

CITY ATTEMPTS TO SECURE FUNDS FROM NEW FEDERAL PROGRAM

The city government is pulling out all the stops in an attempt to obtain maximum federal grants for improvements to its sewer system.

Recently, Mayor Fulton J. Downing, Dudley Willis, the city's consulting engineer, and a member of the state's Water and Air Resources Commission, went to Washington to check on a new federal program.

This program, a demonstration one, concerned with research and development, tries out ideas for sewer systems. Communities may make suggestions on which the government may make field tests.

If the federal agency decides to use the community as a project, it may appropriate as much as 75 per cent of the cost of its particular project, the mayor told the City Council Monday evening.

Continuing, the mayor explained he believed Harrington was the only applicant in Delaware and Willis had been authorized to fill out an application.

Mayor Downing says the additional search for federal aid, or the institution of a federal demonstration here, would not hold up the original sewer improvement plan, he told the Chamber of Commerce Tuesday in a meeting at The Bridle Bit.

As the ball bounces now, a public hearing is scheduled for Fri., April 14, on a sewer referendum. A vote on a bond issue will be held Sat., May 20.

Meanwhile, Dudley Willis, of Richardson Associates, the city's consulting engineers, is compiling an estimate of the cost of the improvements. This figure may be used in determining the money to be discussed at the hearing and, consequently, in the bond issue to be voted on in May.

Terry Orders Water Study

Gov. Charles L. Terry Jr. Wednesday ordered two state agencies to undertake a comprehensive study of Delaware's water supply. He asked emphasis on the area between Wilmington and Smyrna.

The Water and Air Resources Commission and the Delaware Geological Survey were charged with the responsibility.

Brig. Gen. Norman M. Lack, Terry's representative on the Delaware River Basin Commission, and the University of Delaware's Water Resources Center were named to work with the study group.

Robert D. Varrin, head of the center, Wednesday said the group got off to an early start on its work Tuesday night when it interviewed a consultant in hydrology whom he declined to identify until negotiations for his employment are complete.

Terry said funds to hire the consultant and conduct the study were made available by a special foundation grant.

The governor said he was encouraged to order the study by proposals for an industrial complex on the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal.

He said the committee will conduct extensive pumping tests to determine underground water reserves.

"Published studies show that some serious inroads have already been made on the quality and quantity of Delaware's water," he said, "but there has been no thorough survey of the problem's magnitude."

"The importance of an adequate water supply to industrial, agricultural and private users," he continued in a statement, "provides an imperative necessity for an all-out effort to see where we stand and take steps to assure availability of this invaluable resource."

Delmarva To Hold Chicken Festival

The time is approaching for the 20th annual Delmarva Chicken Festival. The host for this year's event will be Dover. The chairman will be Robert H. Reed, owner of Dover Trucking Company. He was also chairman of the 1959 Festival held in Dover.

Mr. Reed has pointed out that the enthusiasm of this year's committees indicates that this will be one of the finest festivals in recent years. There are sixty committees working on various projects from cooking contests to parades and fireworks.

The dates scheduled for the festival are June 22, 23, and 24. It is expected that the event will attract more than 60,000 people from all over the United States.

Leon Porter Named Chairman Of Easter Seal Campaign

Leon Porter, of Harrington, has accepted chairmanship of the 1967 Easter Seal campaign for the Harrington area, according to Mrs. George Ehinger of Dover, Kent County Easter Seal campaign chairman.

Porter, who operates a hardware store and the Dura-Clean franchise, is a life long resident of Harrington. He and his wife, Lola, have four boys and a girl.

According to Porter, some of the Easter Seal Campaign events he plans, to raise funds for the area's crippled children and crippled children and adults include a teenage dance, a door-to-door campaign, which will be held the week of March 13 through March 20, and other special events in co-operation with civic and fraternal organizations.

He is a past president of the Rotary Club and is a member of the Chambers of Commerce and is active in the Episcopal Church.

In accepting the Easter Seal campaign chairmanship he said, "as my friends know, I have a cerebral palsied daughter and I am interested in helping the Easter Seal Society for Crippled Children and Adults of Delaware to help youngsters like mine.

The funds we raise will be used to support Easter Seal Camp Fairlee Manor, a resident summer camp for Delaware's crippled youngsters and the Delmarva Easter Seal Rehabilitation Center in Georgetown where crippled youngsters and adults receive physical and occupational therapy and can borrow wheelchairs and other invalid equipment."

According to Porter, the Easter Seal campaign goal for Harrington will be $500.

5 APPLY FOR CITY MANAGER'S POST; COMMITTEE TO SCREEN 'EM

The community has a petticoat city manager for the second time in its history.

At the second February meeting Monday night, the City Council named the city clerk, Mrs. Kathryn Derrickson, city manager. She is expected to serve in that post until the Council meets Mon., March 13, when a report on the screening of five applicants for city manager will be received.

Harrington's first female city manager was Miss Grace Wanda Quillen, now councilman from the Fourth Ward. She served in the post, and also as city clerk, some years ago.

The Council received the names of five applicants for city manager Monday evening. They were as follows:

William Smith, Electra Arms Apartment, Wilmington, former

Milford and Dover merchant. Harry G. Farrow, Sr., of Harrington, retired railroad conductor.

Wesley L. Butler, Paradise Alley, employe of the late Cahall's Gas Service Company.

J. Robert Green, Georgetown, former acting city manager of Milford.

Arthur G. Marsan, of Detroit, Mich., former Harrington alderman.

The applicants will be screened by a screening committee comprising Mayor Fulton J. Downing and Vice Mayor Burton Satterfield.

The community has been without a city manager since Feb. 17, when the resignation of Alfred G. B. Mann was effective. Mann is employed by the City of Dover in charge of its sewer system.

State Should Check Blue Cross, Legislator Says

Rep. Lewis B. Harrington (D-Milford) said Tuesday that Delaware's Blue Cross and Blue Shield systems should be made accountable to the state insurance commissioner, like any other company selling insurance.

Harrington, a freshman member of the House said he hasn't figured out yet what he has to do to change the present law, but that he's already to sponsor legislation to regulate the popular hospitalization plans.

"Any company which handles that amount of money should be subject to some regulation," Harrington said.

"You and I can't find out how many high-salaried vice presidents they have on the payroll and neither can the insurance commissioner," he continued.

"Any other insurance company has to open their books if the insurance commissioners say so," he added.

More than 250,000 Delawareans are covered by Blue Cross and Blue Shield.

Harrington pointed out that nearby Pennsylvania is currently in the process of an "inquiry" into Blue Cross rates and services.

The hospitalization plan officials frequently announce rate increases without having to account to any public agency.

Harrington indicated he thinks that Blue Cross, even though it is a non-profit organization, should have to substantiate the need for premium increases like any other public utility.

"It's a worthy enterprise, and I'm not complaining about it," he said. "Maybe everything is just fine. But as it is now, nobody knows because nobody can see their books."

L. B. Harrington In Hospital

Loren Booker Harrington, president of The First National Bank of Harrington, was taken to Milford Memorial Hospital early Saturday evening.

His ailment was termed infirmities of age. As of Wednesday evening, he was improving.

Kent GOP Makes Minor Changes In Proposed Bylaws

County Chairman Herman C. Brown Tuesday night said the Kent County Republican Committee has made only a minor change in a proposed new set of bylaws.

Brown said he believes the bylaws would provide a tighter control in the election districts. They came up for a second vote at the March meeting of the committee.

The bylaws become effective if passed at two successive meetings.

The only change made in the proposed bylaws Tuesday night was to take the responsibility for filling committee vacancies away from the county executive committee.

It was decided, with the support of committee members Calmire Boggs and John V. Maybee, that if a vacancy occurs the remaining three members of the affected district would select the replacement.

Two other proposals for bylaw changes were made, but overwhelmingly voted down by the committee.

They included a suggestion by McDonald Coker, Active Young Republican president, that his group's representative on the county executive committee should have a vote, and the suggestion by Wilbur Myers of Bis-

K.C.E.A. of Kent County To Hold Convention

The annual convention of the Kent County Education Association will be held at the William Henry School in the Dover Special School District, on Fri., March 10. After a 9 a.m. concert by the Dover High School Band, the president, Miss Eleanor Tucker, an instructor in the Dover High School, will chair the annual business meeting. The association will then divide for sectional and departmental meetings.

The afternoon session, chaired by president-elect Willard Hickman, administrative assistant of the Milford Special School District, will begin at 1:30 p.m. with a concert by the Delaware State Chorus. The speaker at the afternoon meeting will be Dr. Gary D. Watts, field representative of the National Education Association's Field Operations and Urban Service offices. Dr. Watts received his Ph.D. from Ohio University in 1964. During his professional career he has served as a social studies and English teacher in Granite, Utah; has worked at the center for Educational Research and Services at Ohio University; and has taught secondary education curriculum and methods courses at the same university. After serving with the New Jersey Educators Association in 1964-65 he joined the N.E.A. headquarters staff, where he is now located.

