Kent Votes To Purchase Landfill Site

Kent County Levy Court voted Monday to exercise its option on the Sills property before Jan. 15.

The move binds the incoming Levy Court to take action in the $300 option before it expires. The $30,000 Sills tract of land, near Houston, has been considered an ideal location for a county incinerator.

Disregarding that, the 147-acre plot could be used for county landfill operations, Walter L. Fritz, Jr., county engineer said.

He added the property could be operated on a "break even basis at worst."

The property is considered ideal for an incinerator operation because it is surrounded by woods. The state owns some 13 acres in the center, but reportedly would give the county that ground.

The Sills property is located near Houston where the county already has a landfill open. It is expected that Milford, Harrington and Farmington would take advantage of the planned dump.

In other action, the county authorized the payment of $58,500 to the Farmers Bank of the State of Delaware for the purchase of the Allee Building at the Green.

Levy Court will use the building to house the county engineer's office, the county planning office and other offices. The county engineer will move there sometime today.

Fritz said he had satisfactorily completed negotiations with the St. Jones River Gravel Co. for a substitute location on a piece of ground the county presently uses and is wanted by Dover Air Force Base.

The ground, about six acres, is being used for a landfill. The base wants it to complete an 18-hole golf course.

Fritz said the gravel company has offered nearly 12 acres in exchange for the present parcel. He recommended the court relinquish lease rights to the other acreage.

Commissioners accepted his recommendation.

Retirement Plans A Tax Advantage

Retirement planning is good tax management, reports W. T. McAllister, extension farm management specialist at the University of Delaware. So if you're self employed, look into this year's changes in the Tax Retirement Act of 1962.

Beginning in 1968, the full contribution to the retirement fund is deductible instead of only 50 per cent. Another change allows an individual to contribute a full 10 per cent of earned income each year—up to an annual maximum of $2,500.

These modifications of the original law allow greater contributions to the retirement fund, says McAllister. And the full amount is tax deductible in the year the contributions are made. So if you wish to take advantage of a retirement program this year, begin the plan before the end of 1968.

Most farmers setting up retirement plans will be owner-employees who operate their businesses as sole proprietorships or partnerships.

Generally, farmers establishing a plan which includes himself as a participant must include any full-time employees at the same percentage of contribution of earned income as he is using in his own case. Full-time employees with less than three years service may be excluded from the plan; seasonal or part-time employees may be excluded without regard to length of service.

Retirement funds may be invested in several ways, explains McAllister. In a self-developed plan, you may invest in government bonds that are non-transferable before you're 59 1/2 years old, except in the event of death or disability.

If someone else develops the plan, funds may be invested in life insurance annuity or endowment contracts with or without a trustee. Funds may also be used to buy face amount investment certificates either non-transferable or held in trust.

Retirement funds may also be invested in stock bought from a registered investment

First Class 90 Proof

Gum Arabic, the traditional adhesive for postage stamps, is growing more expensive and difficult to supply. So in Great Britain, authorities are replacing it with an adhesive that contains small quantities of gold. There is speculation that heavy users of stamps might be able to get a little buzz from their licking chores.

Manufacturers of stamp-wetting devices in America doubtless would oppose such a change in formula here. But it might make the recent increases in the price of postage more palatable. And it certainly would boost the sales of one-cent stamps. — The Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution

Sixth Ward Post Will Be Contested

The election for councilman from the Sixth Ward will have a contest for the three-year post.

A petition was picked up at City Hall Tuesday for Wilbert Porter, Harrington native and package-store employee.

He will be opposed by the incumbent, Raymond G. Dale.

Yule Decorating Contest Winners

Best-decorated house — 1. Richard Pitlick, Harrington Avenue; 2. James Macklin, Fairground Road near Killen's Grain; 3. Leonard Outten, Harrington Manor.

Best window — Mrs. Ethel Statum; best door — Earl McColee, Reese Avenue, and best commercial window — Gerardi Brothers, Commerce Street.

Water Pumps May Cause Rural Fires

Firemen have recently reported a number of rural fires caused by water pumps and heat lamps used to prevent pump freezing, according to Thomas H. Williams, extension agricultural engineer at the University of Delaware.

Many rural fires are caused by dirt, grease, dust and lint collecting in electric motors used to operate the water supply, he explains. These may overheat the motor causing overheating or, in some cases, they may be ignited by sparks from the motor.

To prevent accumulation of hazardous materials, inspect and clean electric motors regularly, suggests Williams. Motors used in extremely dusty areas, such as chicken houses, should be protected with dust-proof enclosures.

A second source of water pump fires is inadequate overload protection. Water pump motors are usually protected by starting switches with overload circuit breakers, fusestats or built-in thermal breakers. Fusestats and circuit breakers located in the home fuse panel protect only against overloads on home wiring—not against motor overloads. The National Electrical Code specifies that the motor overload protection devices rating not be greater than 1.25

Dual U.S. 113 Job Completed

The State Highway Department last week opened all four lanes of the recently dualized U.S. 113 from Stockley to just south of State Police Troop 4 at Georgetown.

The opening of the stretch of four-lane highway completes the dualization of U.S. 113 from Georgetown to Selbyville — a distance of about 19 miles.

State police said the speed limit on the dual highway is 60 miles per hour during the day and 55 mph at night except where otherwise posted.

State to Improve Nearby Roads

The State Highway Department plans to improve three roads in this area.

It advertised this week for bids to construct roadways of bituminous (blacktop) surface treatment on soil cement stabilized base course. Nearby roads to be treated are as follows: A road from Vernon to the Harrington-Whitelysburg road by way of Anthony's Crossroads. Two roads southeast of Farmington and running to the Sussex County line. The two roads were identified as county roads No. 118 and 440, with the Vernon project listed as dirt road No. 455.

L. A. Matthews Presented Family Heirloom

Mrs. Samuel Matthews was given a handmade quilt in October of this year by her great uncle, Charles B. Sullivan. It has been in the family for 119 years, belonging originally to her great-great-grandmother, Sara Ann Perdue Hearn, and handed down to her great-grandmother, Julia Emma Hearn Sullivan, and then to Charles B. Sullivan.

Save on Taxes Farmers Told

Many Delaware farmers can save money on their 1968 taxes if they remember to take advantage of several suggestions in preparing their tax report, says W. T. McAllister, extension farm management specialist at the University of Delaware.

Don't neglect claiming investment credit, he advises. This is not an option; it should be claimed. However, investment credit must be taken the year in which the investment was made. "This is a real bonanza because it is subtracted from the tax due," says McAllister. If the credit is greater than the tax, apply it against taxes paid in prior years or carry it ahead.

