Not Guilty Is Plea in Shooting

Willie Lee Walker, 36, of Greenwood, pleaded not guilty in Superior Court last Friday to a charge of second-degree murder.

Walker is charged with the murder of Louis William Hinton, a 29-year-old parolee from Greenwood who police said was wounded in the right thigh by a blast from a 12-gauge shotgun in May. Hinton died in the Milford Memorial Hospital five days after the shooting.

According to state police, Hinton and his mother, Luvina, 46, went to the Walker residence, on Sussex County route 539, just north of Greenwood municipal limits, to borrow a phonograph.

Once in the house, Hinton allegedly knocked Walker to the floor and attempted to cart the record player outside to a car, police said.

Walker, after being struck again while trying to retrieve the machine outside, went back to the house and returned to the doorway where he fired one round of buckshot from a double-barreled shotgun at Hinton, police said.

Panelists Predict Cage Broilers In Future

Panelists at the seventh annual Broiler Housing Seminar have predicted that raising broilers in cages will be common practice within the next three to ten years, reports Ray Lloyd, extension poultryman at the University of Delaware.

Before cage broilers can become a reality, a variety of problems must be conquered, says Lloyd. Among these are development of a suitable cage system; elimination of perosis and other leg and bone weaknesses; elimination of breast blisters and slab sidedness and development of a cage-bred broiler.

Researchers point out that hardware cloth cages show a high incidence of breast blisters. But commercial researchers have shown a good deal of interest in plastic cages. Jewell Graves, research specialist for the Big Dutchman Company, Zeeland, Mich., predicts that plastic cages will be used not only in growing broilers but also in transporting mature birds to the processing plant. After this, they would be cleaned, disinfected and returned to the farm for another lot of chicks. "I would estimate that four times as many broilers could be grown in a given floor space with this system," says Graves. "And that an extra lot of chicks could be grown each year on farms using these cages." This system would also eliminate catching crews.

In spite of the problems involved in raising cage broilers, panelists agree that cooperation between university and commercial researchers plus existing knowledge would result in adoption of the cage system within the foreseeable future.

Panelists included Harry C. Whelden, University of Maine; Tom Rannels, University of Delaware; Jewell Graves, Big Dutchman Company; and J. W. Claybough, De Kalb Agricultural Association. Moderator was Ray Lloyd.

The Broiler Housing Seminar was sponsored by the Cooperative Extension Services of Delaware, Maryland and Virginia, the Delaware Poultry Improvement Association, and Delmarva Poultry Industry, Inc. Nearly 200 industry representatives from 15 states attended the all-day session at the University of Delaware's Georgetown substation.

Local Man Gets Army Promotion

Army Private Jerry N. Hayman, son of Mrs. Bernice Hayman, of 12 Short St., Harrington, has achieved accelerated promotion to the rank of Private E-2 while undergoing basic combat training here recently.

He accomplished this by finishing in the top one-third of his graduating company in the overall combined scores of rifle marksmanship, physical training and end-of-training general proficiency test results.

Proper Fire Protection

Having the proper fire protection equipment readily available may mean the difference between negligible damage and total destruction, says Thomas H. Williams, extension agricultural engineer at the University of Delaware.

The first few seconds after discovering a fire are the most critical in preventing disaster, says Williams. But to plan for such emergencies, you must know the common types of fires and how to combat them.

Fires involving wood, paper, cloth and other such materials are class A fires, he explains. These are most effectively handled by the cooling-quickening effects of water.

Class B fires, those involving greases, gases, petroleum products and other flammable liquids, are best controlled by smothering. Electrical, or class C, fires must be extinguished with a non-conducting material rather than with water or foam.

Knowing what types of fire may occur in a given location will assist in selecting the best extinguisher for your premises, says Williams. For example, water is quite effective in combating class A fires, but using it on an oil fire in the basement or garage may spread the fire and make matters worse. In the case of Class A and B fires, a foam or general purpose dry chemical extinguisher may be your best choice.

In areas where gasoline, paint or oil fires may start, select a regular dry chemical, carbon dioxide or foam extinguisher. A soda-acid or water-type extinguisher is best around the fireplace and near the family barbecue.

When selecting a fire extinguisher, check for the Underwriters' Laboratory label which certifies the relative size and type of fire it may be expected to extinguish. For example, one extinguisher may carry a 2-A label and another a 4-A label. The numeral before the letter is the extinguishing unit or the relative effectiveness of the extinguisher will put out a class A fire approximately twice as large as that combated by a 2-A extinguisher.

For class A fires, all homeowners should consider extinguishers with at least a 2-A or larger rating. For Class B and C fires, Williams suggests a small dry chemical extinguisher with a four to six B:C rating. These may be particularly useful in or near cars, trucks, boats and paint storage areas. For adequate protection in or around farm shop and fuel storage areas, a 10 to 20 B:C rating should be the minimum size.

