

CITY'S INDUSTRY POTENTIAL TO BE STUDIED BY GROUP

The prospects of the community for location of industry, as an attraction for tourists, and for an inventory of community assets will be studied by a group appointed Monday morning by Mayor Fulton J. Downing.

The studies will be sparked by the Delaware State Development Department, several members of whom were present at a meeting Monday at the City Hall.

They were Samuel L. Shipley, department director, James E. Crosby, travel division manager, and Richard L. Murchison, industrial division manager.

Local persons attending the meeting, in addition to the mayor, were Edward Taylor, a member of the Industrial Committee of the Chamber of Commerce, Charles L. Peck, Jr., the chamber's secretary, and Carrington H. Burgess the chamber's president.

The finding of industrial sites and approximate costs was delegated to Taylor who will get other committee help. This material will be included in a pamphlet the development department is preparing, Shipley said.

Along the same line will be the preparation of data on the community's facilities including utilities. Most of this information will be gleaned from reports of the Delaware State Planning Commission, whose representative, Joseph Paterno, has been working with the local planning commission more than a year.

Crosby, the travel division manager, was especially interested in the community's attraction to tourists. The chief magnets, it was revealed, were the Harrington Raceway and the Delaware State Fair. Since the city has been incorporated less than 100 years, it contains nothing of historical interest, but there are some features within in five miles, such as White's Church and Mordington, at McColey's Pond.

The mayor is to appoint a tourism committee. Also, a rack with travel pamphlets of the development department will be placed in city hall.

Donald Vincent Finds A Good Roughage

Donald Vincent, a Pet producer, of Felton, is convinced that corn silage is one of the best roughage feeds for his dairy cattle.

In 1957, Donald built a bunker silo, and since then his cows have never been without silage for winter feed. The silo is built of old railroad ties for posts and cross-ties and - and - groove boards for siding. It is 12 feet wide and 60 feet long.

This past year, 10 acres of corn was ensiled and there was ample feed for the herd of 10 cows and four heifers. The silage was covered with a thin layer of straw and a polyethylene cover. There was practically no spoilage on top. There was some spoilage on the sides but only where there were cracks in the siding.

"I've never entirely filled the silo," Donald explained. "Last year it was extremely dry, so I chopped a larger acreage. Ordinarily, seven acres of corn would provide me with plenty of silage."

One look at the Vincent herd is enough to tell that these cows receive good care. The cows are clean, and the stable is kept in an immaculate condition.

The Vincent farm is located about one-half mile south of Felton. Donald's mother helps him with the dairy chores by washing and taking care of the milking equipment.

Of Local Interest

The residence of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Smith, on Delaware Avenue, is receiving an aluminum siding.

A truck, stolen from Taylor & Messick recently, was recovered at Grasonville, Md.

Mrs. Cora Porter, Hanley Street, was taken to Milford Memorial Hospital Tuesday night in the ambulance of Harrington Volunteer Fire Company.

Mrs. Elythe Melvin is a patient in Milford Memorial Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Morton A. Melvin and children, of New Hampshire, are spending some time visiting relatives in and around Harrington.

Mrs. Anna Wyatt and Mr. and Mrs. Bischoff, of Wilmington; Mr. and Mrs. James Warrington, of Belfonte, and George Hinckley, of Minquadales, were Sunday guests of Mrs. Virginia Clarkson.

Chicken Festival Evening Events Plans Completed

The 20th annual Delmarva Chicken Festival proclaims a round of spectacular evening events under the leadership of Orm Kirkpatrick, operations manager of General Foods in Dover.

Kirkpatrick is a native of New York. He came to Dover in 1963 from General Foods' White Plains, New York office. He holds a degree in Industrial Engineering from Texas A & M University. He served with the Army Signal Corps in World War II and has been with General Foods for 14 years.

Kirkpatrick, with assistance from Dave Green, has lined up activities that kick-off with opening ceremonies at 7 p.m. on Wednesday, June 21 in front of the Dover Middle School on Delaware Avenue.

Immediately following this will be the annual Delmarva Pageant in the school auditorium on Delaware Avenue. At this time the 1967 Delmarva Poultry Princess will be selected from among 25 high school girls representing communities on the Delmarva Peninsula. In addition to the coveted title there is a $1000 scholarship. (Continued on Page 8)

Wanted: 1967 Delmarva Poultry Princess

Would you like to win a $1000 scholarship? If you are a high school girl on Delmarva—not yet having entered your senior year—you may have a chance.

This award is available to poised personable attractive girls who are interested in competing for the title of Delmarva Poultry Princess.

To participate in the fine competition a girl must appear in street clothes and evening dress (but no bathing suit). She will be asked to do a three minute talent presentation. This may be a recitation or demonstration of any minimal talent. It is solely for providing judges a better opportunity to evaluate poise.

One girl is selected from each community to compete in the final contest that will be held as part of the 20th annual Delmarva Chicken Festival in Dover, on Wed., June 21.

If you are interested in entering this contest and do not know who to contact in your community, please call the Delmarva Poultry Industry office in Georgetown, 302-856-6050 for further information. All entries must be in by May 15.

The new Princess will reign over the three days of festival activities and will be invited to ride in parades, and make appearances on behalf of Delmarva Poultry Industry throughout the year—but only insofar as they will not conflict with her normal school activities.

A runner-up prize of $500 is also offered as well as a $100 savings bond for "Miss Congeniality".

This selection may be made through a local contest or through a high school guidance counselor or a local civic club.

Del. 4-H'er Given Nebraska Institute Award

Charles R. Ebling, 17, Townsend, is the winner of an all-expense scholarship award to the National Agricultural Youth Institute in Lincoln, Neb., August 14-25.

A delegate from each of the 50 state and Puerto Rico is being selected for the scholarship, sponsored by the Nebraska Centennial Committee. The award is based on high academic achievement, evidence of leadership ability and a genuine interest in following agriculture as a career.

