

Torrential Rains Break Drouth And Damage Highways

A drouth of several weeks was broken Saturday and Sunday by thunderstorms which also damaged highways. The rainfall reached 5 inches, in some local areas.

Some roads were damaged. A shoulder was washed out on U.S. 13 north of Harrington. Mrs. Francis Winkler, residing on County Road 428, said, on returning home Saturday evening, she found so much water in her driveway she had to visit a neighbor until it went down. She added rainfall was 5 inches.

The severity of the storm washed out several culverts on dirt roads in the Felton-Canterbury area, according to the State Highway Department. Included were Roads 385, 381, and 382.

A blacktop road, No. 443, from Milford to Williamsville, was also damaged. A Milford resident said a washout, near the home of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, said there "was a hole big enough for two cars."

In general, the rain helped crops, though they caused some lodging of small grains. Corn and soybeans were much in need of rain, said George Vapaa, Kent County extension agent.

Building Trade Strike Halts Work On Lake Forest High School

Lake Forest High School is scheduled to be completed in time for the beginning of the 1969-70 school year, but the outlook is dismal because of a strike in the building trades. An informant for the Lake Forest interim school board, meeting here Monday evening, warned if the strike is not settled soon other measures would have to be taken for this fall. He added the state (State Department of Public Instruction) "would have to go into it, and double sessions were a possibility."

Continuing, he explained, however, the interim board did not delve deeply into the matter Monday evening.

Lake Forest High School, being built on County Road 384 near Killen's Pond, is to serve students from Frederica, Felton, and Harrington in the newly organized Lake Forest School District.

Another look at the high-school problem may be given Tuesday, July 1, when a regular school board will be organized.

In the meanwhile, the interim board Monday night learned the State Highway Department has said it would build up and widen County Road 384 from U.S. 13 to County Road 385 as much as possible, using maintenance funds. The department, furthermore, would provide temporary maintenance until complete renovation could be placed in the road-building program to be presented this summer to the State Planning Commission.

In other business Monday night, the interim board acted as follows:

Granted award for student-athletics insurance to William Moore, Felton, agent for Higham & Neilson Insurance Company. Granted award to Outten Insurance Agency, Harrington, for liability insurance on all Lake Forest employees.

Banned overnight trips by the Senior Class, an annual event, but left the way open for special overnight stays. An example a board spokesman explained, would be if the high-school band had to perform at a distant point.

On the band, it was explained 100 uniforms were needed and these would have to be provided thru band booster clubs, a successful solution heretofore in Harrington and Felton, it was noted.

The interim board Monday night hired the following: Anna Ware, Felton, to full-time nurse from part-time work.

George W. Black, junior high-school art teacher.

Janet Helm, physical education in elementary school.

Marian Green, 1st grade teacher.

Hilda Boswell, 1st grade teacher.

Josephus Clark, teacher in ungraded section. He is a graduate of Delaware State College.

Sue B. McGinnis.

Guards To Train At Ft. Bliss

The Delaware National Guard's 3rd Battalion (Automatic Weapons) (Self Protected), 198th Artillery, will be airlifted to Fort Bliss, Tex., for its annual two-week field training this July.

To meet such high readiness standards-equivalent to those of units on active duty - the Delaware battalion has top priority for the equipment and support necessary for its home station training and annual camp.

Lt. Col. Harold J. Coulbourn of Seaford commands the battalion. The men will leave Dover Air Force Base on July 6 in Air National Guard transport planes from several states and will return July 20.

Purpose of the move is to permit the battalion to conduct exercise involving rapid movement and dispersion over a wide area. Delaware Food Market Report

By Anne Holberton

Outdoor chefs are an adventurous lot and usually welcome new ideas. So for the next patio party why not suggest a corned beef oven roast on the grill?

When you go to the market, buy a corned beef for oven roasting. They come either plain or seasoned with garlic and spice. If you are having a crowd one of each is nice. This roast is tender enough to roast in the oven in an open pan just as you roast a standing rib roast. Or it can be cooked on the outdoor grill. The trick is to wrap the roast in heavy duty aluminum foil, then place on the hottest part of the grill about four to six inches above the heat. Cook for about two hours and turn about every 30 minutes. Then open the foil and move the roast to a cooler spot and cook for another hour or until a fork can be inserted and removed easily from the roast. If you like, add your favorite barbecue sauce the last 15 minutes to give the roast a party glaze. It's delicious served in slices and cuts, either thick or thin.

Both beef and pork prices are still high, however, a little relief may be seen in scattered store specials. The demand for steaks continues to be large, so roasts are your more economical choice.

Broiler fryers continue to be excellent buys and are popular choices during the summer months. There are many interesting ways of preparing this meat and all are suitable for summer eating. Turkey prices are also quite reasonable and this too is an economical choice.

