LOREN BOOKER HARRINGTON, BANK PRESIDENT, DIES AT 90

Loren Booker Harrington, 90, banker and retired businessman, died last Friday in Milford Memorial Hospital after a short illness.

Mr. Harrington was at the time of his death president of the First National Bank of Harrington; a director of the Delaware State Fair and a member of Asbury Methodist Church. He operated the Harrington Hardware Company for 45 years until he sold the business about two years ago.

He was an ardent sports fan, particularly baseball and harness racing.

Mr. Harrington had made his home with his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Reese B. Harrington at 64 Clark St., since the death of his wife, Mrs. Medora Reese Harrington in February 1966.

Services were held Monday afternoon at the J. Millard Cooper Funeral Home, 110 E. Center St., Harrington. Interment was in Hollywood Cemetery, Harrington.

Mr. Harrington was born Jan. 24, 1877 in a house, later known as the Berty Deputy home, which stood between the railroad and the western entrance to the Delaware State Fair grounds.

He was the son of Mr. and

L. Booker Harrington

Mrs. James Harrington. His mother, whose maiden name was also Harrington, had the given name of Gartry and was also known as "Gart".

The Harrington family had a farm which included the land now owned by the fair association.

L. Booker Harrington was married to Miss Madona Reese, a daughter of E. C. Reese, prominent farmer.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Booker Harrington first lived on Clark Street and then built a home on Reese Avenue, at Commerce Street, and resided there until last year when, on the death of Mrs. Harrington, "Mr. Book," as he was affectionally known, moved to the home of his daughter-in-law, the widow of the owner of Reese Theatre, who also died last year.

Mr. Harrington had varied business interests, including a cannery on the eastern side of the railroad near Thorpe Street, and Harrington Hardware. The cannery burned in 1932 when it was being used for storage.

Mr. Harrington bought the hardware store at a public sale, March 10, 1920, after the death of W. C. Wright who had started the business. Employed in the business was Mr. Harrington's brother, the late Harry (Sikes) Harrington. Mr. Harrington also conducted a brick kiln for years on land, now owned by the Karlik heirs, east of the fairgrounds.

The late J. Harvey Burgess, owner of The Harrington Journal, wrote a poem on the hardware store which was published in the American Agriculturist magazine and in a booklet, "Folks I Have Known". It appeared in The Harrington Journal, on occasions, once on March 3, 1950, when the store was celebrating its 30th anniversary of Harrington ownership. The store was sold in 1965 to Fulton J. Downing and is managed by Dewitt Tatman who worked in the store many years for Mr. Harrington.

Early Spring Best Time To Plant New Trees

Early spring is the best time to plant trees and shrubs, according to Robert F. Stevens, extension horticulturist at the University of Delaware. Moist soil and cool weather helps young plants grow new roots and become well established before the hot, dry summer starts.

You can buy trees from nurseries either with bare roots or with a ball of soil wrapped in burlap around the roots (balled and burlapped). Bare-rooted trees usually cost less, but they generally don't grow as fast or as well. Also, bare-rooted trees dry out quickly if left uncovered; keep the roots moist and plant as soon as you can. Of course, balled and burlapped trees and shrubs should also be planted within a few days.

Before you plant, pick out a good location. Plant shrubs at least three feet away from a building, Stevens says. While small flowering trees may be planted as close as eight or ten feet from the house, large shade trees should never be closer than 25 or 30 feet. Better yet, plant them 35 or 40 feet away. When you're picking a spot for the tree, don't forget about overhead telephone and electric lines, sidewalks, sewer pipes, curbs and driveways.

How you plant is just as important as where you plant, Stevens points out. He gives complete planting instructions in his circular, "Planting Trees and Shrubs." The circular, published by Cooperative Extension Service at the University of Delaware, also explains how to support and water new trees and shrubs. Copies are available from the Mailing Room, Agricultural Hall, University of Delaware, Newark, Delaware 19711.

Reed Street Improvement Eyed; Appeal on Assessments Tonight

The City Council Monday night motioned that the city's consulting engineers, Richardson Associates, survey and engineer Reed Street from Clark Street to Peck Avenue.

Upon the completion of this work, Mrs. Kathryn S. Derrickson, acting city manager, will secure a price on improving a portion of the thoroughfare.

This section will run from Clark Street to the southern side of a parking lot, on the western side of the street, belonging to Harrington Shirt Company.

There have been complaints of factory employees parking on Clark Street. Thus, company officials purchased a parking lot. However, Mayor Fulton J. Downing and councilmen inspected the street Monday and found it badly in need of repair, hindering access to the parking lot.

One councilman mentioned betterment of Reed Street should be high on the list of street improvements this year.

In other business, the Council acted as follows:

Had an executive session at which William E. Howe & Company, a Philadelphia accounting firm, recited accounting procedures.

In the open meeting, the Council authorized its acting city manager to get necessary equipment for bookkeeping and to hire a woman to get books in shape for an audit.

The annual audit has been delayed, it was claimed, because data for the auditor was too confusing. The delay was also partly because the auditor, Frank E. Holton, Jr., of Milford, has been hospitalized.

Authorized painting the curb of Gaines Alley from Commerce Street to the length of the Sapp Building. It will be painted yellow, which denotes no parking.

Awarded a bid on a police car to Harrington Motor Company, whose bid was $3129.77, with a trade-in allowance of $2300 on the 1965 car. The order was given to the local motor company because, a councilman said, it was easier to get service locally, and that past service had been good.