2 Youths Held In 'Pot Sale'

Dover police said Monday morning they have charged two Harrington youths with selling marijuana in Dover.

The youths, aged 16 and 17, were arrested last Friday morning, received a hearing in Family Court and committed to Kent Correctional Institution in default of $5,000 bond each.

They are scheduled for a Family Court hearing next month. The two were charged with selling marijuana to a Dover youth.

"All who were associated with the House over the past two years appreciate the first-rate job Mrs. Smith has done," Hering said. "We are therefore delighted that she has agreed to stay on for this next session."

Mrs. Smith is a resident of Wilmington. The Chief Clerk is the key staff member of the House and maintains the official records of legislation and its status.

Houston Church Presents Candle Lighting Service

The Houston Methodist Church presented their second annual Christmas Eve Candle Lighting Service on Dec. 24th, from 11-12 p.m. The Senior Choir was directed by the Rev. Harry A. Marine Aviation Offers Many Activities

Marine aviation offers a wide assortment of activities for today's air-minded young men.

According to Marine recruiter S. Sgt. Peak, the Marine Corps now offers a guaranteed assignment to technical training for those that qualify. A few aviation courses offered Marines includes: helicopter mechanics, jet engine mechanics, ground control approach and aviation photography.

You prepare for aviation duty in the Marine Corps by first undergoing "boot camp" training, says Sgt. Peak. Later as a Marine aviation duty volunteer you are guaranteed assignment to technical training schools for from 5 to 34 weeks. Schools are located at Memphis, Tenn.; Cherry Point, N. C.; Pensacola and Jacksonville, Fla.

After school training, you become a full-fledged member of the Marine aviation team. You may serve with Marine units located throughout the world, or afloat with the U.S. Fleet.

Persons interested in aviation duty with the Marines may contact Sgt. Peak at 237 W. Lockerman Street, Dover, for all the details on guaranteed assignment to aviation technical training schools.

Council Against Flouridation Law In Its Present Form

The City Council opposes a law, in its present form, on compulsory flouridation of public water supplies.

The legislation, House Bill 166, gives the State Board of Health the power to compel flouridation of all public water supplies.

In a resolution presented to the Council by its attorney, Grover C. Brown, it declared it believed the bill unconstitutional and it is prepared to join other Delaware municipalities in opposing it. The resolution added the city would not oppose the law if it gave it the right to have flouridation by a referendum or a resolution by Council. In other business the Council acted as follows: Accepted the results of a referendum of Nov. 30 in which a vote of 1507 to 176 was cast on annexation of land on the east side of U.S. 13. After the plat is recorded with the Kent County Recorder of Deeds, the City will annex, by resolution, adjoining land, some 80 acres.

Authorized Mrs. Kathryn Derrickson, Council secretary and city manager, to proceed with procedure of annual citizens' meeting and municipal election. The meeting will be held Friday night, Jan. 10, in the Fire House. The election will be held the following Tuesday when a mayor and two councilmen will be elected. Mayor Fulton J. Downing appointed Councilmen Benjamin Hughes and Burton Satterfield election judges. Alderman F. Lawrence Price, by virtue of his office, is also a judge. Grace Wanda Quillen, who holds the councilmanic post from the Fourth Ward, was appointed alternate.

Moved that all public parking lots should have an entrance and an exit and the sidewalk should not become a part of the parking lot.

Accepted the annual report of William A. Howe & Company, of Philadelphia, the auditors.

Agreed to have its next meeting Monday night, Jan. 6. Normally, it would meet Jan. 13, the night before the municipal election.

Check Decoration For Wear And Tear

With each passing day of the holiday season, decorations become older and drier, tree lights and extension cords sag on weakening branches, candles become shorter and the danger to home and family increases.

To keep this holiday safe and happy, check your home for safety hazards and correct them before it's too late, advises Miss Coral Morris, extension home management specialist at the University of Delaware.

Inspect your tree daily, she suggests. Does the stand hold it firmly? Are metallic tinsel strips safely away from wiring and sockets? Is there water in the tree stand? Several ounces should be added each day, even for a small tree.

Check extension cords to be sure they are out of the way, adds Miss Morris. And make sure extensions are not twisted, cracked or kinked. Remove paper or cardboard that has accumulated under the tree. Remember, a dry eight foot pine can burn completely in only 27 seconds.

Examine holly, evergreen, ribbon, paper, plastic and other synthetic decorations. Are they dangling from the mantel where heat or fire-place sparks may touch off a holocaust? If so, rearrange them, replace them or remove them.

Most families like to keep their tree and room decorations up for about a week—until after the New Year's holiday. "That should be the maximum," says Miss Morris.

When taking the tree down, use a sturdy step ladder to reach the top; if the children want to help, keep them working on the lower branches. Don't be tempted to burn parts of the tree or other decoration in the fireplace. Many serious fires have been started this way.

Before storing lights, throw out any frayed or broken sets—you may be able to replace them now at post-holiday bargain prices.

Common sense and a few simple safety precautions this year will add to your safe enjoyment of the holiday season.

Keep Christmas Poinsettias Fresh

To enjoy Christmas poinsettias throughout the holiday season, keep them warm, watered, and near a sunny window, advises R. F. Stevens, extension horticulturist at the University of Delaware.

Stevens says that poinsettias are very sensitive to drying which often results in loss of leaves. He recommends keeping the soil moist by watering enough to soak the soil to the bottom of the pot. However, excess water standing in the bottom of the pot should be poured out. Never let the poinsettia stand in water; the roots will be damaged and the plant will wilt.

Keep the plant warm, between 65 and 75 degrees, with humidity as high as possible. Put the plant close to the window, but not in direct sunlight.

Poinsettias should not be exposed to drafts; keep them away from radiators, registers, fireplaces, outside doorways and windowsills.

The true flowers of the poinsettia are small and inconspicuous but are surrounded by modified leaves, called bracts, which form the colored part of the bloom. The bracts may be red, white or pink, depending on the plant.

When selecting a poinsettia, look for a good bract size and color, advises Stevens. Bracts expand and color fully before the flowers open.

Buy a plant that is just beginning to flower; it will last throughout the holiday season, concludes Stevens.

DOWNINGS RETURN AFTER HAWAIIAN JAUNT

Mayor and Mrs. Fulton J. Downing have returned after a visit to Hawaii. The mayor wrote an interesting letter to The Journal which proceeds as follows:

"Hawaii is a beautiful place to visit at this time of the year. Our first stop from the mainland was Hilo on the big island of Hawaii. From Hilo we took a bus trip around the island to Kailua-Kona. En route we drove into the Crater of Kilauea. This volcano was active at this time last year. We saw steam escaping from the cracks in the lava.

