Catfish Possible New Crop In Delaware

Catfish farming offers promise as a profitable business for Delaware farmers. There are pitfalls and problems but a potential of $500 profit per acre of farm pond exists, according to an Alabama fish researcher.

Dr. E. E. Prather, associate professor of fisheries, Auburn University, expressed these views at an aquaculture session during the recent University of Delaware Farm and Home Week.

Citing Auburn successes, backed by 35 years of research, Prather said it is relatively easy to spawn and raise catfish in farm ponds. The amount of income that can be earned, however, depends on the skill and management ability of the operator and the marketing conditions.

A variety of fresh-water sport fish have been tested in Alabama, but channel catfish appear to have the most potential — they are in demand by consumers, their reproduction cycle can be controlled which helps in producing young fish of the proper size, and they respond well to supplemental feeding.

The techniques involved in commercial catfish production include stocking ponds with minnow-sized fish. The quantity is determined by pond size, length of the growing period and the desired market. (Continued on Page 5)

KENT DEMOCRATS CHOOSE LEADERS AS AMITY PREVAILS

Kent County Democrats Tuesday night made James G. Smith Jr. their first new county chairman in 20 years. They chose Franklin P. Fountain of Milford as vice chairman. Veteran county Democrats said Fountain will be the first Negro ever to serve as a county Democratic officer.

In a show of unity, the Democratic committee elected Smith, Fountain and three other officers without a dissenting vote.

Smith, who succeeds 20-year chairman Vernon B. Derrickson, had been regarded as a member of a younger faction battling to unseat the establishment represented by Derrickson, and Smith's backers worked to elect favorable committeemen, who elect the party officers.

Tuesday night, however, there was no sign of any battle. Derrickson's daughter, Mrs. Joann Slight, nominated Smith, and the outgoing party head said after the election, "We're very fortunate to have a young man like Jimmy Smith."

Elected with Smith and Fountain were Mrs. Carolyn Pinder of near Smyrna as vice chairwoman, N. Maxson Terry Jr. of Camden as secretary and Maurice A. Hartnett III of Dover as treasurer. Fountain succeeds William Draper, and Mrs. Pinder succeeds Mrs. Blanche Cahall Terry, former Gov. Charles

L. Terry Jr.'s nephew, and Hartnett, director of the Legislative Reference Bureau in the Terry administration, were incumbents.

Smith, 38, is a Dover automobile dealer. He held a key post in the Democratic campaign last fall, is a member of the Delaware River and Bay Authority and is chairman of the special gifts committee for the Kent General Hospital building fund.

Fountain, 50, is the brother of William S. (Pen) Fountain, vice mayor of Milford. The new Democratic vice chairman is proprietor of a Milford tavern.

Smith told Democrats at the meeting Tuesday night that "our problem is unity." To that end, he nominated Derrickson for the newly created post of chairman emeritus. The Democrats approved after Smith told them, "No one has served so long and so well."

Smith said he is going "to try to start the idea that we're going to win." The way to do this, he said, is "advocate good government."

Democrats have a 12-7 edge in registration in the county but have fared poorly in the last two elections. In 1966, they lost the Levy Court and most legislative seats. Last year, the party regained control of the Levy Court but lost all but one row office and picked up only one General Assembly seat.

THE RT. REV. WILLIAM H. MEAD, Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Delaware, who will preach Sunday morning at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church. Bishop Mead, making his first visit to Harrington, will also perform the Rite of Confirmation.

Dairymen Can Survive, Agway Man Says

The Dairy industry in the Northeast is basically sound, but to keep pace individual producers will either innovate or stagnate. This view was presented by E. C. Charron of Agway, Inc., at the recent Farm and Home Week at the University of Delaware.

He pointed out that the threats to dairymen in the Northeast are very real, but that they can be met.

Charron blamed the demise of thousands of dairymen on what he described as the management lag — "Technical progress in farm production has moved at a much faster pace than farmer's adoption of decision making technology."

Looking to the future he said dairy farm incomes of $100,000 will be the rule rather than the exception. Economic pressures will dictate large volume forcing dairymen to increase herd size above the one hundred cow level.