Other bids were as follows: Holden & Mundy, Dover, Dodge dealers, $3401.45, with $930.80 trade-in. C. F. Schwartz Motor Company, Plymouth dealers, Dover, $3000, with trade-in of $918.15.

Webb's Ford & Mercury, Inc., Milford, $3078.07, on a Ford, with $703.07 trade-in.

Authorized Grover C. Brown, city attorney, to meet with attorney for Artesian Well Drilling Company to arrange for settlement of unpaid balance on a well drilled here. The contract had called for a penalty if the well was not finished in the allotted time. The drilling company defended itself by saying the specifications had been changed. The council was told its attorney said he didn't think it could get anywhere trying for a penalty deal.

Authorized city manager to pay light, fuel, telephone, and current bills, such as transportation, when they come in. The argument advanced for this procedure was that the bills usually came in before the Council held its meeting the second Monday.

Appeal night on tax assessments will be held tonight at the City Hall from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Hospitals List Cash Deficit; Firemen Profit

Volunteer fire companies in Delaware showed a profit last year—thanks to bingo games—but only four of the 10 hospitals in the state finished in the black.

Fire companies, hospitals and other nonprofit agencies which receive state support are required to file financial statements with the budget office. The statement must be filed every two years, but most agencies compile them annually. They were made available at the request of the News-Journal Co.

The hospitals, as a group, reported $24,696,037 in income for their fiscal years and $25,092,520 in expenditures, for a combined deficit of $396,483.

The volunteer fire companies received $201,307 from bingo games during a year's period.

According to the reports, only the Eugene duPont Memorial Hospital, near Wilmington; St. Francis Hospital, Wilmington; Kent General Hospital, Dover, and Riverside Hospital, Wilmington, took in more money than

West Dover Bypass Opposed By Kent

Kent County Levy Court commissioners say they would rather save prime farming land than $4 million so they are opposing a proposed West Dover Bypass.

The commissioners Tuesday authorized president Glenn A. Richter to draft a resolution opposing the recommendation of the State Highway Department.

The objectionable bypass would be constructed west from U.S. 13 at Garrison's Lake, continue slightly west of Cheswood and west of Camden and Wyoming. It would cross U.S. 13 a mile north of Woodside and join U.S. 113 at the north end of the Frederica bypass.

An alternate route that would start north of Smyrna and run southeast of the Dover Air Force Base and come out in Frederica is more palatable to the community, according to Commissioner William C. Holden.

The westerly route is recommended by highway department officials because it would cost about $4 million less to construct than the estimated $26-million easterly route.

Farm groups have voiced the major objection to the route. They contend, as did Commissioner Isaac Thomas Tuesday, that the West Dover bypass "will take the backbone out of the prime agricultural land in Kent County."

Once that land is gone, Thomas said, small industries will build up and around the highway and more farm land will go. The only alternative the farmer will have, Thomas said, is to sell.

"When he sells," Thomas continued, "agriculture will not be the major industry in the county."

The completed resolution is expected to be presented at a public hearing to discuss the bypass March 22 at the Capitol Grange Hall on South Governors Avenue.

National Research Council. Fresh cabbage is a fine source of Vitamin C. One cup of shredded cabbage supplies 2/3 of an adult's daily requirement.

Celery is one of nature's toothbrushes. When eaten raw, it helps to clean the teeth. Tomatoes are low in calories, rich in Vitamin C and a good source of Vitamin A. Since the human body cannot store Vitamin C in any large amount, vegetables which contain this vitamin should be included in the daily diet. So the indications are that a fresh, crisp tossed salad is "just what the doctor ordered."

Fruit prices are a bit higher this week. However, the one exception is citrus fruit. Picking of California Navel oranges has been more active under improved weather conditions. Movement of Florida's new crop of Valencia's is also heavy, and low prices are continuing on grapefruit. However, imports on bananas are lighter and prices advanced some. Only small shipments of cantaloupes and watermelons are appearing and the imported honeydews, nectarines, and plums continue to be relatively high in price.

Prices on beef and pork will be higher during the next couple of years according to the President of the American Meat Institute recently. Why will this happen? Simple because supplies are barely keeping up with demand. At the present time, wholesale prices are steady to slightly lower, due to slow demands. Look for specials on rib roast of beef and boneless cuts of beef. Bacon, rolled sausage and some smoked hams for early Easter buys are the feature to check in pork.

Egg prices are edging up as Easter approaches. At the present time large sizes are definitely the best values by weight, for there is only a 2 to 6¢ difference between the large and medium eggs of the same quality.

"Night-Time" In Benning-Rohrbach

Place: Alsace-Lorraine

Time: Nighttime, March, 1945

By W. C. Burgess

Some General's 7th Army—I think it was Hodge's

Just like "The Old Woman in the Shoe"—we need some big wheels to make the decisions, too!

It was real dark, and real cloudy, and of course, there was always a black-out of a night; but the sun usually shone the next day—so what!

This night you could look off into the distance and see the light, alright—almost as bright as day! I had a fast idea about how it could be arranged, but I wasn't sure that the people were that anxious to kill each other—but I guess they were. So when I got home, I was talking to some of the boys; and I ran across Clarence Raughley, of the 100th Infantry Division, Headquarters Company; and he laughed and said, "you know I was in Benning-Rohrbach about the same time you were—if not at the same time.

