

Santa to Arrive Here Saturday Afternoon

Santa's arrival in Harrington is again a gala event. All participants are asked to be in line by 1 p.m. and to find their numbers along Delaware Avenue. No. 1 through No. 25 will be on the right side of Delaware Avenue heading south and with No. 1 at Center Street; No. 26 through 47 will begin at Center Street heading north on the right side of Delaware Avenue.

All participants in the parade should be aware of several points. The weather may be an important factor and all construction should be secure. A Christmas story should be used to help portray the Christmas theme of "Christmas Spirit of '66". The judges will look for these items to develop a winner; originality of theme, coloring and general appearance, workmanship of construction, lettering and finishing and the behavior of characters portraying the story.

The prizes in the various categories are as follows: Non-commercial floats — $25 for first prize, $15 for the second and $10 for the third and consolation prizes to the balance. School floats — $10 for the first and $5 for the second best. Decorated automobiles will receive $10 for the first and $5 for the runnerup. Marching units will receive $10 for being the best in line and $5 for the second. In the commercial float group — the best of the parade will receive a beautiful trophy, which has been in the possession of Pensusupreme since winning the award at the parade of '65. Second prize winner will receive $15 and the third will have $10.

Three focal points of great interest on the parade route will include Christmas music on the Commerce Street turn and is supplied by Taylor Hardware—the PA system announcing the parade at the judge's stand at the post office will be manned by Gene Anderson. Miss Grace Wanda Quillen will be on the microphone describing the parade at the shopping center. All vehicles are requested to completely pass the reviewing stand at the center.

The drawing for the many merchandise awards will be made at the shopping center immediately after Santa's float arrives at the shopping center. Santa's float and the 40 et 8 train will return to Santa's house in the center of town. The children will then be able to visit Santa and receive their goodies and also ride the train.

Mrs. Mason and Mrs. Adamo are hoping to have some of the girls write articles about the hike, which they took Tuesday after school, for next week's paper. They thank to Mr. Wheeler for giving permission to congregate in the park and to take advantage of the discoveries of nature found nearby.

City Office Moves To New Quarters

The City office moved Monday to the new City Hall, the former property of Dr. Hewitt Smith, next door.

The property has been purchased by the Harrington Volunteer Fire Company and leased to the City.

The City office is on the south side of the building and is approached by a sidewalk on the south side of the building.

The office of City Manager Alfred G. B. Mann moved into the building two weeks ago and is in the former waiting room of Dr. Smith. The police department also moved two weeks ago and is in the rear of the building. It is thought the City Council will have its meeting room in front.

In the meanwhile, the fire company has taken out a hedge and trimmed trees, thus improving traffic safety at the corner of Fleming and Mechanic Streets.

The Army Guarantee

An Army recruiter reports that he spends much of his time telling people about "The Army Guarantee." He considers it the best deal a young man can get anywhere, as far as his military obligation is concerned.

First, he explains that the Army's guarantee is not just a figure of speech or a slogan, but an actual guarantee in writing.

It is assurance that a young man will get the training he wants, and is qualified for, before he enlists. He can make his choice from more than 300 jobs for which the Army offers training and then qualifying tests are taken to make sure he has the aptitude required for that particular training. If he doesn't qualify in that, he has a second choice.

In either case, if he qualifies, he has the guarantee before his enlistment. If he is drafted, however, the guarantee does not apply.

For more information, see the Army Recruiter, M/Sgt. Walter R. Frazier located at 218 S. Governor's Ave. Dover, or call 736-6937, 674-1360.

Major Wm. Wix In Viet Nam Puts Lion Jacket Drive Over Top

The Harrington Journal prints more than 2,000 papers each week, just how many more, we couldn't say at this time. They go all over the world to people, who sometimes are more interested in this town, than are some of us who live here.

It was a very heart-warming experience to learn that a former Harrington High and West Point star athlete had read of our drive for Coach Harold McDonald's state champion cross-country team and had contributed a jacket. It seemed appropriate that his gift should be the one to buy the ninth and last jacket and put the drive over the top. Actually, he must have responded almost immediately to our first plea, when one considers that he is in Viet Nam.

Major Wix played on a softball team here this summer and showed he is still a fine athlete. At Harrington High he was a star performer in soccer, basketball and baseball under Coach McDonald. At West Point he is remembered as one of the best soccer halfbacks ever to play there. His coach at the Academy, Palone, is still in harness. At a game against Navy in Annapolis,

2 Women Injured Seriously

Two Harrington women were seriously injured Thursday morning, Nov. 17, in a one-car accident two miles south of Camden.

State police said Joyce Carter, 20, operator of a late model automobile and her passenger, Mildred J. Murphy, 26, both of 13 Dorman St., were taken to Kent General Hospital with multiple injuries.

Police gave this account of the accident:
Mrs. Carter was proceeding north on U.S. 13, when she ran into the grass strip while attempting to pass another vehicle.

She lost control of the car, police said, ran back on the road surface, proceeded to the shoulder, ran off into a ditch then went up an incline and rolled over two and a half times.

Both women were thrown from the car, police said, and it is believed that the car rolled over on Mrs. Carter before coming to rest.

Mrs. Carter is suffering a broken back, a fractured pelvis and a collapsed lung and multiple lacerations. The Murphy woman is suffering a fractured spine, fractured arm and multiple lacerations.

"No" Between Youngster And Car

"About the only thing standing between a youngster and a car is one small word. That word is 'no'. It's the parents who must say it, and say it often, especially during the school year," says Francis J. Jamison, assistant manager of the Delaware Safety Council. There are three main reasons why:

1. The more evenings a week the car is used the lower a youngster's grades fall.

2. Good students who shop overboard on cars suffer the sharpest drop in grades.

3. If pleasure driving is permitted during the school week grades are certain to tumble.

"These days scholastic failure can ruin a youngster's future by closing the door to career opportunities that require a certain level of formal education. So failing to say 'no' to your child may condemn him to a second-rate future," reminds Jamison. If you allow a teenager to wriggle free of parental "interference" by buying his own car, you'll almost certainly be guaranteeing a drop in scholarship. It's often the poorest students who own their own cars, and the longer they own them the less chance they have of improving their grades. Whatever the scholastic ability of a youngster, ownership of a car tends to drop him down one grade. And when he has a job the drop is quicker and farther, frequently to the failing level. Most teenage boys who hold jobs do so to earn money for car upkeep. They work even longer hours than do other job-holding youngsters, thus consuming any left-over time they ordinarily might have to study.

"Being too lenient with your children's driving can also condemn them to visits to police stations, hospitals, or worse," warns Jamison.

Most important, be a good driver yourself. The example you set can be the best lesson of all for your child.

NEGROES ROB ELDERLY OWNER OF SHOE STORE

Two Negro men attacked Harley Rickert, elderly proprietor of The Family Shoe Store, Tuesday afternoon, and took $40 from the cash register, according to Harrington police.

The pair entered the store about 3:30 p.m., and asked for a pair of slippers. When Rickert, well in his 80's, went back to get the merchandise he was followed and knocked to the floor, police said.

Rickert did not require medical treatment.

Local and state police are working on the case.

Harrington Man Gets 3 Years

James Edward Brooks, 29, of near Harrington, was sentenced to three years in jail by Judge George R. Wright in the Superior Court, Dover, Friday.

Brooks was accused of stealing more than $100 from the Capitol Service Station in Dover on Aug. 10 and was found guilty by a jury several weeks ago.

Brooks was a civilian employee at Dover Air Force Base who did extra work at the service station.

Room Turns Day Into Night For Plants At University of Delaware

Two years ago the dirt-floored greenhouse basement was fit only for potato storage. Two years and $40,000 transformed it into a laboratory with six growth chambers that can turn night into day and winter into summer for plants.

The greenhouse with growth chambers are at Agricultural Hall, University of Delaware. According to Dr. Donald Fieldhouse, associate professor in the horticulture department, a growth chamber looks like a three by six foot closet. "Except that these have controlled humidity, light and temperature."

Time clocks start the day and end it whenever scientists want. "We can set the chamber to imitate summer's long days even if it's December outside, or we can turn July into January for the plants," Fieldhouse says.

Temperature controls in the "closets" change the temperature gradually, from a "morning" low to "noon" high. Temperatures in the plant growth chamber can imitate any typical day in the spring, summer or fall. Humidity controls can reproduce the atmosphere of a dark jungle or parched desert — whatever the plants experimenters need.

Why go to all this trouble? Fieldhouse points out the controlled environment rooms are valuable for research and for teaching plant science. At the University, they are used by the departments of horticulture, agronomy, plant pathology and entomology.