"At Kailua our hotel overlooked the Pacific and the fishing wharf. This is where they have the World Fishing Tournament. In the lobby of our hotel 'King Kamchameha' they have mounted a 'Pacific Marlin' caught last year, weight 1140 lbs.

"On Tuesday, Dec. 3rd, we departed from Kona Airport for the Island of Maui. From the airport we went by bus across the Island to Lahaina. Lahaina was the center for the whaling ships which were very active in the middle 1800's.

"From Lahaina we flew to Lihue on the Island of Kauai.

"The weather has been very clear or rainy, but always warm and not hot. When we arrived at our hotel 'Cocoa Palms', on Kauai we were told they had a flood 4 days before. The rain fell was 21 inches in 2 hours, almost unbelievable. In the mountain of Kauai they have the most rain fall of any place on earth, 300 to 500 inches a year. They collect and store some of this water to irrigate the sugar cane.

"From our room in the 'Cocoa Palms' we had an excellent view of the mountain called 'The Sleeping Giant'. This formed the outline of a huge man, lying face up, showing the forehead, bushes formed the eyebrows, nose, mouth and chin. The rest of the mountain forming the chest and body in perfect proportions.

"Leaving Kauai, on our way to the airport our bus took us up Waimea Canyon, 4000 ft. up to view the Grand Canyon of Hawaii.

"The mountains of Hawaii are different in that, although steep and rugged, they are mostly covered with vegetation.

Saturday afternoon we flew to Honolulu, on the Island of Oahu, where we are staying at the 'Holiday Isle' Hotel in the heart of Waikiki.

"Sunday evening Kathryn Derrickson's daughter, Shirley and her husband, Karl Peterson, came over and had dinner with us at the 'Reef Hotel.' We surely enjoyed seeing Shirley and meeting Karl. Shirley wants to be remembered to all back home.

"Today, we have just finished a boat cruise from Honolulu to and around Pearl Harbor. It has been a perfect day, very pleasant. The temperature in Honolulu is a little warmer than the other islands.

"Saturday, we fly to Los Angeles, where our daughter, Joyce, will meet us. She has made arrangements and has tickets for us to see the taping of the Lawrence Welk Show."

Constructive Purposes Need Youthful Energies

If knowledgeable forecasters prove correct, campus uprisings of one sort or another, and in varying degrees of violence, will continue to disrupt the pursuit of learning, the art of teaching and the business administration at colleges and universities across the country.

Who are the student protestors, and what do they want? To oversimplify the situation, there are really two general types. The most vocal and militant groups, such as the Students for a Democratic Society, simply want to destroy the present system by violence so they can set about building a new one. Some who follow this line simply want power, and others believe that destructive activism or anarchy is the best way to a better world. This is a very old-fashioned type of student thinking. It is hopelessly out of date considering the state of government and society in the United States today, where there are manifold protections for human rights and broad avenues of approach for orderly constructive political, social and economic progress.

The second group of protestors includes the vast majority of students who are concerned about the world around them and want to actively take part in helping right the wrongs and injustices that exist in it. They are worked up about the rightness or wrongness of making war, in general, and in Viet Nam in particular, about cafeteria food, about having a large voice in college administration and choice of courses, college management, about civil rights, about government becoming more responsive to the popular will and about all the things that they think need righting in the world. These protestors come from every type of background, including "the best families."

An article in The National Observer points out that one reason that student values today are different than they used to be is that "... the parents, having struggled through the Great Depression to create an affluent society for their children, have not only made it possible for them to think about other things, but have made it almost impossible for them to even understand what poverty, or the fear of it is..."

In a U.S. News and World Report interview, Dr. Glenn S. Dumke, chancellor of California's state college system, speaks of the future of student violence. He expresses the view that the time is very near when an "outraged citizenry" will demand that campus violence be ended. Both students and faculty may find sharp changes being imposed from outside the academic community — changes involving such things as elimination of courses that cause controversy or problems, summary expulsion of students causing trouble and loss of tenure for professors encouraging dissent.

As Dr. Dumke puts it, the academic community faculty and administrators have to face up to the question of whether the campus should be used "... as a staging area for violent social change or revolution..." And if it is not, how is academic freedom to be preserved? Few in the academic community have been willing to confront this question... We're going to lose academic freedom unless we are willing to think through the colleges' proper role in relation to society."

It is unquestionably true that the vast majority of people connected with the nation's colleges and universities — students, faculty and administrators alike — want to preserve and strengthen our institutions of higher learning, in an atmosphere of academic freedom and with dedication to the mission of raising man's understanding, accomplishment and aspirations. If the majority is to achieve this purpose, there is much to support the view that this same majority must soon come up with some answers and some action of its own to control campus violence and take the appeal out of it by ousting hard-core anarchists and revolutionaries, meeting legitimate needs or students and channeling the idealism, activism and energies of inquiring minds toward constructive purposes.—The Morris (Minn.) Tribune

High Cost of Lip

If talk is cheap, they haven't heard about it in Washington.

From Jan. 15 through July 31 of the last session of Congress, a total of 25,098 pages of proceedings and "extensions of remarks" were printed in the Congressional Record.

At $113 a page, this mountain of political bafflebait cost the taxpayers about $2.84 million. A lot of it was devoted to speeches lamenting excessive government spending.

It Seems To Me

By Janet C. Reed

Many home-sewers are occasionally frustrated by a complicated pattern that just won't turn out right. Before you pick a pattern, compare your sewing skill with the difficulties you'll face. It depends on your knowledge of your own limits, your ability to interpret directions, the time you are willing to give to your sewing, how much you enjoy figuring out complicated or unusual details and how clearly the pattern company has interpreted the design.

High fashion designers are apt to use rather unorthodox construction methods by the standards of most home dress-makers. They may even invent some ingenious ways to accomplish the result they want. If you're using a pattern which carries the designer's name, you can expect to run into this situation.

Some seamstresses welcome it — some give up in disgust. You need to be flexible and realize there are many ways to get results. You may need to forget some of what you've been taught and use plain common sense on that particular problem. Focus on the effect the designer was trying to achieve; then it's easier to figure out instructions.

If a pattern is labeled "designer fashion" without the name of the designer, it usually means the pattern company has partly simplified the construction process. An experienced seamstress will have no problems. Of course, this will vary with the complexity of the design.