Looking at a well-equipped home and garage, you may find a five pound general purpose dry chemical extinguisher in kitchen and cellar areas and a two and three-quarter to five pound dry chemical, foam or carbon dioxide extinguisher in the garage, says Williams. And in case of an outside fire, a well-prepared garden hose is one of the least expensive and highly effective fire extinguishers available.

Drivers, Parents, Safeguard Youngsters During Halloween

Each Halloween exacts its toll of skinned knees, sprained ankles and cut hands, as before. But the mixing of very young children with darkness and street traffic, flimsy costumes and candle-light pumpkins, masks that slip over faces to block vision or suffocate, these are the things that give rise to the new hazards of Halloween.

Mrs. William N. Cann, vice-president of Home Safety of the Delaware Safety Council, says that Halloween can be made safe for young children

Mice Unwelcome Autumn Guests

Rapidly cooling fall weather may attract a number of unwelcome guests into the home, says Dr. E. Paul Catts, associate professor of entomology and applied ecology at the University of Delaware.

One of the most common fall visitors is the whitefooted mouse, a reddish brown rodent with white feet and underparts. This mouse is one of the most common mammals in Delaware and usually lives in woodland areas, says Catts. In nature, its diet consists of nuts, berries, seeds, insects and the tender bark of growing trees. These rodents in turn make up the basic diet of most woodland predators—snakes, owls, weasels, foxes and the like.

As the mouse population increases after the fall breeding season, overcrowding in the woods forces mice to seek shelter indoors. Once inside, the mice usually nest behind baseboards and walls, frequently gnawing wood and cotton for nest-building materials.

Whitefooted mice attack a variety of household foods including fruit, crackers, stored cereals and other food crumbs. In many cases, the rodents will gnaw through cardboard and other package materials to reach stored foods.

A second mouse, the house mouse, is commonly found indoors. This mouse lives and breeds within the house where its numbers increase rapidly. This overall grey rodent is an Old World cousin to the whitefooted mouse and attacks the same types of household foods. Both mice are active during the night, although the house mouse is not as shy as (Continued on Page 8)

Governor's School Lunch Week Statement

By Presidential Proclamation and Congressional Resolution, the week of October 13-19, has been designated as National School Lunch Week.

Last year, there were 9,553,772 Type A lunches served to children in 170 of Delaware's public schools. Included in this figure were 369,000 lunches served free to needy children.

For twenty-two years, the National School Lunch Program has exemplified an effective Federal - State - local partnership designed to protect the health and well-being of all of our children in order to creating a market for our food abundance.

Federal reimbursement for these lunches averages $0.39 per meal. The state and local districts share other costs with the state in paying the cost of local school lunch management.

In recognition of the nutritional and educational value of the National School Lunch program, I designate the week beginning October 13, 1968, as "Delaware School Lunch Week" and on behalf of those concerned with our school lunch program, I urge all interested parents and other citizens to see first-hand the scope and value of this program by visiting their school lunchroom during this celebration.

Smithsonian Institute Exhibits Allen Photos

The Smithsonian Institution has placed on tour an exhibition of 57 black and white and colored photographs by Margaret Allen, assistant professor of art at the University of Delaware.

The exhibit, entitled "The Carvings of Sanchi," were taken by Prof. Allen several years ago in India. The photographs, approximately 19 by 21 inches, show the architectural ornamentation on the ancient gateways and railings of the Great Stupa at Sanchi, an Indian place of worship.

Booked solid for the first year of its 3-year tour, the exhibit is now on view at the Hopkins Center at Dartmouth College. From there, the exhibit will be shown at Montana State University, Texas Technological College, The Andrew Dickinson White Museum of Art at Cornell University.

How Old Are You?

While one-third of the population of the U. S. won't admit their age, one person out of seven really doesn't know how old he is.

Most of these 30 million Americans are over 55. They rely on what their parents told them or what's written in a family Bible. That information may be fairly accurate, but it's not adequate if you're trying to get retirement benefits, according to Miss Coral K. Morris, extension home management specialist at the University of Delaware.

If you have any doubts about your exact age, or if it isn't recorded anywhere, get legal proof of your birthdate before you are old enough to retire. Many retirement benefits, including Social Security and some early life insurance policies, require such proof.

To complicate matters, a number of states didn't start registering births until 40 or 50 years ago. However, every month 40,000 people get proof of their age from the U.S. Bureau of the Census. Write to the Census Service Branch, Pittsburg, Kansas 66702, and ask for an Age Search Application. (Continued on Page 8)

Harrington Raceway Handle, Attendance Nears Record

Harrington Raceway hit the halfway mark of its 60-night meeting this week, buoyed by glowing reports of prospective new records in both handle and attendance.

The central Delaware harness track, blessed by exceptional autumn weather and the ultra-popular exacta wagering, already shows advances of 24 per cent in handle and 23.5 per cent in attendance.

Plans for the annual Appreciation Night, a bonus that offers free admittance to all patrons and a new car gift for some lucky fan, are being formulated. Tickets on the automobile are already being distributed nightly.