He told me that they took those giant lights—eight or more feet in diameter, and on a real cloudy night—they bounced them off the clouds—and the light reflected back on the ground, and they continued to fight. 'Pore ole' lonesome me—any thing to get the proceedings over with. I told Clarence I probably walked right by him in Benning; but the way it goes without saying—with those old GI helmets—you could walk right by your grandmother and never know who she was. Now this guy Clarence has also been in Petite Rederching (Little Rederching and Gros Rederching (Big Rederching); probably Gottensbruck in the Vosges and a lot of other places along the way.

Patton had to travel in a big hurry during The Battle of The Bulge; so he left the whole Fifteenth Corps and attached us to The Seventh Army—and that is how my outfit ran into Clarence's outfit. If it weren't for being transferred into the Seventh Army—I would have never got to see Dachau or Bertchesgarten, either.

Also, last week, that was The First Army there, also Patton picked us back up in August, when he came into Normandy.

Wouldn't that have been nice to walk into somebody from home—"Yowsir."

I think, the next time I see him, I will ask about some of these places the 100th was in—they probably would call it reminiscing. However, I operate out of a (Head Diary)—which I mean is—that I carried all the records of these places in my head. They told everyone not to keep a diary because you might get captured.

You know, the Germans had comedians in their outfit, too; or you could call it psychological warfare. In Benning-Rohrbach—in Alsace—is where you have both Germans and French together, so you never know which side of the fence they were on.

Anyway—here comes a Mustang—our plane — with markings and all on him. The next Mustang had nothing on him. But—'pore 'ole lonesome me—the third Mustang had German markings on him. They just wanted to let us know that they were still in the old ball game. I do not know whether Mr. Raughley saw them or not—because we were parked—or billeted in a barracks right in town. However, by the time we got through gawkin; they were gone—they came right over the trees and buildings, for camouflage purposes, anyway.

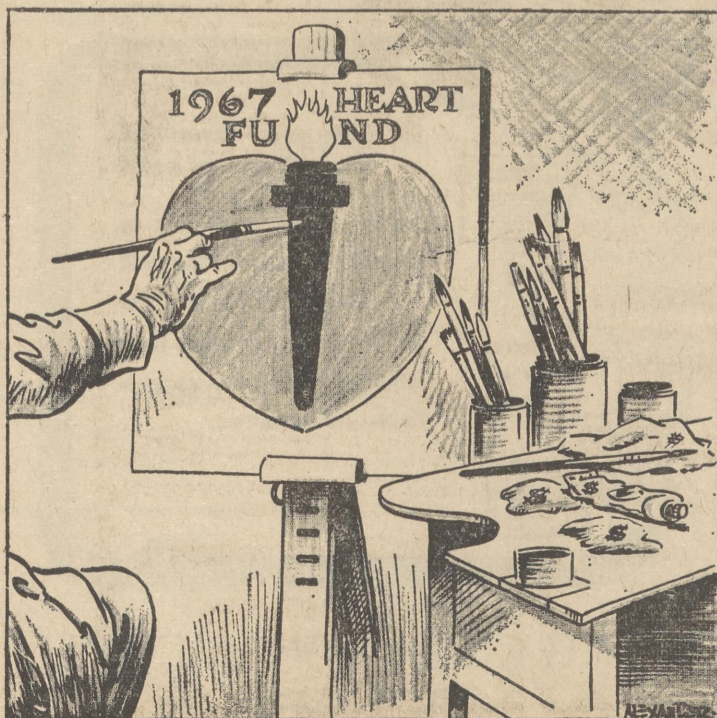

One wonderful sight I did see, though, was a German reconnaissance plane though; and he was flying too low—like I sometimes, do. One of our guns hit him, and he couldn't use his parachute; so he zommed way up into the air and hit the silk—he parachuted to safety. I'll bet our boys gave him KP for the rest of the war—and he would probably have been tickled to death to get it.

I wanted that parachute to send home for a souvenir; but there were too many Doggies (soldiers) around to even try to get it.

Once I was walking down a road throwing the wire off the road—one dark night—and I went right by a walled in enclosure—I stepped inside—and there was a whole barnyard full of Germans. I was going to say—pardon me—but I didn't I just backed out and kept on going. The corporal of the truck told me later—they guys was hungry—they were just waiting for a chow wagon—ours. They surrendered so they could get a good meal!

The army goes where the grub is — even the Germans!

An average of nine disabled veterans of World War II and the Korean Conflict in Delaware trained under the vocational rehabilitation program to overcome the handicaps resulting from disabilities. They received $54,216 in subsistence, tuition, supplies and equipment.

An average of 31 veterans trained during the year under the WW II and Korean Conflict Bills.

The remainder of the cash benefits, services and other expenditures include war orphans' educational benefits, hospitalization, GI home, farm and business loans, specially-equipped automobiles for certain disabled veterans and homes for seriously disabled veterans and other miscellaneous benefits.

Veterans who enrolled for the first time this semester in a school of higher learning under the new GI Bill will find it a little easier to get their first allowance checks when they are due, Leon Fields, manager of the Wilmington VA Regional Office said this week.

Veterans still must take their certificates of eligibility to the school. On the back of this is the enrollment certificate which the school must fill in and return to the VA.

The first payment for those veterans enrolled in schools of higher learning, Mr. Fields pointed out, will be made without the veteran having to submit a monthly attendance certification. After the initial payment, however, he must certify his attendance to the VA each month before he can receive payment.

The initial check will normally include payment for the first month, or part of month of schooling. Thereafter, the monthly check should arrive about the 20th of the month, if the veteran returns his attendance certificate promptly at the end of the month.

