

Council and Police Dept. Give One Another the 'Eye'

The Harrington Police Department seeks improvements and benefits and the City Council seeks better police performance.

The entire police department, with the exception of a part-time patrolman, had a face-to-face confrontation with the City Council Monday night.

Present were Chief of Police Franklin Rogers, Sgt. Alexander Sharon, Sgt. Robert Darling, and Cr. Arthur Marsan.

The police department sought a radar. Sgt. Sharon believed the device and warning signs would cut down speeding. Council is giving the request study.

Chief Rogers asked for a health, accident, and retirement insurance policy. The department once had such a policy but it was discontinued when police were given a raise. City Manager Kathryn Derrickson is to study the situation.

The chief asked for raises and, on a request from a councilman, said he believed $10 per week would be all right, but no action was taken except in the case of part-time personnel. These, Cpl. Marsan and Patrolman Solomon Anderson, were raised from $1.75 to $2 per hour.

On the request of Chief Rogers, the Council agreed on advertising for a new police car. The present one is four years old.

After the police force had departed, the Council had its day. Some councilmen thought the performance of the department was not up to par, and the Council motioned the police chief be told of petty complaints. These included parking offenses.

In other business Monday evening, when, for the first time in month, all six councilmen were present, the Council acted as follows:

Agreed to withhold payment of a bill to Teal Construction Company, Dover, until it had put the streets back into their previous condition after the company had improved the sanitary-sewer system. It was said North Street and the end of Thomas Alley, at Liberty Street, were offenders. The first-mentioned street was said to have too much stone and not enough tar. The last-mentioned street had an uneven man-hole cover. There was also a low spot on Center Street extending in Harrington Manor, left over from a street-improvement program by the same firm.

Continuing on streets, the Council received a letter from Sheldon Starr, president of the New Era Shirt Company, asking that Reed Street, which borders its Clark Street plant, be improved to its parking lot in the rear. Starr asked that the letter be read to the Council, be entered in the minutes and he be notified it was read. City Manager Derrickson was told to tell Starr work had been started on the project before the letter was received. Read a letter from the Chamber of Commerce saying Meredith & Son was parking trucks on Liberty Street and having junked cars on the same firm. The city manager said Meredith had replied it wasn't junk but "his business." The City is to get an opinion from its attorney.

The wedding will take place August 9th.

Kent County Family Court

Judge Kelsey presiding

Twenty-three juveniles appeared before the court on a total of 29 motor vehicle violations. Fines and costs were paid in each case.

One 17-year-old juvenile was before the court on a charge of failing to stop on command of a police officer. It was ordered that he pay costs and a fine of $200 out of his own personal earnings and that his license be suspended for a period of one year.

One juvenile was before the court for illegal consumption of alcoholic beverages. A plea of guilty was entered, and the court ordered that fine and costs be paid.

Six juveniles were before the court on nine charges of petit larceny. All pleaded guilty, and fines and costs were paid in eight cases with each juvenile being placed on probation. One case was continued until a later date.

Twenty-one defendants were before the court for a review of their support orders. Each has his respective order amended and was given a suspended jail sentence upon a large payment being made on the support arrearages.

Domingo M. Paras, Dover, was before the court charged with contributing to the delinquency of a female minor. He was released on $1,000 bond until a later hearing date.

One 14-year-old juvenile was before the court for review of prior commitment. After hearing the evidence presented, the court ordered that she be committed to the Governor Bacon Health Center for extensive psychiatric and psychological examination and treatment.

Eight juveniles were before the court for release from probation, each release being granted.

One juvenile was before the court on a charge of burglary. (Continued on Page 8)

Roy Porter Dies at 93

Roy Porter, 93, of 3 Liberty St., died Saturday in the Milford Memorial Hospital after a short illness.

Mr. Porter retired 15 years ago after a long career as a hardware and grocery store employee. He was a lifetime member of the Harrington Fire Company.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Mary E. (Mamie) Porter. Services were held Tuesday afternoon at the McKnatt Funeral Home, 50 Commerce St. Interment was in Hollywood Cemetery.

Albert C. Price wrote the following article, published in The Harrington Journal, Fri., June 9, 1967:

"Mulligan" Porter, as he is affectionately known to the older citizens of our community, was born on a farm near White's Church on the Harrington-Whitelysburg road, approximately three miles northwest of Harrington, Jan. 26, 1876.

He moved in town to his present residence, 3 E. Liberty St., in 1895, and began working for the late Ezekiel Fleming, firing the boiler at his sawmill and making tin cans at his cannery (in later years known as Vane's Cannery) during the winter months for the succeeding year's tomato pack.

In 1905, he was employed at Billy Wright's hardware store, at 37 Commerce St., later known as Harrington Hardware. He also assisted the late Major Wyatt, an undertaker, who conducted his business on the second floor of the store.

In 1915, Porter went to work for Wilbur E. Jacobs, who operated a general store on Commerce Street at Dorman Street, retiring in 1951 at 75.

He says he can remember when there wasn't a concrete sidewalk in town and the first walk was laid on Railroad Avenue in front of the late Billy Ross property, later owned by Mrs. Harvey Camper. He said wooden boards and planks served as sidewalks.

On March 6, 1917, he married the former Mary Hatfield and March 6, 1967, they celebrated their golden wedding anniversary.

Kent Man Gets 30 Yrs. For Slaying

Arthur Lewis, 53, of Harrington, was sentenced to 30 years in prison for the shooting death of Sam Colter, 46, of Greenwood last December.

Superior Court Judge Vincent A. Bifferato pronounced sentence Tuesday after completion of a presentence investigation.

Lewis was indicted by the Kent County Grand Jury in March on a second-degree murder charge. However, just before his trial, he pleaded guilty to the reduced charge of manslaughter, and the state accepted the plea.

Lewis was accused of shooting Colter at the home of a mutual friend in December. According to state police, Lewis had been visiting the home of David Biddle, 7 miles east of Harrington, when Colter arrived. Police said an argument between Lewis and Colter resulted in the shooting. Colter was pronounced dead on arrival at Kent General Hospital, Dover.

Blue Cross Cites Rise of Expenses For Hike in Fees

The cost to Blue Cross of paying the average member's daily hospital bill has gone up to 20 per cent in two years and nearly 50 per cent in four years.

The figures were cited by two officials of Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Delaware in the annual report for 1968, just issued. J. Sellers Bancroft, president, and H. V. Maybee, managing director, predicted in the report, prepared before new hospital rate increases were announced within the past two weeks, that Blue Cross and Blue Shield rates "will have to go up substantially before 1969 is over."