A torrid battle is shaping up in the Universal Driver Rating race between Milford reinsman Al Sleva and Townsend pilot Ed Alexander. Sleva currently shows the way with a 370 mark on nine wins, five seconds and three thirds in 34 starts. Alexander is hot on his heels with a 376 mark that includes seven wins and five seconds in 26 trips.

Within striking distance of the two leaders is John Childress at 369. Trailing, in order of standing, are Vernon Mitchell at 346, J. D. Dennis at 328, Dick Ring at 313, and Ellis Myer at 308.

Bridgeville driver Paul Myer is the pacesetter in dash wins with 16 and owns the only triple of the meet. He also counts six seconds and eleven thirds for a 299 percentage on 77 trips.

Clubhouse dining continues to prove one of the popular new pleasures at Harrington this season. The catered facility, glass-enclosed and heated, offers trackside dining for the first time. William Weaver of the University of Delaware will serve as chairman of the session on "Mechanical Finishing of Textiles", at the 1968 International Technical Conference of the American Association of Textile Colorists and Chemists, Oct. 16 through 18, at the Queen Elizabeth Hotel in Montreal, Canada.

A professor of textile chemistry and fiber science in the College of Home Economics at the University, Dr. Weaver also will serve as a panel member and speaker for the session on "Bonded and Laminated Apparel Fabrics." He will discuss "Fabric and Finish Properties Related to Bonding."

One of the outstanding scientists in textile chemistry and fiber science in the United States, Dr. Weaver has been a leader in the field of laminated materials and permanent press fabrics.

A recent addition to the University faculty, he served for eight years as manager of research and development for Cone Mills, Inc., in Greensboro, N. C., prior to coming to Delaware.

Store Pesticides For Winter Season

As insect, weed and disease problems drop off this fall, many farm and home owners will be left with a variety of unused pesticides, says John S. McDaniel, extension agricultural chemical specialist at the University of Delaware.

But how many pesticides did you use this year? And more important, where are they now? They may be "stored" in aerosols, bags, cans, bottles, plastic containers or drums. Some may not have been used for several years. Many may be old, unlabelled or improperly stored.

Careless pesticide storage is an invitation to disaster, reminds McDaniel. And of the hundreds of people killed by pesticides each year, over half are curious children.

To prevent pesticides accidents, burn or bury all pesticide containers. In burning take care to avoid toxic smoke; in burying containers, make sure they're 18 inches deep and away from all water sources. Many accidents result from re-using pesticide containers, so dispose of all cans or bottles as soon as they are empty.

Before storing pesticides, make sure that all labels are securely fastened with glue or tape. Store pesticides only in their original containers and check to see that all container caps are tight. Fumes can be deadly and spilled pesticides are as bad.

In storing pesticides, choose a cool, dry area. Locked cabinets, storage rooms or sheds are ideal. Keep all pesticides off the ground to prevent corrosion or deterioration of containers.

In most instances, store herbicides and growth regulators in separate areas, says McDaniel. This will help prevent contamination of other stored chemicals. Place "Pesticide Storage" signs on doors to warn others of the contents. Finally, never store pesticides near food, feed or other chemicals, he adds. And make sure that your storage area is locked and strictly off limits to children.

These suggestions are for your own good. Following them may save dollars, inconvenience and possibly a life. (Continued on Page 8) when stored for any length of time. On the other hand, overripe apples are also undesirable. When overripe, apples yield to slight pressure on the skin and have soft, mealy flesh. One more tip about apples. Warm temperatures hasten the ripening process and causes apples to very rapidly lose their flavor and crispness. If you keep reserve supplies in the refrigerator or some equally cool spot, they will be at their best for quite a long time.

Delaware Food Market Report

By Anne Holberton

When the tang of autumn fills the air, you know apple time is here. This is the time when this fruit is at its tree-fresh peak of perfection. There are many varieties which fill the different needs you have for them. Don't be one of those people who buy apples without regard to variety and consequently fail to get the best the market affords. There is no such thing as the typical apple flavor; each variety has its own distinctive taste-sweet, mellow or tart. Know what you are buying. If you are interested in filling a fruit bowl full of eating apples, then buy Delicious, Stayman, McIntosh, and Winesap. For delicious green apple pies and for apple-sauce, get a bagfull of the tart varieties-Cortland, Grimes Golden, Greening and Gravenstein. The firm fleshed varieties should be your choice for baking, so they will be sure to hold their shape well — Rome Beauty, Greening, Winesap, Northern Spy and though it's not quite as firm as those named, the Golden Delicious is very good for baking.

Since apples are so plentiful right now, buy them often, but make your selection carefully. Look for firm, crisp, well-colored apples. To have good flavor, texture and storing ability, apples must be mature when picked. If immature, they will lack color and flavor and may shrivel

Pork prices at the wholesale level continue to edge down due to the traditional fall marketing of hogs. Retail prices are beginning to reflect this and are a bit lower this week. Hindquarter cuts of beef are down slightly from their summer high levels. This is good news for steak eaters as these meat cuts are from this part of the carcass. Ground meat, such as hamburger, may increase in price during the next few weeks because the importation of beef from outside our country has been stopped due to current strikes.