The institute will include a five-day seminar four days at the State 4-H Camp in the Nebraska National Forest and a weekend with a Nebraska host. (Continued on Page 8)

New Felton School Planned to Qualify For Middle States Accreditation

The new high school building planned for Felton pupils will provide for all subjects and services needed for accreditation by the Middle States Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

Felton School District voters will go to the polls tomorrow to vote for or against a half million dollar local bond issue to finance the district's share of the $2,436,720 school construction project. They will also approve or disapprove an increase in current expense revenue needed to finance improvement and expansion of the instructional and pupil activities program.

The existing building facilities lack adequate space for the library, cafeteria, auditorium, gymnasium, laboratories, and regular classrooms. As soon as possible after the new high school is available for use, in the fall of 1969, the faculty and adminis-

Hickman Installed KCEA President

Willard W. Hickman, administrative assistant in charge of the instructional program in the Milford Special School District, was installed as president of the Kent County Education Association at the monthly meeting of the Board of Directors at the Felton School on Tues., April 18. The KCEA is representative of more than 1,000 professional educators representing the schools of Kent County. In addition to being a member of the local, state and national education associations, he is a member of the Legislative Committee of the Delaware Association of School Administrators.

He is a member of the Avenue Methodist Church where he serves as a Sunday School teacher, chairman of the Commission on Education and secretary of the Board of Trustees. He is also a member of the Peninsula Conference Board of Education.

A Mason, Mr. Hickman is a director of the Milford Historical Society and secretary of the Milford Rotary Club.

In accepting the presidency from the out-going president, Miss Eleanor Tucker, of the Dover Schools, Mr. Hickman asked for a re-awakening of interest in a unified county system, for publicity regarding innovations of programs within the county, and for closer ties between the several school districts.

Arthur Bright, industrial arts teacher in the Caesar Rodney Special School District, was installed as vice-president and will succeed to the presidency in 1968.

Harrington Man Hurt in Crash

Neal J. Kimmey, 25, of Harrington, was injured Monday when his car struck a tree on Delaware 16 about seven miles west of Greenwood.

He was treated at Milford Memorial Hospital for lacerations of the scalp and released.

Police charged Kimmey with reckless driving and he was given a hearing in Magistrate Court No. 6, Harrington, and fined $25 and costs.

Delaware State Police said Kimmey was traveling west on Delaware 16 and his car ran off the roadway and skidded 81 feet before striking the tree.

Defensive Driving Course

A defensive driving course will be given by the Delaware Safety Council at Milford City Hall in the Farmer's Room, every Thursday evening starting May 4 for four weeks, 7:30 to 9:30. The entire eight hour course cost $150 and all licensed drivers are encouraged to take advantage of it.

This educational course is being sponsored by the Shawnee Evening Home Demonstration Club of Milford. Because of the limited number in the class, you must register with Mrs. Emory Dougherty 422-8920 or Mrs. William Irwin 422-9079.

Delaware Food Market Report

By Anne Holberton

A splendid list of plentiful foods is the pleasant prospect for May. Eggs and orange juice remain the best attractions. Other items in outstanding abundance will be potatoes, beef and turkeys.

The egg market hit near rock bottom about ten days ago. Since then, things have improved only slightly with little indication of a broad recovery in prices. Supplies are heavy and prices low, which is a perfect combination for good eating yet economical.

Potato prices at all eastern shipping points are at seasonal lows with no indication of strengthening in the near future. Why the heavy volume? The late winter freeze in Florida has caused their potato harvest to be much behind schedule and it is just now arriving with the bumper early spring potato harvest in other states. Also, lots of fall storage crop potatoes will become available during the early part of May and these potatoes will be top values at all produce counters.

High quality beef supplies remain bountiful and prices will continue to be attractive. For a beef dinner treat that's a bit different, why not serve individual pot roasts. They are a thrifty meal and require less cooking time than a large pot roast.

Purchase a beef roast such as chuck rump, or sirloin tip and cut it into large, boneless pieces—one for each person. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and dredge with flour. Brown in a little hot fat and add seasoning—sliced onion, bay leaf and a sprinkling of thyme or oregano. Add a small amount of liquid, such as bouillon, tomato juice or water, cover and cook the roasts until tender—about two hours.

You can cook vegetables for the meal right with the meat during the last hour, if you wish. The good meat juices will give them a wonderful flavor. Small, whole carrots, onions and potato halves are favorite pot roast accompaniments.

Unusually good buys on turkeys are predicted for May. Wholesale prices have declined 5 to 8 cents per pound since the first of the year. This situation resulted primarily from exceedingly heavy slaughter and very large storage holdings.

Turkey is a favorite food item throughout the year and with prices as favorable as they are and will be, make this protein packed meat a "must" on your May menus. Plan turkey dishes for special and everyday meals making good use of the whole bird, parts and even the convenient turkey roasts that are available in both cooked and uncooked form.

nual Wilmington Garden Day will be held between the hours of 10 a.m. and 5 p.m. Seventeen gardens and five homes will be opened to the public. Collections featuring antiques of the 18th and 19th centuries, as well as modern design, may be seen. The admission tickets to all gardens is $3 with an additional $1 fee for each of the homes. The proceeds of the day go to St. Michael's Day Nursery and the Big Brother's Association.

At the annual Laymen's Conference which was held at Camp Arrowhead last week, Robert Creadick, a member of St. Stephen's was chosen to be chairman of the 1968 Laymen's Conference.

Two Common Ticks Plague Delaware Dogs

Tick season will be here in a few weeks or even a few days if temperatures remain high, according to Dr. Dale Gray, chairman of the department of entomology and applied ecology at the University of Delaware. These creatures may be on almost any dog that walks through old fields or along the edge of woods from April through August. And, people walking in the woods or fields can easily pick up ticks also.

Paralysis, occasionally fatal, may result if a tick is allowed to feed for several days at the base of the skull of either a dog or a human. Ticks can also spread Rocky Mountain spotted fever and tularemia.