Plant experiments done in the controlled environment can be repeated using exactly the same conditions. Results are easily checked. Nature isn't usually as cooperative during the experiments out in the field, Fieldhouse says.

Researchers can change one factor in the plant's environment at a time to find whether it's light, heat or humidity that is causing a particular result, Fieldhouse explains. Of course, growth chamber experiments are always coordinated with field experiments.

The rooms are used for plant variety tests and for disease, weed and insect control studies, among others. For instance, disease control on germinating bean seedlings under cool spring conditions and pod-set on lima beans during simulated hot July weather were studied.

Another experiment in the growth chamber involved the effects of growth regulating chemicals on tomato seedlings under cool spring conditions, compared to their effect under warmer conditions. Tomato plants are often started in Georgia and shipped to Delaware for transplanting. Tests in the chamber showed the amount of growth retardant Georgia growers needed to use, Fieldhouse explained.

"The chambers are an effective teaching tool also," he states. They are used to illustrate the effect of varying day length on plants and to measure plant water loss with high temperatures. Not bad for an ex-potato storage room.

Heart Bowling Champs Still to Be Determined

Don Merriman, Delaware's 1966 Heart Bowling Chairman, today announced that the Heart Fund was the big winner in last week's observance of National Heart Bowling week. Preliminary indications are that about $4,000 will be made available to support the research, education and service programs of the local association.

Mr. Merriman announced that 18 bowling establishments throughout Delaware participated in this event with league bowlers paying an entry fee of $1.00. Of this fee, 70 cents went to the Heart Fund and the remaining 30 cents went into a prize fund at each establishment. In addition to the 30 cents, handsome trophies have been provided for the man and woman in each establishment who rolled the most pins over their average.

On Sunday, Nov. 27, these champions from each establishment will meet and compete for a county trophy, for the man and woman who in each county again bowl highest over their average.

These county play-offs will start at 2 p.m. with Rehoboth Bowling Lanes playing host to Sussex County champions from Seaford Recreational Center; Milford Lanes; Millsboro Lanes, and Rehoboth; Middletown will host Greater Kent County, composed of the winners from Dover Lanes, Smyrna Recreational Center and Middletown. At the same time, Holiday Lanes will hold the roll-offs for Blue Hen, Bowlerama, Brookside, Fairfax First State, Pleasant Hills, Prices, Walnut Street YMCA, Center City, Parkway and Holiday Lanes.

City to Hold Public Hearing Tues. Night on 2nd Sewer Referendum

The City Council will hold a hearing at 8 p. m., Tuesday on a proposal to hold another referendum for improvements to the sanitary-sewer system. The City held a referendum Oct. 29 to float $500,000 in bonds for improvements and it lost hands down.

With pressure from the State's Water and Air Resources Commission to improve the system, to prevent pollution of Brown's Branch, for one thing, the City will have to improve the system or incur a daily fine. Another thing — no hooking on to the present system will be tolerated by WARC since it seems the system is already operating to capacity.

The Tuesday night hearing will be to fulfill a legal requirement. However, Mayor Luther P. Hatfield told the Chamber of Commerce Tuesday, the hearing, which the public is urged to attend, will give the Council the opportunity to answer questions and to refute some arguments which arose at the last minute, too late for denial, at the October voting.

The hearing will divulge a bond issue for $395,000 is contemplated with state and federal monies expected to bring the sewer-improvement costs to around $771,000.

This sum would provide for a new sewage-disposal plant, interceptor sewers, and sewer extension to seven areas in town. The bond issue was reduced by eliminating service sewers outside the community, not eligible for federal aid.

The hearing Tuesday night precedes a meeting of WARC Wednesday at which city officials will have to explain why they will be unable to meet the original timetable for construction, in June, according to Dudley Willis, the City's consulting engineer.

Mayor Hatfield Tuesday said he hoped the hearing would bring out suggestions as to when to hold another referendum and this factor might aid the City at the Wednesday meeting. It is better to select our own date than to have them (WARC) pick one for us, he pointed out.

SAMUEL M. WILLIAMS TO RETIRE AFTER 51 YEARS IN TRUCKING

Samuel M. Williams, after 51 years as a traffic representative for an express agency and truck lines, will retire Dec. 1.

Actually, Williams has served longer than 51 years in the field. He does not count all the employment he had as a youth with Adams Express Company, starting at Lewes, in 1912, because some of it was part-time.

Upon his release from military service in World War I, he secured a position, June 1, 1920, as messenger with the American Railway Express Company, working on trains from Philadelphia to Norfolk. In October of the following year, he was given the express agency in Harrington under the late H. Clyde Miller, supervising agent of Harrington.

In October, 1929, Williams accepted a position as salesman for Burriss Express, Inc., of Milford. The company was sold several times, in the intervening years, and was lately known as Eastern Freight Ways, Inc.

Williams figures his service as 12 years with the express agencies and 39 years at traffic representative with the trucking companies. Pointing to the ordeals of the post, Williams, son of a sea captain who lost his life at sea, said the nature of his vocation called for being on the highways daily, as well as nighttime, in all kinds of weather. He remembers well being called often, late at night, to take chains to trucks stuck in snowbanks.

He estimates he traveled 30,000 miles a year for 51 years, a total of 1,530,000 miles, without an accident or being fined for any reason. Because of this record, Williams was asked: "What contributes to an accident?" He retorted: "Speed. It is certainly very true that speed demons contribute largely to our death rate on the highways. I do think that driving, while under the influence of intoxicating liquors, takes more lives than actual speeding."

Continuing, the Lewes native, born June 24, 1897, emphasized truck drivers, as well as salesmen, "very, very seldom have accidents because they are on the highways daily and see ahead how to avoid an accident and also have knowledge of how to handle the truck (or automobile). This being the case, I am afraid so many accidents are traceable to what we might call the occasional driver."

Turning to Harrington, Mr. and Mrs. Williams were married at Lewes in 1922 and moved to Harrington. They first lived on Hanley Street and then in an apartment in the Reese Building on Commerce Street. This spot was over the Morris Store, operated by Mable Morris, daughter of the late L. Morris, Harrington clothier. The store was a portion of what is now the former quarters of the National 5 & 10 Store.

The Williams moved down Commerce Street to Quillen Apartments and resided there 31 years before building their present residence on Benjamin Street in Harrington Manor.

During his busy career, Williams found time to serve as president of the Kent-Sussex Scottish Rite Club, treasurer of Rotary Club, in which office he is serving his 18th year; secretary of Harrington Volunteer Fire Company, Grand Tall Cedar of Evergreen Forest No. 49, at Milford; commander of Post No. 7, American Legion, Harrington; chairman of trustees of Trinity Methodist Church. He was present when President Warren G. Harding was made a Tall Cedar of the United States at Milford in 1923.

The Williams have a daughter, Betty Jane, married to Randall H. Knox, Jr., of Taneytown, Md., and they have three children: Randall III, Donnie Sam, and Sandy Louise.

In his retirement, Samuel Williams will continue to be busy. Over the years he has been in the jewelry business and will continue the calling.

In other arrests, Milton Benson was fined $200 and costs Monday in Court 6 by Magistrate Wallace Wooten on a charge of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating liquor. His brother, Harry Benson, was fined $10 and costs, in the same court, on a charge of intoxication. The Benson arrests were made Monday.

Arson Feared In Two Blazes Near Killen's Pond

Fires, apparently set, destroyed an abandoned house and damaged an old mill near Felton, Tuesday morning.

While at the house fire, a state trooper told firemen that a three-story abandoned mill on Killen's Pond also was on fire. The mill fire was extinguished after only minor damage was caused.

Warrington said dry leaves had been piled against a wall inside the mill and set on fire. The fire marshal's office is investigating both blazes.

Firemen concentrated on keeping the blaze away from surrounding trees.

Delawareans Honored As Outstanding Farmers

Three Delaware farmers were awarded silver trophies at the Delaware State Crop Show held Nov. 22, in Dover. George Baker, Middletown, Allen D. Figgs, Seaford, and John G. Tarburton, Dover, were honored as farmers making outstanding contributions to Delaware crop production.

According to Charles Blendt, Smyrna, president of Delaware Crop Improvement Association, the awards were given to recognize Delaware farmers who have led the way in introducing new farming practices to increase crop yields or to help ensure greater returns for their crops.

Baker is outstanding for minimum tillage program on his corn acreage, according to Blendt. He introduced a new modification of minimum tillage, planting corn with a single operation on alfalfa sod. He used a rototiller followed by a planter, spraying for weed and volunteer alfalfa control. The corn was weed free, moisture was conserved and labor kept to a minimum by Baker's practices.