Both broiler fryers and turkeys are reasonable but egg prices remain high with very little prospect for lower prices until late winter or early spring.

Let's stop kidding ourselves!

The crime rate in Delaware has grown 15% in the past year. In Wilmington alone, crimes of violence have more than doubled in the first six months of 1968. The situation is getting worse, not better. Let's not kid ourselves.

We've heard a lot of talk about law and order but what we're really getting is more crime. More delay. More handwringing. More hesitation. More reluctance to do something. More politics.

The governor's first responsibility to the people of his state is to provide protection . . . real protection, permanent protection. It's his job to try to prevent crime and disorder. It's his job to deal with it when it happens. It's his job to make sure it doesn't get worse.

Russ Peterson says we must wage all-out war on crime. He says we need action, not talk. He says we can make our streets and homes and lives safe again by refusing to tolerate present conditions.

He says what we need is more police .

More police, better trained police, better paid police, on the beat and on the spot, where we live and where we work, is the answer. We need 20 neighborhood police stations, 12 of them in Wilmington. Russ shows how they can be financed, how they will work, how the idea has been endorsed by the President's Commission on Law Enforcement and Administration of Justice, and by leading experts on crime throughout the country. He says it's time we take the job of crime prevention and control away from the professional politicians and give it back to the police.

The crime experts like it. They say it will do the job. Governor Terry doesn't like it. He calls it "ridiculous." Do you call it ridiculous? Do you like things the way they are? Are you willing to let things stay the way they are? Let's stop kidding ourselves. Russ Peterson is the only man with a plan to meet crime head on. He's going to give our state the finest police protection it has ever had. And with it understanding between people. Communication. A new climate and a new peace of mind.

Let's stop dreaming and start working for Russ.

Poems from Paradise Pastures

By W. Cliff Miller

WHAT IN EXCHANGE

Oh autumn wind with chilling rain,
 And harbingers of winter snow,
 What have you left in exchange to me
 For Daliah blooms I used to know.

What in exchange for song-bird tunes,
 And lazy droning of the bees,
 Is left to soothe my ears again
 Beneath the shade of friendly trees.

Oh autumn wind, and icy rain,
 These friends of mine I seek in vain;
 So sadness fills this heart of mine,
 'Til spring time brings them back again.

THOUGHT

Life is one darn thing after another
 And Love is two fool things after each other.

"Brats"; other peoples' children.

COLUMBUS DAY

One evening (eight years ago tomorrow) the following dialogue took place at the Century Club between an inquisitive five-year-old boy and his grandfather who happened to be a retired railroader.

"Hey! Pap. How long did you work on the railroad?"

"Fifty years, son, and I hope you get a good education in engineering so you can run an engine someday."

"Naw, I don't want to work on the railroad — I want to fly a jet plane across the ocean!"

"That's the trouble with you youngsters; you want to spend your life too fast. Them planes are not safe and always falling, killing everyone on them. People should ride on the railroad."

(Boy, scrutinizing a calendar) "Say, Pap, why is October 12th red on this calendar?"

"Because it's a holiday, son."

"What's a holiday?"

"That's a day when something real important happened."

"What happened on October 12th?"

(After reading fine print), "Why, that's Columbus Day, son."

"Tell me about it, Pap."

"Well, it was like this. Back there in Italy many years ago, there was a retired railroader by the name of Columbus who had a little boy named Chris whom he wanted to become a railroad engineer, but, like yourself, Chris didn't want to work on the railroad. He wanted to learn about astronomy and sail across the ocean. They didn't have any astronomy in Italy so he went to school in Spain and learned all about astronomy."

"What is astronomy, Pap?"

"It is the horizon."

"And what's the horizon?"

"Well, son, when you look down the railroad to where the track and sky seem to meet, that's the horizon."

"But I thought he didn't want to work on the railroad."

"Well, they had horizon on the ocean, too, and that's what he wanted to get past but he needed money to build three ships and nobody would loan it to him as they thought it was a crazy idea. But while he was going to school he met a girl named Isabella who won a beauty contest and they made her queen, so he told her what he wanted to do and she gave him the money to build the ships. And they were good ships!"

"What were the names of the ships?"

(After a moment of stammer): "Ah, the Atchison-Topeka-and Santa Fe. They landed here and discovered America on October the 12th."

"What does 'discover' mean?"

"Oh, ah, the first one to get there."

"I thought that would be 'the winner'."

"Well, back in them days they had a lot of Greek and Latin words that you'll have to wait till you get into college to understand."

"Were there Indians here then?"

"Yep, they had won the pennant in the American League and were down East playing the Dodgers at the time."

"Then what did Columbus do?"

"He took in the World Series, then got on a TV show and won a box of nylon hose and the next day went back to Spain and gave them to Isabella. That's the end of the story, son. Any other questions?"

"Yes, who was pitching for the Dodgers?"