If you are not very confident of your sewing skill, look for patterns marked "easy to make", or "simple to sew." If you have trouble even with these, you might want to enroll for a refresher course in new sewing techniques.

Before you buy a pattern, ask to look at the envelope. There are usually line drawings which show up construction lines better than a photograph. Study these lines, and read all the descriptive information. Some patterns also show the outline of all pieces of the pattern. These, too, will give a clue to some of the problems facing you. The fewer pattern pieces, the fewer problems you are likely to have.

Most patterns give directions for underlining or lining when it is suitable. For some high fashion designs this can be rather tricky. It's difficult to get enough experience for all sewing problems you meet, but if you are not accustomed to using underlining or linings, look for patterns with few pieces. Sometimes you can make your own simplification if you keep in mind the effect you want.

The fabric selected for the style can be a major factor in success. The pattern envelope suggests suitable fabrics and if the design is photographed you can get an idea of the effectiveness of certain fabrics.

Discover Wonderful Del.

Thousands of people pass by two small wonders of Wonderful Delaware in Wilmington without realizing what they are seeing. Both are buildings of great historical interest.

One is the headquarters of the Colonial Dames, down by the Brandywine on Park Drive just below West Street. For 176 years this little red brick gambrel-roofed building stood on Market Street near 10th. It came into being in 1740 as the First Presbyterian Church of Wilmington. In 1737 the Presbyterians of Wilmington, most of them recent immigrants from Scotland and Ireland, decided they needed a place to worship, and acquired land. The new church was completed in 1740, but not until 1759 was the congregation large enough to have their own pastor. Gradually, through many vicissitudes, the little congregation grew, and after 100 years, in 1840, a larger church was built next door, (where the Delaware Trust building now stands) and the little old church became the Sunday School.

In 1877, an addition to the larger church accommodated the Sunday School, and the little building was sold to the Historical Society of Delaware. The Historical Society had been organized in 1864, and by 1877 had a growing collection and quite a library, and was delighted to acquire a permanent home.

But in 1919 the site was needed for the Wilmington Public Library, and the little building was removed, brick by brick to its present shady nook along the Brandywine.

The second small wonder is the handsome home of the Delaware Academy of Medicine, on Lovering Avenue at Union Street. This building, while not so old as the Colonial Dames' home, is more impressive architecturally. For 116 years it stood at the corner of Market and 6th Street, the home of the Bank of Delaware.

The Bank of Delaware was founded in 1795, with a capitalization of $100,000 in 500 shares. Joseph Tatnall was its first president, and for its first twenty years the bank occupied a small frame building. Then, in 1815, an impressive new bank was built at 6th and Market. In 1931 the Academy of Medicine acquired the building and moved it to its present site. The work of carefully taking down the building and rebuilding it, including its original hand-hewn rafters joined by wooden pegs, the original staircase, floors, and woodwork, was supervised by Charles C. Cornelius, then curator of the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

Wilmington is full of small historic wonders — and among them these two buildings are fine examples of historic structures that have been saved from destruction and made useful in today's life. They're worth more than a passing glance.

Senior Center News

A Christmas party was held last Thursday at the Senior Center with about 30 members present. Illness prevented many others from attending. The invited guests were the members of the Board of Directors. A delicious covered dish luncheon was served. Each of the seven directors and each of the three volunteer aides present was given a gift. Santa, George Tatman, then distributed the gifts which the members had brought to exchange with each other. Mrs. Angela Johnston, the executive director, thanked everyone for the splendid cooperation she had received from the members, directors, and aides, during her five months here.

The group was led in the singing of Christmas carols by Mrs. Ruth Vincent and Mrs. Betty Lyons. The Center will be closed during the holidays on Dec. 26 and 27, opening again on Mon., Dec. 30. It is hoped that the members who have been ill will be able to attend again in the new year.

Best wishes for a speedy recovery is extended by the members to their director, Mrs. Angela Johnston, who is ill with the flu, and to Herman Minner, who is in the Milford Hospital. Mr. Minner is the husband of our former executive director, Mildred Minner.

FENCE TALK
 with George K. Vapaa

Your county agent invites you to visit our festive office during the holiday season. Mrs. Marion MacDonald and our secretaries have created many ideas you may wish to try yourself.

Take the table placemats which are made from old Christmas cards. Or the circular card holder made from a piece of cardboard tubing and heavy colored twine.

Our bulletin board is decked out with a large "Merry Christmas" in tinsel twine. The current greeting cards for the office are added as they are received. And who can do without a yule tree!

Yes this is a happy season. May it herald the new year, and our earnest prayers for peace in the world.

Man and ecosystems. All living things - from bacteria to man - fit into a web of life. They depend upon one another and their environment. The threads of this web are incredibly interwoven. It is often difficult to determine what is cause and what is effect.

It becomes clear that the environment is both limited and subject to change through technology. Indeed, some man-made changes may be irreversible. We must learn how to cope with this tangled web as we extract resources for our welfare - without damage to the system that sustains us.

A major step will be the International Biological Program, a worldwide research effort. Studies should tell how plants and animals live and interact with the nonliving part of their environment. These living systems, called ecosystems, are units in the landscape of immediate value to man.

One research project in Colorado involves four components: abiotic factors such as soil, climate, and water; "producers," plants which manufacture food; "consumers," animals which eat plants or other animals; and "decomposers," bacteria and fungi which break down waste products and tissues and regenerate the soil.

In time, these studies will add to a sensitive and scientific knowledge of man and his environment. For it is the highest purpose of science to help explain manmade changes and their effects.

The Delaware dairy princess will be selected from 16 contestants on January 3 at Dover. Those who will take part from Kent County are Karen Ann Brown, of Harrington, Joy Gooden of Wyoming, Barbara Hartnett of Hartly, Suzannah Lambert of Farmington, Beverly Lucks of Wyoming, and Hope Torbert of Harrington.

The judges will be former Governor Elbert N. Carvel of Laurel, Mrs. Anne Nesbitt, of Seaford, Mayor Crawford Carroll, of Dover, Miss Betty McNear of the News-Journal papers, and Richard Graham of radio station WDEL.

The winning princess will receive $300 in cash and an all-expense trip to Chicago with her chaperone in June.

There she will compete for the American Dairy Princess title. Each Delaware contestant will receive a fine piece of luggage as a consolation award.

This program is an effort by the dairy interest to promote dairy products and to publicize our dairy industry.

CORRECTION: Last week I should have identified our new marine biologist on the University of Delaware staff as Ted Ritchie, aquaculture agent, rather than agriculture. My secretary couldn't find aquaculture (water farming) in the dictionary. She assumed it was just more of my poor penmanship and used her best judgment. I failed to catch the error while proofreading the copy.