Students who transferred from one school to another between semesters, who experienced some change in their educational program; low-income borrowers the first time for the spring semester, were cautioned to be sure and turn in their certificates of eligibility to the school, so that no time will be lost in processing.

Department Of Mental Health News Release

The Department of Mental Health recorded a 36-per cent increase in community consultation service during the first six months of fiscal 1967.

For the period ended Dec. 31 the department had accumulated 304 man-days of community mental health consultation, compared with 223 in the previous year.

Dr. Daniel Lieberman, mental health commissioner, said "The Department is always pleased to provide assistance of this kind. It is part of our mission of bringing mental health services into the community. We look forward to a steady increase in requests for our help and to new opportunities."

Among the sources of request for advice and consultation have been the schools, the courts, the police, social, welfare and health agencies, physicians and the clergy.

Figures compiled by Albert J. Miller, departmental statistician, disclose that the number of man-days spent providing consultant services for social and welfare agencies nearly doubled, from 56 to 97. The total for other health agencies more than doubled, from 22 to 48. Assistance requested by the clergy and physicians more than tripled, from 18 to 58.

Requests from private and public agencies for Mental Health Department personnel to participate in community planning went from 21 to 186 man-days, an increase of 786 per cent.

SAINT PATRICK'S DAY
(in the mornin')

Whenever you meet them, the true Irish born
There's a greeting that's coming to you
'Tis never "how are you?" or "how do you do?"
'Tis "The Top O' The Mornin' To You!"

It may be on Broadway or some little town,
That you meet them and you'll find it's true,
There's a light in their eye, and a smile on their lips,
Saying: "Top O' The Mornin' To You!"

There is no other land that can boast of this phrase,
Each morning you hear it anew,
It comes from their hearts as it drips from their lips,
It's "The Top O' The Mornin' To You!"

Back in 1930, I was transferred from Pittsburgh to New York, and while being briefed on my new surroundings, was told: "It's a big town. The Jews own it and the Irish run it."

The electric traction department of the railroad, which later came under my supervision, was predominately Irish, especially the Third-rail Section from the general foreman, George Flannagan, and Foreman Jerry Sullivan, down to the youngest helpers; musically-minded Joe Leonard and Michael Shaughnessy, one of the finest tenors
since John McCormack.

In all my fifty years of service, I have never found a more devout and brotherly-minded class of hard-working men than this department, which still gets together once a year at Princeton Junction, N. J., in a testimonial for retiring members, to which I have always been invited.

While in Harrisburg (1935-1940) I was telling my practical-minded Irish neighbor, Marty Foster, about the railroads building America. He said: "you are right; but don't forget; the Irish built the railroads—which is also correct, and the more we see of modern engineering accomplishment with labor-saving machinery, the more we appreciate the honest labor of these hardy men of the Sod.

Marty, who was an accountant in the office of the Secretary of Forests and Waters, was also another James Whitcomb Riley when it came to slinging the King's English. The next day he handed me this:

THE HEART O' YOU

The poem you read, and so admired
Were thoughts you always knew
But never put them into verse
And so reached the heart of you.

The picture that was in your mind
That never seemed portrayed just true
I've painted with poetic brush
And so I reached the heart of you.

The kindly words you would have said
To make leaden clouds seem blue
You found within a verse of mine
And so I reached the heart of you.

The little wild flowers that you love
But never knew where they grew
I've rhymed into a sweet bouquet
And so I've reached the heart of you.

Minister Calls St. Patrick, Man Of Peace, Pagan Rounder

By J. H. Burgess, 3-25-52—Special to the Journal

Every Evening—Submitted by CLIFF MILLER.

"History's pages are replete with the achievements of great military figures, but the great men of peace also live in our memories."

The Rev. J. Harry Wright, retired Methodist minister, of Harrington, was telling the Harrington Rotary Club at its dinner meeting at The Wonder Bar, principally about St. Patrick's rout of paganism in Ireland, but at the same time he paid tribute to other great men of peace.

"Saint Patrick, man of peace, is revered after something like 1500 years have passed," said Mr. Wright. "We have some facts about him—and much legend. It seems like he was born in what is now known as Scotland.

Captured by Pirates

"As a boy, he was captured by pirates and taken to Ireland, where he was held as a slave. He was a shepherd, in charge of the flocks of the pirates, but after several years he made his escape and entered a monastery in southern France. After 20 years of study there, he decided to return to Ireland, the land where he had been a slave.

"Ireland at that time was a pagan country," but after the work of St. Patrick, not one pagan was left in all Ireland.

Cites Our Modern Pagans

"Broadly interpreted, a pagan is someone who does as he pleases anytime, anywhere, with no regard for the rights of others, and I regret to say that we have many pagans in the world today."

Edwin Markham, the great poet, was mentioned by the speaker as another outstanding man of peace, whose fame will grow brighter with the years. Mr. Wright paid special tribute to Mr. Markham's poem on Lincoln, which was selected as the outstanding Lincoln poem among the more than 300 submitted at the time the Lincoln Memorial was being erected.

Deplores Passing of Blacksmith

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, who, like Washington and Lincoln, was born in February, deserves a respect as profound as we give the other two, for his great poetry has enriched the world, said Mr. Wright, who quoted "The Psalm of Life," and other Longfellow poems.

"The village blacksmith is disappearing from the scene," concluded the speaker, "but I pray God that his type of man will never disappear, for he typifies the pride,
the dignity, the grandeur of honest labor."