FENCE TALK

with George K. Vapaa

Dr. Edward A. Trabant, the new president of the University of Delaware, made a windshield tour of Delaware agriculture on Monday. His guides were Dr. William McDaniel, dean and director of the College of Agricultural Sciences, Dr. Samuel M. Gwinn, director of the Cooperative Extension Service, and the county agents as the group passed through each county.

The purpose was to point up the nature and extent of farming in Delaware, and the part that it plays in the total economy of our state. Agriculture uses 60 per cent of the total land, and has sales of about $120 million each year from crops and livestock.

Although fewer than 10 per cent of our people actually farm, at least 30 per cent more depend directly on farming for related services. This is because the farmer today buys most of his inputs. He uses hybrid seed, a wide range of chemicals, artificial breeding, power equipment, to mention only a few of the new tools on the farm today.

Our tour took us by a potato harvester operating on the Francis Bergold farm east of the Air Base, a self-propelled irrigation system in use on the Alfred Bilbrough farm at Little Creek, field corn being harvested on the Charles Blendt farm at Smyrna, and soybeans being combined near Farmington.

We talked about the place of livestock as a balance with the more seasonal cropping programs. Almost half the cows in the state are in Kent County, but I wonder if horses may be a larger value animal enterprise today. It is amazing how many farms stable pleasure horses, harness horses and runners. I believe the horse population on the State Fair Grounds alone exceeds 500 during the winter months.

Our small towns in Kent County are looking better every day when you think about it. Dr. Trabant remarked on the neatness of several of them and the upkeep of the properties. He was amazed at the proliferation of mobile home housing.

The interdependence of farmers and their town neighbors today makes an impression on such a tour as this. We call attention to it with a Farm/City Week celebration about Thanksgiving time. We can, with careful planning, nurture a mode of living that is distinctive of Delaware.

How fickle is dame nature! Timely showers can make tremendous differences among crops. Your Extension Service had six corn demonstrations over the whole state. Our variety plots near the Georgetown Substation gave very poor yields for lack of rain. They may have been twice as good on the Tarburton farm east of Dover, but still terrible by any standard for the same reason. But up on a farm southwest of Summit Bridge at the Canal, we found a bumper crop because of rains at key intervals.

Some farmers are beginning to take a new look at corn. We seem to have more dry years than wet. Should we consider some of the new self-propelled irrigation systems for corn? The answer may very well determine if we are to continue with cash grain farming in Delaware.

Expand 4-H is the slogan for National 4-H Week going on right now. Those who work with 4-H can see the world of opportunity for young people of all cultural, racial and economic backgrounds.

4-Hers have varied projects in science, agriculture, home economics, community service, leadership and citizenship. About 80 volunteer local adult leaders help our Extension Service to develop these programs. We have room for more. Check with Mrs. Marion MacDonald, our Youth Agent, if you want to know more. The telephone number is 738-1448.

Discover Wonderful Del.

Sunday afternoon, Oct. 20, is the time to discover the progress made in the restoration of Old Brandywine Village in Wilmington.

At the time of the Revolution, Brandywine Village was a separate community, at least as important in its way as was the nearby seaport town of Wilmington. Because of the steep drop to Tidewater, the Brandywine River had become a river of mills, and at Brandywine Village there were at least eight within a quarter of a mile, supplied with water-power by double millraces on each side of the river.

Behind the mills on the north bank of the river, the Quaker mill-owners built their big gray stone houses above the village highway (now Market Street), overlooking their mills, and within hearing of the falls that marked the head of navigation. Gardens and woodlands stretched down to the river, and between these houses and the mills were the smaller mill workers' homes.

Today, Brandywine Village is very much a part of the city of Wilmington. Busy shops, crowded houses, heavy traffic replace the rural peace of the old Quaker village. But much of the past is being brought back to life by a group of public-spirited citizens banded together as "Old Brandywine Village, Inc."

On October 20, at 2:30 in the afternoon, they will formally open a new playground for small children, near the Brandywine at Race and Buena Vista Streets, just east of the Market Street Bridge. This charming little playground is the first step in the proposed reclamation of the wasteland river bank into a handsome and useful park.

After the formalities at the playground, the public will be invited to take a walking tour of the improvements made in the Village over the past few years, and to visit the houses that have been restored.

Here's what's to be seen:

The Lea-Derrickson house at 18th and Market, one of the old miller's houses, built in 1770 by James Marshall. Restored by Old Brandywine Village, Inc., it is now the headquarters of the Junior League of Wilmington.

The Wilmington Senior Center, at 19th and Market, now occupies another miller's house — the Thomas Lea house, built in 1800.

1905 Market Street, owned by Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Buehler, was built in 1801 by William Smith, cordwainer. It will be open, but since it is a private house, there will be a 25 cents admission charge.

The Wilmington Trust Company, at 2120 Market Street, will have on display artifacts uncovered during excavations at the Lea-Derrickson house and at Old Brandywine Academy.