The Kent County Levy Court Tuesday blamed Dover as partially responsible for area pollution problems, and said the city should be made to participate in a county sewer project.

"The City of Dover," Commissioner William C. Holden said, "brought General Foods and the Latex Corp. into the area and the City of Dover is responsible for a major part of the pollution problems in the St. Jones River."

Holden said, however, that although Dover is responsible for a great deal of the county's problems, it has remained silent throughout discussions about the $15-million project.

"I think we should work more closely with Dover," Holden said, "and I think we should get them (Dover) in on it financially."

Commissioner William E. Spence agreed, saying, "I never had the impression that Dover feels it is as responsible as it is."

By involving Dover financially, Holden said later, he meant that Dover will have to pay a proportionate share for connection fees. He said the financial burden of constructing a sys-

Fire Destroys The Wonder R; 7 Fire Companies Fight Blaze

Fire of undetermined origin destroyed The Wonder R restaurant and package store here early Sunday morning.

J. Benjamin Roy, Jr., deputy fire marshal, said the blaze apparently started on the second floor of the building after closing hours Saturday night and had gotten a good start before it was discovered and reported.

The blaze was discovered by Joseph Mooney, who, with his wife, had purchased the business last year from Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bullock. The Bullocks, also present, had dropped in after attending a dinner at the nearby Legion home. Also present was Mrs. Adrianna Hughes, an employe.

When a noise was heard from upstairs, about 1:45 a.m., Mooney investigated and saw the blaze. Bullock ran upstairs with a fire extinguisher and used it on a burning floor mat. A section of blazing ceiling fell near him and he beat a retreat. Meanwhile, Mrs. Bullock had retreated to the family car. She said she saw the roof ablaze when she got into the car.

The Harrington Volunteer Fire Company and fire companies from Houston, Farmington, Milford, Greenwood, Felton, and Frederica fought the flames, while Camden-Wyoming Fire Company sent a truck to Felton as a standby.

Firemen were hampered by freezing temperatures and a high wind. Fire Chief Dale Dean estimates approximately 185 men were on the scene with between 16 and 20 pieces of equipment. Firemen were on the scene eight hours, Dean said.

Neither Dean nor Roy were able to say what caused the fire. The fire marshal said it would be difficult to determine the cause, since the building was demolished.

Roy estimated the damage would total between $50,000 and $70,000, but said this was only a guess, adding that it could be higher.

The building, insured, was a restaurant and package store. The second floor had been out-fitted as an apartment, but no one was living there.

One fireman was reported injured. C. O. Smith, a member of the custodial staff of the Dover Fire Department, who was working with the Felton company, suffered wrist injuries when he was struck as the burning structure collapsed. He was treated at Milford Memorial Hospital and returned to the fire scene.

The southbound lane of U.S. 13, on which the restaurant was located, was closed to traffic for a time because of fire apparatus and ice conditions.

A prominent figure said Mooney told him he intended to construct another building in brick, colonial style, but the report could not be confirmed.

Forest Denies Prior Knowledge On State Land Buy In Milford Neck

John Forest St. has denied any prior knowledge on his part in the $16,000 land purchase in Milford Neck, which was resold to the State Game and Fish Commission for a $34,000 profit.

Forest lives on Delaware 14 between Houston and Milford.

Forest said he bought the land and then turned it over to his son, John Forest Jr., a Dover peritrician ("because he wanted it") who, with Lockwood C. Emmert, Dover restaurateur, then resold it to the Game and Fish Commission for $50,000.

According to records in the State Auditor's office, the land was purchased about the same time it received a $14,300 appraisal from J. M. Clemmshaw Co., a national organization, in April 1965.

It was then re-evaluated about a year later by two Dover appraisers for $70,000 and $61,000, and sold shortly thereafter to the commission.

Forest disclaimed any knowledge of the Game and Fish Commission's interest in the property until long after the purchase, and produced two canceled checks showing down payments made for 10 per cent of the total price on Oct. 5, 1964—several months before the Clemmshaw appraisal.

"I didn't even know it was appraised," he said.

Nor did he know about the commission's interest in his property until April of last year, he said, when the commission purchased the Dickerson land, nearby for $50,000.

Mooney To Rebuild The Wonder R

Joseph Mooney, operator of The Wonder R restaurant which burned early Sunday morning, told The Harrington Journal Wednesday he would rebuild.

He said he would construct a brick and cement-block structure about 100 feet north of the present site, that it would be farther back from the southbound lane of U.S. 13.

Furthermore, he explained, the building would be at such an angle so the front could be viewed from both lanes of U.S. 13. The new property would be a modern, self-service package store and entrance from both lanes of the highway.

Details of the plans and starting time for construction will have to be worked out.

Legion Honors Chief Rogers For Performance of Duty

A Harrington police officer has been honored for his part in the maintenance of law and order by the American Legion.

At a meeting of the City Council Monday evening, Chief of Police Franklin Rogers was presented a certificate by William A. Kohel, commander of Callaway-Kemp-Raughley-Tea Post No. 7, American Legion.

Said the commander, "he couldn't be beat for a small town."

The presentation was part of a national program of the Legion for law enforcement. Also given out Monday night were bumper strips on law enforcement.

In other business Monday evening, the Council acted as follows:

Authorized the eradication of a yellow curb strip, signifying no parking, in front of the former Silco Store on Commerce Street, and painting yellow 10 to 20 feet of curb adjacent, and south, of the driveway of the First National Bank on Commerce Street.

Approved appointment of city clerk to prepare a printed form to be filled out by persons requesting exemption from capitation taxes because they are more than 65 years of age and have an income of less than $2500 per year.

Twin Double Banned At Delaware Tracks In Any Form

The Delaware Harness Racing Commission Thursday night, Feb. 23, banned the twin double in any form at the state's three harness tracks.

The action by the commission at a special meeting at Georgetown followed the outlaw of the twin earlier last week in Pennsylvania and New York.

"Our action was taken as a result of the U.S. Trotting Association's request that all state commissions ban this form of wagering," said Commission Chairman Joseph R. Pittard.

The twin double has been used at only Wilmington's Brandywine Raceway. Under this form of wagering, the player attempts to pick the consecutive winners of the last four races.

In addition to banning the twin, made legal in Delaware in 1963, the commission also tentatively approved the $1 million modernization plans at Harrington's Kent and Sussex Raceway.

MAYOR GETS ON THE BALL WITH SEWER WORK

While the city awaits appointment of a city manager, work must go on and problems be solved, Mayor Fulton J. Downing has learned.

At Monday night's City Council meeting, he mentioned a geyser in the sanitary-sewer system in Harrington Manor.

The mayor said he and Ted Rifenburg climbed down in a sewage pumping station and the latter discovered an air valve was stuck. He repaired it and that was that.

Another problem was a pump adjacent to the sewage disposal plant. This pump pumps water into the plant to mix with chlorine used as a purifier in the sewage. The pump had a cylinder fractured by the cold though it had a heating element.

The Council authorized Reginald McKnatt, plumber, and Rifenburg to fix the pump if feasible; if not feasible, to buy a new one.

The pump is not kept indoors with the chlorine because it is deemed harmful.

In other business Monday night, the Council authorized the acting city manager, Mrs. Kathryn Derrickson, to tell Scott Contracting Company, of Dover, Learn the warning signals your electrical appliances give you and you may prevent a fire, appliance damage or personal injury. These warning signals can spell danger to you and your home if they are not heeded.

Blinking or annoying "on-off" periods in the operation of an appliance usually means there is a loose connection. Perhaps it is only a loose screw, but repair it before a more serious problem occurs.
A "tingle" or slight shock when handling an appliance may need a ground wire connected.
Crumbling of rubber insulation in lamp or appliance cords can eventually expose electric wires which can short-circuit, or make metal lamp bases a serious shock hazard.
If the lights dim or heating appliances slow down when motors start, the circuits are overloaded. Overloaded circuits mean overheated wires - a dangerous fire hazard.
Blown fuses or tripped circuit breakers are also signals of overloaded or shorted circuits. Be sure the fuse is the right one for the side of wiring. If the fuse will let more power through than the wiring can safely carry, it is not a safety device.

The price is $1.

"The Little Drunk (s) From Fontainebleau

"Who Needs the 'hic-hic' Infantry! We're doin' all right!"
 Subject: "Napoleon and Josephine!"
 Place: Fontainebleau, France.
 Time: 1944

By W. C. Burgess

But First: "The Squawk Club says: 'Some parts of your articles are hard to follow.' 'Quite correct!' 'Keep 'em guessing and they'll all come back for more!'"
 You have to study a little and read between the lines a little.