There are two common ticks in Delaware, the American dog tick and the brown dog tick. Unfortunately both are brown so don't think you've got a brown dog tick just because it's brown. The brown dog tick is uniformly brown, while the American dog tick has a mottled white shield on its back. The brown tick cannot survive our winters outdoors, but the American tick can. Young brown dog ticks begin feeding on dogs and only dogs, but American dog ticks must feed on mice or rabbits during their early life, transferring to dog or people when they become full grown.

Brown dog ticks can build up to very large numbers within the house since they require only dogs as hosts. Fortunately, most homes do not have enough mice or rabbits to allow multiplication of the American dog tick within the house.

When a female tick is full of blood, it drops to the ground and lays three to five thousand eggs. When hatched, the eggs produce tiny young called seed ticks. The seed ticks crawl around until they come in contact with an animal from which they can suck blood.

The common Delaware ticks may be pulled off the skin; they do not leave their heads in the skin. In fact, a bit of skin is likely to be pulled off with the tick. Infection may follow because of this, so treat such spots with a disinfectant such as iodine or mercurchrome, Dr. Bray recommends.

Use a repellent such as delphene (Off) when walking where ticks are abundant. If possible, spray with DDT or Carbaryl (Sevin) to control ticks in woodland areas or in fields, Dr. Bray advises. Concentrate the spray near trails and roads or along the edges of woods. Use Carbaryl as a five per cent dust to rid a dog of ticks. Carbaryl (Sevin) may be listed on the flea powder label as 1 naphthal N-methylcarbamate.

If a dog has brown dog ticks, treat between his toes with Carbaryl. These ticks commonly feed there, making it very difficult to reach them with insecticide. Treat the rest of the dog's body also. Carbaryl or DDT should be used in the dog's sleeping quarters and in the house. Several treatments may be necessary for complete control—and only complete control is satisfactory, Dr. Bray warns.

"Alcohol has been found to be a contributing factor in more than half of fatal traffic accidents," reports J. James Ashton, manager of the Delaware Safety Council. This fact has been established through post-mortem studies of persons killed in these accidents. These studies have been conducted in a number of states, and the results agree remarkably well.

Thus the evidence is clear that there is a significant connection between alcohol and traffic accidents, especially fatal ones.

"You, as an individual, will have to make up your own mind about your personal drinking habits and driving a car. Obviously, you normally increase your chances of being in an accident—involving not only yourself but others—when you drive after drinking. And the research on this subject shows clearly that you increase your risk with each additional drink you take," states Ashton.

"For our society as a whole, devising effective and acceptable actions to break the connection between alcohol and accidents is surely one of the most important traffic safety problems we face," ends Ashton.

Nobody's got a family plan like Chevrolet.

And in the spirit of all family plans, you get more for your money.

Plan I—Impala Sport Sedan (foreground)—First off, Chevrolet is the roomiest car in America (source: Automotive News 12/26/66). Second, it's got exclusives like acrylic lacquer finish and Body by Fisher. Third, you get Chevrolet's traditional high resale value. Three reasons why Chevrolet is selected by more families than any other car.

Plan II—Camaro Sport Coupe (rear left)—The widest, lowest, heaviest adventure car at its price. Comes with bucket seats, carpeting, a fully synchronized 3-speed transmission, and a big Six competition can't match.

Plan III—Chevy II Nova Sport Coupe (rear right)—Nobody's been able to copy the six-cylinder efficiency or protective features like flush-and-dry rocker panels you get in our stylish economy car.

Plans IV, V and VI—Chevelle, Corvair, Corvette (not pictured)—You can see them all at your Chevrolet dealer's. Stop in soon. Bring the family.

Chevrolet's outstanding worth is another reason you get that sure feeling

Poems from Paradise Pastures

By W. Cliff Miller

The "Sixteen Years Ago" column of the Journal for March 10-67 carried the following:

EDITORIAL BY CARRINGTON H. BURGESS—Take the Reese Theatre out of Harrington at night and one might as well pull in the sidewalks. Many nights, even on Mondays and Tuesdays, we notice the business district crowded with automobiles, many from neighboring Maryland. In the main, these cars are in town because their occupants are visiting the local cinema. The Reese Theatre is a quasi-civic institution—a consistent advertiser of Harrington and the services its businessmen have to offer.

Coincidental with this was the removal of the old sidewalk on the opposite side of the railroad while the windows were being boarded up on the closed theatre. The removal of the sidewalk, of course, was in conjunction with construction of natural gas lines, a big step forward in community betterment and the old upheaved walk was replaced with standard up-to-date construction, bearing out the time-worn adage: "The old must die that something better might live."

We are optimistic enough to believe the same will hold true in final disposition of the building which seems to be destined for some other purpose.

Logic for that old adage: "We build, we grow, we die that someone else might live," is noted.

As I wend my steps down avenues, Of stately oaks and pines, Amid the beauty of the woods, And winding growth of vines.

I catch the slanting rays of sun, That dripping through the trees, Go dancing front and back of me As branches sway the breeze.

I note the odor of the pines, Where last year's needles lie, To form a carpet for the feet, Of roamers passing by.

The winding, tangled mass of vines, That cling to some old tree, Spells years of sun and wind and rain, Since from some seed set free.

And as I ponder on them all, The lesson each would give, They bud, they blow, they bloom, they die, That something else may live.

To Buy or To Rent That is the Question

Machinery—and lots of it—is the earmark of American agriculture. Constantly growing more specialized, many farm machines are so large and so expensive many farmers find it more economical to hire a custom operator or rent machinery than to buy, according to W. T. McAllister, extension farm management specialist at the University of Delaware.

Your decision to rent or buy depends on several factors, McAllister points out. Fixed costs are the big costs of machinery; power machinery has an annual fixed cost of nearly 20 per cent of purchase price, for instance. Operating costs—gas, oil and repairs for example—of hired and owned machines are about the same; of course, extra labor is hired in addition to the machine when the farmer uses custom service.

Before deciding, figure the most profitable use for your resources. Is buying a new machine the most profitable way to use your capital? For example, a farmer may find he can save $500 a year by owning a combine instead of using custom services. However, if he invests the $12,000 a combine costs in the production of more crops, he can earn $1,500 extra income. So, it would actually cost him $1,000 income to buy a combine, McAllister points out.

