University of Del. Announces Staff Appointments

Recent evaluations by outside consultants have led to a reorganization of computer operations at the University of Delaware.

Professor David E. Lamb, chairman of the department of statistics and computer science, who has also been director of the university's computing center, will relinquish the latter function. The anticipated addition of new courses and faculty members will require his full time for departmental supervision.

Jack D. White, former director of material, has been named director of the computing center. James S. Osborn, assistant director of personnel, succeeds White as material director.

All organizational changes became effective July 1. The management systems office has been assigned to the computing center, with the director reporting to Randolph Meade, Jr., vice president for business and finance.

White, a native of Ann Arbor, Mich., attended Oberlin College and received his bachelor's degree from George Washington University where he also took graduate courses. A veteran of 24 years of service in the U.S. Marine Corps, he also completed the U. S. Army Finance Officers Advanced Course and the U.S. Navy Department Institute of Industrial Relations Course. He has studied Contemporary Systems Design in a course offered by the IBM Corp. and has directed a large military computer operation.

During his military career, White was a specialist in inventory control. He served as special representative to the U.S. General Accounting Office and Treasury Department and also was assistant to the Deputy Chief of Staff in directing a 100-man staff responsible for coordination of supply, technical and provisioning operations. This work involved data processing, purchasing and financial management of a major inventory control point.

White is a member of the American Society of Military Comptrollers, Alpha Kappa Psi and the Society for the Advancement of Management. He and his wife and six children reside at 107 Timber Line Dr., Newark. Osborn attended New Mexico State University and was graduated from Abilene Christian College in 1960. He received his M.B.A. degree from Texas Technological College in 1964. He worked briefly as a salesman, as instructor in the Carlsbad city schools and as coordinator of distributive education before joining the university's professional staff last year.

He is a member of the College and University Personnel Association and the American Vocational Association. He lives with his wife and two children at 22 Davies Rd., Chestnut Hills, Newark.

Former Delaware Debs presented Citations

On behalf of their efforts for the Delaware State Development Department's "Discover Wonderful Delaware" program, gubernatorial citations were presented to Miss Sallie Smith and Miss Cokie Witham, former Delaware Debs, by Samuel L. Shipley, director of the State Development Department, on Mon., July 15, at brief ceremonies in Shipley's office. All of the Debs were also presented with official Delaware plates as gifts of appreciation.

Misses Smith and Witham, 1968 graduates of Dover High School, are entering college this fall. Miss Smith will study nursing at Duke University, Durham, N. C., and Miss Witham will major in mathematics at Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa. Both girls stated they had thoroughly enjoyed being Debs because they met so many interesting people, and learned so much, not only about Delaware, but the whole Northeast.

Two other Delaware Debs also graduated this June but will continue as Debs. Miss Barbara Gibbs will attend Wesley College in Dover and Miss Rebecca Woods, presently summering on Cape Cod, will work in Dover until she enters Airline Hostess school. Miss Jan Sharp, Milford, a student at Delaware State College, will also continue as a Deb. Misses Barbara Corkran and Anne Remley round out the list of seven Debs. Students at Dover High School, both girls are busy with cheerleading practice throughout the summer.

"The Delaware Debs have represented the 'First State' many places including the New York World's Fair; the National Sports, Travel and Vacation Show in Washington, D. C.; and the Philadelphia Sports, Travel and Camping Show in Philadelphia, Pa.," Shipley remarked during the ceremonies. "At Christmas-time they traveled with the Governor to the Hospital for Mentally Retarded at Stockley and the Governor Bacon Health Center in Delaware City to distribute gifts and visit with the patients," he continued. Attired in their uniforms of colonial blue and buff, the Debs have also acted as official hostesses at such statewide events as the Governor's Conference on Travel and Recreation, and the Governor's Conference on Business and Industry.