Figgs initiated the interest and work being done on sub-irrigation in Delaware. In 1966, he installed five acres of perforated plastic pipe underground. Irrigation water was supplied to growing crops through this pipe which required little labor after installation and reduced water loss through evaporation. Three lateral pipe spacings were compared with a check area receiving no water. Blendt points out that, although sub-irrigation will need further research, the principle has great future potential. Figgs was recognized as Delaware's outstanding certified seed producer in 1965.

Tarburton worked to improve the accuracy of moisture testing for corn and soybeans. He helped initiate a system to check the accuracy of moisture testing equipment throughout the state and to require the use of licensed and trained testers to check grain moisture by buyers. Tarburton has served as president of the Delaware State Board of Agriculture.

The Delaware State Crop Show is sponsored annually by Delaware Crop Improvement Association and Delaware Agricultural Extension Service. The Delaware State Legislature provides funds for the crop show premiums. The Legislature encourages production of better crops by appropriating funds for this purpose to the State Board of Agriculture.

Need For Teachers Cited In Vocational Ag.

The new vocational agriculture program faces a critical shortage of teachers, according to Dr. Ralph Barwick, associate professor of agricultural education at the University of Delaware.

Vocational agriculture is an increasingly important field, Dr. Barwick points out. Agriculture today is a highly technical business that requires extensive training and a continuing education in production, management, marketing and financing.

Education in vocational agriculture is now open to any high school student who wants work experience in the agricultural field he intends to enter.

Practical work experience is now available from part time work in local businesses or in school plots and shops.

The College of Agricultural Sciences at the University of Delaware offers a bachelor's degree program in agricultural education.

You entertain with so little effort! Any hostess loves to hear that phrase. But, it takes thought and planning to earn it.

Save the experiments with "new" recipes for the family. If the dish gets rave notices from your own family members, then put the recipe in the special file for further use when entertaining.

Even if you have the whole day to get ready for dinner, it's wise to avoid too many fancy dishes requiring lengthy preparation.

Avoid menus requiring much last minute attention, even though it is simple. Allow as much time as possible to be free of duty so you can enjoy your guests.

Don't make apologies for something served that may be below par. Never say, "I'm sorry the gravy is a little thick".

You needn't drain the food budget for entertaining. Be sensible. Delicious food need not be expensive, only well prepared and attractively served.

There are no absolute rules for entertaining... no foods which cannot be served... no foods which must be considered party fare.

Fertile Eggs For Science Available From University of Delaware

Fertile hatching eggs for use in school science projects will be available this fall from the department of animal science and agricultural biochemistry at the University of Delaware.

Last year, the department provided more than 1500 eggs to schools throughout the state. Some eggs were furnished to students for individual projects also.

Directions for building home made incubators are also available. Dr. Benton says these incubators are quite satisfactory if they are kept at a fairly constant temperature near 100 degrees Fahrenheit.

White Leghorn chickens are used to produce eggs for this purpose because they have high production rate and high fertility rate. Since the shells are white, the developing embryos can be observed more easily.

As the eggs are produced on the University farm, they are placed in cold storage until requested. However, if they are all incubated at the same time, all the embryos will develop at about the same time, no matter when they were laid.

Teachers or students wishing to have a supply of fertile eggs for hatching may contact Ed Hahn, graduate assistant in the department of animal science and agricultural biochemistry at the University, by telephoning Newark 368-0611, extension 445, after November 15. One week's notice is required, and the usual limit is two dozen eggs for a project. However, more eggs are available for particularly large science classes. Eggs for these science projects are free.

Delaware Farm Income Sets Record For 1965

Delaware farmers received a record income for their 1965 output, according to figures just released by the College of Agricultural Sciences at the University of Delaware.

According to the report, compiled by Dr. William Crosswhite, associate professor of agricultural economics, gross farm income topped $137 million dollars for the first time. Total farm expenses were $98 million dollars.

Three factor account for the states unusually good farm income in 1965—strong prices for agricultural products, above average per acre and per animal output, and only slightly increased farm prices.

As the eggs are produced on the University farm, they are placed in cold storage until requested. However, if they are all incubated at the same time, all the embryos will develop at about the same time, no matter when they were laid.

plete reverse from 1964, when gross income went down almost $5 million dollars over the previous year, while expenses were increasing slightly.

Crosswhite points out several important changes in Delaware's farm production during 1965. Major increases were evident in the output of corn, soybeans and broilers. There was a reduction and vegetable crops. Corn production was up 37,000 acres, while soybean production was down 25,000 acres.

Broiler sales increased more than $3 million dollars over 1964 for a total of over $67 million dollars. Corn sales totaled over $11 million dollars, soybeans over $9 million, vegetable crops $14 million, fluid milk $9 million, egg $4.5 million, cattle $1.6 million, hogs $2.3 million and turkeys $1.4 million.

A complete summary of 1965 farming activities in Delaware is available in the publication "Delaware's Farm Income, 1965." It is available from the Department of Agricultural Economics, University of Delaware, Newark, Delaware 19711.

Poems from Paradise Pastures

By W. Cliff Miller

Responses to this column indicate there are more poetically minded women than men in our community, which leaves Sam Short and I in the minority. We have paid tribute before to some of Leah Ray Wheeler's timely thoughts and Grace Breeding's beautiful poem on her departed parent, which had the effect of encouraging us oldsters to hope for similar graceful departures.

The following poem, recited recently on the Lawrence Welk show by Aladdin's from Helen Steiner's collection of inspirational verses: "Lust For You," and seems most important at this time:

"THE PRAYERS FOR PEACE"

Our Father up in Heaven,
 Hear this fervent prayer - -
 May the people of all nations
 Be united in Thy care.

For earth's peace and man's mind
 Can come only by Thy grace
 And not through bombs and missiles,
 And our quest for outer space.

For until all men recognize
 That the battle is the Lord's
 And peace on earth cannot be won
 With strategy and swords.
 We will go on vainly fighting,
 As we have in ages past,
 Finding only empty victories
 And peace that cannot last.

But we've grown so rich and mighty
 And so arrogantly strong.
 We no longer ask in humbleness,
 "God, show us where we are wrong."

We have trust to come completely
 In the power of man-made things,
 Unmindful of God's mighty power
 And that he is King of Kings.
 We have turned our eyes away from Him,
 To go our selfish way,
 And money, power and pleasure
 Are the Gods we serve today.

And the good green earth God gave us
 To peacefully enjoy,
 Through greed and fear and hatred,
 We are seeking to destroy.

Oh, Father up in Heaven,
 Stir and wake our sleeping souls,
 Renew our faith and lift us up,
 And give us higher goals.

And grant us heavenly guidance
 As war threatens us again,
 For, more than guided missiles,
 All the world needs guided men.

RAILROAD RAILLERY

Back in early steam operation days, the engineer was often referred to as the "Hog-Head; the conductor was the "Grabber," and the firemen were the "Smoky" and the brakemen were the "Hooks". At the end of the run, it was necessary to cooperate in making out their time slips so as to avoid discrepancies in claims for overtime.

While discussing some of these instances recently with Frank Crouse, retired N.-Y. division engineer, at Bryn Mawr College where he is now in charge of a power plant, he came up with these humorous lines which, I am sure will ring a bell somewhere in our own railroad community.

"HIS LAST RUN"

An old Hog-head once passed away
 And whistle off for the Judgment Day
 The trip was the first of the kind he'd made,
 And he worried how he'd be paid.

He didn't know what rates applied
 As this was the first time he had died.
 So as through the distant space he flew
 He recalled all the rulings that he knew.

He could claim no initial delay at all
 For there had been no chance to stall
 He could claim no time for testing air
 For he found no train-line there.

He could kill no time at a water spout
 As he passed no water tanks enroute.
 And there was no chance to stop the wheels
 While he ate about a dozen meals.

So he kept plugging on his way
 Racking his brain for some delay,
 But ponder the matter as he might,
 No cause for delay was there in sight.

At last he reached the pearly gate
 And registered in an hour late.
 Then washed and smoked and fooled around,
 As he had done upon the ground.

Made out his time in the usual way
 Claiming "One Hour Final Delay."
 Then he grinned as he thought how very neat
 He had stolen an hour from old St. Pete.

As he followed the path to the pearly gate,
 He noticed a sign in large gold plate,

And he read this as his spirit's fell,
 "If you've been delayed, you must go to Hell."

Then when he saw that he was gyped
 He tried to claim that his pencil had slipped,
 And he offered all the alibis
 That he had used beneath the skies.

St. Peter said: "Don't lie to me,
 The way that you did to the I.C.C.
 You must go below where you shall burn
 For falsifying your time return."