You may remember we talked about oyster farming and catfish farming.

Spice Up to Cut Calories

Are you counting calories after a holiday food binge? Often it's the sauce, dressing or butter which add unnecessary calories particularly to vegetables.

You can add flavor excitement and cut calories by substituting spices and herbs for rich sauces on vegetables. Lemon juice and vinegar will also add variety to vegetables in your meals, according to Miss Marguerite Krackhardt, extension nutrition and foods specialist at the University of Delaware.

Why not try adding oregano, pimento or lemon juice to broccoli? Or give zip to green beans with mace, majoram, sage or dill seeds; for a new taste treat, cook diagonally-sliced celery with the beans.

A dash of nutmeg or cinnamon will compliment mashed sweet potatoes, and so will ground cardomom seed. They are flavorful without the calories of the usual sugar glaze or marshmallows.

Onions go well with caraway or thyme for seasoning. And use a bit of rosemary for boiled potatoes, turnips or cauliflower.

Marinate cold cooked vegetables used for relish trays or for salads in herbed or regular vinegar. Season hot spinach or cooked red cabbage with lemon juice or vinegar, too.

Miss Krackhardt says don't overlook such things as water chestnuts for texture; a few—thinly sliced—add an exotic dash to peas or green beans. Fresh or canned mushrooms also combine well with many other vegetables to add variety in texture and flavor. Both water chestnuts and mushrooms are relatively low in calories.

Also, rich desserts may be a tradition in your household, but why not make this a year for change? You can cut calories and still come up with an appealing dessert.

For instance, create a fresh fruit centerpiece that can be eaten at the close of the meal. Any number of colorful fruits are attractive and delicious.

Start with crispy red and yellow apples, oranges, tangerines or tangelos, bananas, pears and grapes. Even the more exotic pomegranate, persimmon and choyote are available in many stores. A wedge of cheese will bring out the fruit flavors and add a continental touch.

Supply your family and guests with fruit knives and let them select the fruit they like. Everyone will leave the table with a comfortable, unstuffed feeling, Miss Krackhardt concludes.

Fifth Grade S. S. Class Discusses Yule

The fifth grade Sunday School class at Asbury United Methodist Church in Harrington discussed Sunday two very important questions. They were: If I could have anything in the world that I wanted for Christmas, what would it be; and if I could have anything in the world that I wanted for the whole world what would that be?

Some very interesting answers were received. In answer to the first question, the children expressed a desire for many things, such as a horse, some bikes, a trip around the world, a racing car, a race track, a jet plane, an appaloosa horse, love, peace on earth and a merry Christmas.

In answer to what they would want for the whole world, more than half of the children said that they would have peace for all the world and for all people; also freedom for everyone, Bibles for all, for everyone to read their Bible and to pray to God, churches for everyone to attend, for all people to love each other, and for people who don't have any parents or homes to have a happy Christmas.

Isn't it wonderful to realize that even children of ten years of age are concerned for their fellowman and show a desire for the real message of Christmas, Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men?

Agricultural Science Enrollments Increase

Fall term undergraduate enrollment in the University of Delaware's College of Agricultural Sciences has risen to 460 students—an increase of 6.9 per cent over 1967 enrollment, according to Dr. Ralph P. Barwick, associate professor of agricultural education at the University of Delaware. Of the total enrollment, 116 students are working toward associate degrees in the S. Hallock DuPont School of Applied Agricultural Sciences; the remainder are enrolled in programs leading to a Bachelor's degree. Thirty women are also enrolled in the College.

Nationally, the 68 members of the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges report agricultural enrollments of 50,717—a 6.3 per cent increase over the 47,704 undergraduates enrolled in the fall of 1967. Undergraduate enrollments in these institutions have increased 46 per cent since 1963; Delaware enrollment has increased 74 per cent in the same period.

"Many young people are recognizing the many career industries available in agricultural industries," says Barwick. "Unfortunately, the demand for graduates still exceeds the supply."

Barwick estimates that 20,000 jobs are available for agricultural college graduates each year. Yet these institutions graduate only 7,000 students annually.

"Most of the available jobs are in the industries and businesses supporting the farmer," says Barwick. "Traditionally, only about five per cent of our agricultural college graduates enter farming or production agriculture."

Language Specialist To Teach at Univ.

A pilot graduate seminar on inter-cultural communication will be offered at the University of Delaware this spring under the instruction of a State Department language specialist.

Edmund S. Glenn, who served as chief of the State Department's interpreting branch from 1950 to 1964, will conduct the new seminar concerned with communication between peoples of different cultural and class levels.

The seminar, which offers three hours of credit, is intended for students contemplating careers in international trade, diplomacy, urban affairs or education in the ghettos. Course content will examine thought patterns, beliefs and values, nonverbal communication and other elements which affect the interpretation of messages between people of different backgrounds.

Glenn was born in Poland and moved to France in 1926. He obtained a B.S. in mathematics from the University of Aix - Marseilles and left the University of Paris just before obtaining an M.S. in chemistry to become a foreign correspondent.

Beginning with the Spanish Civil War, Glenn served as a foreign correspondent for a chain of Polish newspapers and also reported for a number of French, Swedish, and Egyptian newspapers until 1939.

He interrupted his career in journalism to serve with the Polish Army and the French Army as artillery and infantry officer, respectively. For his service he was awarded the Croix de Guerre by the French government.

Mr. Glenn came to the United States in 1941 and completed graduate studies at the University of Michigan in chemistry, philosophy and English. As a Lieutenant in Military Intelligence with the U.S. Army (1943-46) he received the Silver Star and the Scientist To Speak at Univ.

Stanford R. Ovshinsky, whose invention of the ovonic switch has the electronics industry in a whirl, will speak on Jan. 8 at the University of Delaware.

The self-taught scientist - inventor will discuss "The Ovonic Switches, New Devices Made from Semiconducting Glasses," for a combined physics department colloquium and meeting of the Society of Physics Students. His talk will be at 7 p.m. in Room 130 Sharp Laboratory on the University of Delaware campus.

Dr. Karl W. Boer, professor of physics at the University, will follow his client to the podium after an intermission for refreshments. He will discuss "The Ovshinsky Effect, An Attempt to Explain It."

Ovshinsky, president of Energy Conversion Devices, makers of the ovonic switch, will present a display of experiments over closed circuit television. He will demonstrate the semi-conductor glasses and make an ovonic switch out of them for the audience.

