 1966. Farm prices may average slightly lower than in 1966, but supplies will be larger, particularly for crops.

The dairy situation in 1967 will again be favorable for dairy farmers, according to Robert L. Rizek, Economic Research Service, USDA. Milk production in 1967 is likely to be up somewhat from the 1966 level; however, higher retail prices may keep commercial use down. Despite the increased production, output should about balance with demand. The number of milk cows is expected to decline less than in 1966 because of improvement in dairy prices.

Rizek told the workshop audience that hog prices will be lower in 1967. Above-average prices through most of 1965 and the first half of 1966 encouraged hog producers to expand production. Hog slaughter in the last half of 1966 was above last year's and the expansion in production is expected to continue well into 1967.

Although the prices will be down, they will likely remain well above production costs for most producers, Rizek said. He pointed out that cattle prices are expected to be higher in 1967 and in the next several years. As a result, meat prices in general will probably be higher the next four or five years.

Broilers are in good supply, according to Rizek. Broiler production in 1966 is expanding for the 20th consecutive year, and the nation's broiler breeder flock is about ten per cent larger than a year ago; by early 1967 it is expected to be up about 20 per cent. For this reason, the increase in broiler production in 1967 will probably be as large as the increase in 1966. Rizek said prices this fall are expected to average close to those of a year ago.

Feed prices are higher, but not as high as previously anticipated according to Malcolm Clough, Economic Research Service, USDA. The United States crop of corn, sorghum and soybeans is much greater than reported a month ago, and this increase will tend to reduce prices. Clough reported an increase of 66 million bushels of soybeans, 109 million bushels of corn and 129 million bushels of sorghum over the August crop predictions.

Unfortunately, the mid-Atlantic states do not share in the reports of increased crops. Continued drought in this area will result in sharply reduced supplies of the major feed grains for 1966-67, according to Gerald L. Cole, agricultural economist at the University of Delaware.

He reported at the workshop that estimates indicate 1966 corn production in Delaware, Pennsylvania, Maryland, New Jersey and West Virginia will be one-third below the 1965 crop. Current supplies of oats and barley are both less than a year ago, and due to the continued effect of the dry weather, the hay crop will be ten per cent less.

The 1966 wheat crop in the five-state area is estimated slightly higher than a year ago, due entirely to improved yields, Cole reported.

Drought has again taken its toll of the area's soybean crop. The 1966 crop is estimated at only four-fifths of the 1965 crop, according to Cole.

President Johnson addressed to all 4-H'ers. A motion was made to answer the president's letter and thank him for his good wishes.

New members welcomed were: Linda Newnom, Karen Newnom, Brenda Hopkins, Robin Cahall, Steven Baker, Leslie Smith, Anna Marie Hassett.

Yellow School Bus Should Be A Symbol of Caution

"The yellow school bus should be a moving symbol of the caution sign," James T. Ferri, president of the Delaware Safety Council, said today. "All drivers must learn the basic laws concerning school buses," Ferri said. "From the many calls received in the Safety Council office, we know that many drivers do not know the school bus laws of the State of Delaware."

Ferri said the law is reasonably simple on when to stop and proceed. On a two-lane highway, a driver must stop in either direction upon meeting a stopped school bus with flashing lights. On a four-lane highway, the driver of a vehicle approaching the stopped school bus from the rear must stop when the red lights are flashing; however, when the driver is coming toward the bus he can proceed even though the bus is stopped for loading or unloading purposes.

All buses must be painted yellow and must be equipped with alternate flashing red lights which designate a stopped school bus picking up or discharging children.

Ferri said that since many people do not fully understand the laws, that all drivers must be extremely cautious at all times when the highway is occupied by a school bus. Ferri also pointed out that many children cannot be counted on to stay off the street after the bus has proceeded, so all drivers have an obligation to look and drive with extra care in the area where children have been discharged from a bus.