NOTE: Leniency shown by St. Peter:
 Demoted to position of fireman under
 REGULATION 5N 2.

AND THEN THERE WAS—

The horse and cow live 30 years
 They never touch light wine and beers.
 Sheep and goats are dead at twenty,
 They drink no liquor, but water, plenty

At ten the cat has lost nine lives,
 On milk and water, no man survives.

At five the birds are mostly dead,
 They look not on wine that's red.
 Bugs a few days remain on earth,
 They do not know the cocktail's worth.

But, sinful, ginnful, rum-soaked men,
 Live on for three-score and ten.

Prevent Chemical Fires

Farmers use and store more agricultural chemicals each year. Storing them in a separate building—not the granary, machine shed, garage or barn—will help prevent a fire hazard, suggests Frank Boys, extension agricultural chemicals specialist at the University of Delaware.

He advises clearly marking the storage building, keeping it locked and not allowing any smoking or fires nearby. Warn your family and employees of the dangers these chemicals present, and keep a list handy of poison control centers, possible antidotes and poison treatments.

If there should be a fire, get everyone out of the fire area itself and keep upwind of the fire. Boys warns. Don't try to put out the fire unless you can protect yourself from the fumes; use a supplied-air device or a gas mask with canisters approved for the vapors. Wear protective clothing including appropriate gloves and footwear, clean cap and overalls and goggles or face shield.

Avoid scattering chemicals during and just after the fire. Water used in fire-fighting may wash chemicals onto the farmyard, pastures or fields, or into feed and water supplies. Don't use any contaminated areas or supplies until they are tested for safety, Boys warns.

Chemical containers damaged by fire or water should not be saved. Bury them at least 18 inches deep in an isolated area away from water. Don't touch the containers either, Boys cautions. And wash thoroughly with soap and water before eating or smoking after getting rid of damaged containers or chemicals.

Tell your county agent about any chemical fires; your information may help prevent future fires for you and your neighbors.

Delaware Food Market Report

By Anne Holberton

When we first turned the calendar to November, our thoughts quickly flew to the end of the month and Thanksgiving, that truly wonderful family day of fine food and equally fine fellowship. That truly American day is here!

Have you ever stopped and thought who was responsible for making Thanksgiving day a day set aside from all others? Our thanks should go to the untiring efforts of one woman, Sarah Josepha Hale, editor of the famous "Godey's Lady's Book." She started her campaign in the 1830's stressing the idea that Thanksgiving should be a national festival observed by all people. It was not until 1863, however, that her campaign succeeded. President Lincoln proclaimed Thanksgiving the last Thursday in November. Up until 1863, various days during the month were proclaimed as Thanksgiving. The first Thanksgiving by presidential proclamation, however, was celebrated November 26, 1878.

Thanksgiving dinner generally centers around a beautiful, golden-brown, roasted turkey, the conventional fare for the day. Yet to some, the stuffing is as important to the Thanksgiving feast as the turkey. Stuffings vary from region to region, from family to family—for instance, in Baltimore, oyster stuffing is the favorite; in many parts of the South, corn bread predominates. Regardless of where you live, the basic ingredient remains much the same, bread (corn bread, white bread, etc.) or rice. Make it tastier this year with oysters or mushrooms, chestnuts, walnuts, or pecans sausage meat, liver or veal, or fruits such as dried apricots. All provide flavor and texture. To moisten a too-dry stuffing use butter or margarine, meat broth or consommé, cider, or fruit juices. And don't forget spices and herbs. They're important too.

When dinner is over and everyone is stuffed, don't relax until the turkey has been properly stored. Separate the stuffing from the carcass and refrigerate both.

If you can find the energy, now is an excellent time to prepare delicious frozen T.V. dinners of your own for days when food preparation is out. By doing this, there are no left-over problems; only delicious meals in the freezer. Prepare these meals before you clean up and you will save hours of work later.

Century Club News

Mrs. James D. Moore, the president of Harrington New Century Club presided at the business session of the club on Tuesday afternoon when two new members, Mrs. Luther Hatfield and Mrs. Clarence Billings were elected to membership and Mrs. Earl Sylvester was welcomed as a reinstated member. The Club voted to make an additional contribution to the Chapel of All Faiths at the Delaware Hospital for Mentally Retarded at Stockley.

The subject for the day was Community Improvement under the leadership of Mrs. J. Millard Cooper who was assisted in entertaining by Mrs. J. L. Monroe, Miss Elva Reese, Mrs. Wm. E. Jester, Mrs. Earl Sylvester and Mrs. W. Carroll Welch. Mrs. Cooper read an interesting paper in which she had interwoven Thanksgiving and Community Improvement. She told that Mrs. Joseph Hale, editor of Godey's Magazine worked for 30 years to get Thanksgiving Day made a legal holiday, which was accomplished in 1863.

She read a clipping entitled "Several Ways to Ruin Any Town". Some of the ways were indifference, inactivity, destructive criticism of those who are trying to build up the town, etc. Then she reported a recent meeting of the Standing Committee on Civic Improvement and read nine recommendations of that committee, in keeping with the slogan of the present administration of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, 1966-68, "Building With Youth for a Better World", which is a favorite theme of the president of the General Federation, Mrs. E. D. Pearce. Along that line Mrs. Cooper mentioned certain scholarship awards, the Sears Roebuck Foundation and the Hall-Mark contest for amateur paintings. This will be attempted with cooperation of the High School faculty by the chairman of education and community improvement of the club.

An open discussion of these recommendations was animated and interesting. Favorites of these were the beautification of certain bare locations in and around town and the formation of committees to welcome newcomers who move into our community and to visit people who are not physically able to get out of their homes as they once did.

The next meeting of the club will be Dec. 13 when Mrs. Arnold Gilstad will present a program on Christmas art.

By W. Churchill Burgess

Now Horace "Squire Sticks" Quillen was busy musing around. He was day-dreaming like the other boys do! He turns to Madeline Tharp now of "The Star Lite Shop"; and says, "look what Winnie Burgess sent me. A pistol."

So "Squire" pulls the slide back, and then he hollers, "this gun is loaded. But, of course, it saved a little space. Motto—"never play around with a gun before you find out whether it is loaded or not!"—Just like W. C. on a Saturday afternoon!

Hayward Quillen was walking down the street with W. C. (watch your company) Burgess, one night and he was asked, "did you ever see th Belgian Browning 32?"

He said, "yes, but they have the trigger filed off her. I asked him did he know why?" He said, "no."

I told him that makes a souvenir out of her instead of a deadly weapon." He wasn't thinking, I guess, because he told me that he had been a Marine." If he had studied he would have known."

And here goes the story:
Inchhofen, Germany: April 26 or 27, 1945

The German medic had surrendered to the other guard before I arrived to relieve him. The medic said, "I hope they will let me go home." I thought, "what a crook of bologna."

So, the medic started telling me about "St. Leonarda de Inchhofen. It is one of the largest Catholic churches in the world. It was made of old-fashioned marble, that is, some kind of marble.

Along comes Lt. Porter. Now this comedian was my prize lovie. He knew I was always in a little bit of hot water, anyway—just enough to keep warm in the winter time—and he asks the German medic, "pore ole' lonesome me again! — this medic wasn't captured, he surrendered.

"Have you got a gun on you?" The German medic reached around in back of him, in his great big old pack—which incidentally looks like a big oversized balloon—took out the "Belgian 42," and gives her to the lieutenant.

Was W. C. mad—oh no—not at all—show me a guy who ain't a souvenir hunter—and you have no soldier at all.

In my outfit, lieutenants could not have foreign pistols, so, in a few days—here comes a soldier and said—"with the compliments of Lieutenant Porter."—and there she was, big as a bird—the Belgian Browning 32!"

This little pistol went through Dachau, concentration camp and all—it is a suburb of Munich—and then: Lieutenant Porter stamped a package for me to send to Squire Quillen, and then Johnny Joyce, of Bethel, Delaware, Shady Lane, said: "Burgess, we got orders to move; take this package back and mail it when we stop again."

This package had already been stamped for travel; so when we stopped the next time—Now, 'here I have got a package already stamped; and now what do you know—Ole Lonesome Me, stuck the Belgian Browning on the top of the package, sealed her up—and away she went, to Harrington to the Squire. In those days the Army didn't have electronics in the postoffice to detect metal—so, the Belgian Browning made it after all.

So, in a week or two's time—here comes a $20-dollar bill—and the lieutenant by that time had become battery commander in Salsburg, Austria, and the war had just got over—with no fault of mine of course, because I was just one of the clowns sent along to entertain the troops and keep up the morale—so, I imagine, myself, and—never a dull moment—right down my alley—a little man doing a big man's work, once in a while!"