Convenience is frequently used to justify an extra tractor or a truck; a farmer doesn't want to take off cultivators to mow or he wants another truck to haul grain. Although this type of convenience saves some time and effort and adds satisfaction to the job, it often costs more than the savings. Ask yourself which is more important, McAllister suggests.

Custom operators supply a packaged service including tractors, trucks, wagons, and labor for silo filling, baling, grain harvesting and similar jobs. The true cost of this service isn't always just the charge the operator makes, McAllister points out. If you are letting equipment and labor stand idle, the cost of the packaged custom service is the cash cost added to the fixed cost of your own unused equipment and labor.

Of course, how good a job is done by the custom operators depends on the individual. Farmers operating their own machines may be more careful to see the job is done right than custom operators on a piece-work basis. However, custom operators may have better machines and, since they handle them more, be more skilled in their operation than the farmer using his machine only a few days each year.

ter original paintings — 3 oils framed of 7 watercolors matted with no glass, or a combination of 3 oils and 4 watercolors. Entries will be accepted Monday, May 1 from 2 until 6 p.m. The entry fee is 25 cents per painting. A 20% commission will be retained to be contributed to the art community. The Clothesline Fair is sponsored by the Studio Group of Wilmington. It is not juried. Over the past 30 years, many outstanding artists sold their first painting at this spring event. It is an opportune time for art lovers to view or perhaps buy an original painting by a local artist. Crafts will also be on display for sale, representing local potters, woodcutters, jewelers, weavers and others. The popular David Hunt will be on hand again to do quick portrait sketches of visitors.

Stretch your awareness to include the entire world, Donald Barnhouse, television news analyst, told delegates to University Days for Women held recently at the University of Delaware. The analyst said when a man starves in India, it rocks our well-fed society here. "Be aware of hungry nations; they will have great power; through sheer numbers and economic potential. Why did De Gaulle recognize Red China? Because he wanted France on the ground floor when Red China becomes an enormous market." According to Barnhouse, the pressure in the United States for the recognition of Red China does not come from left-wingers but from businessmen who want to trade. "It's not politics but economics."

He advised being aware of the many economic forces underlying world news. "What happens in Bolivia may be more interesting than Peyton Place if you've trained yourself to put two and two together." People all around the world should share in fellowship based on trust, Barnhouse believes. The world has grown too small to do otherwise. Fellowship is not only advisable from the moral standpoint; it's the only practical way to live.

Notes on Trip of Ryan and Gamber

By Della W. Ryan

Well, Ryan and Gamber are taking up where they left off on their trip of a little while ago. When we started on this trip, I (Della) who did all the driving, had no idea of going over the Great Smoky Mountains, but had planned to go through the deep south to avoid them, but when we reached Greensboro, N. C., and took Interstate 40 which goes west and is a great highway for speed, 40 miles an hour being the minimum and 70 miles and hour is the maximum, we decided to go on it.
Very few local people travel on this highway. After traveling quite a few miles, my traveling companion, Olive Gamber and I came to a town named Black Mountain, near Asheville, N. C. several years ago, but this was the first trip traveling west through that section. After entering the town of Black Mountain, we saw a sign pointing to Montreat, N. C., we drove there, where you enter and leave through an arch made of stone. It is a very pretty mountainous town (and very treacherous driving). It is dotted with large homes on the mountain sides which are surrounded by rhododendron. After leaving there,

THIS IS A TEACHING LOAD — One teacher for approximately 50 pupils in all subjects. This photo, made of Prospect School, near Vernon, in 1897 or 1898, shows Mrs. Alice H. Ross with 51 children, all of whom were not attending the school. Mrs. Arthur Layton, who attended the school as Florence Collins, said some nonschool children reported just to get into the picture, taken with a background of adjacent Prospect Methodist Church. Identifications are as follows (back row, left to right): Howard Eisenbrey (bow tie), Grace Simpson (white collar), C. Walter Collins, Elsie Thomas, Emil Simpson, Jennie Simpson, Alvie Eisenbrey, and Iva Thomas. Next to last row (left to right): Florence Collins, hair parted in middle and wearing white dress; Tharp Callaway, Lizzie Tharp, Mollie Purnell, Naomi Minner, —Culver, and Henry Purnell, hair parted on side. Second row from back (left to right): Irma Otwell, polka dot dress; Bertha Purnell, —Culver (in front of Elsie Thomas); Florence Wix, Bertha Thomas, Lyda Smith, Floyd Lewis, Reba Eisenbrey, Clara Collins (hair parted in middle), Fred Otwell, Harold Cain, Elmer Cain, and Thomas Mick. Third row from back (left to right): Mattie Culver, hair parted in middle (She is directly in front of Tharp Callaway); Georgia Cain, Nettie Otwell (long hair), Mary Jane Baker, Ethel Cahall, Edith Longfellow, unidentified boy, and Harry Sullivan. Fourth row from back: Clifford Lewis, Lawrence Sullivan, George Brown (big white tie); Robert Sedgewick, Reynolds Otwell (peeping over Sedgewick's shoulders), Mrs. Alice H. Ross, teacher; Nettie Ross, unidentified boy with checkered shirt; Elsie Minner (little girl in white dress), Ethel Thistlewood, Flossie Lewis, George Culver, and Herbert Cain. Charlie Sullivan and Kathy Culver are on Mrs. Ross' right. Eddie Thistlewood (left), and Emmett Backer are seated on the ground. Mrs. Layton said the Simpson children were part of 19 belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Simpson. The Culver boys in the picture were named Landy and Vernon, but she couldn't recall which was which. She said the Anderson family, of which Bennie Anderson is one, had 21 children.

If you treat them right, durable-press fabrics will reduce the work required to keep your family well groomed. Proper laundry methods help retain the easy-care features of these fabrics.

Launder before fabrics are heavily soiled and as soon as possible after soiling. Turn garments inside out to help reduce "frosting" or wear on creases. Launder in the coolest water that will remove soil. If warm or hot water is used then rinse in cool water before machine spinning or hand wringing.