Chemical Injury Causes Concern

Many Delaware homeowners are becoming concerned over increasing chemical injury to shade trees and ornamental plantings, reports John McDaniel, agricultural chemicals specialist at the University of Delaware. Chemical injury usually falls into three categories, he explains. Salt injury; fertilizer injury; and pesticide injury resulting from herbicides, insecticides and fungicides. Salt may injure or kill leaves, branches and even an entire tree, says McDaniel. Particularly if the salt has washed into the soil. Salt injury is fairly common along the eastern shore, but it usually occurs in areas where salts are used to control snow and ice on streets and sidewalks. Fertilizer injury is quite common and is sometimes seen on well established trees and landscapes. In most cases, this is the result of overfertilizing by an over anxious homeowner or of careless fertilizer application. Fertilizer applications should never exceed the recommended amount, especially in heavier soils which may entrap and accumulate minerals. Herbicide injury is also increasing rapidly, says McDaniel. This type of injury is commonly associated with the use of herbicide-fertilizer combinations on turf. These chemicals should be used with the utmost care, he adds. Once a tree has been affected, there is no known treatment. Herbicides sprayed around the lawn and garden may drift to nearby trees, even if properly applied. Be extra careful when working near herbicide-sensitive trees such as dogwood, magnolia, maple and oak. Injuries from other pesticides, including insecticides and fungicides, are relatively uncommon if chemicals are used according to instructions. For more information on chemical use and injury, contact John McDaniel, Agricultural Hall, University of Delaware.

FENCE TALK

with George K. Vapa

A busload of Connecticut potato growers is visiting in Kent County today (July 25). They were with New Jersey farmers yesterday, and are talking with some of our growers today.

Labor saving equipment seems to be most on their minds. They are seeing the Valley System of irrigation, which travels in a circle over the field. Bulk handling of the harvested crop is another highlight. Automatic scales on the Walton-Schreppler farm are an innovation for Delaware.

The visitors will see the crop coming out of the group. All indications point to a good harvest and crop quality seems to be excellent.

Potato growers everywhere like to compare notes on cultural and marketing practices. Last night some of the Delaware growers held a "gabfest" for the Connecticut group at the Hub Restaurant in Dover.

Among the Delaware growers hosting the group today are Alfred Birlough, Phillip Cartanza, Jacob W. Zimmerman, Jack Walton, Paul Schreppler, Joseph Jackewicz, Eugene Gagan and Joseph Lamberta. Marketing is also being seen at the Delaware Produce Growers, as well as the Papan Brothers vegetable operation west of Dover.

July 26 to August 3—Delaware State Fair, Harrington.

August 14—Farm and Home Field Day, University of Delaware, Substation, Georgetown.

The Delaware State Fair makes its 49th annual stand at Harrington on Friday and continuing for nine days.

Construction of the grandstand addition is well along and should not interfere. In fact the escalator to the mezzanine floor is finished and will be operation. You can look up on the roof of the grandstand and drool at the air conditioners, but they won't be ready. The Fair management is trying to rent air conditioners for the restaurant, and the prospects are good.

But everybody expects hot weather at the Fair. It never slows things up much.

Dr. William Mitchell, our University of Delaware agronomist, brings attention to a new crop for the state - turf. An "Instant Lawn" has been sodd next to the water towers and back of the Fair Bureau stand. Bill has rigged up two irrigation systems. One is the conventional pop-up variety. The other uses sub-surface irrigation. It wasn't intentional, but we discovered a layer of concrete about six inches under the surface when the plot was rototilled! Be sure to look at this exhibit.

George Simpson, manager, says that one national machinery exhibitor has chosen Harrington as one of only 10 state fairs for major attention in 1968. This reflects our high percentage of land in tillage on the Delmarva peninsula.

The Fair seems to grow every year. Will you be there?

The national plowing contest will be held at Hershey, Pa., on August 27, 28 and 29. This is about as close as it ever gets to us, for it usually seems to take place in the midwest.

The program does not say anything about political speeches, but you can bet the national candidates for president will appear. They always do.

I have a few extra copies of the program and you can have one by calling 736-1448. There will be a conservation tour by air, bus or wagon as well as a conservation exhibition. Forage equipment will be on display and the State police will have a rodeo and a dog obedience demonstration.

Why not get up to the Amish for a day or two? It is a fine place for a short vacation.

Coming next week. An appraisal of the "advocate planner" tied to the interim zoning hearing in Kent County last week.

Howard Papan, chairman of the zoning commission, did an admirable job of handling the hearing. The audience took a keen interest and seemed to be in sympathy with the major objective, that of developing sound growth for Kent County.

Can you recognize the signs of plant troubles? A trained person uses a definite approach to find out what is wrong. You can learn to do the same.

We are grateful to Lawrence D. Little, Jr., specialist in nursery management at Rutgers University, for the simplified guide. You can have a copy by calling 736-1448.

Very briefly, the expert uses a five step approach.

1. Check the leaves or needles.
2. Examine the stems.
3. Look at the roots.
4. Check the growing practices.
5. Take a good soil and/or plant sample for a lab check.

The skill comes in knowing what may be different from healthy plants and then taking the proper corrective measures. These are given in the leaflet.