They pointed to soaring costs to Blue Cross over the past four years. "The average cost per patient-day to Blue Cross in 1969 was $67.53. Two years ago it was $55.98. This shows a rise of 20 per cent in only two years. In the past four years this basic cost has risen nearly 50 per cent."

The two officials reported Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Delaware paid out more than $25 million in 1968 to pay health care bills of its members. The figure sets a new record for the non-profit community organization which administers prepayment plans for health care expenses.

Bancroft and Maybee said that costs exceeded subscription income during 1968, but investment and other income covered the difference. Subscription income came to $26,350,411, and costs for members' care was $25,081,798. Administrative expenses were $1,930,790. The excess of costs of care and the other expenses over subscription income was $662,172.

Emphasizing that Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Delaware is a non-profit organization, the two officials declared that costs of administration are strictly held to a minimum. In 1968, the payment of health care bills of members - the basic purpose of Blue Cross and Blue Shield - used 93 per cent of subscribers' dues, and only seven per cent was used for administrative expenses.

They also emphasized that Blue Cross provides service benefits in its contracts with members, paid for in advance through membership dues. Blue Cross pays agreed-upon hospital charges for the contract benefits which are provided to members. When hospital costs go up, the charges rise; and costs to Blue Cross rise accordingly. Inevitably, when hospital charges go up, Blue Cross rates must in time follow.

Membership again reached record high numbers last year, the officials continued. "There is no more convincing demonstration anywhere of the public's regard for Blue Cross and Blue Shield membership than

Voters Approve Bonds For Water & Sewer Mains

SHE LOVES A PARADE — Cathy Ricker, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Robert Ricker, is shown Tuesday after presenting an invitation to Gov. Russell Peterson in Dover. The invitation, on behalf of the Delaware Sheep & Wool Association, invites the governor to attend the livestock parade the evening of Thurs., July 31, at Delaware State Fair here. Cathy will lead the parade as Little Bo Peep. Price photo

Voters approved a $100,000 bond issue in a referendum here Tuesday, 6151 to 4954.

The vote was tabulated on the basis of one vote for each $1 paid in taxes.

City officials, on advice of their bond attorneys, also gave ballots on a one-person, one-vote basis.

However, Mayor Burton Satterfield said these ballots were not counted on the assumption the tax vote was legal.

The one-person, one-vote ballots were locked up and will be counted by the board of elections if tax vote is declared unconstitutional, the mayor added.

In the election, 147 persons voted and one ballot was void.

The bond issue was for water and sanitary-sewer mains in an area recently annexed east of U.S. 13; sewer for three houses on the south-bound lane of U.S. 13; water and sewer on a piece of Mission Street and Coleman Street; a pumping station at the eastern end of Coleman Street, and a force main from the station to Mechanic Street.

DRIVER'S LICENSES TO HAVE PHOTOS NEXT YEAR

Delaware driver's licenses will have a new look next year — the look of the driver they belong to.

Beginning in January, the new licenses will bear the photograph of the holder, according to S. B. 308, signed into law by Gov. Russell W. Peterson Tuesday. The new law also sets the term of driver's licenses at four years for a $10 fee. Currently, the fee is $4 every two years.

Sen. J. Donald Isaacs, R-Townsend, who sponsored the bill, said it would aid police in identifying persons, particularly youths who borrow someone else's license in attempts to purchase liquor before they become 21.

Persons will have their photographs taken at the driver motor vehicle lanes in the three counties.

The law takes effect Jan. 1. Another measure signed Tuesday, H.S. 1 for H.B. 218, is intended to prohibit blocking entrances and exits to public buildings. The bill, which excludes lawful picketing from its coverage, is aimed at demonstrations at colleges or other buildings.

The Governor also signed H. B. 370 to create a state central data processing division to centralize computer work in state government.

The division would be under the budget director. Currently agencies operate independently in this field.

Other bills signed: —H.B. 268 to extend interim zoning regulations in Sussex County until Dec. 30, 1970, and allow a committee to prepare permanent regulations until then.

—H.B. 127 to allow the chief deputies in the offices of the prothonotary, register in chancery and clerk of the orphans court in Kent and Sussex Counties to be paid $7,200 a year, or as much as the elected officeholder gets.

—S.B. 288 to allow incorporated businesses and towns to take civil actions to magistrate courts without hiring a lawyer. They have complained that they have to pay a lawyer $75 to go to court to collect a $10 debt.

Local Moose Lodge Receives Recognition

The Harrington Moose Lodge was awarded first place in Class B of competition sponsored by the Mooseheart-Moosehaven Endowment Fund Board during the 81st annual international convention of the Moose now in session at the Conrad Hilton Hotel, in Chicago, Ill.

Announcement of the awards was made by Comptroller George Pelton and members of the Mooseheart-Moosehaven Endowment Fund Board. To gain international honors, the Harrington lodge made a per capita contribution of $4.11 to the endowment fund.

Winners in the competition are: Class A, lodges with a membership of 1,000 and more, (in the order listed) Edgemere, Md.; Essex, Md.; and Catonsville, Md.; Class B, lodges with membership from 200 to 999, Harrington, Del.; Annapolis, Md.; and Easton, Md.; Class C, lodges with membership from 1 to 199, Silver Spring, Md.; North Charleston, S. C.; and Arlington, Texas.

In addition, five honorable mentions were awarded in each of the three divisions.

Purpose of the Endowment Fund is to insure the future of both Mooseheart, the Moose City of Children near Aurora, Ill., and Moosehaven, the Moose City of Contentment for aged members and their wives near Jacksonville, Fla., against any possible future emergencies.

Plaques and honorable mentions are awarded to Moose lodges who on a per capita basis make the largest contributions to the fund each year. Total contributions average more than a quarter of a million dollars per year.

Prospects Improve For Opening Lake Forest in Sept.

With the settlement of the carpenters' strike, there is a good possibility the construction of Lake Forest High School will be completed in time for the institution to open by Sept. 1, it was revealed last week at a reorganization of the Lake Forest School Board here.

The senior high school is being constructed near Killen's Pond and will serve Harrington, Felton, and Frederica.

The school board was reorganized as follows: President, Robert A. Holloway; vice president, Everett B. Warrington Jr.; secretary, Albert W. Adams; Building Commission, chairman, Virgil Jarrell; vice chairman, Albert C. Price; delegate to advisory board of State Board of Education and Delaware School Boards Association, James Pizzadilli; alternate delegate, Price.