Samuel Johnson sang, "An Irish Lullaby," and Clifford Miller, program chairman, gave the 87th installment of his serial about the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Economic Oppor. Loans Help Rural People

More than 21,600 low-income rural families during 1966 were assisted by rural loan programs
authorized by the Economic Opportunity Act in developing businesses and in obtaining cooperative services.

As a result of the helping hand
extended them through this program, low-income borrowers
have established more than 350
different kinds of nonagricultural enterprises, in addition to farming.

Most of the Economic Opportunity cooperatives are composed of a small group of farmers
from the same rural community
who buy modern farm machinery and share in its use to improve farm earnings.

Economic Opportunity loans
are helping low-income rural people overcome the common handicap of having a lack of money or credit to equip themselves for more profitable work
they might do if they had the tools.

Applications for Farmers Home
Administration Economic Oppor-

Administration, located in the

Future Bright For Store-Door Delivery

Farmers who sell and deliver fruits and vegetables directly to food stores are optimistic about the future of such store-door deliveries. Three-fourths of the farmers contacted in a recent survey said it was the most profitable marketing method
available, and they believed it should stay that way.

The survey of both farmers and retailers is the basis for a publication on store-door deliveries
released by the Food Business Institute of the University of Delaware College of Agricultural Sciences. The advantages, disadvantages and future of this type of marketing are reported in
"Store-Door Delivery of Farm Produce in the United States,"
written by James J. Milmoie, coordinator of food business information at the University.

The publication is one of three reports resulting from studies in direct marketing conducted by the University of Delaware in cooperation with the Federal Extension Service, U. S. Department of Agriculture. "Farm Roadside Marketing in the United States" and "Roadside Marketing Guide for Extension Workers" are already published.

As one optimistic farmer comments on store-door deliveries,
"Unlimited future . . . chains
need and will pay for this service." Another summed up two major advantages, "Store-door
selling should have a good future because the grower can get the fruit to market fresher and in better condition."

There are other advantages for the grower, the foremost being a relatively stable season-long outlet for quality produce with a fast turnover and premium prices.
Containers can be re-used,
helping the farmer reduce marketing expenses.

The system can offer an excellent way to build up a reputation for top-quality produce and to increase direct-to-the-customer sales. In one case, a grower reported, "Many chain store customers saw our trucks, copied
our address and drove forty miles or more to buy large orders right from our farm."

However, store-door delivery operations have certain drawbacks; for instance, some retailers are unable to allow more than a few hours between ordering and delivery. Very precise production scheduling is necessary particularly if the retail stores are unable to give specific estimates of the amount of produce they will require. If the grower must hire additional labor to make store-door deliveries, he may find dependable employees difficult to hire.

Also, it is extremely difficult for growers to contract for a season ahead to deliver a specified quantity of produce at a specified time, due to variable factors of weather and yield. Retailers are also reluctant to agree to seasonal contracts because they keep the retailers from bargaining effectively. Therefore, contracts are often made for a week

at a time.

According to the Food Business Institute study, growers planning to begin store-door delivery operations should study several factors carefully: Will additional capital be needed for equipment? What is the probable return from available contracts?
Is adequate labor available? Can additional crops be grown to help share the delivery cost of regular routes? How does the cost per mile and per hour involved in serving a particular group of stores compare with alternative outlets?

Produce buyers and field buyers for several large food chains were also interviewed as part of the store-door delivery study.
They reported this delivery system puts fresher produce into the store, increasing sales and pleasing consumers. Spoilage and expensive handling are held to a minimum. The disadvantages they reported involve store security, paperwork and training personnel to inspect the delivered produce. The problems have all been solved to the satisfaction of many supermarkets using the system, the study notes.

According to the publication,
the future potential of the store-door delivery system is best indicated by the fact that one of the largest chains in the country buys as much produce through this system as it can get reliable farmers to deliver. In an interview the head buyer said,
"I can't wait for our store-door delivery arrangements to get started each year. Our produce business always goes way up
when the top quality local products come in."
"Store-Door Delivery of Farm Produce in the United States" is available from the Food Business Institute, Agricultural Hall, University of Delaware, Newark, Delaware 19711.

Those failing to file are Holloway Terrace and Talleyville in New Castle County, Felton in Kent County and Millville in Sussex County. Those whose reports were returned were Magnolia in Kent County, and Frankford, Bethany Beach and Delmar, in Sussex County.

The figures for the volunteer fire companies represent only 52 of the 60 units. Four units have failed to file their reports and four others had their reports returned to them because of mathematical errors.

Of the 52 companies reporting, 12 said they made profits in bingo games during the year. The Camden-Wyoming Fire Company in Kent County made the most money from its bingo operation — $33028. Others with bingo income exceeding $20,000 were Leipsic $27,000; Frederica, $23,850; Mill Creek, $22,452, and Clayton, $20,083.

The 52 companies reported a total income of $1,863,639 during the year. They said $501,761 of that total came from state, county and municipal governments.

Other major sources of fire company revenue included $478,512 from gifts and fund drives, and $70,544 earned from bake sales and carnivals.

The budget office records also show that of 18 other agencies required to file the reports, only 13 have completed their obligations.

Those who have not filed, and their state grants, are: WHY? Television, $75,000; Prisoner's Aid Society, $17,000; Layton Home, $5,000; The American Legion Boys State operation, $750; and the Department of Public Instruction for its operation of the veteran's children education program, $15,000.