Egg supplies are good and prices are still reasonable. This week it looks as if the medium size egg is your best value, but check and see. Remember about the seven cents spread.

Fresh vegetable supplies are increasing even though vegetable counters still look empty for this time of year. Prices are continuing high so do check carefully for quality as you buy. Nearby farms are now supplying us with cabbage, green onions and cooking greens. New Jersey is beginning to ship Iceberg lettuce. Alabama is sending in very good tomatoes and good quality corn and celery is arriving daily from Florida. Blueberries from the Carolinas are in the market and sour cherries are ripe locally. The strawberry season is about over but the cantaloupe season is just beginning. The way it looks now this should be a big season for cantaloupes, since the crop is expected to be 33 per cent above last year's.

Cottage Cheese Good Eating In Any Language

It Italy, it's ricotta; in Scotland, it's bonny clabber; in Pennsylvania Dutch, it's smearcase. But whatever the name, cottage cheese is good eating, according to Miss Marguerite Krackhardt, extension foods and nutrition specialist at the University of Delaware.

This dairy delicacy with built-in low-calorie convenience is ready to eat just spooned from the carton. Or, with little effort and no waste, you can vary cottage cheese in many ways.

Cottage cheese is good atop pancakes with jelly, at lunch in sandwiches, and as dessert for dinner. Or try a different spice or herb combination; Miss Krackhardt recommends curry, caraway or poppy seeds, capers, rosemary, tarragon or ginger.

It goes well with any fruit — fresh, dried, canned or frozen. Drain the fruit well for salads. Cottage cheese in a peach half is a fairly standard salad; add a dash of powdered ginger or a sliver of candied ginger for a different touch. Combine with fruit gelatin and chopped fruits for a molded salad. Or, try a combination with crisp, tangy vegetables, diced, sliced, grated or chopped.

For a low calorie topping or dressing, whip cottage cheese in a blender; add milk for a creamier dressing. Use on baked potatoes or atop asparagus, for instance.

Cottage cheese helps make an easy, nutritious casserole, too. Add it to cooked, diced meat, noodles and green pepper or onion. Or, you can substitute it for the richer sour cream in beef stroganoff; it adds the creamy, piquant flavor without extra calories.

Cottage cheese is truly a stay-slim aid, says Miss Krackhardt. One-half cup creamed cottage cheese has only 120 calories, but it contains approximately one-fourth your daily protein needs — as much protein as a medium serving of lean meat or three eggs. It's also an excellent source of calcium and the vitamin riboflavin.

This dairy favorite began, according to legend, with an Arab trader thousands of years ago. Milk carried through the desert heat in a pouch made from a sheep's stomach separated into curds and whey—a primitive cottage cheese. Of course, pot cheese was made in kitchens in many lands for many centuries.

In today's modern dairies, making tender, delicately flavored cottage cheese is an art. Skilled cheese makers produce various forms — from dry to creamed, from soft, fine granules to large creamy curds.

Creamed cottage cheese has added sweet, pasteurized cream. The amount of cream varies in different communities; often just enough is added to make a product with four per cent milk fat content. This small amount of cream adds flavor and vitamin A.

Your nearest Veterans Administration office will assist you in applying.

Q—I am planning to get a loan on my 30-pay government life insurance policy. I understand the interest rate is 4 per cent, but am not sure as to how much I may borrow and how I repay the loan. Can you tell me?

A—You may borrow up to 96 per cent of the cash value shown on your policy. No regular repayments are required. You may send in a payment on your loan at any time, as long as you send $5.00 or more.

Payment should be made to the Veterans Administration insurance office where you send your premiums. Be sure to put your policy number on your loan repayment and designate it as repayment so that it won't be applied to your premium account.

If you are receiving disability compensation from the VA, you may authorize loan repayments to be deducted from your compensation each month. Any unpaid annual interest charges will be added to the amount of the loan to be repaid.

Q—I was recently discharged from the Army. Can I obtain a G.I. home loan as a veteran even though I am not yet 21 years of age?

A—Yes. If you qualify for the loan in other respects (income, for instance), your age is no bar to obtaining a G.I. loan in most states. You may obtain detailed information and assistance in applying for a VA loan guaranty from your nearest Veterans Administration regional office.

Q—My pension was discontinued because my estate was determined by the Veterans Administration to be excessive. I own E bonds jointly with my wife and reported the total maturity value of the bonds as my assets. Is it possible to obtain a different decision on my pension claim?

A—You should write to the VA and point out that your E bonds are owned jointly by yourself and your wife. Joint ownership means that your wife's share of the bonds—half their value—will not be considered in determining the value of your estate. Reconsideration of your pension entitlement will be based on your wife's share of the bonds as joint owner.

Q—I am a disabled veteran and receive 50 per cent disability compensation for myself, wife and two children. One of my children will be 18 years old four months from now. Will I continue to receive benefits for him?