"Burgess, hit the Battery C. P. — Lieut. Porter wants to see you."

"Burgess, would you like to take a trip back to England?" "Does a duck like to swim?" "But, of course."

Burgess and the Surete and the French Gangsters in Paris

So, we hit the old six-by-six—a truck, to Munich—because all the bridges had been bombed out—and clear down to the railroad barn in Munich—and we catch a troop train to Paris. Old W. C. slept up in one of those baggage racks on the trip, too.

In Paris, at the Gare D'Est, there were the French hoods—and naturally—where you see a hood doing business, you also might find the Surete—and there they were, too.

Right after the war, there was a little moratorium between the cops and the hoods — Americans, please note, just in case. Now, there was a pair of shoes from Germany. They went for a fee, and a pair of GI pants, and all the time—there were three Surete peeping from in back of the pillars. The hoods told me, we dye the trousers and wear them.

There was a German leather jacket—she went for $40. So I says to the guy, "I got a twenty dollar bill here! It was Squire's twenty. The guy says, oh! no! not here! Come around to the house. So he bicycles up, and rides rea slowly, and at his house I trade in the $20 for the equivalent of $60 — but in French francs. The English pound went for $80, because the French could feel the silver thread in it—and it was harder to fool them!

But there they were anyway—anything to help the French—gangster or cop alike—except black market money no wonder the Interpol is in Paris. Later on, I have seen them—the Surete trailing to see that an American don't get rolled, while he is on a spree—a lot of times they sit right across from you to see that you don't get in trouble. Reconversion

I never got in on this one—but here is how they do it—"Dear Mom: I am broke, please send me a twenty-dollar bill; and make it in cash."

You take the twenty dollar bill; run to the nearest black market hood—trade it in for $60 French—then run to your warrant officer, and tell him, "I won this money gambling, how about fixing me up a money order for $60." So he fixes you up a money order—American—for $60 and you send it home with a profit of $40.

"Dear Mom: "I have had reverses in gambling; please send me another $20 American."

FENCE TALK

By George K. Vapaa

"Our orchards are being bud-ded to bungalows" says one Cal-ifornia farm advisor (county agent). Another, George Goodall of Santa Barbara County de-scribes the Voluntary Agricul-tural Preserves as the "put up or shut up" law.

It was a revelation to this county agent from Delaware to see the effects of urban pressures on West Coast farmers. I'm con-vinced that when the urban pres-sures are strong enough, those who truly want to farm will work to save prime crop land.

The pattern all over the coun-try has been for farmers to sell out for a big price and move to another area. But in California—as in Delaware—prime crop land is fast disappearing. Second grade crop land tends to increase farm operating costs, thus re-ducing a competitive advantage.

Hank Sciaroni, farm adviser in San Mateo County just south of San Francisco, is an amazing worker to save prime crop land. Our group visited a 40 acre tract set in the middle of town de-voted to greenhouse flower pro-duction. This county permits ag preservers in tracts of less than 100 acres by county planning. We heard two of Hank's flower growers describe how useless it would be to sell out and start anew even 50 miles away.

It was a real thrill to meet Karl Belsler again in San Jose. He is probably the foremost pro-fessional planner in the country working to save prime crop land. The farm adviser in Santa Clara County, Leon Tichinin, baited him beautifully by inferring that "the game is lost. Farmers can-not hold out". Karl was on his feet quickly to say that farm land as open space is needed in a well planned community and then ticked off the reasons.

I cannot leave this segment without recognizing Harwood Hall, Alameda farm adviser, who made our San Francisco area farm tour so worthwhile. Our tour group was so grateful that they presented me as organizer, with a beautiful salad bowl at our national county agents an-nual meeting.

The annual marketing tour of our Peninsula Horticultural So-ciety is just a month away. This year, by popular request, we re-turn to New York City to see the new Hunt's Point Wholesale Market, the United Nations, and the Santa Rosa ocean liner. The dates: Dec. 14 and 15.

Our group will travel by char-tered bus and stay overnight in a New York hotel. The total cost per person can be under $30, in-cluding meals. But reservations are needed. Call our Extension Service office at 736-1443 for more details. Any county agent on Delmarva can help with res-ervations.

The Hunt's Point Market, lo-cated in the Bronx, is replacing the old Washington Street mar-ket in downtown Manhattan. New ideas are being used to han-dle wholesale food more quickly and efficiently.

We will meet with Food and Agricultural Organization officials (FAO) at the United Nations. The idea is to examine world food needs and the role that the United States has and will take in helping to feed the world.

The Santa Rosa is one of the Grace Lines ships that cruises the Caribbean area. I believe they carry some bananas from Central America, and the whole handling process has been au-tomated. We will also see how oth-er foods are handled and served on the ship.

The marketing tours usually follow the annual meeting of the Peninsula Horticultural Society. Fruit and vegetable growers on Delmarva form the membership. The annual meeting itself will be at the Centenary Church in Lau-rel. However, the bus tour will start at Salisbury and move up Route 13 to New York. Those who plan to make the tour can catch the bus anywhere along the way with advance notice.

Several farmers have called from time to time asking about the emergency livestock feed program which may be needed because of the drought. There are many conditions to be eligible. In brief, a farmer must not have sufficient feed or cannot get enough credit to buy feed. The emergency rations must be used only for breeding stock, not fat-tening stock. The number of ani-mals cannot be greatly increased, and the rations to be fed are merely for maintenance—not for production.

Those who think they may be eligible should get in touch with Lister V. Hall, Jr., County ASCS Office manager, located at the USDA offices just north of the Camden traffic light. His tele-phone number: 697-3601.

A word of thanks to Fred Mott, work unit conservationist here in Kent County. He served as guest writer the past two weeks while your county agent was away on vacation. Fred lives eats and breathes soil and water conservation. Work along with him and you find his enthusiasm as a soil steward is infectious.

Have you written your sena-tor or representative in the Con-gress yet for the 1966 Yearbook of Agriculture? Their supplies of free copies are limited. The em-phasis this year is on "Protecting Our Food". It's well illustrated and quite timely.

After their free supply is gone, one can purchase additional cop-ies from the Superintendent of Documents at Washington for $2.50 each.

Discover Wonderful Del.

One thinks of trees in the fall, when their colorful foliage brightens the fading days, and in the spring, when the green comes back. Between times, they are just there—but there are some small wonders to be dis-covered among the trees of won-derful Delaware.

Everyone knows the maples, oaks, beeches and gum trees that make up most of Delaware's woodlands. But there are others far less common. It's worth no-ticing that, although it's such a small state, Delaware lies in two different zones of hardness. The diving line runs almost along the Chesapeake and Delaware canal, and there are trees fairly com-mon in Kent or Sussex County that just don't grow in New Cas-tle County, and New Castle trees that one rarely sees south of the canal.

Probably the most spectacular tree, and nowadays one of the rarest, is the Cypress, which can most easily be seen at Trussem Pond, near Laurel. This is just about the northern limit for Cy-press, and to stand among the towering trunks and knobby "knees" transports one to some Southland swamp. A companion to the Cypress, and also now very rare, is the Southern White Cedar. Long ago, lower Sussex County had vast areas of Cedar and Cypress swamps where the trees stood so thick that it was nearly dark beneath their branches. But the peat which ac-cumulated over the years was valuable for agriculture, and these great forests were burned over to clear the land for farm-ing. Now only isolated stands re-main.

There's a beautiful companion to the Cypress—the Sweet Leaf—a charming small tree that thrives only in the dark shade of the swamp regions of Sussex County. Its most northern re-ported location is at Redden. Sweet Leaf is a cousin of many tropical trees, and looks it. It gets its name because cattle love to browse on its long glossy leathery leaves, which often stay green nearly all winter.

Another Sussex County rarity is the Seaside Alder, which is found only in southern Delmarva and in a small area of the Red River Valley of south central Oklahoma. It got its name from its Delaware habitat — always close to tidewater. You can tell it from ordinary alder by the seed cone, which is two or three times as large.

The Swamp Cottonwood, com-mon enough farther south, lives in Delaware only in Kent and Sussex Counties, and even there its comparatively rare. You find it, as the name suggests, in swamps or on the edges of wa-terways. While it looks like any cottonwood, you will know it by its leaves, which are almost twice the size of ordinary Eastern Cottonwood leaves.

These downstate trees all pre-fer watery places—the ones that stick to New Castle County are of another sort. The Shagbark Hickory is common there, rare in Kent, and not native to Sus-sex. Kent and Sussex have the Pale Leaf Hickory instead, and it, too, has edible nuts.