City and suburban gardens as well as several fine country estates are among the seventeen gardens to be exhibited. Five homes will be open this year, including the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest du Pont, which features many fine antiques and is a favorite of Garden Day visitors. Four new houses on this year's tour are the homes of Mr. and Mrs. Montford Smith (the old Bishopstead), Mr. and Mrs. McKay Collette and Dr. and Mrs. Charles Reeder, two lovely town houses, and the contemporary house of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Gee.

Sandwiches and beverages may be purchased at the soda house on the estate of Mrs. R. R. M. Carpenter. Coffee and donuts will be served at Immanuel Episcopal Church, 17th Street and Riverview Avenue. Planned bus tours are available and such information may be obtained by contacting Mrs. David Tait. Tickets may be purchased in advance or at any of the gardens or sponsoring churches on May 6, and include a booklet with a map, pictures and descriptions of each garden spot.

Mrs. Edmond R. Nalle of St. Andrew's Episcopal Church is chairman for this year's Wilmington Garden Day. The vice-chairmen are M. H. W. Jacobson from St. Andrew's, Mrs. Januar Bove, Jr., from Immanuel, and Mrs. Jefferson Hamilton from St. John's.

Mrs. Harold Brown is chairman of the Wilmington Garden Day speakers bureau, a group available to speak and show Garden Day pictures to clubs and other organizations. Arrangements for their service can be made by contacting Mrs. Brown through Immanuel Church.

The beneficiaries of Wilmington Garden Day are St. Michael's Day Nursery, where care is given to children of working mothers and the Big Brothers Association, which works with fatherless boys.

FENCE TALK

By George K. Vapaa

Are multistory farms to come in time because of high land values? Thomas J. Bray, reporting in the Wall Street Journal, says that indoor farming may be possible in the future. He predicts full use of this land and the raising of crops year round.

Not only multistory farms—but what could be wrong with multiple use of such structures? Garages in the lower floors, stores and offices at ground level, apartments above this, "farms" atop those, and finally an open park with clear, clean air to retain a semblance of nature. Will it?

Why multiple use of such a building rather than specialize? Think of it in terms of a manufactured ecology, a small world in a building. Circulate air and heat (or air conditioning in summer) from the human areas to the plant areas. Use the wastes as fuel to heat or to generate electricity. There are other possibilities even more wild.

These farms would have to be tailored for minimum manual labor. This is hard to find now in our growth chambers, greenhouses or mushroom houses. Our present multistory poultry houses are a marvel of efficiency. One man can handle 100,000 broilers alone. Hydroponics, or water culture, may offer some guidelines for crops.

We hear that California lettuce growers are leaving the bumper crop in the fields because of low prices. The current price is reported at $1 per crate loaded on the farm. But $1.75 per crate is needed to break even on costs. Normally, lettuce might be one of the crops for a multistory farm. How big a factor is freight to market?

This fantasy should probably be scrapped, but it's written and I won't. You play with the notion for awhile.

Full drainage ditches mark the end of the drough—we hope. It appears that we start the new growing season with a full tank of water in the soil. Oddly enough, I've heard very few people complaining about all of this standing water. After five dry years, surface water now seems to be a novelty.

On at least a third of our Kent County acreage, excess water can be considered a serious problem. Most of this poorly drained land is on the western side of the county. Even in a "normal" moisture year of 40 to 44 inches of rainfall, such land should be drained by ditches or tile drains.

Roy Scrutchfield, Sr., of Hartly, retired from farming in Missouri and now lives on his son's farm near Hartly. He was wondering why water stands on some fields while the water level in a neighboring ditch is obviously lower.

Year ago most fields were plowed toward the fences. The result was a dished out effect in the center because of the "dead" furrows. The silt would wash in and create a finer textured, and harder to drain soil.

Ideally, a farmer should plow out one year, and back in the next. Tenants years ago found it difficult to calculate how to lay out a field for plowing in. Tenants also move more often from one farm to another in years gone by. So they took the easy way out.

Today farmers plow their fields in long lands rather than in squared circles. A dead furrow is plowed back in the next year. Look at almost any aerial photo of our farm lands. You can pick the old time fields by the sink holes. Fields were made larger by ripping out hedges and fence rows. But the old patterns remain.

Should we "plane" our fields? Some areas do in the far west, where they use furrow irrigation. The cost appears too expensive for us in terms of the benefits.

Fred Mott, our technician with the Soil Conservation Service, can help Kent County farmers solve their land drainage problems. He can help you develop a conservation plan for your farm. There is no cost, nor are you under obligation to make any changes. But we bet you will want to modernize your farm.

Proposed standards for interstate streams will be discussed at a public hearing on March 22 at 9:30 a.m. in the State Health Building at Dover. The Delaware Water and Air Resources Commission will hear opinions from anyone as to their proposals. Copies of these proposals can be obtained on request from the Commission.

It is the stated policy of the Commission to maintain the quality of the waters in the state and to keep it available for as many reasonable uses as possible. Certain minimum standards shall apply to these waters at all times. No harmful municipal, industrial, agricultural or other discharges. Full protection to human, animal, aquatic and wildlife. No unsightly and malodorous substances due to floating solids or sludge deposits, debris, oil and scum. Some reservations and discharge criteria also apply.

The bulk of the report spells out standards for each interstate watershed. The Choptank River and the Nanticoke River are the two which affect Kent County. John Bryson, Commission director, says that Maryland standards have been adopted for these. The Marshy Hope moves eventually into the Nanticoke in Maryland.

Factors considered for streams criteria are: temperature, dissolved oxygen, alkalinity, acidity, synthetic detergents, alpha and beta emitters, turbidity, phenols, actinomycetes and coliform (bacteria), fluorides, toxic substances, taste, odor, and color causing substances.