Albert Clayton Price was the fourth soldaten on the firing squad, which Capt. John Abbott commanded at Barratt's Chapel. He told me that on the way home, some kid fell off a horse; and we all had to stop and help out. I remember that. It was way past Arthur Taylor's home-stand on the nine foot road.

"Cloud Nine. — When you are musing about the past. Snuggly-Wuggly: 'Hope you are doing all right.'"

"Washington crossing the Delaware."—It seems like there was snow on the ground; like there was when I wrote the article. Or didn't anybody notice it? That was the article on The Harrington boys in Maine. Chief of Police Rogers is from there, also!

Our records go back clean to the Revolutionary War. However, I don't think any of the soldiers in our family, were with George when he got his tootsies wet crossing the Delaware. They were all cotton pickers from way back, so I guess they fought further down south. Who ever heard of anybody picking cotton in a snow storm?

Some of our relatives fought for the gray—the South. One was a captain of a wagon train; and the other was a captain of the cabinet makers—which is a nice name for a casket maker. Some of the troops were raiders against the carpet baggers; and some were just plain ole' horse thieves which got strung up. Cut me in with the horse thieves. Anything for honorable mention.

Plenty of room to breathe in this week—which means we have space to fill; so, etc., etc., etc.

To the Vietnam Boys: "Don't feel bad at all about writing things confidential to your gal back home or to your father and mother; and don't sing the blues to the I. G. Officers are only human; believe it or not. I had one first lieutenant, as a bodyguard; he would turn in his grandmother for ransom; he was black-balled and transferred to our outfit. The Army did him wrong; and he turned sour on us'ns., he was always nosing around to try and find if somebody was doin' wrong; and let us just say I am no angel.—horns or wings, either one! You know, there is what is called the treatment. You transfer a bad officer out or else—that is if he is close enough to the front.—Catch on! He gets his lumps both ways.

However, there is always one special officer who will always think you are ace high. Go to him and him alone—tell him the truth—and give him all your confidential mail—everything you write. He won't let you down to the other officers; and you can write almost anything confidential you want. All letters have to be censored; so let your best officer do it.

This Lt. Porter from New York City was my prize pigeon. He gave me the Belgian Browning that I wrote about and o'k the package I sent it home in—but he didn't know it. They tell me the hand is quicker than the eye. He stamped the package and the corporal said we are moving out—mail it later. I slipped in the Belgian Browning 32 and shipped her home. 'Pore ole lonesome me, always conventional. After all; wasn't the package legally inspected? One more story—and then we'll get back to Napoleon and Josephine: "Nap and Joe" for short.

There were two brothers in the Michigan National Guard, but they were activated of course, and were at Ft. Leonard, Wood, Mo., when in comes W. C. as a replacement. One of these brothers was almost smart enough to be a Phi Beta Kappa—a key job—and the other was as smart as a "doddley-squat"—smart as nothing. So they send them both off to communications school—I think Ft. Sill. The dudly-squat flunked beautifully—as he was supposed to do—and the other passed with flying colors.

They promoted them both—and you guessed it—the Army game is a good ole' foul game. They got the records mixed up—and promoted the dummy to tech. sgt., and the smart guy—they made him a buck sergeant. Pore ole' lonesome me—which is a phrase which means I am not the only foul up that was in the Army. Everything is all 'kopasetic'—all fouled up. I drew the dumb dutchman—and they were both dutch—for my tech.—and he was so dumb you couldn't talk him out of nothing—restriction of pas to go to the movies or anything. But he was a good Joe, anyway. You see, they would have to break this fellow down from tech. to buck sgt., because of a mistake the officers made—and tht would go on his record. So they maintained the status quo—let things stay as is.

Southampton, England, July 15, 1944

Another Snafu: "Where have you guys been?" You are a week late!" Some one or two-striper mislaid our orders; so, we didnt get them on time. It wasn't much; just a battalion of troops detached from Patton's Third on a hurry-up call to go to Normandy to join Bradley's First. A German submarine had sunk a LST, so they sent a rush call in for us.

"Have I kept you waiting! I hope so." The way my dearly departed pater (father) used to do it was quite simple—he called us in and then stood in the doorway—and we had to listen to his yakkin's. If he could get a laugh out of us; he could get it out of anybody. THAT—is what you call — "holding your audience!"

Now the orders were to let Major General LeClerc and his French troops take Paris, so our troops went around it—all but a few of us. My outfit went around it.

Most of the officers were collitch graduates — and ROTC from the University of Alabama—which means they could read a map like nobody's business. These frustrated officers didn't get to help take Paris; so I figure they decided to take a little detour—and tour Fontainebleau—but, of course, I am only guessing.

Howsomeover—if there is such a word—did me—and the rest of the troops—how come we all wound up right at the gates of Fontainebleau. You could see the mansion, or chateau—about 75 yards away. "Hey, the call came in—you guys read the maps wrong—you are three hours ahead of the infantry!" "Hic!" "Hic!" "Who needs the infantry anyway!" They ain't enough women and wine to go around, now!" We sold them C rations, K-rations, cigarettes—not sold, traded—for schnapps and eggs. We waited the three hours, alright; all of us did—and by that time the German infantry could have come back in and we probably wouldn't have known who they wuz."

The Lt.-Col., ran up and down the road in a jeep and started yelling: "I'll courtmartial any so-and-so that crosses that road into the grounds."

"Hic!" "Hic!" "What did Nap and Joe have that we ain't got!" "Nothing."

And so, the corporal didn't put me on the list to go to Paris; but a first-sergeant from A or B Battery did get to go, though. He got back the next day; and he promptly got broke down to yard-bird; and they transferred him to boot.

Paris is easy enough to get into; but it is awful hard to get out of. No wonder the German general didn't burn it up. He probably got lost in there a time or two himself." "Cloud Nine: "Signing Off!"

New Termite In U. S. Pest Control Men Told

Our latest visitor from Asia should have stayed home. The Formosan termite is firmly established along the Gulf Coast from Galveston, Tex., to New Orleans, La., according to C. D. Mamepe, National Pest Control Association.

He spoke to professional pest control operators at the recent Pest Control Short Course, sponsored by the Department of entomology and applied ecology at the University of Delaware.

According to Mamepe, climate will probably eventually limit the spread of the Formosan termite, but it could move as far north as Philadelphia. Entomologists on the east coast are on the lookout for the destructive pest, one of the world's most aggressive and economically important termite species.

These termites build their covered tunnels in the soil, but they also flourish without any soil contact if there is enough moisture. They survive easily in wooden ship hulls and in this way have moved to many parts of the world. They do tremendous damage to wooden buildings in Hawaii, causing an estimated loss of two million dollars a year. Walls of new buildings have been hollowed out in three months' time without any visible sign of damage, in the surface, according to Mamepe.

Evidence of infestation by Formosan termites is the same as for other termites. They swarm in the springtime and make mud-like tubes on foundations to get from the dirt to the building.

However, unlike other termites found in this country, Formosan termites build nests which may be only a few inches or several feet in diameter. The first nest of a colony is usually in the ground; another nest is often built inside walls or in the attic, near a source of moisture.

Formosan termite colonies may be very large, with several hundred thousand termites in a single colony, Mamepe told the pest control operators. An established termite queen can lay a thousand eggs a day, and a colony may have more than one queen.

Fortunately, methods which control other termites also work on Formosan termites. If the pest ever reaches this area, pest control operators will be ready, Mamepe stated.

Delaware Food Market Report

By Anne Holberton

A new world, fresh and sparkling and full of hope—that is the meaning of spring and of its birth month, March. Anything and everything seems possible during this month, for it is the beginning of so many things—a new flower season, a new fashion season, and a new menu season.

Capture the gaiety of the Irish with a corned beef and cabbage dinner on March 17. Or, if national spring clean-up time applies to you, treat your hard-working self to a steak dinner on cleaning day. It's just the thing to bolster lagging energy and morale, and it's quick and easy. Much of the beef coming to market during the month is the high quality, juicy kind. Expect liberal supplies throughout the month.

On March 19, when the swallows come back to Capistrano, you can bring spring to Sunday brunch with Canadian-style bacon and pancakes filled with strawberries and sour cream. The following Sunday, March 26, pork stars again as Easter ham takes its place of honor. There's real economy in a whole or full half of ham. Especially now, when hams along with other pork cuts are noticeably lower in price.