In other action the board acted as follows:

Voted to buy colonial-blue sweaters, with buff Lake Forest insignia, and white trousers, black shoes and socks, as a temporary uniform, on the recommendation of the band boosters clubs of Harrington and Felton. These clubs will raise funds for permanent uniforms.

Swore in Joseph Hughes, Felton, elected to the board in May, and appointed Marvin E. Brown, Frederica, as board member. He replaces Charles West, elected in May, but who became ineligible when a portion of the Frederica school district, in which he resided, voted to go with the Milford School District.

The next board meeting will be held July 21.

Delaware Food Market Report

By Anne Holberton
Economists, nutritionists, scientists and other U.S. department of Agriculture experts have been closely watching all facets of food product marketing and consumption in the United States. From their various reports come some interesting facts and figures. This is the way it looks mid-year 1969:
There has been a very strong demand for food so far this year, with retail food expenditures running well ahead of last year and expected to total $105 billion. About half of the $4 billion increase over last year will be charged to higher retail food prices and the other half to increased buying.
Potential shopping bargains this year are expected to be fruits, vegetables, and poultry. Food shoppers will likely have to pay more for beef, eggs, dairy products, cereal and bakery products, soft drinks and cocoa products.
Per capita consumption of red meat this summer is expected to stay about the same level as last year, with retail beef prices higher through the summer even though per capita supplies will be as large as last year. Pork consumption is rising for the third consecutive year and pork prices will probably continue strong through the summer but then decline in the fall. Lamb and mutton consumption will continue to drop slowly and retail lamb prices are not expected to change much this summer for their record high.
What a family spends on food depends to a great degree on where it lives. A family of 4 with a family budget of $9,191 per year, spent on a national average $2,143 or nearly 23 per cent, on food, including meals away from home. If this average family had lived in Honolulu, its food bill would have been 19 per cent above the U.S. urban average. Other Northeast cities ranged from 3 to 8 per cent above. In the West, the food bill for this average family of 4 ranged from 5 per cent below the national average in San Diego, Calif., to 6 per cent above at Seattle, Wash. The South was the least costly, with food bills ranging from 5 to 8 per cent below the average. Washington, D.C. was right on the average and the North Central cities were close. Food costs in the non-metropolitan areas were lower than in the cities, ranging from about 10 per cent below in the South to 2 above in the Northeast.
The nickel candy bar may soon go the way of the good 5 cent cigar and cup of coffee. In the last 3 years we have consumed not only the world's annual cocoa production, but much of the reserve as well. As a result, the 1968-69 cocoa crop brought 46 cents per pound, compared with 17 cents for the 1965 crop.
Boil-in-the-pouch frozen foods are proving to be winners in the consumer popularity contest, with sales now totaling nearly 130 million pounds a year, worth over $73 million at retail prices. This is about 6 per cent of the total frozen vegetable pack of 2 billion pounds yearly, not counting potatoes. Consumer advantages claimed for them include ease of cleanup, built-in seasoning, reduced cooking odors, and variety. Although vegetables have lead the way, some seafoods are now on the market as are some meats, such as pastrami and ham, which are merely heated for use, and frozen fruit and berries, which are thawed in boiling water. Cut corn leads the pack in popularity.

Senior Citizen's Housing Preferences

Do senior citizens always want to retire to a place in the country—away from it all in peaceful, wide-open spaces? Not necessarily, says Miss Coral K. Morris, extension home management specialist at the University of Delaware.

Experience and research has exploded this and several other long-held beliefs concerning the housing preferences of older people, she reports.

For instance, many older people prefer to live "where the action is," particularly if they've lived in urban or suburban areas most of their lives. A good location for senior citizen housing is within walking distance of shopping centers, churches and cultural areas.

Another belief held that they prefer to live in small quarters, such as efficiency apartments which require less housekeeping. This, again, is not so. When senior citizens have the choice and the money, they usually select one or two bedroom houses or apartments, not the more compact arrangements.

Are retirees eager to move to another neighborhood or a warmer state even if it costs a few more dollars? Not always, says Miss Morris. Many persons willingly settle for average accommodations in the same area they lived before retirement rather than move to more modern housing.

Senior citizens do seem to prefer single story housing to two-story or apartment buildings. A one-story home eliminates having to go up and down stairs which may be very difficult for some older people.

Of course, most housing centers provided for senior citizens in cities are several stories high, but with elevators. Reaction to this depends on how accustomed they are to elevators. Even pleasure or displeasure with the view from a high window depends on what the older person is used to.

No matter how old you are, adequate storage space is a universal requirement. However, Miss Morris notes that it's even more important that a storage in senior citizen housing be located within easy reach. They should not need to stand on a ladder or stool to reach shelves. On the other hand, storage shouldn't be so low it requires too much bending and stooping.

Houseflies Carry Disease, Filth

The common housefly, a well-known pest to all Delawareans, is a major carrier of bacteria and disease, reports Frank E. Boys, extension entomologist at the University of Delaware.

The fly's six feet are equipped with bristles and sticky pads so the insect readily collects germs and filth, he observes. Large quantities of these organisms are then deposited wherever the fly lands. Among the diseases associated with houseflies are dysentery, diarrhea and typhoid fever.

Houseflies breed in almost any moist organic material—garbage, food waste, sewage, manure, dead animals. Proper sanitation, then, is an important factor in controlling flies.

Every home should have adequate garbage disposal facilities, says Boys. Garbage cans should be large enough to prevent overflowing, should be watertight and should have a tight-fitting cover. Draining and wrapping garbage and placing cans on raised racks will also help reduce fly breeding area.

If garbage collection service is unavailable, bury waste materials and cover with at least two feet of compacted earth.

Sanitary toilet facilities are also essential to housefly control programs, he adds. Homes not connected to public sewer systems should have sanitary septic tanks.

On farms or in other animal habitats, dispose of manure frequently by spreading on fields where waste may dry quickly or by using fly-proof manure bins.

In most areas, tight fitting screens are quite effective in reducing flies in the home, says Boys. But if houseflies are indeed a problem, a variety of chemical control, such as cygon, malathion and Diazinon sprays and vapon insecticide strips, are available.

No chemical, however, will take the place of good sanitary practices that prevent flies from breeding.

Extreme Heat Causes High Broiler Mortality

Extremely high temperatures in the Delaware-Maryland area during the past week have caused a tremendous increase in broiler mortality, reports University of Delaware extension poultryman Raymond W. Lloyd.

Reports from 14 of Delmarva's major broiler producers indicate that over 150,000 ready to market broilers perished from heat prostration between June 28 and June 30.