A—Not unless he plans to continue in school. Three months before your son's 18th birthday the Veterans Administration will send you notice of discontinuance of benefits for him. However, VA will also send at that time an application to be filled out if he plans to continue in school. You will continue to receive benefits for him until he reaches age 23 if he remains in school and is unmarried.

Poems from Paradise Pastures

By W. Cliff Miller

As mentioned here two weeks ago:

The sights and sounds of other days,
When youth and spring held sway;
Are seen and heard no more, alas!
Along our "Railroad" way.

Rejoice and be glad; for tomorrow one of these sounds will return to us around 11:30 a.m. when a steam engine, hauling the Chicken Festival special passenger train from Wilmington to Seaford makes a stop in town for a movie-run.

So we'll get to see the old smoke-cloud and hear the whistle and exhaust of the old Iron Horse that used to dominate these diggins.

But as those wheels go clicking by
A happy tear may fill our eye
We don't need to mind as we did before
Cause that old steam whistle
Will be heard once more.

FATHER'S DAY 1969

(A sermon delivered by the Rev. Quay D. Rice Jr., pastor of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Sun. June 14).

"Usually on Father's Day we have thought together on the duties of Fathers and Mothers as well, and that is surely important. But today, I want us to concentrate on the obligations of children not just to their father, but to both of their parents.

"The story is told of a poor gray-haired, stoop-shouldered man, named Caleb, who lived with his daughter, Bertha, in an old ram-shackle house. Bertha was blind and so was unable to see things for herself. All she knew about them was what her father told her.

"When Bertha was a tiny baby, Caleb in his great love for her, decided that he would keep her from knowing how poor they were. So he always described everything in the way that would give Bertha the greatest pleasure. For instance, though their house was poor, with plaster falling off the walls and with woodwork rotting away, he described it to Bertha as a beautiful place.

"Surely this made for a happy contented little girl—even though she was blind. But as she grew to be a young lady, Caleb grew aware that someday someone would surely tell her the truth, and that while trying to be kind, he might really hurt her. So he made a confession to her: "Bertha, my dear, I have a confession to make to you. The world you live in does not exist as I have painted it. I have hidden from you the things which I felt would pain you. I have created an unreal world in which you could live." And he went on to show her what he had done.

"To his surprise, Bertha was not resentful. "How blind I have been," she said. "Now tell me, Father, what is my home like?"

"A poor place, Bertha, a very poor and bare place."

"And my kind, loving old Dad, what is he like?"
"An old man, Bertha, thin and stooped—worn out with hard work and sorrow—a weak and foolish old man."

"You have restored my sight, Father, because for the first time I really see you—and to me there's no gallant, handsome father anywhere on earth that I could love more dearly or admire more sincerely. I have been happy and contented before this time, but I shall be happier and more contented now that I know how noble you are."

"Now all of us here have two good eyes, don't we? Yet, we often fail to see the goodness of our parents. Too many do not realize how much they sacrifice for us. We need some sort of eye opener to help us realize how much we owe them. Surely we would then express our gratitude in words and deeds.

"Did you know that the Fifth Commandment tells us to honor our parents? It's the only commandment with a promise! It says, "Honor thy Father and thy Mother, that thy days may be long in the land which the Lord thy God, giveth Thee. Not that THEIR days may be long—but that YOUR days may be long.

"You see, our parents have lived longer than we have and if we honor them by obedience to them, we will live more wisely and thus longer. They may not have as much factual knowledge or, "book learning" as we, but they've learned from the school of life. We would do well to listen to them.

"Then of course, they love us and want only what is best for us. God made the world of parents so that they would love their children better than themselves. Even birds and animals are this way. Did you know that a mother prairie chicken that sees a fire sweeping towards her nest, instead of flying away to safety, will sit on that nest and cover her chicks with her wings, giving her own life in the fire, in the hope of saving her little ones. Surely a human parent loves his or her child that much too, and would not hesitate to die to save the life of that child.

"Don't let us make the mistake of letting anyone make us to feel that we do not owe anyone in this world anything. We owe more than we could ever imagine to the mothers who have brought us into this world and who then with the fathers have provided for us and have sacrificed that we might have not only the necessities but the extras of life. We, furthermore, owe so much to our founding forefathers who have made it possible that we might have the good life which is provided for us in this good land.

But getting back to our parents on this Father's Day, surely they deserve our obedience and our respect. In their great love for us they want only the best for us. Let us remember these things as we honor them today."

Shelly Harris was also the recipient of a Harrington Alumni Scholarship presented last month.

The Harrington Teachers' Association Scholarship was awarded to Helen Welch. She too was the recipient of a Harrington Alumni Scholarship.

The American Legion Auxiliary Scholarship was awarded to Janet Wirick.

An International Playtex Corporation Scholarship was won by Constance Kates.

Reader's Digest Award was presented to Hope Torbert.