For heavy, oily soil, perspiration, and food stains, measure heavy duty liquid detergent required for entire load and apply full strength to the most soiled areas of garments. Soak in hot water, let water cool to 90 to 110 degrees F, then agitate for 6 to 8 minutes.

Shorten the wash cycle to the minimum required for soil removal. Use slow agitation or a stop-and-soak, followed by a short time of normal agitation. Advance the control dial to shorten cycles.

Rinse well in cool water. If your water is hard, use a water softener in the first rinse or fabric softener in the final rinse. Fabric softeners reduce the static charge which attracts soil. Softeners also decrease clinging of man-made fibers.

For less wrinkling, dry in small loads—about half the dryer capacity. Dry at normal heat unless your dryer has a setting for "wash-year" or "Permanent Press". At end of dryer cycle, let the clothes continue to tumble for a cool-down period of 5 to 10 minutes after the heat is off. As soon as the dryer stops remove garments and hang or fold.

If you have no dryer, shorten the final spin in the washing machine by advancing the dial, or remove the garments while dripping wet and hang on rust-proof hangers. If touch-up pressing is needed, use the iron at the low setting.

C.K.R.T. News

The April meeting of the Callaway-Kemp-Raughley-Tee American Legion Auxiliary Unit No. 7 was held last week with Mrs. L. Gooden Callaway presiding. Guest for the evening was Mrs. Henry Orkin, of Milford, department third vice president. She brought greetings from the department and told of some of the work being planned for the rest of the year.

Mrs. Donald Dell, child welfare chairman, announced that the Easter Lily sale had been held and that canisters had been placed in a number of locations in town. Money from the sale will be sent to the Delaware Society for Crippled Children and Adults. The unit voted to send two shift dresses to the hospital at Stockley as a part of the Department Child Welfare project.

The National President's visit to Delaware will be on May 26, at the Dinner Bell, in Dover. Anyone wishing to attend may call Mrs. Callaway for further details.

On May 13 the rescheduled trip to Valley Forge will be held. A bus will leave from Route 13 at the K and H Equipment Store, at 7 a.m. The cost of the trip is $5 per person with a visit to Valley Forge and a stop at the King of Prussia Shopping Center. Reservations must be made with Mrs. Henry Orkin, 415 Fisher Avenue, Milford, by May 5.

Mrs. Callaway appointed the following members to serve on the Nominating Committee: Mrs.

Dell, Mrs. Dale Roth and Mrs. William Kramedas.

She also announced that Mrs. James O'Neal and the Scholarship Committee have received applications for the yearly scholarship and the selection of a winner will be announced soon.

ORTHO talks sense:
You'll never grow rich if your seed's gone to seed.
That seed of yours could be eaten right out from under you. You don't get that good solvent feeling that comes from soybeans unless you get the crop off the ground in the first place. And that's why ORTHO® sells Soybean Seed Protectant. Regular and MO with Molybdenum—the ideal supplement for areas deficient in this minor element. Each has been known to up an acre's value. Simply because there's no better protectant around for coping with seedling blight, dampoff and decay. Measure ORTHO Soybean Seed Protectant right out of the can and mix in the planter box. That's all. There's even a special lubricant added so the seed runs through the box like lightning. Which, by the way, is how your crops get growing, too.

FENCE TALK
By George K. Vapaa

Should we form a land bank or should we condemn land for agriculture? A group of Long Island landowners held a public hearing on ways to save productive farm land from urban sprawl. These were some of their suggestions reported in the Suffolk County Farm News, a paper received by many of our transplanted potato farmers.

One man proposed: "Why not condemn, in the public interest, the development rights of certain productive classes of land which are going out of production for one reason or another." Cluster zoning was another solution to minimize the use of good agricultural lands. "Agriculture is part of the economic fabric of Long Island," the speaker added.

The names are not important here because few people know those offering suggestions. But their ideas may apply in Delaware. Another person cited limited water resources on Long Island. "Until de-salinized sea water becomes available in huge quantities, it would be dangerous to develop all the land for housing and industry," he said.

I was struck by this final comment. "Since the average farmer sees his land as the major source of retirement income and old-age security," a Long Island Farm Bureau spokesman said. "We believe a farmland preservation program should be entirely voluntary in concept and operation."

Whether the speaker realized it or not, he practically defines the intent of a present California law on voluntary agricultural preserves. Briefly stated, the law permits a lower tax rate for prime crop land kept in agricultural uses for a period of not less than ten years. It is fairly new, but this law may come into more general use by other states.

Delawareans have not felt the urban pressures which face Long Island, the New Jersey corridor, the Baltimore-Washington suburbs, or the extreme West Coast sprawl. But some land pressures are here and more are coming. Will we profit from the unfortunate experiences of our neighbors?

ary measure of drought in inches of rainfall above or below a normal level per month. The PDI scale rates wet weather as moist (plus 1), wet (plus 2), very wet (plus 3) or extreme (plus 4) or greater. Droughts are mild (minus 2), moderate (minus 3), severe (minus 4) or extreme (minus 5 or more).

Normal rainfall for the year in Delaware average 40 to 44 inches. But this is not distributed evenly throughout the year. The critical periods for crops are during the growing season, and more especially July and August, when corn and beans reach a peak of growth, go through a bloom stage and then the seed stage. Most Kent County farmers are hedging with the weather this year. We usually get rains in either July or August. July rains are most helpful to corn. August rains help pod set on beans. So rather than depend on one crop or the other, most growers are spreading the risk with near equal acres of both crops.

Aerial photo maps were first used for the farm production-adjustment program. But bonus uses are being developed to help farmers manage their lands to better advantage. As I write these words, I glance at two photos of the same area. One, was taken in 1939 and shows small farms cut up by gullies, odd shaped fields, and poorly drained acres. The 1965 counterpart shows terraced fields to walk the water off the land. The fields are still not square, but they are larger and have much larger rows for easier tillage. It requires no expert to see that the later map is more prosperous.