On the subject of corporate farming in the dairy business, Charron said the real consideration is "Can the traditional efficiency of the family farm successfully compete with the potential efficiency of the larger corporate farm?" He said it can and will but not without sacrifices and adjustments. He said new government farm programs will be written for farmers grossing over $50,000. Those dairymen who fall below this standard will supplement their incomes with off-

On Feb. 27, lectures will be given by Robert Ludwig, supervisor of assessments, Washington County, Md.; John A. Fortner, MAI, Appraisal Consultants, Inc.; and Richard Grimm, assistant supervisor of assessments, Washington County, Md.

How About Naming The New School Felton - Harrington High?

One of the chief complaints many towns in other states follow this practice. There are lots of high schools and prep schools with names as long or longer than Felton-Harrington would be.

For example Hatboro-Horsesham, Upper Perkiomen, Valley Forge Military Academy, Bordentown Military Institute, Jamames M. Bennett, Plymouth - Whitmarsh, Cherry Hill East, Cherry Hill West, Cardinal Dougherty, Lansdowne - Aldan, Gunning Bedford, etc. A Pittsburgh, Pa. resident told of a high school in his area with five names in its title.

It is the opinion of this writer that citizens of both Harrington and Felton could identify much more easily with a high school named Felton - Harrington, than they could with one with a innocuous, meaningless name like South Kent High or Killen's Pond High or Central High or Southern High, etc.

Woman Jailed In Slaying

Mrs. Eleanor Mary Davidson, 35, of Felton, has been sentenced to a five-year prison term and fined $500 for voluntary manslaughter.

Superior Court Judge George M. Wright passed sentence on Mrs. Davidson, who was convicted of the crime on Dec. 6, 1968.

She is to spend an additional 30 days in jail if she does not pay the fine.

Mrs. Davidson originally had been charged with first-degree murder in the June 1, 1968, rifle slaying of A. L. Stephens Jr., 23, the man with whom she lived. She was tried on a reduced charge of second-degree murder, and a jury convicted her of voluntary manslaughter.

Members also want to point out the many career opportunities that exist for those young people with agricultural training and experience.

Local FFA chapters are part of the vocational agriculture instruction program in Delaware high schools and place a great deal of emphasis on leadership development. FFA sponsors several judging and public speaking contests and leadership conferences to help members become accustomed to working with groups and committees.

Many local FFA chapters will observe FFA Week with home town displays, assemblies and special events. Billboards have been donated in each of Delaware's three counties to help spotlight FFA Week at the state level.

City Looks at Taxes and Water Meters For More Revenue

The City of Harrington is having a look at tax returns and considering water meters for much-needed revenue, it was revealed Monday night at a meeting of the City Council.

Hinting at a tax raise, Mayor Burton E. Satterfield commented, "I can't see how we're going to pay off bills the next two years." A review of the city's financial picture would determine the extent of the increase. One reason for the revision is the loss of revenue under legislation passed four years ago granting persons more than 65 years of age, and earning less than $3000 annually, freedom from capitation taxes. A councilman, speaking off the cuff, said the city lost $2500 annually by this legislation.

An element in a tax raise would depend, to some extent, said a councilman, on the outcome of an impending scrap session.

Eying another source of revenue, Councilman John T. Satterfield, Fifth Ward, though water rates should be reviewed. "I think we have prolonged this thing too long and should get it moving," answered the mayor, whereupon he appointed a committee of Councilmen Satterfield, Jack Aptt, and Benjamin Hughes to meet with the mayor and City Manager Kathryn Derrickson to study the problem.

Water meters at commercial and educational buildings were mentioned as a source of revenue. The city manager said 34 had been installed. These had been installed several years ago. Dale Phillippi, superintendent of streets and public works, answering a question, said he had read the meters but the water rates were based on a flat fee. One councilman said the meter returns amounted to only about $400 per year above those from flat fees and this would be wiped out by the cost of reading the meters.