Many area rendering plants, which normally convert dead birds into fertilizer and other been forced to close due to overloading.

"When temperatures reach the 95 degree mark, we usually expect heat prostration with chickens," observes Lloyd. "Especially with older birds - those in the six to eight week range."

In the last three days of June, temperatures as high as 99 degrees were recorded at Salisbury; official Georgetown temperatures were as high as 96 degrees. This, of course, means that temperatures in area broiler houses were well over 100 degrees.

To combat the climbing mortality rate, Lloyd urges broiler producers to do all in their power to maintain floor level air circulation within their broiler houses.

Reverse all fans, if possible, to blow air into the houses rather than drawing it out, he suggests. Use additional pedestal fans to move air through the houses lengthwise.

Open all windows, doors and drop boards to allow air movement at floor level. And use lawn sprinklers to cool metal roofs and to help reduce temperatures inside the broiler houses.

There is very little we can do to prevent heat prostration other than to keep the air moving, try to reduce inside a break in the weather, he concludes.

Phone Science For Daddies

"Daddy, how does our telephone work?"

Have you ever found yourself in this fix? Is so, here's a simple explanation that may be adapted to almost any age group, to help get you off the "hook".

To understand how a telephone works, you first must understand about vibrations. When anything shakes back and forth rapidly, it is said to vibrate. And sounds that you hear are caused by something vibrating and transmitting the vibrations through the air to your ear.

As an example, when you pluck a guitar string you can see it vibrate and hear the sound that it makes. The shorter the guitar string is, the faster it vibrates and the higher the note that it makes. When I talk to you, my vocal cords vibrate the same way, and that's what you hear.

If I holler real loud, the air will carry my voice for a block or so. But if I want to talk to someone far away, I have to use electricity to carry my voice. To do this I first must change my voice sound vibrations into electrical vibrations to send over the wires. Then at the receiving end these electrical vibrations must be changed back into sound vibrations so the other person can hear them.

When you want to call someone on the telephone, you pick up the hand set. This operates a switch which turns on the telephone. After you hear dial tone, you turn the dial a certain number of times using different numbers. This tells the equipment in the telephone exchange which other telephone you want to talk to so it can connect you with that telephone.

On the most modern types of telephone, you tell the telephone exchange what number you are calling by pushing numbered buttons instead of dialing. These are called Touch-Tone telephones. Regular telephone dials work by sending out pulses. Each button sends out a different combination of two tones which the telephone exchange can identify as numbers for the purpose of making connections.

The bells in your telephone set rings when someone is calling you. When you answer the telephone, the switch operates and tells the telephone exchange to stop the ringing—that you are ready to listen and talk.

There is a great deal of expensive equipment in the telephone exchange. It is equivalent to a giant computer, which is why it follows instructions from dials so well. Its only purpose is to help make it possible for the phones in your neighborhood to be connected with any of nearly a quarter-billion telephones throughout the world.

Still Time For Fall Admission To University

Delaware students still have plenty of time to apply for fall semester admission to the University of Delaware, reports Dr. Ralph P. Barwick, assistant dean for instruction, College of Agricultural Sciences.

The deadline for in-state application—August 15—is still six weeks away, he says. Prospective students need only to obtain an admission application, complete the student information portion and return it to their high school guidance counselor or principal with a $10 non-refundable application fee.

After receiving the application, your local high school will provide the necessary academic information and forward the application and application fee to the University of Delaware Admissions Office.

Prompt action is taken on all properly completed applications submitted by Delaware residents, adds Barwick. A student will usually know if he has been accepted within four weeks of application.

"I will be happy to discuss career opportunities with any student interested in admission to the College of Agricultural Sciences in either the baccalaureate or the associate degree programs," he says. "Past graduates of these programs have found rewarding careers in entomology, animal and poultry science, plant science, economics and agriscience."

University of Delaware undergraduate admission applications are available through the University's Admissions Office, the Dean's Office, College of Agricultural Sciences and from most high school offices.

Mountains of Ignorance

It's not a little education that is a dangerous thing but the vast amount of ignorance left untouched by the education.

The reason so many college students nowadays are critical of the free enterprise system is because they don't understand it, says a professor, Dr. Gerald Warren, a DePauw University economist.

The students' main hang-up, says Warren, is this: "They don't understand the tremendous amount of interaction and interdependence that has to occur in order to feed, clothe and house millions of people at the level that now exists in America. They don't know how productive forces are generated."

PROMPT TV SERVICE DEL-MOR-TV CO. Harrington-Milford Road 422-8534

They have little concept, he adds, of the necessary, "production, distribution, transportation and all the auxiliary services that have to underwrite the mass production of soap flakes, breakfast foods and automobiles."

The problem, he claims, is due mainly to no exposure to economics courses in high school, compounded by insufficient exposure in college. Only 5 per cent of all college graduates nationally ever have a course in economics.

It is against this background that DePauw is planning a six-week summer program for high school economics teachers, to be financed by the U.S. Office of Education as part of the recently enacted Education Professions Development Act.

In a meaty program, 30 teachers will get a heavy dose of economic data on what makes a modern, market-oriented economy run, field trips to businesses and industry and instruction in how to teach economics.

Thirty teachers is a beginning in one state, but it leaves a substantial amount of ignorance untouched—ignorance that is shared not only by young people but also by their parents, who are as critically defensive about the American system as their children are uniformly dissatisfied with it.—Springfield (Mo.) Poems from Paradise Pastures
 By W. Cliff Miller

"SIGHTS & SOUNDS OF YESTERDAY"

Last Tuesday evening while attending a Ladies Night, (Rotary) beach party at the Downing cottage at Dewey Beach, we listened to a sound recording of the recent steam-engine operation in Harrington when the Chicken Festival special gave us rail fans a thrill of our lives. Fulton Downing, who rode the engine of that train made the recordings, which also recorded the shrill whistle of the little Woodside-Rising Sun engine welcoming its big brother into town.

The following lines from one of our own retired railroad conductors appeared in our Dec. 11, 1953 issue and is well worth a repeat —

"GOING BY TRAIN"

I board the train to travel to —
 Some city in our nation;
 What is that train to me except —
 A means of transportation?

What else is it? I'll tell you, what —
 It is my home on wheels;
 Where it is just as comfortable
 As home-life ever feels.

And sometimes trains mean even more
 When I am safe aboard them —
 With all their servants, (in my home)
 I never could afford them.

The porter, the conductor —
 And the one who waits on me,
 At breakfast, lunch or dinner,
 With the utmost courtesy.