Experts in solid state physics believe the new device has the potential to supplant the transistor and permit even more compact electronic equipment. The new devices are expected to bring about the development of such hitherto impossible items as small desktop computers for home or office, television sets so flat they can be hung on the wall like a picture, radiation resistant switches for in-

Contingency Classroom Film In Production

A documentary film on the Contingency Managed Classroom at the University of Delaware is in production under the guidance of Drs. George Brabner and John T. Neisworth of the College of Education.

The film will be distributed among schools and colleges for teaching purposes and features the University's special education classes and one other class in an experimental situation in a public school.

The staff from the Western Pennsylvania Education Material Center, under the direction of Stanley Seidman, visited the campus the first week in December to film the classroom. The Special Education Class consists of a group of children from the Newark School System who serve as an experimental group for students and graduates in the school of education.

The contingency classroom attempts to increase competency by means of precise behavior management. Children receive tokens for completing assignments as a means of reinforcing certain academic behaviors. The tokens consist of various privileges such as game participation.

A script is now being prepared for the film. The documentary will be released in the late spring.

Land Gift Completes New Campus Area

Approximately 65 acres of land north of the main campus of the University of Delaware has been given to the university by an anonymous benefactor.

This land, bordered on the west by Route 896 and on the east by White Clay Creek, is adjacent to land previously given to the university and brings the total holdings in that area to 182 acres.

University officials already have designated the new campus as the site for a multiple-unit residence hall and dining complex to be completed by 1970, and as the location for plans for the dormitory-dining hall were approved by the Board of Trustees at their semiannual meeting on Dec. 7.

Since the main Newark campus of the university, exclusive of the south campus athletic complex and farmlands, consists of about 190 acres, the new area almost doubles the space available for residence halls and instructional buildings.

In announcing the gift, President E. Arthur Trabant said, "The University is extremely pleased to receive this gift which enables us to make detailed plans for effective use of this entire area. We are grateful for the continued support of this private benefactor who has generously provided much of the land for this new campus."

University officials have been working for more than a decade on long-range plans for the orderly development of campus facilities to meet anticipated enrollment growth and changing educational requirements.

Wool Contest Winners Named

Two high school students earned the opportunity to enter regional competition as junior and senior division winners in the Delaware Make-It-Yourself-With Wool contest Saturday, December 14, at the University of Delaware. Winners were also named in two other divisions.

Miss Rebecca Tull, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil B. Tull, Seaford, won in the senior division competition. She modeled a blue wool dress with a lowered waistline and pleated skirt and featuring a high-standing collar and small gold buttons down the front.

Fifteen-year-old Rosemarie Pasqualine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Pasqualine, Newark, was the junior division winner. She made an apricot pink bonded wool coatdress featuring a double breasted closing and Mandarin collar.

The junior and senior winners will compete in the Mid-Atlantic Division competition in New York City, January 3-4, 1969. Regional winners will enter the national contest in San Francisco, Calif., January 16.

Mrs. Elizabeth Thomas, Robscoot Manor, Newark, was named adult division winner with a double-breasted, semi-fitted wool coat. The coat of green and beige herringbone featured a back belt and centered back pleat, lined with a quilted moss green fabric.

The sub-deb winner was Miss Carolyn Baker, 12, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Baker, Middletown. She made a peacock blue shadow plaid jumper. Adult and sub-deb winners received a $25 bond.

Runners-up in the four divisions received fabric prizes. Miss Kathy Hill, 16, Lewes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. Roland Hill, was senior division runner-up with a grey two-piece suit. Junior runner-up was Miss Mamie Marie Carey, 14, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Carey, Delmar. She modeled a two-piece suit with a green wool dress and a green, grey and gold cape.

Adult runner-up was Mrs. Clara J. Feucht, Middletown, with a grey flannel dress. Miss Nancy Lynn McShaw, 12, Faulkland Heights, Wilmington, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis J. McShaw, was sub-deb runner-up with a camel, grey and wine A-line skirt.

Judges for the state contest were Mrs. Sally O'Connor, College of Home Economics, and Miss Janet Reed, extension clothing and textile specialist, both at the University of Delaware; Miss Marjorie Ferry, assistant New Castle County 4-H agent; and Mrs. Edward Foster, and Mrs.

Wilmer Aist, both of Newark. The Make-It-Yourself-With Wool contest is sponsored nationally by the American Wool Council and the Women's Auxiliary to the National Wool Growers, and in Delaware by the Delaware Sheep and Wool Association. Mrs. Bette Butler, Odessa, served as Delaware's contest chairman for this year's event.

Ag. Engineer Cites Holiday Driving Tips

The year-end holidays are one of the most dangerous periods of the year on Delaware highways, according to Thomas H. Williams, extension agricultural engineer at the University of Delaware.

While many of the reasons are obvious—more hours of darkness, poor visibility and slippery going due to bad weather, holiday rush and activity—too many drivers fail to adjust their driving habits. To avoid these holiday hazards, Williams advises that drivers adopt defensive driving tactics. "Keep the holiday spirit in your driving and extend pedestrians and other drivers the courtesies and goodwill of the season."

Think ahead, says Williams. Alter your plans or route of travel if weather or road conditions make it advisable. Start earlier and give yourself plenty of time on trips so you don't have to press to reach your destination on time; expect slow-down weather and traffic delays. Remember to guard against fatigue by stopping frequently or by switching drivers. And, don't forget to fasten those seat belts.

Watch out for tipsy pedestrians and keep an eye on the actions of other drivers. Many people are celebrating, some not too wisely. Be sure you follow the one-for-one rule yourself—not more than one drink an hour, nothing for an hour before you intend to drive.

Remember too, there's a kind of holiday gaiety and exuberance akin to recklessness that grows from the feeling that "nothing can happen to me" during this season.

Keep your holiday season happy and safe; drive defensively.

Print Lives

Self-appointed media expert, Marshall McLuhan, says the printed word is dead. Yet, one large paper corporation reports that paper consumption for books, magazines and newspapers is expected to exceed 36 million tons this year. Evidently, there are still some folks who haven't been informed that reading is out of style. — Birmingham (Ala) News

Fights Counts

It is men who have counted struggle as a blessing who got the big rewards of life.

The hard surgical cases, where life hangs on a heart beat, do not go to the dilettante surgeon.

The tough engineering problem, like building a bridge across a mighty river, does not go to the engineer who has always looked for the easy jobs. And the same for lawyers and top executives in business.

If at times you feel that you have not had the same chances that others have, ask yourself what chance did Abraham Lincoln have?

Remember that it is not so much the size of the dog in the fight that counts. It's the size of the fight in the dog. —Daily Capital News (Jefferson City, Mo.)