It Seams To Me

By Janet C. Reed

Never underestimate the power of a press—a press of your garment with an iron. Proper pressing can add the final professional touch; poor pressing can give a "home-made" look to even the best sewing. An iron should be as much as part of your sewing equipment as your sewing machines. Pressing and sewing are inseparable.

One of the most important pressing rules is—press as you sew. If seams, darts and other construction details are pressed as you go, only a minor press job is needed upon completion of the garment.

Always test a scrap of fabric before pressing the garment. Know how much heat it will take, how much steam it needs, the amount of iron pressure it takes, whether you should press from the right or wrong side, and if special treatment is required.

This is especially important for blends of different fibers in a fabric. Man-made fibers require low heat. Use less heat on fabric blends that have a high percentage of synthetic fibers.

Steam usually does a better job. If the steam from a steam iron is not enough for a sharp crease, use a slightly dampened light weight press cloth in addition. On the other hand, some satins, brocades and some silks can be ruined with too much moisture.

Soft fabrics such as cashmere and mohair require very little pressure. Holding the steam iron above the fabric without touching, and pressing the seam lightly with fingers if often pressure enough. Hard finished worsteds may need additional pounding with a "spanker" or pounding block before they lie flat.

Fabrics with low melting points, such as acetate, can glaze and shine if pressed from the right side. Embroidered fabrics retain their depth longer when pressed from the wrong side.

Most fabrics are crease resistant in varying degrees. This crease resistance keeps clothes looking fresh but it can present a pressing problem. Many fabric shops have a commercial spray that helps solve this problem; it gives garments sharper creases and smoother seam lines.

White vinegar can give some crease resistant cottons a smoother finish. Run a small brush dipped in vinegar along the seam line; then steam press. Be sure and test this first, for the vinegar can change the color of some dyes.

The final garment pressing shows your skill as a dressmaker. Sleeves should have no crease down the center. Darts can be pressed over a rounded pad or the end of the ironing board to keep the curved shape of the garment.

Press collars from the outer points to the center so there will be no small wrinkles at the seam line. The collar seam and facing seams are rolled under slightly so no seam shows on the right side of the garment. The skirt hem in today's fashion is lightly pressed rather than having a sharp crease.

Pressing is an art. On some fabrics and for some styles you may find yourself spending as much time pressing as sewing. Don't neglect it if you want a professional-looking garment!

Early vegetables and fruits should soon be in good supply for freezing. The best for freezing are fresh, tender vegetables from the garden. The fresher they are frozen the more satisfactory the finished product.

Corn and garden peas especially lose their tender succulence quickly. Their freezing cannot wait for your convenience. Gather and freeze in early morning while tender and sweet. Work with small amounts and quickly.

Allow air space between packages in the freezer, after 24 hours they may be stacked to make space for other foods.

For more complete freezer information call or write the Extension Office for Home and Garden Bulletin No. 10. Our address is P.O. Box 340, Dover, Del. 19901 or call 736-1448.

Ag. College Communications Wins Nat'l Awards

The daily news service prepared by the Agricultural Editor's office at the University of Delaware has been named one of the six best agricultural college press services in the country. The "Excellent" award was given by the American Association of Agricultural College Editors in its annual communications contest and announced at the recent annual meeting in Knoxville, Tenn.

Four other Delaware entries were recognized. The weekly press service and a series of radio spot announcements were given a "Good" rating. Two publications, "Susan and Her Very Special Farm" and "S. Hallock DuPont School of Applied Agricultural Science Associate Degree Program," also received the "Good" rating.

More than 400 communications entries from the fifty state land-grant colleges and the U.S. Department of Agriculture competed in 20 media categories. This is the sixth consecutive year that Delaware entries have been honored.

The news service, "Delaware Farm and Home News," which won the two awards, is sent to state newspapers, radio stations and agricultural publications throughout the country. It is prepared by Eric Ziegler, assistant editor, and Lorraine Kingdon, editorial assistant, in the Agricultural Editor's office.

The radio announcements were developed to promote attendance at the University's annual Farm and Home Week. They were prepared by Jerry L. Webb, agricultural editor, and Mrs. Kingdon.

The publication, "Susan and Her Very Special Farm," is a coloring book with agricultural information given to youngsters touring the University farm in Newark. It was illustrated by Miss Kathy Dolmetsch, University graduate student and artist in the editor's office. The brochure on the S. Hallock DuPont School was edited by Webb.

The American Association of Agricultural College Editors includes approximately 500 professional communicators who prepare agricultural and home economics information.