And even to the baggage boy —
 For all his humble station,
 My heart is deeply grateful
 For our railroad transportation.

—Harry Farrow Sr.

The Rural Alternative

More and more attention is being given the relationship of a declining rural population to the urban crisis now confronting many large U. S. cities. The inexorable thrust of modern technology and organization has literally overwhelmed millions of families in the countryside, forcing them off the land and into towns and cities to add to overcrowding that leads to explosion.

The new agricultural technology has served America well. Americans are the best fed people—at the lowest cost—in the history of man, despite a 1968 CBS network documentary purporting to show malnutrition on a wide scale in the U.S. But that same technology has had grim impact on many rural families wrecked away from customary sources of livelihood in formerly stable communities.

Between 1940 and 1945, annual net outmigration from farms averaged 1,600,000 persons. In the next five years, this declined to 700,000 per year. Between 1950 and 1955, the figure went back up over 1,000,000 per year. Between 1955 and 1960, the average was 900,000, and from 1960 to 1965, 800,000.

Official analysis indicates that of each of 10 boys now growing up on a farm, only one will find a livelihood as a farmer in the years ahead. The absolute number of persons leaving rural areas for large cities is slower than in World War II years, but the rate of migration is just as high because of the decline in the total farming population. With the departure of farm people for the cities, there has been a parallel slowing in population growth of many smaller cities, towns and villages.

The rural-to-urban migration that has gone on in the past 25 years constitutes one of the massive flows of population in world history. Recently, increasing interest has been expressed by both industry and government leaders in reversing this trend to megalopolis through establishment of new opportunities in rural areas.

A combination of economic logic and original leadership would seem to dictate adoption of the "rural alternative," and new town and country communities as an answer to social ills of the day. — The Bennett County Booster II, Martin, S. D.

Where Else

Does It Happen?

"Put it in as a news item — we don't want to pay for an ad."
 A newspaper is probably the only business in existence (and no wonder some are having a tough time existing) when the customer will tell the firm that they want the product, but don't want to pay for it.

And because of the complexity of our operation, and the many people handling items, there are times when in spite of often repeated statement of policy advertisements get slipped into the news columns.

Once again. If there is an admission ticket—it is an ad. A "good cause" does not make it free. Our grocery bill is a good cause, too.

A public thanks to you is an ad. Whether it is a card of thanks following a funeral, or a thank you after a card party or a banquet—this is advertising.

A list of donors of prizes is an ad. These firms are donating a prize for advertising purposes. We donated one, too. There our responsibility ends.

A thank you is not news—it is advertising. Classified advertising is, of course, all paid. People understand this, and for rent, or for sale, is advertising. The cost of such ads is small; and if it is an over-the-counter cash payment, the price is less than if we have to bill.

We cannot make out any statement for less than 75 cents. To phone and tell us "I'll stop in" does not make it any easier.

Cash paid at the time the ad is placed makes the ad cost less and keeps us from spending extra money billing it. "I'll stop in and pay" means it goes down as not paid, has to be entered in the books as not paid. The entry is there, the work is there, and all of this costs us much more than the 15-cent service charge.

Card party notices are advertising. Because of the small charge involved, again money should be sent along with the ad. Send $1.25 and we will give you a 15c discount—that's a real savings to take advantage of.

By the way, more and more of our suppliers are restricting minimum orders. Some will accept no order for less than $25. Many have a minimum $10 charge. These firms know more about what they can and cannot do at a profit than we do. We know there are areas where we do not make money, but do the work as a customer service. One of these areas is selling paper by the sheet. A customer will want a 2-cent sheet of paper. He is not sure if it should be yellow or blue. "Better show me the samples," he tells us. "Perhaps it should be of a heavier grade." He comes on Wednesday—we have a newspaper deadline—our hands are inky—our blood pressure is going higher—but we keep reminding ourselves to smile.

Yes, the newspaper is said to make too much money—but start to think of all the services you get — many of them free. — Standard Press, Burlington, Wis.

Was It Ever Any Different?

"I am certainly glad that I'm not young and have to face the future . . ."

The Childish Ones

One of the most difficult to understand human acts is vandalism, the sneaky destruction of property, an act of no earthly benefit to the culprit or anybody else.

Almost everyone has the urge at times to damage or deface something. Mature people curb the urge; juveniles often cannot. Actually, the urge to destroy seems to be an inborn trait, and when coupled with the recklessness and immaturity of youth it sometimes results in the senseless type of action we see quite often around Wynne.

This trait of destructiveness and impulsiveness is sometimes expressed in an entirely different way, and becomes the type of heroism in battle that earns men medals. It is the unthinking senseless fury that when directed at society in peacetime is scorned, but in the heat of battle can become the true grandeur. The difference is in maturity.

ON TARGET — Delaware 4-H'ers participate in a morning archery class at Camp Barnes. From the left are Bruce S. Shippo, Maryland; Cinde Wooten, Laurel; Dave Robinson, Middletown; Rodney Comegys, Hartly, and Sharon Layton, Bridgeville. More than 300 Delaware youngsters attended the annual 4-H camp session near Dagsboro.

HARD AT WORK — Greenwood 4-H'er Margaret Seely works on a copper tooling project at Camp Barnes. Margaret was one of 300 Delaware youngsters attending the annual 4-H camp near Dagsboro.

We hope that some of you young people who are responsible for damage to signs, buildings, shrubbery, and other public property will soon grow up. They are certainly not admirable in this present stage of immaturity.

—Wynne (Ark.) Progress

for their elder statesmen in education, business and the cultural world in general. On the other hand, the older generation may not be worthy of their admiration and esteem for we have accepted some mighty "sleeze" material as our "goods" in the game of life. We are willing to support the film industry by the purchase of books sold exclusively on their portrayal of sex . . . We have encouraged each other to cheat the law at every turn of the road . . . We have settled for a dual moral standard that youngsters cannot understand . . . We have condemned our courts and our law enforcement and then wondered about the unrest in the streets.

We are not saying that armed invasion of colleges is right, nor that black militants have the solution to the race problem. We are saying that perhaps our problems today have had well established roots in generations that have preceded them.—The Amery (Wis.) Free Press

Veterans' News QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

Q—How many semester hours are required for full time training in graduate school?

A—An accredited graduate course will be considered full time when 14 semester hours or the equivalent are taken unless it is the established policy of the school to consider less than 14 hours or the equivalent as full time enrollment. A school official must so certify.

Q—I have a G.I. loan on my home. I want to borrow money on my equity in the home for my children's college education. Is it necessary to obtain the approval of the Veterans Administration for such a loan?