With ham a good buy, you may want ideas for making the most of the ham you buy. Have you ever tried the "fresh cooked meal" plan for ham? Buy a full-cut shank half of ham. Have the butcher saw off the shank end. Simmer it with carrots, onions and cabbage and potatoes for a "boiled" dinner. Divide the remainder of the ham down the center into two pieces. Bake one piece with the bone for another fresh meal. Cut fairly thick slices from the larger end of the remaining piece and broil the slices for a delicious meal. From the smaller end cut thin slices, and use them to make a casserole of scalloped potatoes and ham for the fourth fresh cooked meal.

Egg production is now increasing rapidly, both seasonally and as compared with last year. Supplies this spring are expected to run four to six per cent ahead of a year earlier and prices should be low.

Other plentiful to look for at your grocery stores are oranges, grapefruit, green split peas, rice, canned salmon, and peanuts and peanut products. These are the foods listed in abundant supply and should be quite reasonably priced.

As for this week, check carrots for a true economy buy. The winter crop is huge, and carrots are for sale everywhere. This vegetable is extremely versatile. Served raw or cooked, alone or in combination with meats, fruits or other vegetables, they are a welcome addition to all menus.

Georgetown; Mr. and Mrs. William Brohawn and son, Steven, Cambridge, Md.; Mrs. George Graham and Mrs. Minola Wright, Harrington; Miss Sally Brown, Frederica and Clinton and Beth Graham.

Mrs. Reginald McKnatt is in Milford Memorial Hospital under observation.

Miss Cindi Smith celebrated her birthday with a party at her home on Clark Street, Friday evening.

Saturday evening dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Wheeler and children, Debbie and Dennis, were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Harris and son, Dennis, of Cordova, Md.; Mr. and Mrs. James Conley, of near Dover, and Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Pearson, of Harrington.

Poems from Paradise Pastures

By W. Cliff Miller

Ever since the last issue of The Journal for 1966 (Dec. 30) in which the entire staff extended New Year Greetings to all of us right from their relative positions in that busy, buzzing beehive of information, I have felt an urge to acknowledge our appreciation.

First, that entire page (2) was a symbol of "Personal Pride and Public Get-together" with photographs and titles listed in order of importance. All doing a good job, usually under pressure for time, and "on-their-own". The Assoc. Editor, however, is the boss, and the Editor is the boss's boss, mentioned in the following lines, but they are in there pitching every minute knowing they have a good crew that knows their way around. They have had failures and made mistakes, who has not? I recall a remark from the Assoc. Editor: "Mistakes, after all, do serve a purpose—our critics find so much pleasure in pointing them out to us."

A wise philosopher tells us: "Little minds are tamed and subdued by misfortunes; but great minds rise above them."

Discaile, the greatest Prime Minister England ever had (before Churchill) said; "All my success have been built on my failures."

Failures do not come into your life to tear you down and make you weaker, but to build you up and make you stronger.

Who are you working for—the boss? Oh no. He only points out the way to go. He tells you what to do, 'tis true, But he really isn't the boss of you.

Then who are you working for—the boss of the boss? Or the company that's handing your pay across. You owe them the best that's in you 'tis true, But neither one claims to be the boss of you.

The one you are working for is; "yourself," my friend, From morning's light to the day's dark end, And the boss that you'll finally answer to Is nobody else in the world but you.

So let us try to be a little kinder
 And just a little wee bit blinder
 To the faults of those we deal with
 Let's just praise a little more.

Let us try to be when weary,
 Just a little bit more cheery,
 And let's strive a little harder
 For those we are really working for.

HUMILITY

Those who are intelligent
 Should say a prayer of thanks
 And not belittle those who fill
 The less developed ranks.

For there is no importance
 In the wisdom we amass,
 Except as we employ it for
 The good of every class.

The literate and skillful
 Who hold their noses high
 Are not the ones whose lustrous star
 Will linger in the sky.

They are the vain and selfish and
 The blind who do not see
 That they are gifted only,
 By God's generosity.

But those who humbly strive to share
 Their genius and their lore
 Possess the prominence that will Endure for evermore.

4-H Club Notes

with Marion MacDonald

Youth activities are available in Kent County. 4-H is a program for all youth 9 years to 19 years. A member selects a project from over 30 choices. Project examples are: Electricity, woodworking, veterinary science, entomology, foods, clothing home beautification (flower growing). The project manual and record tells what a member is expected to do and guides to do with a record. Some of the activities that keep 4-H members busy are contests in judging public speaking, talent, recreational programs, state fair exhibits, 4-H camp and State 4-H Conference. A 4-H club can be organized anywhere there are at least 5 interested youths and adult leadership.

Leadership is a satisfying challenge. Our adult leaders gain in many ways as they work with youth. Training meetings are held to keep them up to date. Fellowship with other leaders brings new friendships. When one gives to 4-H one also gains from 4-H. Anyone interested in starting 4-H in their neighborhood should contact Marion MacDonald, 4-H Club Agent, 736-1448.

4-H Clubs represented at the February Leaders' meeting heard Dan Hudson report on the New Castle Junior Leaders' Weekend. We understand this was a most successful event. Mr. Hudson, one of the speakers, spoke on Why Stay In. Mr. Hudson stressed that the total success of 4-H depends upon the total participation of its members. And that 4-H molds character by learning experiences, cooperation, fellowship and fun.

Entries due for Junior Broiler program before March 6, take a minute right now and fill out your card.

WHICH IS DEADLIER—TRAFFIC ACCIDENTS OR CIGARETTE SMOKING?

1. TRAFFIC ACCIDENTS CLAIM 13,000 LIVES YEARLY AMONG PERSONS AGED 30-60 IN UNITED STATES.

2. LONG-TERM FRAMINGHAM (Mass.) STUDY INDICATES ELIMINATION OF SMOKING IN THIS SAME AGE GROUP COULD CUT HEART ATTACK DEATH RATE THERE BY AT LEAST 40%.

3. IF FRAMINGHAM'S EXPERIENCE IS TYPICAL OF NATION, THEN ELIMINATION OF SMOKING COULD MEAN 40,000 FEWER HEART ATTACK DEATHS IN THIS AGE GROUP YEARLY.

YOUR HEART ASSOCIATION reports that cigarette smoking's role as a key risk factor in coronary heart disease has been established in the 18-year Framingham study involving 5,000 persons, of whom 400 have died. Other major risk factors include obesity, high blood pressure, high blood cholesterol and physical inactivity. An intensive risk reduction program is among activities supported by public contributions to the 1967 Heart Fund, being conducted throughout February.

Personnel Units Eyes Federal Aid

The director of the State Personnel Commission Tuesday night said the state will consider billing various agencies separately for commission services to enable some agencies to retain federal grants.

James M. Rosbrow, commission director, said some agencies would lose federal aid if his unit took over personnel services for them. He added that the advantages and disadvantages of billing the state agencies separately would be studied at a later date with the budget director.

The commission Tuesday night moved closer to a decision regarding which firm will conduct its position and pay study.

Meeting at the Kent County Vocational-Technical Center at Woodside, the commission reviewed proposals from seven firms who offered to do the study, which will cost about $38,000. The commission decided to consult further with two of them, J. L. Jacobs & Co., and the Public Administrative Service.

The two firms submitted similar proposals and both have excellent reputations as consultants, according to Rosbrow.

The commissions staff will consult the two firms further to find out specifically which persons would be available to do the work in Delaware if they get the contract.

The Personnel Commission is preparing to set up the state merit system which it plans to put into effect July 1, 1968. It must first classify all the jobs of state employees then prepare a list of titles and pay plan covering all classifications.

Before this can be done the commission must find out what 6,000 state employees actually do. That will be the first part of the comprehensive study to be made by the consultants, who will send questionnaires to state employees.

The commission was also told that the Merit System Council is receiving applications for the position of director. The appointee will succeed I. Hammond Cabbage, the commission's assistant director, who formerly headed the state merit system for personnel administration. The new appointee will later become a member of the staff of the commission, which will supersede the present, limited merit system.

Marj. Hobbs Wins Betty Crocker Contest

Marjorie E. Hobbs, by finishing first in a written homemaking knowledge and attitude examination for senior girls December 6, became Harrington's 1967 Betty Crocker Homemaker of Tomorrow.

Marjorie is now eligible for possible state and national scholarship awards. Her test also earned her a specially designed silver charm from General Mills, sponsor of the Betty Crocker Search for the American Homemaker of Tomorrow.

A state Homemaker of Tomorrow and runner-up will be selected from the winners of all schools in the state, with the former receiving a $1,500 college scholarship; her school will be given a complete set of Encyclopedia Britannica by Encyclopedia Britannica, Inc. The runner-up will be awarded a $500 educational grant.

The Betty Crocker Homemaker of Tomorrow from this state, together with those from all other states and the District of Columbia, each accompanied by her school advisor, will join in an expense paid educational tour of Colonial Williamsburg, Va., and Washington, D. C., next spring.