U. of D. To Show Tiltrotator, Tiles At Field Day

Visitors to the University of Delaware's annual Farm and Home Field Day at Georgetown August 14 will have an opportunity to inspect the new tiltrotator — a power driven rotary tiller for once-over planting.

The tiltrotator prepares the seed bed, incorporates herbicides and plants, all in one operation, explains crops researcher Ed Wisk. The machine eliminates the need for disking and harrowing before planting and can plant up to 65 acres a day.

The tiltrotator may be used for either broadcast or strip planting, he adds. And it's easily converted to a high speed row crop cultivator. Tiltrotator features include hydraulic gaugewheels, heavy duty power train for six and eight plow tractors and heavy duty rotors with a choice of blades.

The Farm and Home Field Day program will also feature a demonstration installation of four inch plastic agricultural drainage tile.

The new corrugated plastic tile is cheaper than conventional tile, is light, easy to install and may be used in all places where regular tile can be used. The tile is perforated on three sides and will permit effective drainage on most Delaware soils. A conventional tile laying machine can be adapted for installing plastic tiles.

Other highlights of Farm and Home Field Day will include bus tours of the University's 310 acre farm, tours of the newly remodeled poultry diagnostic laboratory, a day long program for homemakers and an old fashioned hoeing contest.

4-H Club Present Public Speaking Awards

Carolee Ann Moody of Wilmington and John Comegys, 17, of Hartly, were first place winners in the state 4-H public speaking contest held July 11 at the Caesar Rodney High School.

A set of silver will go to Miss Moody as the top girl's speaker. Comegys will receive a watch.

Also competing in the public speaking event were Joy Gooden, Wyoming, Karen Kalinevitch, Greenwood, and Randy Spence, Wilmington.

Miss Moody's speech, "Step Safely," featured pedestrian safety. It's too bad pedestrians can't be licensed like drivers, said Miss Moody; careless habits cause the majority of accidents involving pedestrians.

The sixteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward F.

Moody, who just got her drivers' license, concluded, "For my sake, please step safely."

Comegys, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Comegys, spoke on "Agriculture—Strength of America." He pointed out that agriculture is not just growing plants but a vast business that contributes to the nation's strength. "We are able to feed our own people, help feed those in many nations of the world and still use the majority of our man power to produce our great industrial needs."

Miss Marguerite Krackhardt, home economics specialist at the University of Delaware and Mrs. Elizabeth Caulk, Wyoming, acted as judges for the contest.

Peach Blossom 4-H Club News

Member Leslie Smith, with her mother, is visiting relatives in England.

Twenty members have taken part in county judging contests. Sixteen of these will be judging again at the State Fair as they try for 4-H scholarships.

Becky Messick was our only entry in the State Dress Revue held at Caesar Rodney School on July 11, but we were just as proud of Robin Cahall, who served as "Genie". The theme of the show was "I Dream of Genie". Robin looked lovely in her green chiffon outfit, as she danced around the stage.

Backswimmers In The Pool

Delaware swimming pool owners are being plagued by a new insect pest — the backswimmer, says Frank E. Boys, extension entomologist at the University of Delaware.

These pearl grey beetles usually rest on the water's surface, their body at an angle, head down and with the hind legs extended. These insects swim rapidly using the hind legs as oars—thus the name backswimmer.

Backswimmers are highly predaceous insects that feed on other insects and, occasionally, on tadpoles and small fish. They feed by sucking body juices from the prey and will not hesitate to attack animals larger than themselves. The beetles attack their prey by drifting under it.

Backswimmers will attack man if they are handled or disturbed. Their bite feels much like a bee sting.

Unfortunately, there are no chemical controls recommended for use on backswimmers, says Boys. But the best way to avoid attracting them to your pool is to keep outside and underwater pool lights turned off in the evening unless, of course, someone is using the pool.

Quackery Exposed In Field Day Program

Are you one of the thousands who are victimized each year by quackery?

Quackery is a form of fraud and cheating. It refers not only to the quack practitioner but also to worthless products and fraudulent promotion.

Progress has been made in exposing the cruder and more obvious forms of quackery. But law enforcement can only control quackery. It takes a well informed public to eliminate it.

How well informed are you? Check at the University of Delaware's Farm and Home Field Day, August 14. Quack medical devices and confiscated "drugs" will be displayed and William Wiley, chemist from the Food and Drug Administration will speak at 10 a.m. at the Georgetown Substation meeting room.

People today are conditioned to believe in medical miracles. Quacks know this and take advantage of our interest and limited facts. Could you recognize a quack and his methods before he got your money? What would you do if you discovered that so-called secret remedy for baldness, wrinkles or arthritis was no more effective than hand cream?