Aerial photos pinpoint soil problems quicker than most other methods. A trained operator in the county ASCS office can quickly find a field's area. He uses a planimeter or delicate instrument to run along the field borders with an accuracy over 99 per cent. Photo maps are made with special cameras mounted in airplanes which fly sky-trails at exact heights. The camera pictures eight square miles at a time. Pictures are taken with the sun high, a clear sky, no haze in the air, and with the ground free of snow or flood-water.

Today all U.S. farmland is recorded on film. You can see a set of county prints at our local ASCS office. You can buy extra prints at cost from this same office in size from 10 to 40 inches square in various scales.

When land is ruined, we blight the future of people as well as the face of America. When land is used in harmony with our needs and the requirements of nature, it rewards us with beauty and riches. So speaks President Lyndon B. Johnson, calling attention to Soil Stewardship Week, which runs through the next two Sundays. Private citizens own or manage three-fourths of the land that

Downstate's Future In Agriculture

The future of lower Delaware is in agriculture. A Harvard University study, using modern computer analysis, recently pointed to agriculture remaining the most important land use in Kent and Sussex Counties, although recreation will flourish along the coastline and tourism will spread throughout the downstate area.

Harvard University's department of landscape architecture made a six-month study of the entire Delmarva Peninsula below the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal for the Delmarva Advisory Council. According to Gerald F. Vaughn, coordinator of community and resource development at the University of Delaware, the survey can help guide sound plans for economic development. Effective land-use planning lies at the heart of any resource development program on Delmarva he indicates.

The survey team was directed by Dr. Charles Harris, chairman of the department of landscape architecture at Harvard, and Dr. Raymond F. Dasmann, senior associate of the Conservation Foundation. They studied the peninsula to find out what uses the land was best suited for and to inventory conservation assets. While they emphasized scenic and recreational values, they also considered agricultural possibilities. They used numerous resource surveys and traveled extensively to many peninsula locations.

Supplementing the actual field survey, the study team used computer analysis to help them identify alternative land uses. Inputs of data from aerial photos, soil maps, and topographical features such as rivers, marshlands, roads and towns were fed into a computer. It produced maps showing a variety of possible development patterns depending on whether agriculture, recreation or industry were given planning priority.

The landscape architects concluded agriculture would continue as the most productive use of land for most parts of lower Delaware. In addition the researchers predicted a growing cluster of people and houses around existing towns such as Seaford and Laurel. In these areas, a positive program is needed to keep rural-urban conflicts to a minimum, they stated.

Although Delaware's "interior" land should remain primarily agricultural, the survey team also pointed to the scenic shoreline along the Delaware coast. They foresaw large numbers of people coming from the Norfolk, Washington, Baltimore and Wilmington areas, looking for waterfront home locations and vacation sites.

Along with increased tourism will come the need for improved highway, beach and other community facilities — particularly water and sewer systems, Vaughn notes. "As population pressures increase, wise resource planning and following through on the plans will help keep the assets for living we already have on the peninsula."

Azaleas Need Careful Planting

Blooming azaleas and rhododendrons are truly breathtakingly lovely. A riot of color will reward gardeners willing to give azaleas and rhododendrons the care they need, according to Robert F. Stevens, extension horticulturist at the University of Delaware.

Plant these broad-leaved evergreens in the spring. The best time is after the ground is mellow and warmed up, just before their leaves appear. Buy plants at least two years old, 10 to 16 inches tall, and choose varieties and species suited to your area.

Both azaleas and rhododendrons have rather exacting soil requirements. Since they grow naturally in a cushion of acid leafmold, your soil should resemble acid leafmold as much as possible. These shrubs need a well-drained, acid soil high in organic matter. Although the plants are shallow-rooted, the topsoil layer should be about 18 inches deep with a well-drained subsoil underneath.

Once planted, don't cultivate the soil; the roots are too near the surface. Stevens also recommends a deep mulch to keep down weeds, keep roots cool and the soil surface moist. Azaleas and rhododendrons need considerable moisture, so guard against drought.

If the right soil is half the battle in keeping these shrubs happy, sunlight is the other half. Azaleas and rhododendrons grow naturally in light open woodlands; so, when you plant them, pick a spot with light shade protected from winter winds. In front of a shrub border, shaded by taller growth, may be just right as long as roots from other shrubs don't interfere. Or, the protected side of the house where the sunlight reaches during part of the day may be ideal.

Tender Loving Care Works Even With Teenagers

Everyone needs love and understanding particularly teenagers because the years between ten and twenty are so filled with turmoil. Uncertainty about parental love is deeply upsetting to any child, according to Mrs. Mary Keller, New Castle County home economic extension agent.

Mrs. Keller explained what teenagers need and expect of adults at the recent University Days for Women, held on the University of Delaware campus. Express your affection in clear-cut ways, both to your children and to each other, she advises parents. "Adolescents set long-term values of marriage and family through their observation of their parents."

Teenagers need models of happy, fulfilled adults worthy of imitation. Being that model is far from easy, but without a model, adolescents are deprived of a vital part of growing up.

"If only my parents would listen to me," is a common complaint among teenagers. Youngsters long for sympathetic understanding from their parents, Mrs. Keller stated. They want to talk on an adult basis and they expect parents to remain calm no matter what they say. "You may need super-human restraint at times; keeping calm is especially hard if you find it hard to talk with your teenager under any circumstances."

Adolescent rebellion — a defiant emancipation proclamation — is quite normal but it's extremely frustrating to parents. Teenagers on their way to adult independence find it irritating when they realize they still need their parents and react with hostility.

Parents should recognize that guiding their teenager with a loose rein is much more successful than continued strictness. The stricter you are, the more rebellion and conflict and frustration, Mrs. Keller pointed out.

Why Rising Prices?

The average homemaker today feels she is trapped in a giant economic system that is designed to pick every penny out of her pocket, even though the size of the pay check keeps growing.

Life seems to be full of paradoxes and the current economic situation is a good example. While the practice of boycotting food stores in protest against rising food prices has waned, the concern of the housewife about the size of her food bill still smolders.