Old Brandywine Academy, 5 Vandever Avenue, was built in 1798 as the village school. Land was donated by John Dickinson and John Welch, and citizens of Brandywine Village and Wilmington contributed to the building costs. Over the years the old Academy has served as a meeting-place for many an organization, as a registration and polling place, and as a branch of the Wilmington Institute Free Library. It is now restored as a museum of early school days. Besides October 20, the Old Academy is open on Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., and on every fourth Sunday from 2 to 4 p.m. Members of the Caesar Rodney Chapter, DAR, serve as guides, and the local DAR headquarters are on the second floor.

Make a note of the date: Sunday afternoon, Oct. 20, from 2 to 5 p.m., to see the good things happening in Old Brandywine Village.

THE FARM PROBLEM:

YOU CAN HELP EASE IT.

Last year the American Farmer lost almost two billion dollars. Over one hundred thousand farms closed down. How can you help stop this trend? Elect Richard Nixon President. Here are some of the things he wants to do:

1. Appoint a Secretary of Agriculture who will explain the farmers' problems to the President, instead of the Secretary explaining the President's policies to the farmer, as is now the case.
2. Increase exports of American agricultural products, which are a principal factor in our trade surplus.
3. Establish a special task force to develop and implement a program to increase dairy products.
4. Increase the research effort by the Department of Agriculture to find better and more diverse ways to utilize our enormous volume of farm produce.

123 versus 124

"The most productive General Assembly in the history of the state of Delaware," that's what the 123rd General Assembly has been called. Elected in 1964, along with Governor Charles L. Terry, the General Assembly passed such major legislation as the Justice of Peace reform, creation of Water and Air Resources Department, the merit system for all state employees, the creation of the Delaware Technical and Community Colleges, enactment of a minimum wage and the reorganization of the New Castle County government, to highlight just a few.

No such boasts can be made by the Republican leadership of the 124th General Assembly. Their control of the Assembly was spent on petty, personal attacks on the Governor instead of developing a broad legislative program as was done by the 123rd. Most legislation of any significance passed during the 124th was Democratic sponsored. Among these were the creation of Departments of Housing and Transportation, the enactment of Child Day Care Centers and school reorganization.

Delawareans want more than petty bickering for their tax dollars. They want progress for themselves and peace for their cities. On November 5th, help keep the First State first . . .

Quick Action To Remove Rug Stains

A slip of the hand — and there's a pool of coffee on the new carpeting. Or your home handyman leaves black grease tracks.

Almost every carpet or rug is the victim of spots or stains at some time, says Miss Janet Reed, extension clothing and textile specialist at the University of Delaware. But you can avoid permanent spots and stains.

Follow these rules from the American Carpet Institute, she recommends. Act quickly. When anything is dropped or spilled, get the stains out before they dry. Always have the cleaning equipment near at hand. Try to find out exactly what was spilled, and then remove the stain by following directions carefully.

Keep two types of cleaning materials on hand for quick spot-cleaning. A drycleaning fluid will remove oily materials such as butter, oil and grease, tar, hand cream and ballpoint pen ink. Use the same drycleaning fluid that removes spots from clothing.

A detergent-vinegar-water solution will take out spots from candy, soft drinks, alcoholic beverages, fruit stains, washable ink and urine. For this solution, add one teaspoonful neutral detergent—the kind you use for fine fabrics—and one teaspoonful white vinegar to one quart of warm water. The vinegar is a weak acid which will neutralize any alkaline materials, explains Miss Reed.

For stains from coffee, tea, milk, gravy, chocolate, blood, ice cream and salad dressing stains, use both types of removers. First use the detergent-vinegar water solution; dry the carpet, and then apply drycleaning solvent.

If you cannot identify a spot on the rug, Miss Reed suggests a similar general cleaning procedure. First, remove excess materials as soon as possible. Absorb liquids with a clean white cloth, tissues or a sponge. Scrape semi-solids off with a knife or spatula.

Apply the detergent-vinegar water solution with a clean cloth, wiping gently from the edge of the soiled area toward the center. Blot frequently with a dry clean cloth to absorb excess moisture. If the stain seems to be disappearing, repeat the application.

Dry the carpet. If the stain still shows, use the drycleaning fluid. Again, work gently from the edges of the spot toward the center.

Dry the carpet quickly to avoid mildew, advises Miss Reed. Raise the cleaned area off the floor, if possible, or direct the air blast from a fan or vacuum cleaner nozzle against it. Or, put towels or some other absorbent material between a weight and the rug until most of the moisture is gone.

Finally, brush the carpet pile gently to restore the original texture.

Harriers Trip Mil'd, Millsboro And Seaford

Milford and Millsboro High Schools' cross-country teams came to Killen's Pond State Park last Thursday afternoon and did not threaten Coach Harold McDonald's strong Harrington High cross-country team. Tuesday afternoon the locals journeyed to Seaford and added another victory to their growing string.

Milford bowed 19-44, Millsboro yielded 15-49 and Seaford was beaten 25-33. Millsboro nosed Milford 28-29 in another dual test.

Chris Wetherhold traversed the rugged, 2 1/2 mile endurance grind in 13 minutes and 28 seconds in the H.H.S.-Milford-Millsboro race.