A—No. However, a G.I. loan cannot be obtained for this purpose.

Q—My brother received an honorable discharge from his Korean Conflict service. He later received a bad conduct discharge from his Post-Korean service. Does this bar him from all veteran benefits?

A—No. Benefit entitlement earned during your brother's honorable wartime service is undisturbed by his subsequent Post-Korean service provided there was a break between the two service periods.

As far as the bad conduct discharge is concerned, the Veterans Administration will determine, after a review of the facts, whether the discharge was under conditions which would preclude benefit entitlement.

FENCE TALK

with George K. Vapaa

At last! We have workable soils identification maps for Kent County. Not the final product, but we can pinpoint the kind of soil on every acre - farm or non farm.

This, when keyed with an interpretive report, can tell a developer the strong and weak points he needs to know in working with a proposed land use. Your county agent plans a series of training sessions on how this new information can be used. But we are going to need a bit of lead time to collect other material for this training.

You will not need to be a soils expert yourself. Nor is it our intention to make you one. The basic steps will be as simple as ABC. We will give you these and then some refinements. You may think of others.

Fred Mott, our Kent County Soil Conservationist, Bob O'Brien, the county planning director, and I took a day to visit the Cartographic (Mapping) Division of the Soil Conservation Service just outside of Washington. An amazing experience really to see how soils information is assembled and mapped, and then how it can be used.

I said we will have workable maps until we get the final product. The final product is an aerial photo, a total of 49 for all of Kent County, with the soils identification superimposed on the latest flights. The workable maps simply have the roads marked. We will ask the landowner the limits of his land on an aerial photo. These are easy to read. Then we and/or he can pick on the soils on the corresponding prints. Once we know the soils identity, it is a simple matter to look up the characteristics of each kind of soil. If memory serves, there are about 40 of these, identified, for example, as Sassafras silt loam, or loamy sand.

New towns? Do we need them in Delaware? That was the question of a University of Delaware Symposium last week. You should have been there for the issues which were raised. Fence Talk has an advance deadline for news copy, so I'll comment more full next week.

A national magazine has asked us to help find Master Farm Families within Delaware. No one doubts that they exist - that we have our share of successful farmers. Your county agent's problem is to try and stay in the middle. For who is to say that one farm family is "better" than another.

I bracket "better" for several reasons. Think about the word. It is a term that must be qualified every time it is used if it is to have real meaning.

In this case the general requirements are fairly well spelled out. Briefly, a full-time farmer, with at least 10 years of farming experience, evidence of leadership, co-operation and thrift, crop yields at least one and one half better than average for the county or similar soils, above average (here is another term hard to pin down) livestock production, buildings and equipment in good repair and adequate for the job, and full managerial control over the farming unit. The home enters the picture too. So maybe the field of candidates can be narrowed down to manageable levels.

Is your farm family a candidate?

Warren R. Hamstead

Warren R. Hamstead, 35, of Greenwood, died Wed., July 2, in Wilmington General Division, Wilmington, after a long illness.

He was a lifetime resident of Greenwood and manager of the Newton Trucking Co., Bridgeville. He was a member of the Church of the Brethren, Farmington, and a past president of the Greenwood Kiwanis Club.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Joan W. Hamstead; a son, Stephen L. and a daughter, Miss Lisa J. Hamstead, both at home; his father, Roy Hamstead, of Greenwood; a sister, Mrs. Jeanette Draper, of Wilmington, and a brother, Ronald, of Greenwood.

Services were held Saturday afternoon in the Fleischer Funeral Home, Greenwood. Interment was in St. Johnstown Cemetery near Greenwood.

It Seems To Me

By Janet C. Reed

High fashion lingerie is expensive, so why not try your hand at making your own? With today's short styles, you won't need much fabric. Half slips, chemise slips and petticoats are surprisingly easy to make. You can add your own creative trim or use a wild fabric for "one of a kind" fashions.

Tricot fabrics in nylon, acetate or triacetate are available in most stores, or use one of the polyester crepes. These fabrics are easy to wash, quick to dry, and take little or no ironing.

For a half slip, one length of fabric is usually enough, depending on fabric width. Allow at least three inches of fabric ease at the hipline. For example, if hips measure 38 inches, allow three inches for ease plus two inches for seam allowances or a total of 43 inches. If fabric is 45 inches wide, you need only buy as much as you need for length plus hem and top casing.

An imitation French seam is neat, easy and wears well. It's a double stitched seam with the second row of stitching about one-eighth inch from the first. The seam allowance is trimmed close to the second row of stitching. If you have a zig-zag machine, use a zig-zag stitch for the second stitching.

Attaching elastic at the waistline of petticoats or half slip may be done in several ways. The easiest is to make a casing and insert the elastic. If you want the elastic to stay in place, zig-zag over the elastic and casing, stretching the elastic as you sew. Or the raw edge can be turned under once and the elastic applied over the raw edge with a zig-zag stitch. Stretch the elastic as you sew so it is evenly distributed around the width of the fabric. You will need only enough elastic for a snug waistline fit plus about one-half inch for lapping.

The lower edge of the slip can be finished with a tailored hem, or with lace or ruffles or whatever trim you wish.

Ferry Increasing Boat Crossings

For the third time since the start of the 1969 summer schedule, the Cape May-Lewes ferry is increasing the number of boats crossing Delaware Bay, announced General Manager Theodore C. Bright this week.

An extra round trip added the weekend of June 28, will now run seven days a week. Ten crossings, in each direction, will be made daily. Departure times from Cape May, N. J., will be 6:30 a.m., 8 a.m., 9:30 a.m., 11 a.m., 12:30 p.m., 2 p.m., 3:30 p.m., 5 p.m., 6:30 p.m., and 9:30 p.m. Departure times from Lewes will be 8 a.m., 9:30 a.m., 11 a.m., 12:30 p.m., 2 p.m., 3:30 p.m., 5 p.m., 6:30 p.m., 8 p.m. and 11 p.m.

In addition, a third bayliner will be put into regular service on weekends, starting July 11, until further notice. The extra ferry will leave the Cape May Terminal at 10:15 a.m. and 1:15 p.m. on Fridays, Saturdays, Sundays and Mondays. It will make return trips from the Lewes Terminal at 11:45 a.m. and 2:45 p.m.

The new schedule calls for a minimum of ten crossings each way on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays and twelve round trips on Fridays, Saturdays, Sunday and Mondays.

Mr. Bright indicated that the newest announcement of additional crossings may not be the final one. "We are keeping a constant hour-by-hour check on traffic that that we can provide the quality and speed of service looked forward to by the motoring public."