In other business, all city employees were rehired and salaries remained unchanged except in the case of the city manager who received a raise of $15 per week. This was warranted, it was brought out, because Mrs. Derrickson is the only full-time employee of the city office. However, the council hired Miss Heba Baker to work three days a week and Mrs. Townsend Masten when needed.

Others retained were as follows: City Solicitor, Grover Brown; fire marshal Chief Harold Fry of the Harrington Fire Company; Chief of Police Franklin Rogers, Patrolmen Robert Darling and Alexander Sharon, and Arthur Marsan, part-time patrolman; Dale Phillippi, SSPW; Theodore Rifenburg, street foreman, and Nelson Maxwell and Wesley Fisher, street employees; treasurer, Howard Wagner; secretary of council, Mrs. Derrickson.

Attending a council meeting for the first time was James Carroll, Third Ward, who was appointed by the council to serve the unexpired term of Burton E. Satterfield who was elected mayor in January. Carroll, an employee of General Baking Company, who lives on Grant Street, has two years to serve.

The meeting night was changed to the first Monday in the month, for the regular meeting, with the third Monday for special meetings.

Agreed to allow Allen Hedgecock, manager of WDOV, a Dover radio station, appear before the council to secure permission to establish a TV cable service here.

Authorized the city manager to write, in reply to a letter from Sheldon Starr, president of New Era Shirt Company, saying the city would improve Reed Street when the weather permitted. The street runs from Clark Street alongside of a shirt factory on Clark Street to Peck Avenue. New Era has a parking lot in (Continued on Page 5)

JOINT SCHOOL BOARDS NAME SUPERVISORY PERSONNEL

The combined school boards of Harrington, Felton, and Frederica appointed its supervisory personnel Monday night at a meeting at Harrington School.

Albert W. Adams, superintendent of Harrington schools, was appointed superintendent of a district which will be consolidated July 1. Adams came here in 1960 from John M. Clayton School where he had served in the same capacity. A brigadier-general, he is commander of the 261st Brigade of the Coast Artillery.

Other appointments made by the interim board, which serves until July 1, when Harrington, Felton, and Frederica school districts will be consolidated under the State Educational Advancement Act, are as follows: Administrative assistants, Dr. Howard Henry, superintendent of Felton School and Melvin Luff, principal of the same school. Officials named were: President of the interim school board, Howell Hitchens, president of the Harrington Board of Education, and vice-president, E. B. Warrington Jr., Felton school. The supervisory personnel, until July 1, will act on matters dealing with the change to a consolidated school district, name of which has still to be determined. After July 1, they will perform their new duties in the consolidated district.

The makeup of the combined school board, after July 1, will depend on the outcome of the May elections. At Harrington, Howell Hitchens is the outgoing member. An informed source said he might run for re-election.

Donkey basketball, a new sport to this area will make its debut at the Harrington Field House on Thursday evening, March 6. ### Delaware Food Market Report

By Anne Holberton

What is "stroganoff"? Does meat have to be cooked over live coals to be called "barbecued"? How much of a "beef stew" should be beef? What seasonings do you expect to find in "Vienna sausage"?

The U. S. Dept. of Agriculture has to answer questions like these as new products are presented to the consumer. It wants help from the consumer in deciding what the answers should be.

The aim of the U.S.D.A.'s Consumer and Marketing Service is to assure the consumer that federally inspected meat and poultry products are wholesome, unadulterated, and truthfully labeled. Besides inspecting all the ingredients in processed products—from the meat to the spices—and every step of the processing—from the mixing to the packaging—this agency also must approve all labels for products before they can be used. They must make sure that the name on a product's label actually describes what is in the package.

In order to do this, standards for products must be set. If the name bologna is allowed on the label, a product which meets certain requirements for content and packaging must go into the package.

Between the time a proposed standard leaves the test kitchen and the time it is incorporated into formal regulations—or is modified or dismissed—it is published so anyone who wishes can comment on it.

Since the regulations are principally designed to protect you, the consumer, your comments may well decide whether or not a standard is adopted and what it will require.

How do you know when a standard is being considered? Watch your newspapers, listen to your radio—many means are used to get the information to you.