Humph! That so much gunk can get into water!

Are tomatoes sensitive to pain? "I read somewhere that if you punch a hole through the stem, they will register a reaction." Boots Rykiel, of the Milford Chronicle, called to ask. Like most of us, he forgot the source of his information, and wondered if I had seen it. But no.

I checked with some of our University specialists who said: "What is pain to a plant?" Plants do respond to sudden changes reasonably fast. Cut most of the roots and the plant will wilt. Use too much fertilizer and the same thing can happen, or at the least the plant will change color. Rub the leaves on a mimosa tree or on the sensitive plant, and they will fold up.

But in this case we would have to know how the writer of the story defined pain, and also how he measured it.

Bob Stevens, our extension horticulturist, was reminded of some work which was done in India. A researcher there claims that plants grow better when subjected to music. Further, the Indian says that soothing music is best!

Perhaps we'll yet hear some greenhouse operator say: "The joint is jumping."

Getting back to the original question. I wonder if anyone is giving pep-up needles to plants much like humans take B-12 shots? Then it would be a case of a little pain endured for a much longer period of feeling well. Or can plants be happy as well as feel pain?

If you're looking for a main dish salad that can be made several hours before serving time, tightly covered with foil or plastic film and refrigerated until served, try this one while chicken and grapefruit are plentiful. Teenagers and adults will like the simplicity of this salad. An appetizer and a hot bread will make the meal special. Teenagers will enjoy brownies for dessert or a tray of cookies. For adults who prefer something less caloric a colorful lime sherbert is suggested.

4 cups diced cooked chicken, shrimp or lobster
2 cups diced celery
1/4 cup pimento
1/4 cup diced green pepper
1 1/2 teaspoons salt
1 cup mayonnaise or cooked salad dressing
4 cups grapefruit sections
*Tomato aspic ring (recipe below)

Section fresh grapefruit, or use canned sections. Lightly mix together chicken, shrimp or lobster, celery, pimiento, green pepper, salt, mayonnaise, and 1 1/2 cups grapefruit sections. Turn out tomato aspic ring on a large chop plate, fill center with chicken salad, and garnish outside of ring with remaining grapefruit sections and crisp salad greens. Makes 12 to 14 servings.

2 tablespoons unflavored gelatin
2 cups grapefruit juice
Dash cayenne
1 1/2 cups canned condensed tomato soup

U. of D. Bulletin Has Home Gardening Tips

A home vegetable garden can help you fight rising food costs and an expanding waistline. Backyard gardeners agree that home-grown vegetables are less costly, fresher and more nutritious—and the healthful outdoor exercise is an added bonus.

Gardening time is just around the corner; now is the time to plan, according to Robert F. Stevens, extension horticulturist at the University of Delaware. In a revised extension bulletin, "Home Vegetable Gardening in Delaware," Stevens gives suggestions that will make gardening easier and more profitable.

Careful planning will stretch the harvest season, Stevens points out. You can get a continuous supply of vegetables from early spring to late fall from a well planned garden. Keep in mind the size of your yard, the needs of your family and their likes and dislikes. The bulletin includes a suggested garden plan for a small vegetable garden and a list of what to plant, when and how.

Gardening is fun, but it's also hard work. It's fairly easy to plant and care for the family garden during the first few weeks of spring, but the real work begins when the weather gets hot. A good job of weeding, thinning, replanting for late crops and controlling insects is essential if you're going to get a worthwhile crop, Stevens emphasizes.

Control weeds; they compete with vegetables for water and nutrients and often harbor insects and disease. Cultivating and mulching are preferred methods for home gardens; chemical control isn't very practical.

Insects and diseases often cause trouble in home gardens, Stevens points out. They are best controlled by using crop rotation, keeping the garden clean, selecting disease-resistant varieties and following a recommended spray or dust schedule.

"Home Vegetable Gardening in Delaware" contains directions for garden care, weed and pest control, watering and fertilizing. Published by the Cooperative Extension Service at the University of Delaware, the revised bulletin is available from the Mail- ing Room, Agricultural Hall, University of Delaware, Newark, Del. 19711. A list of 1967 vegetable varieties recommended for Delaware home gardens is also available from the same address.

NAVY AND YOU

A Navy experimental vessel, called the "Hydrostream" can skim over the surface of the water on a cushion of air. A fan in the center of the skimmer forces the air into a chamber underneath the ship. Two skegs, one on either side of the hull, and a "water wall" at each end of the boat trap air to form the cushion. She is 21 feet long, about 11 feet wide, and weighs approximately two tons when empty. Only the skegs and screws touch the water when the fan is operating, the rest of the boat cruises about two feet above the water.

Opportunities For Women Topic Of University Meeting

Opportunity knocks. In today's world it knocks for women—women who see the opportunity and prepare for it. Women with talent.

Women scientists, musicians and business executives undoubtedly have talent for their glamorous - sounding jobs. But so do countless homemakers — if they take a good look at themselves. Feminine talents such as a need to serve others, or an interest in art, writing or travel can lead to a career. The ability to cook or sew with a masterful touch can lead to unlimited opportunity.

Seven Delaware homemakers saw their chance and put their feminine skills to work. They will describe their experiences during the annual University Days for Women, scheduled for April 6 and 7 on the University of Delaware campus.

Mrs. Margaret Manning, state senator, will talk about her entry into the world of politics. She believes there is a need for many more interested and dedicated women in the field.