At Farm and Home Field Day, Wiley will discuss the different kinds of quackery, how they can be recognized and what you can do.

Quackery thrives on ignorance and fear. Here's a chance for you to become more informed.

Field Day activities also include tours of experimental plots, sick-plant clinic and special exhibits. An outdoor chicken dinner will be served at noon and there will be an afternoon watermelon break.

Plenty of Action For Sports Fans At State Fair

Sports fans will find plenty to cheer about at this year's Delaware State Fair.

The 49th annual event opens at Harrington on Fri., July 26, and continues through Saturday, Aug. 3.

The scheduled sports attractions include a demolition derby, auto races, auto thrill show, harness racing, and a quarter horse show.

For the third straight year the fair will open with a giant demolition derby. It will pit many local drivers matching their skill and nerve against veterans of the eastern circuit. It will be held on Friday night, July 26.

On Saturday night, July 27, and again on the final Saturday afternoon, the half-mile dirt track will be the scene of big auto races. Some of the best drivers in the east will compete in trying to straighten out the sharp dirt turns.

Jack Kochman and his famous Helldrivers will take over the track on Monday night, July 29. His daredevil drivers will present an exciting program of speed and precision.

On Wednesday afternoon, July 31, juvenile pacers and trotters will race for a series of fair trophies. The big quarter horse show, presented by the Delaware Quarter Horse Association will start at 9 a.m. on Sun., July 28.

Temporary Travel Information Center Project Underway

Dudley E. Connors, president of the Delaware Travel Council and Samuel L. Shipley, director of the Delaware State Development Department, announced this week that the Delaware Travel Council project to open a temporary Travel Information Center is now under way. The Delaware Travel Council, a private group of hotel and motel owners, and others interested in promoting travel in the State, opened the information center officially last Thursday. The information center located on the west side of Route 14 just south of the Five Points Intersection outside of Lewes, will be open from now through Labor Day. The center is staffed by volunteers from the Rehoboth Senior Center who are welcoming the visitors to the center and assisting them with travel information. State, local, and Delaware Travel Council literature is provided free to the visitors.

The information center is located in the State Highway Department's roadside picnic area. The center is a 36 foot, air conditioned mobile office trailer which has been re-equipped to accommodate literature racks and furniture. Toilet facilities are also available on the site.

Davis Again Runs Well in Wilmington

Mike Davis continued his fine running in the Olympic Development Track meets being held in Wilmington's Baynard Stadium. Last Thursday night was practically a replay of the previous week's action, as Davis again was second in both the 50 and 220 yard dashes.

In the 220 he drew the worst lane for the second straight week. He improved his time and beat Roger Campbell, the previous week's winner, in annexing the first heat. However, the winner of the second heat drew a good lane, and had a slightly better time, than did Mike, to take home the first place plaque. It might have been an entirely different story if both boys had run in the same heat and Davis had not been assigned to the rough lane.

Tony Smith was third in the 50 yard dash. His brother, Mike Smith, did surprisingly well in the 440 yard run. Mike weighs 50 pounds and is 50 inches tall (4 ft. 2 in.). He is ten years old and ran the quarter mile in 85 seconds, defeating several rivals to finish fourth.

Kevin Wooters made his first start a good one by passing several boys in the homestretch to clock 86 seconds. Dick Porter clocked 12 seconds flat in the 100 yard dash.

Bob Short and the Guard

Would Bob Short use the National Guard to maintain law and order on the streets of Delaware's cities and towns?
Yes.
In his candidacy for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, Robert A. Short is firmly committed to a basic position: the protection of the individual citizen—you and I.
If such protection, either in the control of violence or in the prevention of violence, requires the additional manpower of the Delaware National Guard, Bob Short as governor would send the Guard to the scene. And he would keep them there as long as they were needed.
Short's firm stand on law and order is in contrast with that of his opponent for the Republican nomination, who has publicly urged concessions to militant elements. Bob Short feels strongly that criminals should not be coddled or appeased.

Use of the National Guard is only part of the answer, though. Like a bandage, it merely offers protection until lasting treatment can be applied. Treatment is needed in Delaware today—to cure the disease of lawlessness in all its forms.
Bob Short recognizes that problems of civil unrest and lawlessness must be cured by attacks at the roots of the problem—the poverty and decay in our cities, the breakdown in family life, the insecurity of youth, contributing governmental factors such as delay between arrest and trial. These are basic problems which should be dealt with—which would be dealt with by Bob Short.
But first, when needed, let's use the Guard.