Deadline Set For Entries In 8th Reg. Art Exhibit

Deadline for receipt of entries in the 8th Regional Art Exhibition at the University of Delaware will be Jan. 7, Jack Sturgell, director of the Student Center announced this week.

Entries will be received in the Rodney Room of the Student Center from 12 noon to 5 p.m. on Jan. 2, 3, 4, 6, and 7, Sturgell said.

Sturgell pointed out that it was particularly important that prospective entrants keep the submittal dates in mind. This is because many artists have works in other shows and must give notice to withdraw them, time is required for framing and generally preparing art works for the exhibition, and some artists may have ongoing work that they wish to finish in time for the exhibition, he said.

The Regional Art Exhibition is the largest art-show in the state, Sturgell said, and many artists like to make a special effort for this exhibit.

The exhibition opens Jan. 12 and runs through Feb. 9. A special showing for the artists and special guests on the opening day is open to the general public.

U. of D. Research Foundation Luncheon Jan. 4

State geology, hydrodynamics, and biology will be the subject of research reports presented at the annual University of Delaware Research Foundation luncheon on Jan. 4.

Dr. John C. Kraft, associate professor of geology will discuss "Geology of Cape Henlopen Spit, Dune and Marsh Tract;" Dr. William S. Gaither, associate professor of civil engineering and coordinator of the ocean engineering program, will speak on "Ripple Tow Tank and Its Research and Educational Applications;" while Dr. Steven D. Skopik, assistant professor of biological sciences, will give a talk on "Localization of the Biological Clock."

The Foundation assists the University of Delaware in fundamental research and in attracting and supporting the best possible research-oriented faculty in the science areas. Specifically, its special task is the support of research by young faculty members and the preliminary investigation of new and promising ideas.

Greetings to the luncheon will be tendered by Robert W. Cairns, foundation president; and Dr. E. A. Trabant, president of the University and secretary of the foundation will welcome the guests to the campus. Other officers of the foundation are Samuel Lender, vice president; Dr. C. Lator Burdick, assistant secretary; Harry G. Haskell, Jr., treasurer, and Baird C. Brittingham, assistant treasurer.

Harrington Bowling League

Quillen's Market took sole possession of first place, by swamping Jarrell Fuel in last week's competition. The grocery boys got a real fine assist from B. Johnson, who took over the first place spot in the individual series department, with a superb 656 series, and was a contributing factor in aiding Quillen's to take over second place in the team series category with a real fine 2683 team series. Johnson's fine series included grand games of 220 and 243, for a real fine night's work. Jarrell Fuel's B. Collison rolled a fine 203 game, as the fuel boys find themselves in a three-way tie for fifth place.

J. Cahill led Robbin's Hardware to a three game win over Wally's Garage to take over second place in the standings. Cahill rolled a real fine 535 series for Robbin's. The three game loss put Wally's Garage in a three way tie for fifth place.

Hamilton Fund and McKnatt Funeral Home fought to a two-to split, with Hamilton Fund moving into the third place spot. R. Creadick led the finance boys with a grand 226 game, amassing a superb 579 series, with B. Wilson assisting with a fine 200 game. H. Brode, with a 540 series; D. McKnatt with a 214 game, and H. Jack, with a 202 game added the balance for McKnatt's attack, with put them into the fourth place spot in the standings.

Butler's Fuel did not fare too well last week against People's Restaurant, as they were literally snowed under by the restaurant boys. N. Clough led People's in their attack with a fine 205 game. Although Butler's Fuel had a bad night, they are still in the running, holding a share of fifth place, while People's are deadlocked with two other teams for eighth place.

Taylor & Messick won three games from Penn Central to fall into a tie for the eighth place spot, as B. Collins rolled a fine 547 series, with a 200 game to lead the Taylor & Messick combine, with S. Collins adding a fine 211 game. M. Brown rolled a grand 245 game for Penn Central, to lead all the bowlers in the high game column for the week. Brown also took over third place in the single game category for the league. Penn Central is also in the eighth place spot.

The Spoilers came on strong to win three games from Gerardi Bros., who have not bowled up to their capacity since winning the first third. H. Wheeler rolled a fine 214 game, amassing a nice 542 series, though Gerardi Bros. are occupying the other end of the list in the standings at this time. The Spoilers are next up the ladder in eleventh place.

Cy Perkins Named Director At Md. Raceway

Veteran harness horseman, Robert "Cy" Perkins, widely known track announcer and currently racing secretary at Georgetown Raceway has been named director of racing and race secretary at Ocean Downs, Ocean City, Md.

Cy's son, Bill, who is track announced at the Sussex County track, will return to Ocean Downs this summer in the same capacity.

Perkins, 55 years old, has been called the "best harness matchmaker in the U.S." by Tom Shehan, general manager at Georgetown.

Cy, a Pennsylvania native, has been announcing races along the eastern seaboard for the past twenty years. He has been racing secretary and later associate judge at Hinsdale Raceway in New Hampshire. He is also race secretary at Harrington.

Attendance, Handles Up at Georgetown Oval

Attendance and mutual handles at Georgetown Raceway this season are pacing far ahead of the 1967 meet, according to track officials.

The average attendance during the first 22 nights of racing is 1,993; a nightly average increase of 813 over the 1967 figure of 1,180.

The 1968 average mutual handle (the amount of money wagered each night) for the 22 days is $84,967 compared to the 1967 average of $68,543.

"We are extremely pleased with the figures," Tom Shehan, general manager, said today. "There are several factors which have contributed to this year's success—among them—the well-matched races put together by Racing Secretary Cy Perkins, the excellent condition of the track and the generous news coverage afforded by the radio and newspapers."

Harness fans, numbering 32,551, cheered the pacers and trotters on in 1967, while this year the ranks swelled to 43,837. Twenty-two nights of racing this year have resulted in a handle of $1,869,287 as compared with $1,570,947 for the same period in 1967.

Three meets ago, in 1966, figures for the comparable 22 day period are higher; the total wagered was $2,205,494; the total attendance was 51,066; the average nightly handle and attendance, respectively was $100,249 and 2,321.

In actuality, however, this year's statistics represent a more valid and sound appraisal of racing operations, according to officials. The 1966 averages were bolstered by giveaways, (fur coats, automobiles and shotguns) gimmicks and games, which according to the new management, did little to create a lasting interest in harness racing at the Delmarva oval; did not attract the serious racing fans, and cost, in dollars and cents, far more than it paid off because of the fickle nature of the "gimmick hunters" that it attracted.