The Goldie-Beacom Spelling Awards were won by Hope Torbert, Carol Philippi, Terry Carroll, Judy Wyatt, Patty Philippi, and Darlene Dobraski.

Best Business Student award was presented to Carol Philippi.

The Betty Crocker Home-making Award was won by Debbie Thorpe.

Vocational Industrial Clubs of America contest winners were Alan Lane and Roger Moore for masonry, Kenneth Wright for electronics, and Gary Jerread for job interview.

High honors for academic achievement for the second semester were earned by Helen Welch, Hope Torbert, Connie Kates, Kathy Nelson, Virginia Deputy, Doreen Chaffinch, Donna Chalmers, Judy Tatman, Joan Mason, Olin Davis, Donna Mahony, Ricky Porter, Michael Tatman, Michael Chaffinch, Aleta Mason, Kay Raughley and Guy Winebrenner.

The individual athletic awards for basketball, track, wrestling, softball, and cheerleading were presented by the coaches. Special recognition was given to the track, wrestling, and cross country teams for winning the Henlopen Conference championship trophies. The girls basketball team was also recognized for winning the divisional championship.

A special athletic announcement was made by Superintendent Albert W. Adams. Jerry Cagle's football jersey No. 27 was retired and placed in the trophy case. Jerry was on the All-Henlopen Conference Team three years in a row, the only Harrington football player to ever accomplish such a feat.

Harrington High School was certainly honored this year by the academic and athletic achievement of its students. In closing the history book of Harrington High School, Mr. Ryan referred to the students as the Spartans of Lake Forest High School. He further commented that they should develop a sense of pride and loyalty to their new school as well as they had maintained for Harrington High. The students should approach the consolidation positively and plan to cooperate with the Felton students in developing a superior educational program.

I knew the lieutenant in charge of the truck was a good joe; and he wouldn't turn me in if he didn't have to; so I goes out and takes me a look around; and lo! and behold! sweet chariot! I'm a comin' me home! There's the boys from Battery B loadin' up to go back to Salzburg. So I loads up with 'em, and back to Salzburg we hit it. It's about a mile from where they were billeted. So I trots it back to where we were billeted; and as I walked up; there was the lieutenant loading up another crew to take up to the Hideaway—Hitler's! He took a look at me; and I kept right on awalkin' right up to the stairs and right to bed.

Boy, I guess I was the only "Little Boy Blue", in the Southern Army.

Perhaps, I should have named this article, "Awol in Berchtesgarden."

No, they didn't stage this war for my benefit; although sometimes, it seems that way; make the most of it and smile, anyway! Even though it hurts.

THE STORY OF THE DOZEN PLATES

By W. C. Burgess

TIME: May 9, 1945

PLACE: BERTCHESGARTEN, GERMANY; HITLER'S HIDEAWAY! (No! Not Dawson's Dynamite.)

Now, it seems like the day before, VE Day, May 8, 1945; that some of the big wheels, Colonels, etc.; took off for a tour of the hinterlands as soon as the announcement of the armistice was signed. They ran into the SS; and the SS didn't hear of the armistice being signed as yet. So they captured the big wheels; and then they had to use the radio to find out that they had to let the big brass go. In other words, it was still warm thereabouts.

I thought that Berchtesgarden was in Austria; but it seems that it still is in Germany; although I am reasonably sure that we went East to get there.

So, here goes the storky. Pardon, me, I hit the wrong key on the keyboard!

At 9 o'clock, the boys left Salzburg, Austria to go to Berchtesgarden, which was 27 kilometers away. We were supposed to be back by 11 o'clock; which means of course, that there must not have been much to see up there anyway. But us poor jokers could at least say we had been there! And how!

We arrived on time, and maybe got away on time, too! One nose, however, was missing; you guessed it; it was me! Why, but of course. Audie Murphy's 3rd Infantry Division cleaned up all the whiskey; and yours truly, cleaned up all the wine, or tried too!

Too bad I didn't have some of the Harrington drunks with me! Alas! Hitler's wine, and all for free! However, Harrington was well represented; with yours truly there.

Now, down to serious business! The Frenchmen were running up and down the cliffs in American jeeps; and needless to say, some of them didn't make it; so they say!

The Treaty of Munich was signed in the amphitheatre right where I was in Berchtesgarden; but the theatre was all bombed out; just as Chamberlain was after he signed the treaty here. So, we decide to do a little exploring. We cut down to the right of the amphitheatre and start walking. The Eagles Nest was off limits. The sign said, "For field grade officers only." When Eisenhower got there later on; he tore the sign down. So we backtrack; and go down the righthand side of the amphitheatre; and lo, and behold; there stood a crib filled with expensive wines! Being alone, I helped myself! I usually traveled alone, anyway, for obvious reasons. You didn't have to share the loot.