Then take a postcard and write to the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture in Washington, D. C., 20250, and tell them what you think about a proposal. You can have a voice in determining what the products you buy truly are, for the price of a postcard. All comments are considered. Don't just sit back and complain—do something! Do something constructive.

When you buy a frozen "fried chicken dinner," how do you expect the chicken to be prepared? When you open a can of "chili con carne," exactly what do you expect to find?

The U.S.D.A. wants to know.

U. of D. String Quartet Concert To Have Pianist

The University of Delaware Resident String Quartet will present the fourth in its six-concert "International Festival" series at 8:15 p.m., Feb. 17, in Mitchell Hall on the campus. Steven Romano, pianist of the Pro Arte Trio in residence at Glassboro State College, will join the Quartet for the piano trio on the program.

The concert will feature works by Luigi Boccherini, Benjamin Britten and Johannes Brahms. Coincidentally, all three works are in the key of C Major, an unusual key for chamber music.

The program will open with Boccherini's Opus 39 #1 string quartet. Benjamin Britten's Quartet #2 will follow. Written in 1945, Quartet #2 commemorates the 250th anniversary of the death of Henry Purcell. The closing Chacony is a specific tribute to Purcell.

Guest artist Romano will be joined by second violinist Jorge Gardos and cellist James Holesovsky for the program finale, Brahms' Piano Trio in C Major. Gardos was formerly associated with the Glassboro Pro Arte Trio.

Romano is an associate professor and chairman of the piano department at Glassboro. He studied at the Eastman School of Music and Indiana University and has performed with several orchestras and given recitals in many parts of the country. Besides solo work and chamber music, he has served in community concert series as accompanist for Robert Bloom, oboist; Beverly Bower and Saramae Endich.

The remain String Quartet concerts will be given on March 24 and May 19 and will feature guest pianists professor Anthony Loudis and Miss Barbara Townley.

The public is cordially invited to attend all concerts free of charge.

It is a great pleasure for St. Stephen's to welcome Bishop Mead on his first visitation to Harrington. Everyone will want to meet our new Bishop and is, therefore, urged to remain for a reception in his honor and that of our new communicants, after the service, Sunday. The bishop, therefore, probably will not wait at the door to greet everyone as would be his custom generally, but will greet them in the parish hall.

It will be the pleasure of the vicar to baptize three small children today. They are Joe, Becky, and Kathy Marsan, the children of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur L. Marsan. An older sister, Barbara Welch, is being confirmed and their father is being received at the same service. The bishop is also happy to present for confirmation—in addition to Barbara, Mr. and Mrs. George Roe, and Mr. and Mrs. Willard Chew, and for reception from other churches in communion with the Episcopal Church, in addition to Mr. Marsan, Mr. and Mrs. Blaise Cornell d'Echert. The congregation will want to greet all of these at the reception. We pray for each of them as well as for the newly baptized children, a long life of service in Christ's Holy Catholic Church.

It is hard to believe that Lent begins this coming Wednesday. St. Stephen's will begin observing this Penitential Season with the Penitential Office, Holy Communion, and Holy Unction at 7:30 p.m. this (Ash) Wednesday, February 25, during Lent the Rev. Canon Victor Kusik will lead us in Lenten discussions. Lent is a period at which time all good churchmen make a special sacrifice of their time in order to grow spiritually. Surely, all youths and adults of St. Stephen's will want to set aside Tuesday evenings during Lent for this purpose. Let the vicar remind the congregation that this occasion is certainly important enough for parents to arrange and employ child sitters. It can be a sin of omission when one treats the Season of Lent so lightly that he or she is not ready to celebrate Easter properly.

This coming Tuesday, St. Stephen's will serve her annual Shrove Tuesday Pancake Supper. Granville Hill has been placed in charge of this project. Many of the lay people of St. Stephen's have been active in selling tickets and will be preparing and serving the supper, therefore, no attempt will be made to thank each personally, but let it be known your church is grateful to you for your service to her.