Brewers of birch beer had bet-ter stick to New Castle County. The Black Birch, with its win-tergreen flavored twigs, is plen-tiful there, rare in Kent, and never seen in Sussex.

Hop Hornbeam, or Ironwood, a northern tree, is extremely rare in Delaware, native only to New Castle County.

The beautiful Staghorn Sumac, which can grow as tall as 20 feet in Delaware, is known for its velvety winter twigs and bril-liant autumn foliage. It's another that prefers New Castle County, and is found below the canal only where it has been planted.

The Black Ash, which likes wet feet, finds the climate below the canal too warm, and is found only, and rarely, along the streams of New Castle County.

These are just a few of the wonderful oddities which can be discovered among the trees of Wonderful Delaware.

Harrington School Notes

Mrs. Nelson's fourth graders are studying the paragraph in English. They would like to share a few of their paragraphs with you.

TIM Tim is my dog. He is a beagle. He likes to hunt. He runs and runs! I like him, for he is a good dog. He will not bite you!

—Lisa Jo Masten Thanksgiving & Christmas at 4-H At 4-H the children and I all were helping get ready for Thanksgiving. Our leader told us that it would be nice if we could send a box of Thanksgiving cook-ies to the boys at war. We all said that was a good idea.

Then we talked about what we would do for Christmas. So we said we would do our best to think of a good idea.

—Karen Newnom MY FAVORITE SHOW My favorite show is a western comedy show. It is called "The Rounders."

In the show there are two cow-boys, a rich man, and a horse. I like this show very much. I think it is very funny.

—Angela Minner MY DOG AND CAT My dog likes to run the cat. So does my friend's dog. They never catch him. He is like Reddy Fox —tricky! No dog has even gotten close yet!

My father likes the cat but he doesn't like my father. The cat runs from him!

—Mark Lee Letterman MY CAT, FLUFFY I have a cat. She is a Maltese cat. Her name is Fluffy. Night before-last after school, my brother, Jackie, saw a girl that had a cat just like Fluffy. He thought it was Fluffy. He ran in the house and told my mother. She came out and got the cat and took her in. My mother told Jackie to go over and look in my grandmother's cellar to see if Fluffy was there. Jackie did and Fluffy was in the cellar! Now we have two cats!

—Lynne Parker WHY I LIKE SCHOOL The thing I like about school is when you're in the fourth grade you get to go to the li-brary every other Friday.

When the right Friday comes, I'm ready!

—Nancy Dill MY DOG I have a dog at home. He is a big dog. We have to keep him tied because he will bite you if you tease him. He is black and white. Some times he breaks things. One time he broke a flower pot.

—Susan Smith A SURPRISE One night it was very, very dark and moonless. I jumped out of bed and got my gun. Then a big man came in my door. He said, "Put that gun down! I am your father!"

—David Hrupsa MY KITTENS I have two kittens. They are nice ones. Everytime you close the door here comes a kitten.

—Lou McKnatt MY DREAM Last night I had a terrible dream! I dreamed that John was in the barn. He had a terrible man there. The man and John came in the milkhouse. The man had a knife. He was going to kill me! But instead I cried. John hit him. I took the knife from him and killed him!

—Marilyn Harcum COMMERCIALS On commercials people talk about products. For instance, a giant's hand comes out of the washer to show this product is as strong as a giant.

I like it when the lady sees the hand and runs next door scream-ing that there's a giant in the washer!

—Matt Burgess Time To Bake Fruitcakes Christmas season still seems a long time away. But, fruitcake season is already beginning, ac-cording to Miss Marguerite E. Krackhardt, extension foods and nutrition specialist at the Univer-sity of Delaware.

Of all the cakes created for the festival of Christmas, fruitcakes are the most popular. Bake them now, Miss Krackhardt advises; closely wrapped and allowed to mellow, the cake becomes more elegantly delicious each day it is stored. A really good fruitcake needs to mellow a month before serving.

They require a lot of time and effort to bake, but there are shortcuts to simplify the process. Combine the fruit, spices and liquid a day ahead of time to make the work easier; this also helps to mellow fruit flavors. To cut the fruit more easily, use a scissors and a sharp, thin-bladed knife dipped into warm water frequently.

Grease and flour the cake pans generously or protect cake edges over-baking by lining the baking pans with a heavily-greased brown paper or waxed paper. If the paper overlaps the pan, the finished cake will lift out easily. Cover the cake during the last hour of baking to keep the top of the cake from forming a crust.

Use a low temperature (300-degrees F) and a long baking-time to prevent burning and cracking the cake, Miss Krackhardt suggests. A one-pound cake should take approximately two and a half hours baking time; two pounds should take three and a half hours; and three pounds, four hours. If you put a shallow pan of water on the lowest rack of the oven, the steam will moist-en the baking cake.

After the cake is done, let it cool 24 hours before storing. To store, wrap the cake in fresh waxed paper or aluminum foil and store in an airtight contain-er in a cool place. If you freeze the cake, be sure to defrost be-fore serving for easier slicing.

Glazes give fruitcake a festive touch; since they don't improve with aging, glaze shortly before serving. Press on fruit and nut decorations while the glaze is still soft. If you prefer to de-corate without glazing, dip the de-corations in egg whites before placing on the cake; the fruit and nuts will stick to the cake.

For perfect slicing, always re-frigerate fruitcake before serving, Miss Krackhardt suggests. Use a sharp, straight-edged, thin-bladed knife; dip the knife into hot water before each cut and slice thinly with a slow sawing mo-tion, and use a light touch for crumble-free slices.

Preposterous, My Good Man

Well, sir you would think the last thing that could ever be said against American women is that they are wearing their skirts too long.

But, by jove, it HAS been said —by members of the London Symphony Orchestra, who with their wives and girl friends re-cently toured our primitive land of the low, low hemline.

The wives and girl friends of the English musicians really showed our American women—and men, too — something in the way of short skirts.

Our ladies, who had thought they were up to at least their knees in style, gaped aghast at the English gals. And the English gals gaped right back in amazement and derision.

And then a violinist in the Lon-don orchestra, who obviously ought to keep his eyes and his mind on his music, really sound-ed a sour note when he snidely sneered that no wonder Ameri-can women wore their skirts so long—"they have such terrible figures."

That tore it. The Limeys can knock our Viet Nam policy, our currency system, our economy, our politics, our morals or any other similar phase of our way of life. But just don't knock our lad-ies' legs!

The caustic comments from London have naturally evoked a torrent of bitter reprisals in America. Things couldn't have been much hotter between the two countries just before the Re-volutionary War.

And along with it all, one thing is simply beyond compre-hension.

Where, oh where, did those critics find those American gals with the long, long skirts?—Ne-vada (Mo.) Daily Mail

Bungling Bureaucracy

Inequities and injustices are bound to occur as long as the United States attempts to fight a war with one hand and continually expand welfare programs with the other. An example of this came to light recently through the efforts of an official of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

He suggested to a congressional hearing that if the government can finance transportation and furlough expenses for Job Corp trainees, it certainly could do the same for servicemen—at least those on convalescent leave, emergency leave and on furlough before going overseas or upon returning from overseas.

Other examples of federal waste while servicemen and their families and taxpayers are making sacrifices to support the war can be cited without end. Here's two: A California school board used $6,550 of federal funds to buy 70 new high school band uniforms. Another school used federal money to rent tuxedos for boys to go to a junior prom.

A self-generating bureaucracy is mindless and wasteful. It lacks a conscience or a sense of right or wrong. Its only goal is self-perpetuation. Eventually, if not stopped, the government becomes simply "the bureaucracy," and to the bureaucracy, a soldier in Viet Nam is no nearly as important as the pork barrel.—West Carroll Gazette, Oak Grove, La.

Inactivity Can Sew Atrophy

A friend learned to operate a typewriter in school years ago but never needed to use one in the skilled trade he entered.

Now, with new processes developing, familiarity with a keyboard has become an advantage in the trade, so he has begun to practice typing. He finds fingers are not as dexterous as they once were.

This is usually the case when a person neglects to "keep up" with a skill whether it is operating a typewriter, playing a piano or riding a bicycle. The fingers and leg muscles lose their nimbleness. A self-imposed refresher course restores it.

Disuse of any organ, physical or mental, has a tendency to encourage atrophy; reflexes become less responsive.

No doubt this condition applies to servicemen who haven't operated vehicles for long periods of time. They escape becoming a casualty in service, only to come home and die on the nation's highways.

This seems to be borne out by figures compiled by the California Highway Patrol which reveal that 2,652 servicemen died in road accidents in the United States, while 1,389 died in combat in Viet Nam last year.