Within the last few weeks, there has been dramatic and perhaps drastic action by groups of food producers who say prices are too low and something must be done about it. And they did something — they dumped hundreds of thousands of gallons of good wholesome milk into sewers, creeks and rivers. They were trying to raise prices by reducing the supply so that those who wanted milk would have to pay a higher price.

But consumers say prices are already too high and somebody should do something to bring them down. They don't know what to do, who to blame, or who should take leadership. Who speaks for those who spend the family earnings? No one, except old people on retirement or fixed incomes and their voice isn't very strong.

Labor unions give lip service to lower retail prices but also realize that wages make up 35 to 40 per cent, directly or indirectly, of the cost of manufactured things and it is almost impossible to have higher wages and lower costs unless there is a big increase in worker productivity. So labor unions are really mainly interested in lower prices for the things their union members buy, not what they produce.

It is popular to cite the profits that the money-hungry giant corporations make as the reason why prices always go up — and never down. Not so says the corporation president. Our profits may look large to the individual, but when they are broken down on the basis of returns to the stockholder, they look small. If they were any less we would have trouble getting the money needed to improve and expand our businesses. If we fail, there is one less producer; so the remaining firms have less competition, and prices might go even higher.

The farmer wants higher prices for the things he produces and lower prices on things he buys. So does the mine operator, the trucker, the doctor, the professor. In fact, that is the reason why everyone complains about prices but no one does anything about them. Each of us wants higher prices for what he has to sell, whether it is a product, a skill, or a service. And, we want low prices for what we buy. Thus there is no common bond — there is no one to lead and there are no followers. Each goes the way that his own self-interests dictate. Thus the consumer dilemma.

Felton

Mrs. Walter H. Moore

A DAYDREAM OF THE PAST

Fancy marshals all her forces As I linger near the place, Dreaming of those happy moments Which to other days I trace.

Dreaming of those youthful faces And of school years long gone by, But which seem like magic yesterdays In dear old Greenwood High.

As I listen to those voices That are ringing in my brain, Faded is the living present I am in the past again.

I have scaled old times round-tower I have traded now for then And instead of twelve and sixty I am only twelve and ten.

All the changes that I fancied Had come throughout the years, Were but dreams, they all have vanished— Vanished with their hopes and fears.

I hear those chords of C-sharp minor, Haunting sounds, much loved by all; Practicing for his commencement, Sentimental Paul.

All are here, their radiant faces All aglow with youthful joys Bright-eyed, young, vivacious maidens Handsome, bright, light-hearted boys.

At the board is smiling Nellie Demonstrating with her rule; Wilson H. and serious Mabel Back again in Greenwood School.

Look at young, coquettish Rita With her eyes on witty Sewell, Velma S. and giggling Mary Back again in Greenwood School.

Easy-going Willie Coulter With his glances somewhat shy All for songstress Mary Barwick Back again in Greenwood High.

Naughty Grace and blushing Hazel On the old piano stool, Fiddler Port and Flutist Willie Back again in Greenwood School.

Porter, Mac, and serious Medford Lead once more our little band, Like MacNamara's—so few in number, But the finest in the land.

Alway studious Joy Unger With that twinkle in her eye Alfred Smith and Eleanor Lofland Back again in Greenwood High.

And there's intellectual Milton With his smiles for Thelma Buell; Boisterous John and brilliant Edwin Back again in Greenwood School.

Nice to see good-natured Robert Holding hands with Marjorie Fry Laughing Lill and happy Eva Back again in Greenwood High.

We all have eyes for modest Catherine Accompanying violinist Earl, Whose smiles are like the summer sunshine When he's near a pretty girl.

Another modest Catherine With songs from Whitcomb Riley, A gem among our souvenirs We'll always think of highly.

I see again two youthful dandies Champion coaches, by the way The boy surround their Wrighty The girl all have their Fay.

Pitch-hard Mick and handsome Collie, High school pitchers we thought great

Still respond to fiery Snowy, As he yells "Split the plate". Three dedicated pedagogs Who can make you feel the end is nigh

Ely, Elzey, Franklin Gardy Back again in Greenwood High.

At his desk is Mr. Kupjian In whose class no one can fool Stern Miss G. and Albert Humphreys Back again in Greenwood School. Oh, there's William Edward Horner With his discourse on a mule That sounds so autobiographic Back again in Greenwood School.

Suddenly the vision fades Naught is heard except the sigh Of the wind among the branches; I cannot see old Greenwood High.

Instead, a gorgeous modern building Where our younger ducks have quacked But the old will live in memories Spite of all the things it lacked.

Former pupils, dear old comrades, How can I the thought endure? I am just an old gray foggy You are all adults mature.

Yet, I'm thankful for this vision Though it was too bright to last; I have had one happy moment In this daydream of the past.

AN OPEN LETTER TO SUSSEX AREA

RESIDENTS

INCLUDING HARRINGTON, MILFORD, A N D FREDERICA IN DELAWARE; SALISBURY, FEDERALSBURG, DELMAR, BERLIN, AND OCEAN CITY IN MARYLAND.

DEAR SUSSEX AREA RESIDENT:

The Sussex Area has always been a wonderful place to live; but, it is up to all of us to help it grow and be an even better place for ourselves and for those who will follow in our footsteps. It is accepted that industrial development is one of the best ways to make a community grow and prosper. New jobs mean a better life for everyone.

In order to plan our industrial growth and to assist in the overall economic development of our area, we are conducting an employment registration drive. The information obtained will be used to attract new industries. We need to know how many people are presently available for manufacturing employment. Therefore, certain categories of Sussex Area residents are asked to complete the form below. The four types of people are:

- (1) Unemployed persons desiring full-time work.
- (2) Part-time employed persons desiring full-time work.
- (3) Full-time employed persons who want to change jobs.
- (4) Full-time employed persons who now have to drive over 25 miles one way to work.

If you are one of these four classes of people, we urge you to fill out the form below and mail it to:

LABOR STUDY
BOX 555
GEORGETOWN, DEL.