There was a little hotel above ground just a few yards from where this wine crib was situated; just in case any tourists have been there since I was.

Then, a few yards past the hotel was an underground bunker; and in it trots old Winston. It was very amusing though; wasn't it Miss Susan! The lights were still on; for some reason or other, and so the "Story of the Twelve Plates!"

In the front part of this bunker there was all powder and perfumes; a little farther back, there were twelve plates (maybe more) on a table! And lo! and behold; monogrammed silverware.

It was wine or silverware; and the wine won out.

How am I going to get that stuff back to the States, anyway! To start off with, the postoffice boys had installed metal detectors; and they are the boys who "Made the Mint!" And of course, you know what I mean! How am I going to get ole' Hitler's hardware—pardon me, silverware through customs. They would have been delighted to relieve pore' ole' Winston of the silverware. And of course, you still had to have all packages ok'd even if you took a chance on mailing 'em. You would have to get an officer to put his stamp on them; and that would be exceedingly doubtful!

"Oh! well! 'Pore ole' lonesome me'; I guess I'll just have to let 'em be."

BOSTON HARBOR, November 20th, 1945. THE WOOSTER VICTORY, tied up at the port, so that the poor boys didn't have to walk on water to land; and you guessed it; there were THREE DOGS there, alright! But, lo! and behold! a miracle! They were just a little peeved; ESP! I knew what they were thinking! Look at them guys, bringing in jewels, and everything in the wide world; "What a paradise! However, many is the boy who brought home nothing but a pine box!"

"Oh! well!" An asterick jumped the gun this time. Anything for a free ride."

Back to the bunker; I didn't dare go in any further. There had to be a maze of bunkers further in behind this one; but who wants to get losted in a bunch of bunkers and then get charged with being AWOL; or maybe running into a bunch of SS. You might call 'em bosom buddies; but not me. You could get done in, down there, and they might never find you.

I knew the lieutenant in charge of the truck was a good joe; and he wouldn't turn me in if he didn't have to; so I goes out and takes me a look around; and lo! and behold! sweet chariot! I'm a comin' me home! There's the boys from Battery B loadin' up to go back to Salzburg. So I loads up with 'em, and back to Salzburg we hit it. It's about a mile from where they were billeted. So I trots it back to where we were billeted; and as I walked up; there was the lieutenant loading up another crew to take up to the Hideaway—Hitler's! He took a look at me; and I kept right on awalkin' right up to the stairs and right to bed.

Boy, I guess I was the only "Little Boy Blue", in the Southern Army.

Perhaps, I should have named this article, "Awol in Berchtesgarden."

No, they didn't stage this war for my benefit; although sometimes, it seems that way; make the most of it and smile, anyway! Even though it hurts.

FENCE TALK

with George K. Vapas

Do we have a waiting line of people willing to pay for good lawn care service? The complete job. If so, Charles McDougall, assistant administrator of the Federal Extension Service, points to a ready supply of labor and a method of doing the job properly.

He suggests that lawn supply business men hire and equip young people to do an efficient job with proper training. And yes, either our Cooperative Extension Service and/or the Kent Vocational Technical School can help train these young people. And we might work in some older men wanting a limited amount of work to keep busy.

The principles of proper lawn care are easily learned. You can start from scratch or rework an existing lawn. Mostly it is a matter of proper timing for mowing, watering and fertilizing. Insects, diseases, weeds and other pests are individual problems easily defined with experience.

I've been talking with several businessmen in the Dover area and most agree the big problem is trained labor. Other minor pitfalls include pay scales, and all of the problems that go with hired help, such as liability insurance, supervision, and collections.

One man cited an individual working for himself who felt he was making money charging $3 per hour and providing all the tools. He doubted that the individual was properly charging in all of his costs and thought a more realistic cost figure before any profit was closer to $4.50 per hour. Which may cut down on the market for lawn care services.

Let's just say, the matter deserves and will get further study. What happened to that waiting line?

Francis Webb, our new assistant agricultural agent is busy on the job. I happened to phone his parents the other day and asked for Francis. His mother said "Oh, you mean Frank. That's what we call him at home."

His major projects this summer will be the two irrigation field demonstrations going on in the county. We feel our readers may want to keep an eye on the corn and soybean variety plots on the Winkler farm north of Harrington on the east side of the dual highway. That particular irrigation system is the only one of its kind operating east of Colorado. It's called "Walking Water" and literally skids around rather than rolls over the field.

Both of us seem to be taking a lot of trouble calls on plant problems. And we welcome them. One of the more interesting this past week was a high salts reading of irrigation water taken out of a stream near Dover. High enough to cause plants to turn brown. Following a line of reasoning that it may be water pollution, we are checking out the watershed feeding into the stream. But there is also the possibility of very high tides backing water as far as the farmers pump.

We do have some farmers close to the bay who irrigate only on an outgoing tide. But that is a touchy business at best.