Steve Welch Wins State Mat Title

Steve Welch, Harrington High's undefeated 138 pound wrestler, won the state championship in that class, on Friday and Saturday, at Delaware Fieldhouse, Newark.

Steve, a junior, had earlier been picked as the most outstanding wrestler in the Henlopen Conference Tournament held at Dover Air High.

Louis Starkey won the state 180-pound title in his senior year (1965) after just missing in 1963 and 1964 because of injuries and bad breaks.

Jim Cain last season had a state title in his grasp only to see it slip away in the fleeting last seconds because of a highly-questionable decision. Had Cain won, Bill Muehleisen's Lions could have laid claim to state mat titles for three straight years. As it is, the locals have still done very well in the mat pastime.

The highly-touted Blue Hen Conference of New Castle County won the most titles (6) as expected but the thinly-populated downstate area made a terrific showing by grabbing four titles. Reese (165) and Roy (133) Rigby of Caesar Rodney and Jim Marshall (145) of Smyrna were the titlists. Ralph Clausen of Georgetown, 1966 state champion at 103 pounds, would probably have made it five downstate champs except for a crippling injury suffered in the early moments of a 112 pound semi-final clash. Clausen, practically wrestling on one leg was still able to extend his opponent to the extent, that the Sussex Countian was beaten by only one point.

Allan Greenly (127) decisioned Chuck Jarman, of Wm. Penn on the way to a fourth place finish. David Hurd (145) dropped a tight 5-4 decision to John Bullen of Wm. Penn of New Castle. Over the last few years, Wm. Penn has dominated Delaware schoolboy wrestling.

Steve Welch proved to be a tough nut that the Blue Hen Conference couldn't crack. Welch outpointed Greg Wuthnow of Wm. Penn 8-6 on Friday. On Saturday the Lion trimmed Randy Batson of Brandywine 6-2. Brandywine is one of Delaware's largest high schools. Saturday night, before a packed house, Steve took on his third Blue Hen opponent, Brad Lane of Newark, in the finals. After a scoreless first period, the young Lion started Round 2 in the underneath or "down" position. At the referee's whistle, a lightning-fast move gave Welch an escape for a 1-0 lead. No further scoring was recorded for the second period. In the final period Steve started on top and had to keep his rival under control for two full minutes to be sure of winning. Lane struggled mightily but couldn't shake the tenacious Vernon Road resident. With another point for "riding time" Welch ultimately prevailed 2-0. The many Harringtonians in the audience were thrilled to say the least. Some of the distaff residents of this community put their hankies to work to stem the tears of joy.

A Newark lass of high school age was speaking of an upcoming match between a Newark and a Milford wrestler. Quote she sagely, "He (the Newark boy) is wrestling a downstater, (chuckle) a farmer." First of all, what makes these super-people from above the canal think that everyone in Kent and Sussex makes a living tilling the soil? Second, what's wrong with being a farmer anyway? Even upstaters have to eat don't they?

We felt that it was only poetic justice when a Harrington boy upset one of her Newark heroes, Lane, in a state championship final and Welch didn't get those arm muscles from milking cows either.

Harrington Bowling League

Jarrell Fuel won four more games Tuesday night on their way to take complete control of the 10-team league. They have now stretched their lead to five and a half games, and the way they have been bowling, it looks as though things may be all wrapped up.

Hamilton Fund moved up from third place, back into the second place position, winning three of their four games. Wally's Garage also holds a share of second place by winning three of its four games. These two teams are sticking close together, as last week saw them tied for the third place spot. With the exception of Jarrell Fuel, the margin that each team holds their respective positions is very slim. The next five weeks are really going to be tough, as time is running out. Wilson Electric really made a big jump, up from sixth place to take over the number four spot. They too took all four of their games to get within firing range of the leader. A couple more good nights like Tuesday, could really put the pressure on the top three teams.

Kent Gas dropped all four of their games and the result was a drop from second place way down to the fifth place position. Come dropped down one notch Tuesday night as they could only pick up one game, going from fifth to sixth place. McKnatt Funeral Home remains in seventh place, though they lost all four of their games. There is a slim margin between them and the cellar team so they had better be careful in the next five weeks.

Well, well, Kay's Beauty Salon is really on the move now. It took a while to get started, but finally came out of the cellar position to take the eighth spot. They again this week won all four of their games making eight wins in a row. Now if they can just keep up the good work, some of the other teams had better look out.

Taylor & Messick dropped from eighth place to ninth place, losing all four of their games. There is just a half game between them and the cellar team.

Penn. R. R. dropped down in the cellar, losing three of their four games in Tuesday night's bowling. This is one notch below their ninth place standing as of last week.

In the high game department this week J. Carpenter rolled a very fine 221 game to lead all the bowlers in this league.

L. Outten was next in line with a good 211 game.

H. Melvin rounded out this high game column with a 206 game.

The high game department saw three different men take the honors. W. Ryan led in this department with a very good 560 series.

K. Layton again hit the high series column with a fine 551 series.

H. Tibbitt rounded out the high series column with a good 520 series.

University of Del. Makes Correction

Cost figures in the last paragraph of a March 14 release on high school students who will serve as research apprentices at the University of Delaware this summer are incorrect.

The paragraph should read:

"Total cost of the program, excluding travel and personal expenses, is $170 for five-day board and room and $220 for seven-day board and room. Dr. Fletcher noted that there are funds available to help students defray some of the costs. "It is the desire of the Foundation that, within budgetary limitations of the program, no student can be excluded from participation by reason of financial need," Dr. Fletcher said.