An independent agency is processing the forms. You may put more than one form in one envelope, but do not send in more than one form for yourself. The information will be kept confidential, but will be summarized and made available to industrial prospects looking at the Sussex Area.

Please remember this is not an employment application. It could result in your being contacted in the future by new industries and therefore could mean a job for you. You can see why it is important for you to return a form if you are one of the four classes listed above.

We urge your fullest cooperation in this most important project. It could well be the one thing which will get us new industry.

SINCERELY,

/s/ William A. Carter, /s/ Samuel L. Shipley,
Chairman Director
Delaware Industrial Delaware State
Building Commission Development Department

Lions Bow, Despite Bob Thompson's Three Hits

Right-fielder Bob Thompson had a perfect day at the plate with three hits in as many trips to the plate, but Harrington High's Lions bowed 11-6 at Rehoboth, although each club had eight hits.

The Seabawks opened the game with three runs in the first inning and three more in the next two frames. The Lions chipped away at the lead and trailed by only 6-5 after batting in the sixth. Rehoboth then salted the contest away by tallying five times in the bottom of the sixth.

John Winkler had two hits for the losers. Dale Hamilton and Steve Welch saw mound duty for Harrington's 1-3 Lions.

H.H.S. Baseballers Win At Greenwood

Harrington High's baseball Lions, coached by Bob Young, have only three veterans on this year's team but won their first game of the season after dropping their first two starts.

Greenwood's Foresters were beaten 10-1 at Greenwood. The Lions had two five-run innings although hitting safely only four times.

Calvin Bonniwell and Terry Yoder, both returnees, had two hits each. The other experienced Lion, Howard Brown, gave Greenwood only two hits in picking up the victory.

Felton Freshman Moore Beats Milton In Ten Innings

Chris Moore, a fine freshman athlete at Felton High, knocked Milton from the unbeaten ranks by beating the Warriors 2-1 in ten innings.

Southpaw Larry Harris was only three outs away from pitching a shutout victory for the losers, when the Green Devils knotted the score 1-1 in the seventh inning.

In the tenth inning a single by Barrett Qual and a three-base error gave Felton the triumph. Each club is 3-1 at this writing.

Gene Palmer had two hits for the winners.

Felton Loses 3-2, To Dover Air

Felton's Green Devils dropped a 3-2 decision to unbeaten Dover Air last week after winning their first two starts.

Much of the drama was packed into the seventh and last inning. Felton had trailed 1-0 since the third inning, but tallied twice to lead 2-1, only to see the Falcons score a pair to notch their third victory.

Maurice Myro held Felton to four hits by Lloyd Shelman, Barrett Qual, Bob Dill and Chris Moore.

Local Dog Wins In Virginia Trial (L. to R.) Edward C. Brown, Mrs. Brown, Rangewood Pat, Joe Brady.

Who Says It's A Dog's Life?

Rangewood Pat is a consistent winner in dogdom and her travels would put many humans to shame.

She has competed in Foster, R. I.; Gramling, S. C.; Woodstown, N. J.; Bristol, Md.; Toppsfield, Mass.; Auburn and Andreas, in Pennsylvania.

Upcoming are outings at Franklin Township, Lost Creek, St. Mary's, Bald Eagle and Bellwood, all in Pennsylvania and Genesee Valley in New York.

Rangewood Pat is handled by Joe Brady, of Danville, Pa., near Reading.

After her Virginia victory many southern dog fanciers expressed an interest in owning Rangewood Pat, but it looks like the little lady will continue to divide her time between Harrington, Del. and Danville, Pa.

Harrington Bowling League

Tuesday night saw Kent Gas and Jarrell Fuel battle it out in the finals. Fate handed Kent Gas a hard blow that left them facing a strong team with only four bowlers. As it was, Jarrell Fuel took all four games, in what still turned out to be a close contest.

Wednesday night pitted Jarrell Fuel and Wally's Garage against each other. Wally's Garage, thought of as one of the strongest teams in the league, was no match for Jarrell Fuel, dropping all four games.

Balanced bowling by all members of the winning team was the factor in the clean sweep, as the bowlers bowled near or over their averages.

The rest of the league members wish to express congratulations to Jarrell Fuel on a job well done.

Tonight (Thursday) will see Kent Gas and Wally's Garage battle it out for second place. All indications show that these two teams are evenly matched, and should prove to be very interesting to observe.

Tuesday's bowling saw D. Hayman roll very fine games of 210 and 237. He also had a very fine total series of 607.

K. Layton had a good 211 game and A. Hurd rolled a fine game of 207. R. Jarrell also contributed a fine 206 game and a good 545 series.

Wednesday night, R. Jarrell led all bowlers with a fine 541 series. D. Hayman helped the cause with a 527 series.

Another reminder to members of the Harrington Bowling League of the upcoming bowling banquet. The time is 7 p.m., Tuesday, May 2, at the Farmington Fire Hall. Awards will be presented at that time. Come on out and enjoy a gala evening.

DEL. 4-HER

family engaged in farming, ranching, or agribusiness. Problems of modern agriculture, agribusiness and career opportunities in agriculture will be among subjects discussed in workshop sessions.

Ebling, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roland G. Ebling, has been active in 4-H club work for seven years. Active in dairy, tractor, field crop, junior leadership, auto and veterinary projects, he has received numerous 4-H awards. He attended 1965 National 4-H Congress as the state tractor winner, the 1967 National 4-H Conference and was selected to represent Delaware in the regional tractor driving contest in Richmond, Va. He also went to the dairy judging contest in Richmond, where he won two scholarships. He has served on the Governor's Committee on Youth Activities and as 4-H camp sagamore. Interstate Milk Producers Cooperative named Ebling the outstanding 4-H dairy youth in New Castle County.

According to Ebling, his idea of 4-H has changed. "When I joined 4-H I thought it was just a group of boys having a good time. Now I see 4-H as a worthwhile organization for bettering myself and others."

He believes 4-H gave him a start in his chosen career—agriculture. "Each year, as I become more involved in agricultural projects, I became more interested. Now I am planning to go to the University of Delaware, majoring in agriculture."