Phil Harris of Milford, who has lost only to Wetherhold this season, was 61 seconds back in second place, as the flying Wetherhold missed his course mark by only 2 seconds.

Danny Hitchens, Roger Jarrell, Brad Morris, Leonard Palmer and Billy Stubbs, all of H.H.S., took the next five places. Harrington had six runners in when Millsboro's first finisher arrived.

Lions to set new personal lows were Palmer, Stubbs, Wardell Davis, Dan Bell, Johnny Jackson, Ricky Hoffman, Tony Kibler, Glenn Wilson, Donald Woods, David Cohee and Chris Adamo.

Palmer cut off 33 seconds, Davis, making his first start of 1968 lowered his best practice time by one minute and thirty-nine seconds. Bell and Jackson knocked off thirty seconds each. Kibler ran 28 seconds faster and Hoffman dropped 26.

Glenn Wilson was 28 seconds better, Donald Woods, certainly Delaware's tiniest harrier, erased his best previous effort by one minute and six seconds. Woods is around 4 feet, 4 inches tall. We want to get a picture of he and Dover's John Williams together. Williams is a little harrier who measures 6 feet, 10 inches. Adamo's improvement was a big one minute, 57 seconds.

40 Starters, 39 finishers
The Seaford win was the fifth straight of 1968 and the seventh consecutive victory overall for H.H.S. Coach McDonald's 11 year record now shows 85 victories against just 7 losses. Since many of those meets were multiple-team affairs, the number of foes vanquished is well over the century mark.

Chris Wetherhold already owns several course records and added the Seaford mark on Tuesday by covering 2 1/4 miles in 11 minutes and 41 seconds.

Danny Hitchens was fourth despite receiving a block from a Little League football player near the end of the race. Brad Morris did a beautiful job and outspurred Shaffer of Seaford to keep the Blue Jays from making the meet result 26-32, instead of 25-33.

Johnny Jackson, Jackie D. Parker and Tommy Clarke, three of the youngest locals, ran their best races of 1968 and finished much closer to the leaders, than heretofore. This trio could make any varsity in the area.

Two veteran Lions, Bob Rash and Jim Redden, are capable of making the Lion varsity. This means the first seven harriers. Neither is in top shape. Both hit the comeback trail at Seaford, ran well and finished with blazing kicks. In top form they would give H.H.S. a chance to sweep state titles in both varsity and jayvee classes. The Lions swept both races in 1963 and 1966.

David Newnom is running cross-country in order to get in shape for basketball. At Seaford his natural competitive spirit must have gotten the better of him because he was far closer to a lot of good boys, than ever before.

Joe Gray completed Harrington's top 14 runners. If he can stay there he'll get to run in the state title test for the first time.

The Lions travel to Lewes, October 10th. On the 15th the long-awaited test at Washington College, Chestertown, Md. will take place. If Harrington can beat Chestertown and North Carolina, that day, they should finish the season unbeaten for the sixth time in eleven years.

Lions Lose, 26-12 At Dover Air

Harrington High's football Lions once again failed to come up with a winning combination and lost their third game in four starts at Dover Air High on Saturday.

The Falcons' 26-12 triumph was their first of the season after three losses. They lost their opener to Felton, under Harrington High's lights, on September 14th.

Milton defeated Greenwood 37-0 on Saturday afternoon for the Warriors' first win. Milton, Harrington, Felton, Rehoboth and Dover Air have one victory each, at this writing, with Greenwood the lone, non-winning conference entry.

Harrington, which won seven of ten games in 1967, must win their final six games, if they hope to equal last autumn's mark. The Lions draw the bye next week and return to action here on October 18 against Felton's Green Devils.

Felton, which plays all its home games here is listed as the home team in this one.

At Dover Air Saturday, Falcon quarterback Gary Mahoney hit Bernie Martin with a 25 yard pass, to get the early lead.

David Hurd of the Lions is turning into a powerful runner. Hurd tied the score on a one yard plunge.

Mahoney connected with Bob Hamilton on a ten-yard scoring strike and Dover Air led 13-6 at halftime.

In the third period Moody, of Dover Air, recovered a fumble in the end zone for another Falcon tally.

The Lions' top breakthrough threat, all-Heaven back Jerry Cagle, raced 90 yards in the fourth period to put H.H.S. back in contention at 19-12.

Mahoney ended the Lions' hopes with a one-yard run, followed by a successful extra point dash.

Harrington has two weeks to get ready for the Felton encounter. The Lions seem to be vulnerable to the pass. The Green Devils have a pretty good passing attack so look for anything to happen.

Harrington Bowling League

Peoples Restaurant finds themselves out in front by a game as teams were shuffled around in two weeks of bowling, with some of the usual top teams winding up far below their usual standings.

Taylor & Messick dropped three games to Peoples, though neither team bowled high games. Peoples' attack was more balanced, and as a result, sent Taylor & Messick into the sixth place position.

Gerardi Bros. sent Wally's Garage into fourth place, getting a very fine assist from K. Layton, who rolled a fine 543 series. Wally's Garage was set back a couple notches by dropping three games in Tuesday night's fray.