The new towns concept, as one method of dealing with urbanizing problems in Delaware, will be on tap at a University Symposium in Newark on July 1. The cost is $4 per person for reservation including lunch and two coffee periods, payable to the Delaware State Planning Office by June 26. Thomas Howard, director of the Harvard County Planning Commission, wherein the new town of Columbia, Maryland, is located, will be one of the out of state speakers. Over two hours are scheduled for open discussion.

Here goes my application to attend. How about yours?

Next week for a lead item in "Fence Talk" relating to the Air Pollution Control seminar held at the University of Delaware on June 11. Your county agent appeared to be the only person attending from Kent and Sussex counties. Well attended otherwise. There was much "meat" in the meeting. It's going to take a bit of digesting to bring it into perspective. And because there will be some personal opinions, your county agent needs some thinking time.

U. of D. Musician Wins in Artists Competition

Laurence Shapiro, first violinist of the University of Delaware Resident String Quartet, was a winner in the recent Baltimore Young Artists competition.

In addition to receiving a cash prize in the June 1 competition, he was chosen to present a solo recital in Baltimore's Jewish Community Center in the fall. He also will audition for the right to appear as guest soloist with the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra during the coming season.

The founder-leader of the String Quartet is a native of Texas and began his study of the violin at age six. A member of the El Paso Symphony at ten and a soloist with the orchestra at eleven, he was its concertmaster at fifteen. During his early teens, he studied with Nouni Fischer in Southern California and appeared as guest soloist with several orchestras there.

After moving to New York, he studied with Rafael Bronstein at the Manhattan School of Music and at Yale University he took graduate work in chamber music with Broadus Erle, David Schwartz and Aldo Parisot. He continued his study of chamber music with Miss Lillian Fuchs at the Manhattan School. While in New York he was violinist with the New York Baroque Ensemble and for four seasons served as concertmaster and soloist with the Philharmonia of New York.

He has been a member of the University's string quartet since 1967.

It Seems To Me

By Janet C. Reed

Every woman loves a bargain. A seamstress particularly likes to get a fabric bargain—but when is a fabric a bargain?

Many of my bargain fabrics are stashed away for a rainy day which probably will never come. A bargain is not a bargain if it is not used.

Many of us can hardly pass by a remnant table without taking a look. But, after a while you may notice remnants are not always cheaper than the original price. Merchants know women look for bargains on the remnant table.

You may notice a dress length of a slow moving fabric tossed in with the remnants. Sometimes it's cheaper, but not always. And you may have to buy more than you need. No bargain there!

On that remnant table, how do you know the fiber content of the fabric and how to care for it? The Federal Textile Fiber Products Identification Act requires identification of fiber content by percentages of weight, but remnants are not required to be labeled.

The Act states that remnants may be labeled with the words "remnants of undetermined fiber content." In place of individual labeling, a sign may be placed in conjunction with the remnant display. This information does not mislead you, but it does not help you know how to care for the fabric.

If you are a confirmed remnant shopper, always ask yourself why the fabric is on the remnant table. Usually it is end of the bolt, and the short yardage may challenge your creative ability.

Is the remnant cut from the bolt because of a flaw? How serious is the flaw and where is it located? You may be able to cut around it, but this will take more of your time. Do you have enough money to make up for the extra time and trouble?

Is the remnant soiled? Will it wash easily? Be wary of grease spots.

Check the grain line. Off-grain fabrics are often on a bargain table. This is easy to overlook until you are ready to cut out a garment.

However, the remnants may have been purchased in a lot left over from ready-to-wear manufacture. You can get some good buys if you know fabric quality.

Remnants can be bargains but often you waste your money. Even though we know this, most fabric lovers continue to dig for treasure deep in that remnant pile.

St. Stephen's Episcopal Church News

SUNDAY—

9 a.m. Holy Communion and sermon.

TUESDAY—

6:30 p.m. Boy Scouts.

WEDNESDAY—

7:30 p.m. Healing Service using St. John Baptist propers.

As the vicar has to be away next weekend, it will be the pleasure of the congregation to again have as celebrant of Holy Communion and as preacher, on that Sun., June 29, the Rev. Joseph S. Hinks, Vicar Emeritus of St. Stephen's. It is always a pleasure to have Father Hinks in the chancel. We welcome him and look forward to his coming.

It will be the pleasure this Sunday to have a layman to administer the chalice in Holy Communion for the first time at St. Stephen's. According to the new canons of the church, which were passed by the last general convention, a licensed lay reader who has the permission of the Bishop to do so can administer the chalice. This is a great help to the celebrating priest, particularly on great festivals of the church when the congregation is large. St. Stephen's is fortunate in having her own licensed lay reader, Clyde Perry. While this is a great break with customs it still has Biblical justification. In early new testament days we are led to believe from holy scripture, that laymen did administer the chalice. In any event it is good to have this function carried on by devoted Christian laymen.