Bradford Crittenden, patrol commissioner, believes this anomaly can be accounted for because the servicemen lack opportunity to drive cars. Their skill and alertness behind the wheel has diminished.

Following through on this theory the commissioner has been conducting traffic briefings aboard aircraft carriers returning to California ports. Navy executives support the program and now point to definite lessening in the number of deaths and injuries among returning personnel.

The results seem to suggest that similar briefings should become a part of military procedures elsewhere for service-men returning home. If a refresher course works in California it ought to work in any place.

In the interest of highway safety, which is at such a low ebb these days, perhaps civilians, too, ought to undergo periodic briefings on how to operate a motor vehicle.—Sedalia (Mo.) Democrat

Falcon's 4th-Period Splurge Beats H.H.S., 40-0

A one-sided defeat in football seems to be more painful than does a rout in most other sports. A grid team sometimes will fight hard against a superior opponent, manager to stave off defeat for two or three periods, then surrender a score because of a momentary defensive lapse or a bad break. Suddenly the flood gates open, the hapless team can do little right, the jubilant giants can do nothing wrong. The losers are thoroughly cowed, demoralized or, at best, play lackadaisically. But this is human nature and applies to every level of football.

Temple scores 82 points against Bucknell. Bowling Green tallies 60 on Temple. Buffalo routed Delaware. Dallas Cowboys clobbered the Philadelphia Eagles something like 52-7. Misery loves company, it is said. A lopsided defeat makes the home team players, coaches and fans, one, in their suffering. It's part of the game.

Harrington looked good as the game started. Raleigh Davis hit right tackle for five yards, then went through a hole and zig-zagged for 12 yards to midfield. The next three plays lost yardage ending the push. Wayne Melvin's punt was a good one, setting Dover Air back to their 13.

The Falcons' offense drove 30 yards but eventually stalled. On third down and 12 yards to go, Jerry Taylor lofted a pass downfield. A defender was in an excellent position for an interception and a return of, at least, 10 or 20 yards.

The Lion's leap was poorly timed and resulted in a completion and a return of at least, 10 no-gainer, Dover Air scored in three plays despite a five yard penalty. Danny Stathas, a hulk with speed and drive, scored the touchdown from the 9.

The Lions' turn saw only one play gain as Steve Welch hit safety-valve, Gerry Cagle, for six yards.

The Falcons marched to the H.H.S. 16 but a smash at right tackle didn't gain. Jim Simpler and Gerry Cagle stopped an end sweep for a loss. Two Lions trapped a Falcon back at the 31 but he got away and back to the 16. A short pass didn't get enough yardage.

Steve Welch got through the middle of the Dover Air forward wall, saw he was about to get hit, put his head down and smashed hard for extra ground, to get out to the 28. Davis added four yards in two tries. A jump pass fell. Melvin's punt again was a good one. Stathas fumbled it but recovered at his own 37. Stathas ran left was hit, kept going, was hit again, refused to go down, stepped out of tackles and after six or more Lions had a good shot at him, was grabbed by the powerful Jim Harris. Harris threw the burly Falcon outside with such force that Stathas' head hit a chair and he was knocked unconscious. Fortunately, he was able to leave under his own power.

Taylor was surrounded by Lions and so was a big end upfield but they managed to get together for a completion on the Harrington 25. After a 15 yard flag, Taylor hit Russell with a 40 yard scoring aerial, only to have the play called back.

The Lions sprung Raleigh Davis loose down the right sideline for 19 yards, as the last tackler got him at midfield. A pass just missed recording a long gainer or a T.D. Wayne Melvin's 55 yard kick just missed going out at the one yard line. Just missed was the theme for H.H.S. this evening.

After a scoreless third period the Falcons' lone score began to assume more and more importance.

However a Falcon got through the Lions to block a punt and set up a second marker. Bennett crashed through center for 11 yards. Taylor ran for the 13th point.

The rest of the period was a nightmare peopled by running figures clad in blue and white. Dover Air scored five touchdowns in that fourth quarter before the clock mercifully ended the slaughter.

While it is distressing to end a long season in such fashion, it should be remembered that 1966 was still a winning year for Coach Bill Muehleisen and his Lions. They upset all pre-season prognostications by winning five times in nine tries after being picked to win only a game or two. Many long, hard hours from August 25th until the middle of November were spent achieving the good record. We feel that an outstanding job was done by all concerned.

Next year the Lions will be without the services of a lot of beef, something like 600 pounds, in the absences by graduation of Ed Wheatley, Mike Welch and Doug Clendaniel.

Backs leaving will be the high-scoring, breakaway runner, Raleigh Davis Jr. and fullback Gayle McReynolds. Stalwart defensive standout Wayne Teed and end Dennis Spicer complete the list of graduates. Thus, at least five good boys have got to materialize in the next 10 months, or else.

Jim Hawpe's junior high eleven lost only one contest this campaign. Undoubtedly, this team can help the varsity come August 25.

Lion Harriers Win Henlopen Meets For Perfect Season

Coach Harold McDonald's state champion cross-country Lions completed their second perfect season in nine years of competition, by winning the Henlopen Conference title Wednesday afternoon at Killen's Pond. Earlier the locals had closed out their third unbeaten regular season in the last four years. The Lions have had five undefeated dual, triangular and quadrangular campaigns in nine years.

Harrington's winning score was 27. Buddy Bonniwell's improving Felton Green Devils were second with 48. Millsboro was third with 58.

Milton did not compete. The Warriors thus were denied a chance to win one of the trophies awarded the first three finishers and also lost the opportunity to qualify one or more of their runners for the All-Henlopen Conference cross-country team.

Their absence probably sounded the death knell for cross-country as a Henlopen Conference sport. The league has a by-law that states that five of the twelve schools in the conference must compete in a sport before that sport is sponsored by the league. Five were slated to compete but Greenwood dropped out in September. It appears that Harrington, Felton and Millsboro will not be able to compete in a Henlopen Championship meet in 1967 unless Milton agrees to enter. One other alternative would be for a couple of other Henlopen Schools to give cross-country a try.

Imagine the irony of the situation if Milton was to develop a strong team in a year or two and then would discover there was no loop title trophy to win because of their behavior in 1966.

Perhaps the Lions should not have journeyed to Milton last winter to play Bill Cordrey and Co. We, too, knew we were going to lose that basketball game, then.

Of course, there are plenty of schools in this area to schedule for dual meets so the harrier sport is in no danger. In fact, it is healthier than ever with close to 25 teams operating in the lower Delmarva region.

Ronald "The Champ" Morris survived a long drawn-out duel with Felton's sensational find, Irace Williams, to win in personal record time of 13 minutes flat for the rugged 2.34 miles course. Morris' previous best was 12.11. Williams had clocked a good 13.21 in the Harrington Invitational and lowered that to 13.03. Only course record holder, Barry Lambertson of Lewes (12.49) and R. Morris have done better of the 200 or more boys to run at Killen's Pond this fall.

Big Harry Thielemann, of Millsboro a 13.49 performer here, one week earlier had run five miles a day in an effort to improve. Harry got the third place trophy with a superb 13.04.

Harrington's eighth grader, Chris Wetherhold, cut 8 seconds off his personal course record to get fourth place.

Nick Morris (5th) equalled his own best mark of 13.24. Felton's Lloyd Shelman recorded a new low of 13.44 to finish sixth, while Lion captain, Dan Hicks, was next just one second off his best here.

R. Morris, Wetherhold, N. Morris and Hicks of Harrington, I. Williams and Shelman of Felton, Thielemann of Millsboro, make up the All-Henlopen cross-country team.

This represents quite an achievement for everyone of this septet. However, the Felton boys should be singled out for special recognition since they didn't start to run until late September. Fortunately, both late seniors and won't be around to haunt anyone in 1967.

Wetherhold, because of his youth (13), and Thielemann, because of his size (huge), also deserve extra credit. Nick Morris made the all-star team in 1965, the first year one was chosen. Make it three straight in 1967, Nick.

In eighth place Curt Bowers, of Felton also ran his best race ever. Curt will be back next year.

Phillips, of Millsboro (9th) was pressed to the limit by the tiny, hurtling figure of Danny Hitchens. Hitchens hurled his 68 pound frame through the atmosphere at such a rate, that he made up a lot of ground in the homestretch and was clocked in 13.56, the same time as Phillips. The Blue Devils' flailing elbow accidentally hit the Lion's arm or Danny would have taken him. The local's 13.56 is 28 seconds faster than he had done previously and is the fifth best clocking on a state champion team. He missed the all-star group by only nine seconds. All this from an eighth grader, who is too much of a competitor, to let his size worry him. He has been beating 18 and 19 year olds all year and on a pound-for-pound basis is the best harrier in Delaware.