The national winner—the 1967 All-American Homemaker of Tomorrow—will be announced at a dinner in Williamsburg. She will be chosen from the state winners on the basis of original test score plus personal observation and interviews during the tour. Her reward will be an increase in her scholarship to $5,000. Second, third and fourth ranking national winners will have their original scholarships grants increased to $4,000, $3,000 and $2,000, respectively.

This is the 13th year of the Betty Crocker Search for the American Homemaker of Tomorrow, initiated in 1954-55 by General Mills to emphasize the importance of homemaking as a career. More than $5,000,000 senior girls have participated in the search since its inception, and 1,256 winners will have earned scholarships totaling $1,371,500 at the conclusion of the current program.

Property Appraisal Cut Rapped

Glenn A. Richter, Kent County Levy Court president, Tuesday, said he will investigate a reduction in the assessment of a Rodney Village property.

Richter said the appraised value of the Rodney Village Apartments, owned by Max and Rose Ambach, was reduced by the previous board of assessments by $101,400. Proportionately, he said the assessed valuation was reduced by more than $60,000.

"In terms of tax money," Richter said, "the county has lost about $2,000."

Board of assessment records showed that the apartment property, partly in the name of the Ambachs and partly in the name of Rodney Apartments, Inc., was appraised by professional appraisers at $1,482,000.

The records showed that after the reduction, the appraised value was dropped to $1,380,600 and the assessed value was reduced from $889,200 to $828,400.

"After a proper investigation which I personally will conduct," Richter said, "if I find any abuse in the board's action, I will take appropriate action."

Richter said he will call in the present assessment board to see if they think the previous board's reductions were justified. If no justification can be found, Richter said, he will suggest that the valuations of the apartment property be raised back to the earlier totals, both appraised and assessed.

The reduction was made about two months ago, Richter said, on the basis of reducing by 25 cents the value per square foot.

He said the previous Levy Court hired the Clemenishaw Corp., professional appraisers, to update the value of properties throughout the county. That re-appraisal was completed in 1936. Richter said the Amabchs had an opportunity to appeal the appraisal Clemenishaw placed on their property while Clemenishaw was still in the county. "They did not appeal," he said.

George W. Kershner III, board of assessments secretary, said the action was taken by the previous assessment board apparently was legal, but he said no records were kept of the session at which the Ambach property was reduced or for any other sessions.

The Republicans, who won control of the Kent County Levy Court in last November's elections, gained control of the county's three-member Board of Assessments in mid-January when they named J. E. Leo Scanlon of Dover to replace Harold W. Powell, a Democrat, of Hartly.

Powell was dismissed after a hearing in which the Levy Court attorney, Roy S. Shiels, contended that Powell was appointed to the board contrary to state law, because he is from the same senatorial district as another member of the board, Republican Franklin English.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

Q—I had active duty in the Air Force from 1959 to 1963. I want to establish a business. Am I eligible for a G.I. loan for this purpose?

A—No. The new G.I. Bill makes provisions for G.I. loans for the purpose of a home or a farm, but not a business for persons with active duty after January 31, 1955.

Q—I was discharged from military service last month after serving three years. I am not a disabled veteran. May I take on-the-job training in an automobile repair shop to learn a new trade?

A—No. Educational assistance is not available for on-the-job training under the so-called "New G.I. Bill." Educational assistance is available for veterans who desire to study as recognized colleges, universities, trade or vocational schools. It is possible to study automobile mechanics or many other approved subjects in this type of training.

Q—Are educational assistance allowance benefits payable under the provisions of the new G.I. bill taxable?

A—No. These benefits are not considered income for income tax purposes according to the Internal Revenue Service.

Q—My friend gets maximum disability payments from the VA because of war injuries. He works for the state at a good salary and sells insurance at night. A fellow employee has challenged his entitlement to disability payments. Is he justified in accepting them?

A—He most certainly is. Your friend apparently is receiving compensation for a service-connected disability. Outside income has no bearing whatever on compensation. The fellow employee must have confused compensation and pension—the latter being for total disability but not service connected. Pension entitlement is based on outside income.

Q—My husband receives a disability check for wounds received in wartime. We have had several children since he was disabled, yet our compensation does not increase. Should it?

A—Only if your husband is more than 50 per cent disabled and submitted proof of additional children to the VA.

Q—I am received pension under the new pension law with the additional benefit for aid and attendance. My wife takes care of me while I am at home. Next week I am scheduled to enter the Veterans Administration Hospital for extensive surgery. Will my pension benefit be suspended?

A—No. You will continue to receive your basic pension while hospitalized. After one full calendar month that portion of your pension benefit ($100) paid because of a need for aid and attendance will be replaced by the "housebound" benefit of $35 monthly. Upon discharge from the hospital, the full benefit will be restored.

Q—Under the new VA school law, can a correspondence course be followed?

A—Yes, if the school and course are approved.

Q—I have lost my discharge. Can I obtain another through the VA?

A—No, but any VA Office can give you the application to submit to the proper agency.

Q—May a disabled veteran, if eligible, carry a $10,000 policy with both the VA and Servicemen's Group Life Insurance?

A—Yes.

Q—I am attending a college which restricts freshmen and sophomores to 12 semester credits. VA regulations state that one must obtain 14 semester credits to receive full-time benefits. Because of school restrictions, and through no fault of my own, I can't qualify for full-time payments. Are there any exceptions to this rule?

A—Yes. If your school certifies that your 12 semester credits qualifies as a full-time course by including field work and laboratory work, you may then qualify for full-time VA benefits.

The Church World Service clothing drive is being put on at present. Actually there should have been a notice about this past week as the deadline for getting clothes to the distribution point is Mon., March 6. We who have so much should search our wardrobes for items which could be of use to needy people in other parts of the world. Blankets are especially needed this year in addition to all types of serviceable clothing. Those who can contribute clothes should also furnish 10 cents per pound for processing and mailing and should bring them packed neatly and compactly to St. Stephen's before noon this coming Monday.

Special attention is called to the fact that there is a "call meeting" of the vestry for Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

It was announced by Robert Quillen, representative on the Assembly of the State of Delaware, that he would like to hear from responsible citizens on such things as "closing on Sunday" and other issues. Certainly it is one of our duties as responsible Christians as well as citizens to speak up on this and all issues, particularly those which involve moral values.

Advance notice is given that there is a need for spring hats for women, and neckties and socks for men at the Delaware State Hospital. These may be used, but should be in good shape. Anyone having these items to contribute may bring them to St. Stephen's Church office by March 16.

An organ recital is planned at the First United Presbyterian Church, Milford, on Sun., March 12, at 4 p.m. by Norman Allen, organist and choir master of First Methodist Church, Charlottesville, Va. He will be assisted by Florence Bennett Allen, soprano, member of the music faculty of St. Anne School, Charlottesville.

Most Ag College Students Are Non-Farm

The College of Agricultural Sciences at the University of Delaware has shed its "cow-college" image and assumed an important role in the education of Delaware's young men and women, according to the assistant dean of the college.

Dr. Donald F. Crossan told Kiwanians meeting in Bridgeville recently that the college is teaching the fundamental and practical aspects of maintaining the nation's food and fiber supply. He said that as counselors and parents have come to realize the value of the broad-based education involving science, economics and engineering that is offered, non-rural enrollment has grown. No longer is the bulk of the college's enrollment drawn from rural high schools.

Of the 330 students currently in agriculture, 179 are from high schools in the greater Wilmington area. In addition, some of the out-of-state students are from urban areas in New Jersey, Pennsylvania, New York, Massachusetts, and other states.

Surprisingly, graduates of four non-rural high schools make up more than one-fourth of the agricultural enrollment. Twenty-nine are from Salesianum, followed by John Dickinson with 27, Newark Senior High, 25, and Mt.

Pleasant, 20. Most of these students are majoring in the non-production phases of agriculture within agricultural economics, poultry science, entomology, plant pathology, food business management, agricultural engineering and horticulture.

Cross told the Kiwanis members that graduates of the college are finding excellent employment opportunities. After four years of study in one of the agriculture disciplines, graduates are in demand for teaching, research, production agriculture and the many phases of agri-business. He pointed out that only a few go into farming. About 35 per cent are accepted into graduate schools throughout the country where they prepare for careers in specific research 40 per cent go directly into an and college teaching. Another 49 per cent go directly into an agricultural career closely related to their undergraduate training.

Some go into management, sales, training and service positions with chemical, equipment and processing industries.

In discussing other phases of the college, Crossan said the Delaware Agricultural Experiment Station has about 90 research projects currently underway. They range from projects aimed directly at solutions to farm production problems, to more basic projects in wildland ecology, mosquito control, climatology and water use.

HOME

You may travel over every mountain, glen and dale,
Go by bus, plane, train or sail,
Visit far off places like Italy's Rome,
But, you'll never find a place like home sweet home.