Quillen's Market again made a clean sweep of its games, with Penn Central as their victim this week. Their fine effort put them up with the leaders and they pose a threat to knock Peoples from its top berth.

J. Cahill aided Robbins' Hardware in taking three games from Butler's Fuel, by rolling a nice 528 series. Robbins' moved into fifth place, coming up a notch or two in the standings. Butler's Fuel remains in the cellar position.

The Spoilers pulled another upset by winning all their games from McKnatt's Funeral Home Tuesday night. McKnatt's has had a rough time getting into shape in this first third, but we expect to see them hit their winning style before too long. Then, look out! The Spoilers are really making teams sit up and take notice as they continue to swamp the stronger teams.

On the heels of a high series for D. Hayman, Jarrell's Fuel won three games from Hamilton Fund. Jarrell's Fuel still remains low in the standings but a few good efforts like Tuesday night, will put them back into the thick of things.

Hayman's 577 series, including superb 234 and 216 games, gave Jarrell's the boost they needed. Hamilton Fund must be content with eighth place.

Delmar Downs Felton, 32-6

Felton's first-year football team has a 1-2 record after losing 32-6 at Delmar on Friday night.

The Green Devils will be at Millsboro on Friday night. For the third straight week the Devils will be facing one of the Henlopen Conference's top teams.

Easier sledding should follow after the Green Devils-Blue Devils fracas. The next three Felton opponents are Harrington, Milton and Rehoboth. These schools, like Felton, have each won once, to date. Delmar ran up a 32-0 halftime lead, then were blanked thereafter, with Felton getting on the scoreboard by way of Chris Moore's 10-yard run.

The Felton-Harrington tussle, at Harrington on October 18th, would normally be blanked thereafter, with Felton should win because of their big edge in experience.

But the Lions haven't jelled as a football team, as yet. The Lions looked better against both Bridgeville and Delmar, than did Felton. But the Devils trounced a Dover Air club that defeated H.H.S.

The football takes crazy bounces. Either club could win.

Junior High Gridders Win Twice

Harrington Junior High's football team edged Bridgeville 7-6 last week and defeated Riverside Junior High of Denton, Md. on Wednesday of this week.

At Bridgeville, Harrington trailed 6-0 but came out on top as Rick Porter tallied on a thirty yard run and Richard Deputy added the extra point.

In the encounter at Denton, Neal Travis and Darius Burton scored in the first half to enable the Lions to lead 14-0 at halftime.

Bob Smith scooped up a Riverside fumble and outdistanced all pursuit to record Harrington's final touchdown.

The Marylanders converted an intercepted pass into their lone score.

The winners are coached by Jim Hawpe and Charley Miller.

State who you were living with and where when one of the censuses was taken in your childhood—census is taken every ten years. You name and age at the time of the census should be listed in the records under the name of your parents or whoever was head of your household then.

There is a small fee for this service, according to Miss Morris. The charge for a regular search is $4, with $1 for each extra copy of your record. For $5 you can have extra fast service.

However, you won't get a birth certificate. The report will merely tell you how old you were when that census was taken, but this is acceptable proof of age for retirement purposes.

You will also need proof of your marriage for Social Security and life insurance benefits. If you don't have a copy of your marriage certificate, you can get proof from the county court house in the county in which you were wed.

Start getting these various papers in order well in advance, suggests Miss Morris. It will make qualifying for retirement benefits much easier.

MICE UNWELCOME

its woodland cousin.

One of the most effective ways to deal with the mouse problem is to "mouseproof" the home, says Catts. If the garage is attached to the house, make sure that all doors are in good repair and tightly closed. A shelter-seeking mouse can enter through a hole the size of a nickel. Replace any broken windows or torn screens at ground level and make sure that cellar windows and doors are shut. In most instances, mice will not gnaw their way into the home—they enter through existing openings. And mice usually come in at ground level rather than by climbing in search of an opening.

The best control for unwelcome rodents is still the trap, says Catts. And peanut butter or bits of bacon are a most effective bait. Commercially prepared poison baits are also effective in controlling rodents, but don't use baits around the kitchen or in areas where youngsters or pets may be tempted. Remove any dead mice immediately.

As an added precaution, place traps or bait near strategic areas where mice are most likely to enter the home. In cases of heavy mouse infestations, Catts recommends contacting a reputable pest control operator, preferably a member of a state or national pest control association.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS
Q—Last year I attended college under the G.I. Bill. I plan to return to school this fall, but desire to enter a different college. Must I notify VA in advance?

A—Yes. This will allow VA to process your payments much quicker and will permit them to issue you a new Certificate of Eligibility for the school of your choice.

Q—I understand that the guaranteed portion of G.I. home loans has been raised. Is this true?

A—Yes. It has been increased to $12,500.

Q—When does the time expire for seriously disabled veterans to apply for an allowance for an automobile?

A—There is no longer any time limit, the previous limitation has been removed. But, one word of caution: Do not agree to the purchase of any automobile before you have received VA's written approval.