On Sunday, Feb. 23, the Rev. Miles Edwards, Jr., will be installed as Rector of Immanuel Church-on-the-Green, New Castle. Many of the congregation here will remember the Rev. Mr. Edwards as the leader of our Lenten discussions last year and will want to attend his installation as rector. Anyone desiring a ride to this service, should contact the vicar.

Around Home

Keeping silver bright and beautiful is a difficult task during the winter months with fumes from the furnace, however, you will enjoy your silver more if you keep it bright. Here are a few suggestions to make this task easier.

For badly tarnished silver use the fast acting dip type polish. Dip small pieces but wet a sponge and wipe off the blackened tarnish on pieces too large to dip. Silverware manufacturers say dip type polishes won't hurt silver, but it should be rinsed and wiped dry promptly. Use a cream polish to buff, give luster and restore the best color to silver after using dip polishes.

For silver pieces left on display, like that heirloom tea service, use a tarnish retarding polish.

Tarnish retarding polishes vary in effectiveness. Some give several months resistance to tarnishing. It may be worthwhile to try several kinds. Actually, these polishes react with the surface of the silver and more rubbing usually makes the silver stay bright longer. Avoid unnecessary handling of silver because finger marked areas usually tarnish first.

Discover Wonderful Del.

By no means all the charms of Wilmington are north of Caesar Rodney Square. A short stroll south on Market Street reveals three discoveries.

The first block is rather big-city—the Farmers' Bank Building, the Bank of Delaware Building, and the Hercules Tower atop the Delaware Trust. These skyscrapers in Wilmington add much to the distant views of the city.

At 9th and Market, on the southeast corner, is the Wilmington Savings Fund Society. Step inside during banking hours to see something truly noteworthy—a giant mural, "The Apotheosis of the Family", by the famous illustrator, N. C. Wyneth.

On down Market Street, on the same side of the same block, is the Old Opera House—really the Masonic Temple and Opera House—built by the Masons in 1872 as a home for their meetings and as a public theatre. You'll get a better view of it if your cross Market Street. The facade, delightful arches and more arches in a style that can only be called Victorian Baroque, is all cast iron.

But back on the east side of Market, below 6th Street, is the real reason for this stroll—Wilmington's Old Town Hall, which has been called "the most beautiful public building of the Federal period". It was built in 1798, and shows the taste of the brilliant French emigres and solid Quakers who made up Wilmington society of those days. Until the middle of the 19th century this Old Town Hall was the center of community life in Wilmington, and therefore in the state. Every President from Adams to Buchanan was entertained here, and here the society of Wilmington gathered for every sort of public entertainment—concerts, plays, lectures, political rallies. Lafayette spoke here in 1824; the body of Henry Clay lay in state here in 1852. The city council met here, court sat here, and the practical Wilmington Quakers, wasting no space, used the basement as the town jail. The city government used the building until it moved to the Public Building on Rodney Square, and in 1928, when the lovely buildings was about to be torn down, it was rescued by the Historical Society of Delaware.

The Historical Society has recently completely restored this architectural and historic gem, and in September, 1968, reopened what is without a doubt one of the most charming museums anywhere. Visitors are greeted by a larger-than-life statue of George Washington, made in about 1792 to replace a statue of George III that stood on Bowling Green in New York City. The museum's first floor, originally the courtroom, is lighted from its display cases in a manner so original that museum directors from other parts of the country come to discover how it is done. Upstairs, the long room that served as the council chamber now displays the Historical Society's collection of furniture made in Delaware, or used by famous Delawareans. What were the Mayor's and Clerk's offices have become one a children's museum, and the other a room for temporary exhibits. In the basement is a room once used by the Delaware Philosophical Society for early experiments with electricity. And of course the prison cells. The Old Town Hall is open on Monday from 1 p.m. to 9 p.m., and Tuesday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Closed weekends.

Adjusting the tensions of your sewing machine is enough to give you a tension headache!

All sewing machines are equipped with devices to control the tension or tightness of both upper and bobbin threads. If both tensions are adjusted properly you will have a balanced stitch that locks in the center of the fabric. Any needed adjustments are usually made in the upper tension rather than in the tension which controls the bobbin thread.