Whether you travel north to see the sights,
And visit such places, as maybe, Brooklyn Heights,
Or travel to places both near and far,
You'll miss home, no matter where you are.

Your travels may take you to far off England,
Or off to frolic in Florida's glorious sand,
But, though listening to the beckoning call,
You'll find home is the best place of all.

When folks are young and adventures call,
They don't mind leaving home at all,
But as the years quickly pass by,
There comes a yearning to go back where there is a family tie.

To the ones who have left to earn at their trade,
And the fortunes in a lifetime made,
There is a beckoning at the end of their toil
To return to their native soil.

And when retirement time comes at last,
And all their labors are in the past,
The old folks start down the long, long road,
To make their home again in their native abode.

Though their trips have taken them from east to west,
They find home is what they like best,
And when the sun comes up in the early morn,
There is a yearning to go back to the place where they were born.

They know there's a long, long road a-winding,
To a place where ties are binding,
And they know that no matter where they roam,
That there is still no place like home.

IS IT TOO LATE?

Is your life just one monotony after another,
Or are you too busy to notice while helping a fellow man,
Or doing God's work, being a loving mother,
Or continually lending someone a helping hand?

How does one measure the joys of life,
Is it by drinking and carousing around,
Or by coming home each day to a loving wife,
Or by being fortunate enough to be financially sound?

Are you a person who lives your life to the hilt
As though each day may be your last,
Like a flower that blooms in spring, then wilts
Away in the frosty fall, like always in the past.

There are certain rules for us to live by,
But somewhere along the way,
Before we, as mere mortals, must say good-bye,
We manage to break the Ten Commandments day by day.

So we must always be full of repentance,
If we ever hope to see that Golden Gate,
And receive from our Judge the final sentence,
And pray to God that we did not repent too late.

SNOW — UGH!

When the birds no longer sing,
Then to the south they all take wing,
And the ground turns from green to white,
What greets us is a marvelous delight.

The children laugh and get out their sled,
As the oldsters prepare for the long cold days ahead,
Perhaps even hitching old hobbin up to the sleigh,
As was done in their ancestors' day.

Oh, how beautiful it is to see
Snow on the bough of every tree,
And the ground covered with a blanket of white,
That sparkles in the early sunlight.

But motorist fuss and sometimes swear
At that white stuff laying there,
As they slide to and fro,
Through that stuff called snow.

To our fine feathered friends,
This white stuff spells an end;
Unless we remember our little handout of crumbs,
Our creatures of the wild will surely succumb.

The farmers bless this cover of white,
For, far ahead they have set their sight,
To the long hot, dry days summer will bring,
And how this moisture will replenish their taxed spring.

So don't be discouraged after a restful night,
To find the ground covered with a blanket of white,
For it is indeed, a blessing in disguise,
For it helps to enhance all of our lives.

While you are walking in the stuff up to your knees,
Thinking surely that your feet will freeze,
Try to think of some of its good points,
While rubbing the pain out of your stiff, aching joints.

For shoveling it seems, awakens every muscle
That has laid dormant, until this hustle
To get the white stuff off the pathway,
So don't fret, it could be worse; it could snow every day!

FENCE TALK

By George K. Vapaa

Double tithing is the way that Norman Wilder, director of the Delaware Game and Fish Commission, provides for his feathered and furry friends. To put it another way, 20 per cent of the crop is not harvested on Commission lands rented out to farmers.

Most farmers give half a tithe, or 5 percent, and never realize it. This is due to machine harvest losses. But even if they know it, these farmers do not begrudge the wildlife this food.

Well tilled lands attract wildlife if adequate cover is left at the ends or edges of fields. I'm impressed with the number of ponds one can find all over the county. These also attract wildlife, and in many cases, provide a recreational source of income.

I'm not sure that the Harvard group touched on the hunting opportunities of Delmarva in their study. Some, on hearing the report, complained that seashore income is seasonal. With a bit more effort, the same resources for housing and feeding our visitors can be used in the winter months.

Inflation in the kitchen probably explains the consumer boycotts, or ladycoots, of recent months, says Dr. David Call of Cornell University. He points out that food is one thing that the housewife must buy out of her budget, and for which she must pay cash.

We've probably oversold the idea that food is cheap—requiring less than 18 per cent of average family income. And then, of course, most food stores offer quite a number of non-food items, which happen to find their way in the market basket.

Dr. Call maintains that food prices have been cheap because of depressed food prices to farmers. Food surpluses mean cheaper food. But the days of surplus may be ending as a matter of government policy. Farmers feel that normal supply can bring market operations into better balance.

The name of the game is "Service to the Consumer", adds Call. "The food industry must not be restricted in its ability to innovate and develop better techniques."

When the first warm days of spring return, he expects a return of these ladycoots. Would Mrs. Housewife prefer to kill, pluck, dress out, and cut up her own chicken? I doubt it. But she should forget that all of these built in maid services cost money.

Mrs. Consumer still rules the roost in the market place. She makes her choice and puts up with the money. Retailers tell us they will only stock the items that sell.

Tell the story of crop production much like the Delmarva Poultry Industry, Inc., does with broilers. But relate crop production to processing, marketing, and all of the services that a farmer now uses. These words pretty well describe the advice of our Crops Advisory Committee for our Extension Service programs.

The Delaware Crop Show may be missing the goal they said. Former Governor Elbert N. Carvel believes the Delaware State Fair may be a better location and time for it.

James Tarburton, of Camden, is our Kent County vice-president in the Delaware Crop Improvement Association. He was called upon at the last minute to preside over our think session with fifty Delaware crop farm leaders. Everyone agrees that he did a splendid job of guiding the discussion.

For several years now about 80% of our Delaware crop land has been used for corn and soybeans. So we have minimized our efforts with the small grains — wheat, rye, oats and barley. Some exciting research is underway with these crops. We are seeing 100 bushel per acre wheat yields, and a neighboring state has found a good market for malt barley. So we've been asked to take another look.

Some asked for a return to the corn and soybean yield contests — 150 bushels of corn instead of 100 bushels the old goal. While contests served a fine purpose at the time, others feel that crop demonstrations under controlled conditions may give better facts for top level yields.

Dr. William Mitchell and Dr. Noble Usherwood, two of our University of Delaware agronomists, will move ahead full tilt on subsurface irrigation. Farmers find it hard to move aluminum pipe for surface irrigation. Any system that will eliminate this manual labor will attract attention.

Soybean Herbicide Studied At U. of D.

The length of time trifluralin (Treflan) stays in the soil varies with the rate of application, the formulation used, the soil type, climate and the depth to which it is incorporated. Studies on persistence were conducted at Newark and Georgetown in 1965 and 1966 by Dr. Richard Cole, chairman of the department of agronomy at the University of Delaware, Wayne L. Currey and Richard W. Feeny, graduate assistants in the same department.

The amount of herbicide remaining in the soil and the length of time it stayed there increased when more herbicide was used and when it was put deeper in the soil. Susceptible fall or spring-seeded oats were uninjured by application of the recommended rate of a half to three-fourths pound per acre. If six pounds per acre of the trifluralin were applied three inches deep, susceptible crops were injured up to 16 months after the application of herbicide.

According to Cole, Currey and Feeny, the best weed control and the greatest persistence was obtained when the trifluralin was put three inches deep. Under dry conditions, the herbicide had to be incorporated to a depth of three inches to get weed control.

Persistence of trifluralin in the soil was often greater when the herbicide was applied as a granular rather than as a spray. The researchers noted that there was less difference between the persistence with the spray and the granular application as the amount used increased. In addition, Feeny reported that the weed control with some granular forms was poorer than with the spray.

Trifluralin appeared to be strongly absorbed by the soil and very resistant to leaching. Also, trifluralin may be taken up by organic matter in the soil, so that germinating seeds were not affected.

Trifluralin is recommended for the control of annual grasses and broadleaf weeds in soybeans. However, where it is used, ragweed may be more common the following year, according to Currey.

University Days Planned For April

School will start in the spring for nearly 300 women taking part in University Days for Women, April 6 and 7. The University of Delaware's Home Economics Extension Service sponsors the two-day conference each year to give women an opportunity to broaden their horizons and increase their knowledge and judgment as homemakers.

According to Mrs. Alice King, state leader of Home Economics Extension, the conference theme, "In Harmony with the Times," is tuned to the interests of the modern homemaker. Classes on travel, music, art, flower arrangement, wild flowers of Delaware, sewing, gourmet cookery, photography, family living and credit are scheduled. A tour of the campus will also be available.

The chance to live like college students and stay in dormitories has been one of the most popular features of University Days, Mrs. King points out. "It's really a vacation with an opportunity to learn new things that will help homemakers with their job."