"We will not hesitate to make even further increases in the number of sailings daily as the traffic warrants," concluded the ferry general manager.

Mrs. Walter Moore

The Sunday morning friendly greeters were Mrs. Charles Harrison and Mrs. Herman Wolkoski. Special music was a solo "Beneath the Cross of Jesus" sung by Mrs. Vonna Hobbs and accompanied at the piano by the Rev. Charles M. Moyer. The Rev. Moyer's Sunday morning sermon was "What Does It Mean to Trust In God?" A lovely arrangement of white flowers were in memory of Harry P. Carlisle Sr., presented by his wife and children.

The Felton Street Fair will state at 2 p.m. tomorrow, Saturday, July 12th. The WSCS will serve supper starting at 4 p.m. Be sure to come out and see the square dancing at 6:30 and the school band will play 7:15. The various organizations will have a variety of things to sell—come out and browse around and enjoy an afternoon and evening of fun with your friends.

If anyone having any donations for the auction wagon for the street fair please contact Roland Neeman 284-4674.

Zwaanendael Museum Notes

The Zwaanendael Museum is featuring three special exhibits for the mid-summer season, a "Fox Hunting Cane", three scrimshaw handle canes, and a display of Delaware pattern glassware.

Fox hunting is a sport originating in England in the middle 1700's. The "chase" or fox hunt has been enjoyed by Delaware sportsmen for many years. The cane on display in the Zwaanendael Museum has several features, all tied in with the fox hunt. The handle of the cane is removable, presenting a wick. The wick extends from a grass tank which holds a supply of fuel to burn on the wick. A whistle, is carved at the end of the handle which is used to call the dogs. Also on display are three canes with scrimshaw handles. Each is made from different parts of whalebone. The handles are delicately carved into intricate shapes. All the canes are from the extensive collection of Arthur E. Howe, Seaford.

Mr. and Mrs. Lucious A. Darby, of Milton, have generously exhibited their collection of Delaware Pattern Glassware. This glass is in a most striking shade of green with designs of four petal flowers and leaves that are decorated with gold.

The regular visiting hours are Tuesdays through Saturdays, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sundays and holidays, 12:30 to 5 p.m. Closed Mondays.

Gary Bolinger, of New Castle was a Sunday evening supper guest of the Jacob Hatfields and the David Keiths.

Mrs. Gary Davis and daughters, Cindy and Anjanette were Sunday afternoon callers on Mr. and Mrs. David Keith.

Kiwanis Club News: The Sunshine Class will be serving the Kiwanians their dinners during the month of July. Last Thursday Mrs. Elvora Anthony headed the group that served a well-planned meal.

Following the dinner, the directors were assembled for their routine business. The directors voted to assist financially a community lad who needed a tonsillectomy that could not be provided by the family.

Next week, President John Turner will have as his guest, the guest speaker, Karl Brown, retired banker from Seaford.

Wesleyan Church News: The Wesleyan Church reports a good vacation Bible School conducted a week ago with an average daily attendance of 51. All enjoyed the Saturday picnic at Wheeler's Park and the closing exercises on Sunday morning with an interesting program given by the children and the teachers who attended.

A Junior Band has been started with practice on Wednesday at 1 o'clock and Sundays at 4 p.m. Any who wish may attend.

Congratulations and good wishes to Mr. and Mrs. William H. Mervine who have been celebrating their 50th wedding anniversary this week. On Friday evening all ten of their children gathered with them at the Tidewater Inn in Maryland for dinner.

Saturday evening they greeted their friends and relatives at the V.F.W. Hall with all ten of their children present. There was singing by all the children, solos, group singing, duets, quartets, etc. Pictures were taken and a wedding ceremony was held at 6:30. The affair was catered by Mrs. Myrna Workman. We join with the community in wishing them many more happy years of life together.

Tuesday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Lester Workman entertained the gang to a cookout. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Ocheltree, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Graham, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Mills, Mrs. Delema Smith, Arthur Tatman, Mr. and Mrs. Emory Williamson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Conaway, Mrs. Lena Barwick, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Meredith, all of Greenwood; and Mr. and Mrs. Thurman Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Humphreys, of Bridgeville, and Johnnie Humphreys, of Ohio.

Mennonite News: Grace Slabaugh, of Laurel and Norman Lambert, of Denbigh, Va., have announced their engagement. Grace is in nurses' training in Newport News, Va.

Congratulations to Mary Jane (Camp) and Stanley Doyle Yoder, married June 14. Doyle's home is in Bridgeville. The Yoders plan to make their home in Louisville, Ky.

Get-well wishes to Mrs. Eli Mast Jr., who has been hospitalized at Milford.

We are glad that Timothy Schlabach, who fell 8 feet when his ladder broke, is able to do some work again, although he did have a mild concussion. Also to Jonathan Miller who struck the highway while riding his bike, fracturing his skull. He was released from the hospital apparently without further complications.

Welcome home to Don Yoder who has completed his service at Red Lion, Ontario, Canada. Don plans to work in this community for the summer.

Engineer Gives Air Conditioning Hints

Delawareans trying to beat summer heat on a limited scale may wish to consider the comforts of room air conditioning.

A room air conditioner does exactly what its name implies, says University of Delaware agricultural engineer Ernest W. Walpole. It cools air in the one room or area in which it is located. It cannot effectively cool adjoining rooms or the room down the hall.

Location of the cooling unit is an important factor in effective air conditioning, explains Walpole. A window unit, for example, limits your choice of location options. But a permanently mounted, through-the-wall model can be installed virtually anywhere.

In either case, you must consider air and heat conditions outside the house and indoor air circulation patterns before installation.

That part of an air conditioner outside the house must effectively disperse heat taken from within. This, of course, becomes difficult if the machine is placed in direct sunlight.

For peak efficiency, the north side of the house is usually the best location for a room air conditioner. But any shaded area is satisfactory.

Free air circulation around the condenser, the heat dispersing unit, is also important. So don't hide your air conditioner with trees, shrubs or other objects that may reduce air circulation.

Indoor air circulation is less critical because air deflectors in the machine let you direct cooled air wherever you choose, says Walpole. Make sure, however, that drapes, high furniture or other household furnishings do not obstruct air flow from the cooling unit.

Selecting the right size air conditioner for a given room is critical, he adds. You will certainly be disappointed if the unit is too small to perform effectively. And too large a model may cool the room too quickly, cutting off before much dehumidifying has occurred. This, in turn, will result in a cold, clammy feeling often experienced in air conditioned rooms.