You quickly recognize a good stitch by its appearance. When the stitches appear the same on both sides of the fabric, the tensions are in proper adjustment. If the upper thread seems to lie along the top of the fabric, the upper tension is too tight. If the bobbin thread lies along the fabric, the upper tension is looser than the lower.

An easy way to test the tension adjustment is to stitch on a double thickness of fabric diagonally across the fabric on the bias. Remove the swatch from the machine, grasp the fabric at each end of the stitching and pull. The bias fabric will stretch and make the threads break. If one of the threads breaks before the other, that tension is tighter. Both threads should break about the same time. If neither thread breaks, both tensions probably are too loose.

Knit fabrics which have some natural stretch require a somewhat looser tension than most woven fabrics. Light weight or sheer materials also need a loose tension.

Certain sewing threads, such as silk or nylon, have more elasticity than others. When they are held under too much tension, they stretch, but will relax to the original

Lecturer on Plants To Speak At U. of D.

Dr. George H. M. Lawrence, director of the Rachel Mc-Master Miller Hunt Botanical Library of the Carnegie-Mellon University, will present "Power, Plants and Petals," a lecture on plant exploration February 19 at 8 p.m. at the University of Delaware Student Center.

Dr. Lawrence is known among botanists and horticulturists for his contributions to the understanding of the plant kingdom including those plants which have served man as ornamentals and as food and fiber. His presentation, directed toward students as well as the general public, will examine the relationships of man, his technology and plants.

"Power, Plants and Petals" is sponsored by the University of Delaware's department of plant science and the Longwood Program in Ornamental Horticulture under the auspices of the visiting scholar program.

Poems from Paradise Pastures

By W. Cliff Miller

FROM ONE NATURE-LOVER TO ANOTHER

On a warm and humid afternoon last summer, I was standing under a large poplar tree near Knapps Creek which borders the northern edge of one of our pasture-fields, when an aged man (almost as old as the writer) was observed sauntering along the other side of the stream all the way from Route 13, where he parked his car, to the railroad. Upon his return two hours later with a sprig of holly in one hand and a pine cone in the other he informed me he was —

JUST A'VISITIN'

I saw him cross the meandering stream That winding in and out the wood, Looked rough and made his going hard, To see him plod from where I stood.

I watched him stop to wipe his brow, I saw him gaze up at the trees; Then ramble on his zig-zag course, His hat was off to catch the breeze.

I later met him, travel stained, And weary at the close of day, And asked him why he roamed the woods, When he at home could rest and stay.

He said he'd "gone a'visitin'," To call upon the birds and trees, The rambling stream, and winding trails, And fleecy clouds that rode the breeze.

He called on every bush and vine, That grew along his winding way, He talked with everything that grew, And not a single word did say.

He cleansed his soul and mind that day, Of thoughts from whence all troubles brew, Just visitin' the friends he loved, The trees and other things that grew.

(Editor's Note:) In last week's issue, The Journal inadvertently used the word "lust" instead of "but" in Mr. Miller's report of the venison dinner and entertainment that followed. The Journal sincerely regrets the error, and any embarrassment caused concerned citizens.

HE LIVES

I write this in Remembrance of my Brother Leonard.

Who just one week ago had passed away, I look up into the sky, No sun I see the clouds they hide, The rain it falls so today.

My heart it aches, the tears they fall, But I believe he still lives for us all. He was too good a man to just lay down and die. God, please help me to live the life that would be pleasing to all.

Oh, how I wish that I could have died, I would have gave my life for him to have lived. He had so much more he could give.

I remember my Brother in our childhood days, Dad passed away when we were so young, So early in our lives our work had begun.

We sure had our ups and downs!

Though sometime we were far apart, I know he was with me sometimes in the dark. We had so many good times in our work and play, I know he still lives for me today.

This time death has struck again, it has not been the first to me.

When I was younger in my days, my son at six, he passed away.

At that time I could not see why it should happen to my Wife and me.

God's plan we cannot see, but I know he remembers you and me.

I know you are thinking why I should write so soon, But it may be later than you think.