Team captain Dan Hicks is the only senior on the Lion's team. If everybody else stays healthy and eligible, Coach McDonald may see his charges reach new heights in 1967.

Because of illness and other reasons, Felton's jayvee team was down to only three upperclassmen so no score was kept in the jayvee workout. Troy Williams (15.11) and Sam Bostick (15.41) led the Green Devils. Bostick's time was his best of the season and is real good considering his youth and late start. Tom Price was timed in 16.38.

For Harrington, Richard Benson again was tops. His 14.27 was a new record for him. Eighth grader Dale Motter's 14.33 was an improvement of 11 seconds. After watching Millsboro's big senior, Thielemann, barrel around the course, we think Dale will be able to run for four more years, although he will be bigger than the average harrier.

Bob Smith (3rd), Billy Stubbs (5th), Bill Walls (9th) were all near their best times. John Kinney, Vaughn Baynard, Joe Gray, Randy Cagle, Mike Davis and Bob Legates were new record-setters. Dennis Layton tied his best previous effort.

The 12 year old Kinney has gone from 16.59 to 15.23 in two or three weeks. He looks like a star of the future, one of those rare boys, who makes his presence felt at a very early age.

Cagle broke loose with a 45 second reduction in his last outing of 1966. Davis is not in Kinney's class at present but is considerably better than the average 12 year old. Mike cut off 14 seconds.

Gray's 16 second improvement moved him ahead of one or two Lions to a final quad ranking of No. 18 of the 44 Lions to be clocked this year.

Bob Legates had an 18.02, two races ago, but the squad's smallest harrier at 62 pounds, raced to a very good 16.57 in his last trip around the layout. Come out early next year, Bob and give yourself the chance you didn't get this time.

Brad Morris' 16.38 represents an improvement of nearly three minutes since he decided to run in early September. He has to work very hard since he is not as healthy as most of the other boys. Therefore, his progress has been terrific when all the facts are in.

Every lad still on this team at season's end has shown ability, desire and improvement. Look for 1967 to be another banner year.

Letter To Sports Editor

Even though we have joined the alumni of Harrington High School, we still have a very keen interest in Harrington's athletic teams. By receiving the Journal every week, we are kept abreast of local events. It is a pleasant surprise to see Harrington doing so well in cross-country, hockey, and football, but our main objective in writing this letter is to congratulate Ronald Morris on his record-breaking cross-country season. Having been harriers ourselves at the time when Ronald joined the team, we can appreciate his stellar performance in the hill and dale sport. Ronald has done in two years what the majority of runners fail to accomplish in four or five years.

Two members of the 1965-66 Ronald Fan Club want to wish him continued success in his running career.

Delaware's Best Harriers Ran 5 Miles Here

Over the weekend the Delaware Track and Field Club put on a five mile race, over the cross-country course at Killen's Pond.

Any boy, 18 or under, who resides or goes to school in Delaware was eligible to enter. Some 35 harriers responded including the cream of the current scholastic crop.

Jerry Peltz of Salesianum took top honors with a fine 27.23 clocking. Andy Bader, of Archmere Academy, the Group II state champion, finished third just four seconds ahead of Lewes' Barry Lambertson. Bader and Lambertson were 1-2 in the state meet this fall but the improving Pirate got much closer to Bader this time. Barry defeated Chris-Little of Brandywine, the state Group I champ and pre-race favorite.

Early leader Bob Jones, of Salesianum was sixth as he just barely held off the closing rush of Millsboro's big and powerful Harry Thielemann.

Ron Morris, Chris Wetherhold and Nick Morris of Harrington were 9th, 10th and 11th in their first race at a distance greater than 2.4 miles. The Wilmington entries had previous experience at the longer distance. The local trio's times were in the neighborhood of 30 minutes and 40 seconds, which are very good for boys 13 (Wetherhold) and 16 (R. Morris, N. Morris).

Dave Smith (12th) of Dover was a top distance runner for the Senators last spring. Steve Klosiewicz of Archmere, fourth place winner in the Delaware State Junior meet this month was 13th just 2 seconds ahead of the fast-closing Danny Hitchens. Hitchens, a little eighth-grader, was only five seconds in back of Smith, a senior and only eighteen in back of 11th place. His 31.02 clocking is good enough to put him on some college teams, right now. At the Mason-Dixon Collegiate Conference meet at Washington College, Chestertown, Md. on Saturday quite a few harriers took longer than 31.02 to run only 4 1/4 miles.

Some of Harrington's outstanding crop of young runners ran a distance of 4.4 miles with Billy Stubbs, 13, posting the best time (31.28). Eighth-graders Randy Cagle and Brad Morris were clocked in a good 33.06 and 33.10.

Don Cagle, 13, had 34.10 in edging out Collision of Dover and Alan Derrickson of here.

Sixth-grader Tommy Clarke is only 11 but loves to run and can give you a swift 50 yard dash or a very good 4.4 miles, whatever is your pleasure. The wiry, gutty little rascal was coming up the homestretch after about 35 minutes of trotting up hill and down dale and was actually looking around for someone to sprint to the finish with him. A 15 year old Lion cross-country runner took 3 minutes longer to negotiate the rugged terrain, than did the precocious grade schooler. Clarke is one of three elementary pupils, who are being counted upon to keep these running Lions on top after the present crop graduates. More about this trio of Clarke, Jackie Parker and Danny Porter in a week or two.

Felton's Kevin Fletcher also went 4.4 miles as some of the older lads threw in the towel. Fletcher is another sixth grader. Green Devil cross-country coach Buddy Bonniwell things he has a future star in Kevin.

The Delaware Track and Field Club will put on another five mile race, this Sunday afternoon, over the University of Delaware's course at Polly Drummond Hill, Newark. Participants are to meet at the football stadium south of Newark on Route 896 at 2 p.m.

Correction: Bob Legates Was 36th in Invitational; Not 44th

Bob Legates 62 pound harrier on Harrington High's cross-country team, was listed as 44th in a 50-man junior varsity field in the recent Harrington Invitational meet. "The Cardiff Giant" as we affectionately call the 4 foot 4 or 5 inch rascal, was 36th in that test. These kids work hard for everything they get. They don't want to get cheated by a mis-stroke of the pen.

Brandywine Raceway News

Horsemen from the Delaware Valley, Del-Mar-Va area, and the Nation's Capital, many of whom have raced trotters and pacers at Brandywine Raceway, contributed a healthy portion of the record $4,026,200 dished out for 854 head at the recent Harrisburg (Pa.) Standardbred Sales held in the Pennsylvania Farm show arena.

Slightly more than 30 per cent or $1,377,200—an average of $4,717 per head—was paid for the yearlings by owners in the six-state area, according to a breakdown of figures. It was by far the largest for this section in the auction's history.

knocked down for the sales' high of $100,000 for his Leigh Stable. His brother, Vernon, had the second highest purchase, $58,000, for Senior Hanover (Adios). And brother Stan shelled out $55,000 for the prized Romero Hanover (Lehigh Hanover) for third highest.

Stanley's other big purchases include Valentina Hanover (Adios), $17,000 and Susie Q. Hanover (Dancer Hanover), $11,500. Harrington's, Johnny Amato paid $10,000 for Able Bye Bye (Bye Bye Byrd), $7,700 for Musical Hanover (Hoot Mon), $6,000 for Varsity Butler and $1,300 for Jill Arden.

Dr. Fischer and his syndicate who race a sizeable stable at Brandywine paid $27,000 for Smooth Hanover (Tar Heel), $21,000 for Keystone Diamond, $12,000 for Keystone Gorgeous and $8,200 for J. J.'s Invader, while Marylander Dr. Mort Fielding, also a Brandywine regular, purchased Tropical Way for $10,000, Battle Station for $6,700 and Caustic Yankee for $4,000.

Brandywine Raceway officials on hand for the sale were greatly impressed with the 80 yearlings who sold for more than $10,000 each, and particularly with Beautiful Hanover (Adios-Brenna Hanover), full sister of the great Bret Hanover, grabbed off by Joe O'Brien for the Armstrong Bros., Brampton, Ontario, for a cool $52,000. She and many other top yearlings bought here are due for Brandywine action in 1967.

Harrington Bowling League

Not much can be said about the first week of the second third as no report was handed in. It seems tho, from hearsay only that McKnatt's Funeral Home and Walley's Garage are in the lead.

Of course, a team or two may have been missed, but with nothing to go on, the writer has to go on hearsay only.

Walley's Garage started out this third just like they did the first third. Maybe they will have better luck in this third than they did in the first part. They found that long climb upward mighty tough. This time they are again in a good position. Let's see if they can capitalize on it.