The Conference is planned so that homemakers may attend both Thursday and Friday sessions, staying in the dormitory Wednesday and Thursday night, or they may attend one day only if they prefer.

Thursday's general sessions will include a panel discussion featuring women who have put their talents to work outside the home; "Stretching Awareness in a Shrinking World" with Donald Barnhouse, Philadelphia television news analyst; and "Television as a Cultural Force," by Donald Campbell, technician at the University's teaching resource center.

In general sessions on Friday, Robert Ennis, University of Delaware art history instructor, will talk about the meaning of modern architecture, and Charles E. Mohr, executive director of Delaware Nature Education Center, will discuss the use of Delaware public lands.

"An invitation is extended to all women to attend University Days for Women," says Mrs. King. Costs will vary, depending on the number of meals and room reservations wanted, but the complete charge for both days, including meals and a dormitory room for one night, will be less than $15. The registration fee is $1.50 per day.

Reservations for overnight lodging must be made by March

Does Corn Irrigation Pay

Another very dry year in 1966 led to a great deal of interest in irrigation. Farmers see the lack of adequate rainfall as the most severe limitation on their returns from corn production. While irrigation is expensive—especially in terms of several hundred acres per farm—if added water will guarantee a much bigger yield, irrigation must be considered even on such an extensive crop as corn.

Actual costs will vary widely depending upon the type and size of unit used. Large units are less costly per acre than the smaller systems. Corn irrigation requires some type of a high level system—the so-called big-gun type or the fixed tower system that moves automatically around a fixed point.

If a large, deep well must be dug, an irrigation system will have a fixed cost annually between $38.00 and $48.00 per acre whether it is used or not. Operating costs between $5 and $10 an acre must be added to this; therefore, the cost of corn irrigation will be between $45 and $55 per acre, for adding four inches of water.

The key question becomes: will the extra corn produced actually more than pay for this extra cost? According to Dr. William Mitchell, extension agronomist at the University of Delaware, on light soils with a very low moisture holding capacity, putting on enough water at critical times could give an added yield of as much as ninety bushels per acre. In soils with high water holding ability, the amount of added pick in production you can expect from irrigation declines. Thus, one of the important considerations in determining the profitability of irrigation is the soil type of each individual farm.

Dr. Mitchell also points out irrigation is a form of crop insurance. Having taken care of the thing most likely to limit production on many of our sandy soils — water—farmers can now afford to invest a little more money in other things which limit maximum yields, such as fertilizer and plant populations. Pesticides controlling corn borer and other insects, disease, and weeds may also raise yields.

It is not only a question of whether irrigation will pay on corn. Does it pay as well on corn as it could on many other crops? Or would the money invested in irrigation actually yield a greater return if it were invested in some other way? For instance, would a drying-storage unit, more land, or a hog feeding operation increase the return from the corn produced? As in most management decisions, there are many alternatives that must be considered before finding the one best suited to your farm business.

New Publication Lists Weed Control

The most practical approach to weed control is still good rotation, adequate cultivation and other sound management practices. However, chemical weed killers can also be a useful tool, according to a new publication from the Cooperative Extension Services of Maryland and Delaware.

The bulletin, "1967 Chemical Weed Control in Field Crops," summarizes the latest recommendations for the use of herbicides in Delaware and Maryland. Herbicides are listed for weed control on small grains, alfalfa, corn and soybeans. Control of specific weeds, including Johnsongrass, nutsedge, quackgrass and Canada thistle, is discussed.

Most of the recommended herbicides are selective; at the suggested rate, they will kill or injure weeds, but not the crop. The publication advises following the listed rates carefully, since higher rates may kill or severely injure the crop. Read the label on the container and follow the directions carefully.

Many of the pre-emergence herbicides are expensive; band spraying in a 14-to-16-inch band over the crop row is one way to economize. The area between the rows is often more economically cultivated mechanically for weed control.

Before using any herbicide, read the label. Herbicides are poisonous and should be handled with care. Avoid prolonged or repeated contact with the skin and wash thoroughly after using a herbicide. Store the chemicals away from children, animals and food-stuffs.

Copies of the new publication, "1967 Chemical Weed Control in Field Crops," is available from county agents in Dover, Georgetown and Newark, and from the Mailing Rooms, Agricultural Hall, University of Delaware, Newark, Delaware 19711.

Steve Welch Voted Top Henlopen Wrestler

Bill Muehlisen's Harrington High wrestling Lions in 1966 won the Henlopen Conference Wrestling Tournament for the first time. The Lions had hopes of repeating this time, but have been plagued by injuries all season.

The 1967 tournament was held at Dover Air on Saturday afternoon and evening with Delmar winning the title with 99 points. Harrington had 81, Millsboro 61 and Dover Air 38.

However, the Lions were probably not too much disappointed as local boys were crowned kings in six of twelve weight classes and Steve Welch's classy grappling won him the "Most Outstanding" wrestler award.

Seven Lions reached the finals and six were returned as victors. All seven Harringtonians qualified to wrestle in the state meet, to be held at Delaware Fieldhouse, Newark on March 10 and 11.

Lion champions are Chuck Hurd, Mike Adams, Roger Klapp, Steve Welch, David Hurd and Bill Webb. Allan Greenly finished in second place. Ed Wheatley, defending heavyweight champion, was hurt in practice and could not compete.

Chuck Hurd (95) blanked Stayton Hastings of Delmar 7-0 and decided Camblin, of Dover Air 6-4 in the finals.

Mike Adams drew a bye, then edged Delmar's Frank "Mike" Adams in overtime 8-4.

Roger Klapp also had a bye in the semi-finals, then nipped Downing of Delmar 2-0, in overtime.

Allan Greenly (127) beat Absher of Dover Air before losing to Phil Shedaker 6-5. Greenly has been out with injuries, two or three times this campaign or the Lions might have added a seventh title.

Roger Bullock (133) continues to improve and do well against more experienced competition. Bullock dropped a tight 6-5 duke to Millsboro's veteran, Rocky Klotz. Klotz, in turn, was beaten by only 3-2 in the title match. Bullock defeated Dunnick of Dover Air for third place.

Schneider of Dover Air (103) and Thoroughgood, of Millsboro (180) pinned two rivals each, but saw Steve Welch of Harrington (138) get the nod as the best wrestler in the competition, although Welch didn't pin either of his victims. Apparently the referees felt that Welch drew tougher opposition, than did Schneider and Thoroughgood and was more skillful than either.

Welch shut out Theis of Millsboro 9-0, before outclassing Terry Sullivan of Delmar 14-3. Both Welch and Mike Adams were defending titles won in 1966.

David Hurd (145) beat Layfield of Millsboro 8-2 and Stewart of Delmar 5-2, in overtime.

On February 2 when Delmar and Harrington met in a dual meet, Welch and Sullivan wrestled to a draw, as did Hurd and Stewart. Both Lion matmen made mistake in the last few seconds that night to enable their rivals to draw even. The script was different this time. Welch is the lone H.H.S. wrestler on the unbeaten list with a record of ten wins and a draw in eleven starts.

Bill Webb (165) has only one loss on the year, suffered when he was injured in a bout and could not continue. Webb pinned Smith of Millsboro and downed Pusey of Delmar in the final.

Bob Donovan (180), another improving local, does a fine job considering the fact that he gives away ten pounds or so almost everytime he wrestles. Donovan was edged 2-0 by Porter of Delmar but returned to beat Rowland of Dover Air 4-0.

Green Devils Beat Lions, 89-53

Charley Neal used thirteen players as his Felton High Green Devils downed Harrington High's Lions at Felton Friday night.

The 89-53 victory snapped a two-game losing streak for the Devils, who easily outpointed the Lions 35-15 in field goals.

79 free throws were tossed up with H.H.S. doing a little better here by sinking 23-of-42, while Felton was hitting on 19-of-37. Numerous fouls are often the case, in the hotly-contested battles between these two neighboring schools, which are only 5 1/2 miles apart.

Game high scorer Bob "Red" Dill made 11-of-12 from the charity stripe on the way to amassing 27 points. Felton teammates, freshman Chris Moore and Senior Lloyd Shelman, notched 20 and 12, respectively.

For Harrington, the cross-country twins, Nick Morris and Dan Hicks, split 28 points right down the middle.

In fact, now that we muse a moment, it occurs to us that Dill, Moore and Shelman did well in the harrier sport, also. Cross-country can't claim credit for the above quintet's success, but it certainly did them no harm in the cage sport, to run the many miles they did last fall.

Foresters Nip Lions, 62-57

Harrington High's Lions dropped a tight 62-57 verdict to Greenwood's Foresters, here, Monday night, after threatening to run away with the game at one point.