At this time, I truly have a feeling from within, I want to live for my God the best I can. Who knows the days and weeks we may live, But I will try to live better to the end.

Economical Meat Cookery

Ragout or pot au feu—it's all the same—stew. No matter what you call it, stew makes a delicious midwinter meal that's easy on the budget.

If your budget is still reeling from holiday spending and high food prices, try to economize on meat and fish. Spend a little more time and imagination turning less tender meat cuts into family-pleasing main dishes, suggests Miss Marguerite Krackhardt, extension food and nutrition specialist at the University of Delaware.

For instance, when you make that stew, try a new seasoning — curry powder, ginger, mace, rosemary, chili powder or dry mustard. Sliced black or green olives also add to flavor and appearance.

How about trying a different vegetable, too? Your family might enjoy a stew with eggplant, Chinese cabbage, yellow turnips or parsnips added to the usual carrots and potatoes. In fact, stews are a good way to introduce a new vegetable to the family since the flavors are all blended together.

The less tender and less expensive cuts of meat require slow, gentle cooking in moist heat; braising, stewing or cooking with water are the usual methods. For braising, first brown the meat, then add seasonings and a small amount of liquid and cook, covered, until the meat is tender.

Small pieces of less tender meat are used for stewing. More liquid is added than in braising; vegetables are put in during the last part of the cooking.

You can cook larger pieces of meat in water as the first step in making soup. If you like the "browned" taste, brown the meat just before you add seasonings and vegetables.

Miss Krackhardt points out that shoulder and arm cuts, round steaks and roasts, breast and shank meat and frozen fish are generally low to medium priced cuts. Less meaty cuts such as short ribs and shank can be combined with any kind of dry beans to boost the protein content of the main dish.

To get meals out of the midwinter doldrums, try a new recipe. Many Old World and Oriental dishes feature moist-cooked, less expensive cuts. Such dishes as sauerbraten, sweet and sour pork, short ribs and limas or fish baked with cheese or tomato sauce may well become family favorites.

Take advantage of another characteristic of combinations of meat, spices and vegetables, recommends Miss Krackhardt. Cook them a few hours ahead of time so the flavors have a chance to blend well. If you're a working wife, prepare the meat the night before knowing your main dish will taste even better because it stood in the refrigerator overnight. Whatever meat, spices or vegetables you prefer, the principles of moist cookery are the same. And, the results are the same, too—a delicious, nutritious main dish that's easy on the budget.

CATFISH

ing weight for the fish. Prather said he has stocked as many as 210,000 fish per acre, but they remained quite small. In Alabama where pond water temperatures are suitable for fish growth about six months of the year, 2000-3000 fish per acre gave the highest yield of marketable fish. Most of them grew to about eight inches and weighed from 3/4 to one pound.

Pond fertilization and supplemental feeding are needed to get this yield. Fertilizer increases the vegetative growth in the pond, which improves the available food supply. The extra feeding at the rate of 2-3% of the estimated body weight of the fish per day provides the balanced ration needed for fast weight gain. Prather found oxygen to be the limiting factor in channel catfish production in farm ponds. As supplemental feeding is increased there is more pollution in the water and the oxygen supply is reduced. Thirty pounds of feed per acre per day was the safe maximum. Above this, fish started to die.

There are ways to increase the amount of oxygen in farm ponds, but so far none of them seems practical for on-farm use. Several marketing techniques have been tested at Auburn University. These include selling permits to fishermen that allow them to catch so many pounds of fish; allowing open fishing and change by the pound for those caught; draining the pond, harvesting the fish and selling them as dressed fish; or selling them live to someone who takes them to a metropolitan market where they are sold live or dressed to consumers.

Prather said the greatest profit was realized when fishing permits were sold. As many as $1100 per acre of pond per year was spent by fishermen who paid a dollar a day for the right to fish stocked ponds. Costs to the grower included five cents each for the fingerling fish, five cents per fish for feed, $500 per acre for pond construction, and labor costs for feeding, harvesting, marketing and pond maintenance. Under Alabama conditions, Prather said a grower could expect from $100 to $300 per acre return on a commercial fish pond.