SOMETHING NEW IN IRRIGATION

The pivot sprinkler system is something new for this part of the country. In fact, David and Bob Winkler, agents for the device, say their "Farm Hand" is the only one east of the Mississippi River. It irrigates 30 acres in a circle and has 575 feet of pipe. The pipe walks around in a circle, like the spoke in a wheel. The Winklers, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Winkler, say labor saving is a major advantage of the sprinkler since it walks in a circle eliminating the moving of pipe. The sprinkler irrigates 30 acres at a time. The recent dry spell made this device welcome.

A well is the hub of the sprinkler system. The tractor furnishes the pumping power. photos by Parsons Studio

Wood To Head U. of D. Chemistry Dept.

Dr. Robert Wood, associate professor, has been named to head the chemistry department at the University of Delaware this fall. Dr. Wood succeeds Dr. William A. Mosher, department chairman for 17 years, who is stepping down to devote more time to research and teaching.

Dr. Wood received his B. S. degree from the California Institute of Technology in 1953, where he was top man in his graduating class. In 1957 he received a Ph.D. in chemistry from the University of California at Berkeley. His doctoral thesis was on the heats, free energies and entropies of the ferrate and selenite ions.

Dr. Wood has also worked in the research and development department of Beckman Instruments, where he developed a device with special sensitivity for measuring acidity in solutions.

While attending the University of California, Dr. Wood was employed as a research assistant by the Radiation Laboratory there. After earning his doctorate, he continued his association with the Radiation Laboratory until joining the University of Delaware faculty in 1957.

At Delaware he was an instructor in chemistry from 1957 to 1958 and an assistant professor until 1963 when he was promoted to his present position of associate professor.

Since 1965 Dr. Wood has been doing special research in saline solutions. One of the objects of his research is to find economical ways to convert salt water to drinking water. The author of more than a dozen articles for publication in scientific journals, he is listed in the American Men of Science.

Dr. Mosher joined the University of Delaware faculty in 1945 as professor and chairman of the chemistry department. He received his B. A. degree from Willamette University, Salem in 1935; his M.S. from Oregon State University in 1936 and his Ph. D. in organic chemistry from Pennsylvania State University in 1940.

Before coming to the University, Dr. Mosher served as assistant to the director of research of Hercules, Inc. In 1952-53 he was a Fulbright lecturer in Austria.

U. of D. Names Archivist

John M. Clayton, Jr., reader services librarian since 1967, has been named university archivist at the University of Delaware. President E. A. Trabant announced this week.

In this new university post, Clayton will be responsible for setting up the archival program and establishing policies for its operation.

A graduate of West Chester State College, Clayton received his M. S. degree in library science from the Drexel Institute of Technology in 1966. While studying for his master's degree, he was librarian at Penns Grove High School, Penns Grove, N. J., for three years. He taught for a year at Avon-Grove High School West Grove, Pa., before coming to the university. He is a member of the American Library Association and the Delaware Library Association.

The archives will preserve historical written and published records of university activities, including such historical documents as the papers of President Hullen and Evans and other manuscripts as well as speeches, writings, and correspondence of university notables and important visitors to the campus. More routine documents which will be placed in the archives include the faculty newsletter, the student newspaper, the alumni magazine, photographs and other memorabilia.

A special area in the basement of the Morris Library will be renovated for archival purposes and is expected to be ready in the fall.

In his new assignment, Clayton will report to the president through Daniel W. Wood, assistant to the president and university secretary.

Grass May Be Too Green

Many Delaware lawn enthusiasts are keeping grass too green during the summer months, according to Dr. William H. Mitchell, extension agronomist at the University of Delaware.

Too much green color may indicate that grass has been overstimulated with excessive nitrogen, he explains. Although some nitrogen is essential for proper turf growth, an over supply can lower grass food reserves, shorten the root system and generally weaken the plant.

If excessive nitrogen conditions exist, mow the grass more frequently, taking care to remove no more than 50 per cent of the top growth in a single cutting. Removal of additional top growth will place additional stress on grass.

For cool season grasses, such as Kentucky bluegrass and red fescue, never use more than a quarter pound of nitrogen per 1,000 square feet during the summer months.

Southern grasses, such as Zoysia and Bermudagrass, are exceptions to the rule, adds Mitchell. These grasses make most of their growth during the summer and should have an ample nitrogen supply.

For best results with southern grasses, apply two pounds of nitrogen per 1,000 square feet at least three times during the summer growing season.

Moose Nips Tastee-Freez in Extra Innings

Gary Harrington's Moose team remained undefeated in Little League play by edging Tom Peck's expansion club, Tastee-Freez, 8-5 in seven innings.