The Foresters boast a veteran team, the state's leading scholastic scorer in Maurice Hughes and have won nine games this year, as contrasted to three victories in fourteen starts for Harrington.

Three of the eight Lions to hit the scoring column never played basketball last year, four were jayvees and the other was a varsity sub in 1966. We challenge anyone to come up with an example of a team, that had to face a schedule with no more experience than that.

Despite the odds against H.H.S. it was a closely-contested game. Greenwood was ahead 13-12 after one period, but must have been amazed to see the Lions outpoint them 20-5, to take a 32-18 lead into the dressing room at halftime.

The Foresters' coach, George Durig, must have come up with the answer in his intermission chat. His charges dealt out some powerful medicine in the third period, hitting at a clip of 104 points a game, to outscore the Lions 26-12 and draw even at 44-all.

Harrington didn't fold but couldn't quite keep up, as the Sussex Countians achieved the eventual margin.

Greenwood led 27-22 in action tosses. Both schools did well in free throws. Harrington had more attempts than Greenwood, and made a higher percentage, which helped the Lions stay close.

Frank Spence took game honors with 23 big ones for Greenwood, while Hughes (Maurice) had 15.
For Harrington, three boys who will be back next year were in double figures. Bill Moore racked up 16. Nick "Mickey" Morris and John Swain split 30 points evenly.

According to our calculations, the Lions have one contest remaining, a postponed tilt at Delmar. The Wildcats have won only four games, but one of these was a recent upset of Dover Air, that knocked the Falcons out of the Western Division of the Henlopen Conference race. We feel that the Lions could beat Delmar, but will have to give the Wildcats the home court advantage. But win or lose in the finale, the Lions and Jim Hawpe have put a good representative team on the floor this winter and have come a long way since November 15th.

Last summer it appeared that a hot-shot basketball player from another town might transfer here. This boy is averaging 14 points a game on a team loaded with shooters, in a faster league than the Henlopen. Had he come here, the offense would have been built around him. He, almost certainly, would have been one of the top three scorers in Delaware. This would have led to much more recognition, with a good possibility of financial aid when it becomes time to matriculate at a college. Instead of a possible All-State berth, this lad remains just another name in the statistics and poor old H.H.S. has had to work like Trojans to get a 3-11 record. This writer wonders why more people don't follow his line of reasoning. After all a college education is becoming more necessary every day. We are for anything which will help more kids go to college, athletic scholarships, academic scholarships, or whatever. Of course, if one's parents can pay the freight without any help, then there's no need to worry about methods to ease the burden.

Bridgeville Downs Greenwood; Wins Western Title

Bridgeville's rampaging Mustangs didn't exactly run roughshod over Greenwood's Foresters, but managed a 66-50 triumph to sew up the Western Division of the Henlopen Conference pennant.

The Mustangs show only one four-point loss for the season in fourteen starts.

Greenwood gave the winners all the action they wanted. Bridgeville managed a narrow 27-23 margin in field goals and might have been in hot water, except for the fact that they drew twice as many free throws, as did the losers.

Francis Johnson, of Bridgeville tallied a game-high 22 points. State scoring leader, Maurice Hughes, paced Greenwood with one less. Larry Wyatt (11) and Steve Tallent (10) were in double figures for Greenwood.

Vocational education in Delaware has been growing since its start in 1917, Hodgson said. He listed three aims for vocational-technical training.
The first is to prepare individuals "for successful entry into employment." The second is to assist persons to upgrade themselves and to advance within their field of employment. The third is to retain individuals for a different kind of employment when the need exists.
Working through advisory committees, educators try to keep in close touch with the needs of industry.

Harrington Bowling League

Jarrell Fuel continues to lead in the Harrington Bowling League, although they dropped one of their four games Tuesday night. They still maintain a one and a half game advantage over the second place team.

Hamilton Fund moved up into second place behind Jarrell Fuel, winning all four of their games. With only one and a half games standing in their way, maybe with a little extra effort, they can catch the leader before too long.

Wally's Garage split four games and dropped from second to third place. This team could help or hurt Jarrell Fuel, as they are a strong team and could pick off the other teams to lend Jarrell Fuel a helping hand. This could also hold true for Hamilton Fund, and could enable them gain the lead.

Kent Gas took over the fourth place spot, moving up from a tie in fifth place after Tuesday night's bowling.

Acme and McKnatt Funeral Home finds themselves tied in the fifth place spot, with McKnatt Funeral Home dropping down a notch from last week's standing.

Taylor & Messick and Wilson Electric are tied in seventh place. Taylor & Messick moved up two notches, splitting four games down the middle.

Penn. R. R. dropped from a tie in seventh place to ninth place, losing three of their four games.
Kay's Beauty Salon seems destined to remain in the cellar. It's all over for this team as far as any thought of catching the leader is concerned. Something short of a miracle would have to happen for Kay's Beauty Salon to make up a 14 game deficit before this final third ends.

K. Layton continues to pour on the pressure in the individual standings, as he rolled a 229 and a 203 game to hit a 601 series. Records indicate he holds the highest series rolled this season by the league members. For a while, it seemed that a 600 series was almost impossible, and to disprove that fact, Layton, has rolled two 600 plus series in two consecutive weeks. In searching the records further, it was found that R. Gray holds the high individual game of the season with a very fine 286 game.

R. Jarrell had a very good 221 game in the high game department and was second in the high series department with a 567 series. Jarrell also has been doing well these past few weeks in the high game department, as he gives his team that little extra effort each week.
L. Smith was in the high game column again this week with a fine 210 game. Smith also had a very good 555 series.
B. Wilson also had a fine game of 210 in the high game department.

G. Wright bowled a very good 557 series, coming so close to that magic 200 mark in the individual game department.

Also at Tuesday night's meeting, Brown explained the need for the county organization to go its own way financially and become independent of the state party.
Brown said that last year the party received $15,000 from the state organization, but that the flow of cash has dried up this year.

He explained that the state finance committee has said Kent County could keep only he proceeds of its own ticket sales for a $100-a-plate dinner and the money it collects in a door-to-door campaign. These programs brought in only $5,600 in Kent County last year he said.
Brown, at a press conference Monday, said he has asked Alden Richardson, a Dover accountant, to head a new county finance committee and find new sources of party revenue.

After hearing Hodgson, the agency executives and presidents, headed by Gov. Charles L. Terry Jr., toured the five areas of the center and visited classes in progress. Among subjects taught are television repair, computer technology, drafting, beauty culture, practical nursing, agricultural mechanics, auto mechanics, welding and building trades. The guests ate a buffet dinner prepared for them by students.

The Kent center opened in 1965. Students get their vocational subjects in half-days at various high schools in the county. The school has 770 pupils, of whom 30 per cent are girls. Enrollment is up about 18 per cent over last year.

A similar institution opened in 1961 in Sussex County. One for New Castle County is in the architectural planning stage and is to be built on the site of the former Kruse School at Marshallton.

Council agreed on sending a letter to Sheldon Starr, an official of Harrington Shirt Corporation, to appear before it at its next regular meeting, Mon., March 13, to explain why they had not prepared a parking lot for his employes.

Councilman Bradley says the state can't sweep Clark Street, a state-maintained road, because of the parked cars of the plant's employes.
The previous Council agreed to let the corporation have the use of a portion of an alley, in the rear of its building, to extend its plant. It was mentioned a part of the deal was to have a parking lot for employes.

It was said Monday night Starr declared Reed Street, at the side of the plant, was to be improved to permit access to a parking lot in the rear. The Council did not verify this belief.

"We haven't discussed any of this with Dover," Holden said. "I feel they should get our thinking and we should get their thinking."

Holden said similar talks should be held with Dover Air Force Base officials.
Levy Court President Glenn A. Richter said county taxpayers should not be made to pay tax dollars to clean up General Foods' waste and agreed that talks should be held with Dover officials.

He said, "I don't think we can hold Dover responsible in a financial sense if we're talking about construction costs."
Richter said he will talk with Dover Mayor Crawford J. Carroll and set up a meeting between the city and the county.
Dover City Manager Francis P. Neylan said Tuesday the city will be glad to sit down with city officials to discuss the sewer problem.

Neylan was quick to point out that the city has recently completed a half-million dollar expansion to its treatment plant and is now conducting studies of pretreatment of industrial waste from General Foods.

"If this pilot study proves feasible," Neylan said, "it means we will be able to increase the capacity of our treatment plant." He said the study will be completed in about four months.

In a continuing effort to find solutions to the problem, Richter said a meeting has been set for Monday with the state's Congressional delegation.

"We can put pressure on them to get this air base mess cleaned up," Richter said. He also said the Army Corps of Engineers will be asked to dredge the St. Jones River from the bay up to Lebanon.
"If the river can be dredged," Richter said, "it will at least help the flow." He said such a request had never before been made.