A run down on other statistics shows that the largest Daily Double, $398 was returned on Nov. 29th; the highest exacta paid $1,465.60 on Dec. 14th and Saturday night, Nov. 30, saw the largest attendance and handle of any evening of the young meet, when 3312 fans pushed $133,830 through the mutual windows.

Meanwhile, on the track itself: Sister Crain, owned, trained and driven by Winston Line-weaver of Mauertown, Va., continues to hold the pacing record for this season with a 2:06 2/5. Miss Becky Pick, owned by Purple and Red Inc., of Middletown, holds the fastest seasonal trotting mark of 2:07 flat.

Vernon Mitchell, of Greensboro, Md., and Warren Harp, of Rochester, N. H., are neck and neck in the driver standings. Mitchell, in 21 starts has 8 wins, 2 place and one show. Harp, in 26 starts has 8 wins, 3 place and 6 shows. John Childers of Hartly is credited with seven wins, four seconds and seven thirds in 30 starts and Al Lineweaver of Mauertown, Va. in 27 trips to the gate has scored 5 wins, 9 place and one show.

Georgetown Raceway will be dark until Friday night, Dec. 27 when the track reopens. Post time is 8:15 p.m. The horses will be going to the gate six nights during the week of December 30.

Dept. of Agriculture, who has been stationed in Delaware with the State Department of Agriculture since 1952, has accepted a promotion in the U. S. Department of Agriculture and will be moving to New York State the first of the year, with headquarters in Rochester, N. Y.

company, either mutual fund or investment stock shares, and held by a bank as custodian. Contributions may also be made to a trust.

Funds may not be distributed to you, the buyer, before age 59 1/2 except in the event of death or disability. Distribution for owner-employees must begin before they are 70 1/2 years old.

When retirement benefits begin, most buyers will probably be in a lower tax bracket than when making contributions to the fund, says McAllister. Since benefits will be received in the form of annuity or other installment payments, the income will be spread over the years and probably won't put the retiree into a higher tax bracket.

Using a retirement plan can provide a valuable tax shelter and help you maintain qualified employees, he adds. But beginning a retirement plan poses complex problems that shouldn't be tackled without consulting your attorney, accountant or both.

For additional information or advice, McAllister recommends contacting your bank, insurance company or investment broker.

After consulting these people and examining the factors involved, decide whether or not a retirement plan would help you reach the goals you have set for yourself and your business.

times the motor's ampere rating. So for safety's sake, check your overload protection system.

Heat lamps used to prevent water pump freezing are another cause of rural fires, says Williams. These lamps cause a considerable temperature rise in nearby objects and often ignite combustible materials including their own cord.

In using heat lamps, use porcelain sockets and heat resistant wire. Thermostatically controlled resistance heating cables are best for preventing water pump freezing, he adds.

Thawing frozen water systems with blowtorches and other open flames has also contributed to rural fires. Prevent freezing by draining pipes, keeping water running or using heating cables.

Water pumps should be a prime factor in fighting fires, not in their cause, says Williams. In most cases, it's a good idea to wire your water pump to a separate electrical system. If there is a fire, electricity should be shut off. Unless your pump is on a separate system, shutting off power will render your main fire fighting equipment useless.

Williams also recommends having a general purpose dry chemical fire extinguisher readily available in case of fire.

C., has been elected to membership in Alpha Epsilon Delta, the International Premedical Honor Society, in recognition of his outstanding scholastic achievement. The object of the society is to encourage and recognize excellence in premedical and predoctoral scholarship.

Donald has also been initiated into the Beta Rho Chapter of Beta Beta Beta Biological Honor Society at Wake Forest. Its purpose is to further the interest of outstanding students who are majoring in biology.

Donald will attend the University of Maryland Dental School in September. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin W. Wells, 266 Delaware Avenue.

Separate capital sales from ordinary income; report gains and losses from capital transactions on Schedule D. Long term gains are only 50 percent taxable, and losses are full deductible from gains.

Claim exemptions for children under 19 if you provide over one-half of the support. Claim children over 19 if they are full-time students five months of the year or more and if you provide over one-half of their support. If a child earns over $600, he must file a report and claim himself as a dependent. The parents, however, can also claim these children as dependents.

Include all expenses—such items as business travel, professional journals, legal and accounting services and small purchases paid in cash. And don't forget the farm's share of taxes, insurance and auto expense. If getting this year's tax data together is a big job, start now to keep a good set of records for 1969.

If you sold real estate or are planning to sell, seek out good professional advice on how to handle the transaction.

particularly if a large capital gain is involved. "Good tax advice is a good investment," says McAllister. "And its cost is a deductible expense."

Get a copy of the "Farmers Tax Guide" from your county agent, he concludes. It illustrates and answers almost all questions on farm tax regulations. When you are uncertain about correct procedure, use the services of a reputable tax accountant or ask the local office of the Internal Revenue Service.

For more dollar-saving tax hints, write to W. T. McAllister, Agricultural Hall, University of Delaware, Newark, 19711.

ROTC To Be Offered at Univ. Summer Sessions

Military Science (ROTC) will be offered during the summer sessions for the first time this summer, the Military Science Department at the University of Delaware announced this week.

The purpose of the summer sessions is to provide an opportunity for transfer students, students admitted in February, and others, to take Military Science so they can continue with the program during the normal academic year without "compressing" two military science courses in one semester.

Military Science 105, the normal fall semester course, will be offered in the first session, commencing June 16 and ending July 22. The course content will cover the definition and causes of war, a survey of the evaluation of warfare and weapons, the weapons of the army, and the history and organization of the Reserve Officers Training Corps.

Military Science 106, the normal spring semester course, will be offered in the second session commencing July 28 and ending August 29. The course content will include the principles of war, the organization of the national defense establishment and factors of national power.

Leadership laboratory (drill) will be conducted as an integral part of each session and will be on a highly personalized basis.

According to the Department students who have credit for Mil 106 only, or will have such credit by June, need take only the first session in order to continue in the fall with Mil 205.

Students who have no credit for Military Science and who desire to begin the program can take both summer sessions and continue in the fall semester with the sophomore course. Interested students are urged to contact the Department of Military Science for further information.

SKIDDING FOR SAFETY

—one of the devices used by the National Safety Council's Committee on Winter Driving Hazards during its annual winter test project to measure the stopping ability of various types of tires, chains and other equipment.

These findings point up the extreme hazard of driving on glare ice—showing that with regular tires it may take close to nine times as far to stop as on dry pavement. The Safe Winter Driving League cautions drivers that regardless of the type of traction device employed—even with tire chains—far slower than normal speeds are essential on icy pavements.