Harrington gave the fledgling outfit a fighting chance by withholding his top pitchers. This sportsmanlike gesture is to his credit and resulted in a closely-contested game. The last time Moose and Tastee-Freez met, Moose won easily. We would like to see others, in both the Senior and Little Leagues, attempt to keep the games more competitive by giving the weaker clubs an opportunity to score a few runs. We don't care to see a 15-0 score (in these age groups) in which an experienced hurler throws a one-hit or no-hit game.

John Harrington was the winning pitcher. Tastee-Freez hurler Roger Perry did a good job. Leftfielder Roland Loper had two hits for Tastee-Freez.

Rain Ruins Big Leaguers' Victory Bid

Harrington's Big League entry was denied in its bid for an extra-inning victory, at Milford Sunday afternoon, when three Harrington eighth-inning tallies were washed out by a rainstorm.

The score reverted to the 1-1 tie that existed after seven innings.

Felton's Mike Fisher was on the mound for Harrington and limited the opposition to five hits.

Fisher's two hits and one bingle by catcher John Brown was the sum total of Harrington's offensive efforts.

Kent Senators Ask State to Build Bypass

The three Kent County senators who have so far successfully fought construction of a West Dover bypass Wednesday urged the State Highway Department to prepare plans for a bypass elsewhere.

The department chose the bypass from three routes proposed several years ago, but each year Kent County legislators have succeeded in stalling any work on it. The three senators — Andy Foltz, R-Dover; Allen J. Cook, D-Kenton; and George A. Robbins, D-Milford — Wednesday sent a letter to Charles S. Eller, chairman of the highway commission, expressing concern at the "reluctance of the (department) to provide an acceptable Dover bypass."

"The increase in traffic and its concomitant hazards makes it mandatory that immediate engineering and funding begin to alleviate this frustrating impasse," the letter stated.

The three said they would amend the fiscal 1970 bond bill to include money for "this much needed traffic artery" if an acceptable route is offered.

The objections to a western route have been that it would take prime farmland.

The letter brought a comment from an upstate senator, Michael N. Castle, R-Wilmington, that in his 2½ years in the legislature "no issue has left me as confused as this issue has."

When he was in the House, Castle said, all the representatives from Kent County opposed any plan, but "here, they want one."

Noting that he uses U.S. 13 coming to the legislature and going to and from the beach on weekends, he said, "I personally would like to see a bypass as soon as possible. I wish you would all get together."

As a result of a resolution passed by the Senate earlier this year, $500,000 for right-of-way acquisition for the west bypass was dropped from the fiscal 1970 bond bill introduced Tuesday.

But the bill still included funds for work on a Fredericka to Camden road that the Kent senators consider part of the west bypass. Wednesday they introduced an amendment which would prohibit any bond money from being used on this road.

The highway department has been holding hearings this week on improvements to U.S. 13 through Dover to eliminate what officials consider three of the 10 most dangerous intersections in the state.

Joe S. Robinson, the department's chief engineer, said Wednesday the improvements to the current route are needed even if a bypass elsewhere is eventually constructed. They are not intended as a substitute, he said.

House Passes Pay Raise

A teacher pay-raise bill that teachers are unhappy about passed the House and went to the Senate Wednesday.

The measure (H.B. 320) remained intact through several attempts to amend it. The bill would raise the salaries of teachers, nurses, cafeteria workers and other school employees by 5 per cent but would not take effect until July 1, 1970.

The Delaware State Education Association, which represents most Delaware teachers outside Wilmington, went on record this week as opposing the bill because of the year's delay.

Amendments defeated during debate on the bill Wednesday would have made the bill effective this July 1 and raised pay scales for school nurses and cafeteria workers even more. All were sponsored by Democrats and when it appeared the school - nurse amendment might pass, Republicans hurriedly called a caucus.

They emerged united in opposition to the amendments but promised later, separate legislation to raise scales for nurses and cafeteria workers. The nurse bill, almost identical to the amendment sponsored by Democratic Rep. Joan C. Wright of Eastburn Heights, was introduced before the House recessed Wednesday.

It was offered by Republican Reps. Warren B. Burt, of Anglesey and John F. Kirk Jr. of Delaware City.

The sponsor of H.B. 320, Rep. Clarice U. Heckert, R-Highland Woods, said increases teachers and other school employees will get this July 1 already amount to an average of 7 per cent, depending on local supplements.

A year ago, the legislature approved a $400 increase for fiscal 1970 for all teachers, administrators, cafeteria managers, custodians and nurses.

The increase will bring the state-supported bachelor's degree teacher salary minimum to $6,000 and the maximum to $8,000, with the salary going up with each year's experience in increments of $200. A 5 per cent rise as proposed by H.B. 320 would make the minimum $6,300 beginning July 1 of next year.

Mrs. Heckert said to make the boost effective this year would give school employees 12 per cent raises and would bring clamoring for similar treatment from other state workers.