Sizing an air conditioner can be quite technical, Walpole concludes. But most manufacturers provide their dealers with a cooling load estimator that is quite adequate.

Size estimations are based on type of construction, orientation and room size and assume normal family residential activity in the area being estimated.

Egg and Turkey Situation Favorable

Mid-year poultry placement reports indicate that both egg producers and turkey growers can expect a fairly profitable market this fall and winter, reports W. T. McAllister, extension economist at the University of Delaware.

Pullet chicks for laying flock replacements are only one per cent greater than last year, he says. And prices equal to 1968 fall prices are expected.

Expectations of favorable egg prices will encourage additional placement of summer and fall chicks for market egg flocks. This, of course, could lead to lower egg prices in the early spring of 1970.

Current signs, however, do not indicate a heavy marketing of eggs that would seriously depress prices during the next year.

Turkey growers appear to have an excellent market taking shape this holiday season, adds McAllister.

Production during 1969 will be below last year's number and the heavy supply of frozen turkeys in storage a year ago has been significantly reduced.

High prices for all meats in recent weeks have caused available turkey supplies to be marketed fresh, he explains. So frozen stocks of all poultry items—turkeys, broilers, roasters and hens—were more than 100 million pounds less in May, 1969 than a year earlier.

John McCloskey Woodbridge Outhits Camden-Loses Slugfest Wyoming, 4-3

John McCloskey personally outhit the entire Camden-Wyoming team 4-3 and Harrington's Big League team won the ball game by the same tally.

Harrington brightened its record to six victories in eleven starts. At this writing the locals are tied with Milford for second place in the National Division. Smyrna-Clayton is in first place only one game ahead. This latter team earlier had threatened to run away with the title but good play by both Harrington and Milford has made a good, close pennant race.

McCloskey hit his second triple of the contest to drive home the winning run (Gene Palmer) in the bottom half of the last inning. Camden-Wyoming had tied the score in the top of the inning after trailing the entire game.

Bob Wyatt again was the winning pitcher. His late-season moundwork has helped put Harrington in contention for the loop crown.

tion filed by the natural father was granted. A written order and opinion was delivered in another custody case awarding custody of three minor children to the natural father.

One juvenile was before the court on bastardy charges. He was released on $500 bond until his hearing at a later date.

One juvenile was before the court on a charge of profane telephone calls. After hearing the evidence presented, the court dismissed the charge finding that the evidence presented did not show proof of guilt beyond a reasonable doubt.

The juvenile was before the court on a charge of assault and battery. He pleaded guilty and was ordered to make restitution of $18 for a medical bill and pay a fine of $75.

James Gibbs was before the court for failing to keep his support order up to date. After a credit was given on some of the support arrearage, the arrearage still showed a balance in the amount of $2,400. Concerning such arrearage, the defendant was committed to the State Board of Corrections for a period of one year.

sive. Included are two Juilliard M.A.S., Ford and Fulbright grants, arrangements for Joan Baez and Judy Collins, and numerous film, theatre, ballet, chamber and choral music scores, as well as extensive performing, recording and teaching experience.

The resulting musical sophistication is responsible for the group's subtle approach to today's music. All the components of jazz and rock are present in the music - sly melodic turns of phrase, rhythmic scintillation and harmonic ingenuity. They are, however, tempered by intelligent restraint and an innate sense of lyricism. The sell is essentially soft.

The instruments used include piano, electric piano, organ, electric harpsichord, bass clarinet, recorders, assorted percussion instruments and voices.

Audiences, as well as styles and instruments, have been varied, too. The group has performed in concert halls with symphony orchestras, colleges, cabarets, and churches. In November, 1968 they appeared in a mixed-media concert of specially commissioned works with the Louisville Symphony, which was subsequently recorded. Their performance at the Smithsonian Institute in January, 1969 was a signal success. Future concerts this summer will include appearances with the Cleveland Orchestra at the Blossom Festival and performances at the Universities of Delaware and Minnesota (Minneapolis).

A Vanguard recording will be released shortly. The group has also written the music for "Oh Calcutta!", an off-Broadway show which recently opened at the Eden Theatre.

Tickets are now on sale at Newark's Card Center, Newark Dept. Store, and the Mitchell Hall Box Office. Reservations may be made by calling the Mitchell Hall box office at the university.

Veterans' News

Students attending college under the GI Bill this summer are reminded that they must return their Certification of Attendance card to the Veterans Administration during the last full month of every enrollment period, including the summer session.

Failure to do so will cause payment to stop since VA computers are programmed to prepare checks only after Attendance cards are received.

Leon Fields, manager of the Wilmington VA Regional Office said the VA also urges any students who did not return their Certification of Attendance card at the end of the spring semester to do so as soon as possible to insure renewed VA payments this summer or when he goes back to school in September.

While veterans attending college under the GI Bill must return their Certification of Attendance cards during the last full month of every enrollment period, veterans attending school below the college level must return their attendance cards every month.

Veterans who have questions about their status or who intend to enroll for the first time this fall are urged to contact their nearest Veterans Administration Office.

land Neeman and Sherman Stevenson.

The different organizations in the community will have various booths that they will sponsor. The main attraction of the fair is a supper that is prepared and served by the Woman's Society of Christian Service which starts at 4 p.m. There will be the country Store which sells a variety of articles including homemade aprons. There will be fire engine rides and a fish pond for the children, homemade ice cream, candies and baked goods as well as a parcel post package booth.

A new attraction at the fair this year will be a square dance club group who will perform at 6:30. The high school band will play at 7:15. Come out, meet your friends and enjoy an evening of good food and fun - the proceeds are for the benefit of the new parsonage and church.

Roten Galleries To Present Public Exhibition

A public exhibition of original graphics by classic and contemporary artists will be presented by Ferdinand Roten Galleries of Baltimore from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. July 14 in Room 302 Recitation Hall at the University of Delaware.

Prices range from $5 to $1000 with the majority priced under $100. The exhibition includes over 1000 original etchings, lithographs and woodcuts by such artists as Picasso, Chagall, Miro, Goya, Renoir, Rouault, Kollwitz and many others. Also on display will be a collection of outstanding Western and Oriental manuscript pages from works of the 13th - 20th centuries.

A representative of the Roten Galleries, Mr. Wynn Ruff, will be present at the exhibition to answer any questions the public may have regarding graphic art and printmaking. Established in 1932, Roten Galleries has one of the largest collections of graphic art in the country. The firm operates its main gallery at 123 West Mulberry Street in Baltimore with other Roten Galleries in Cambridge, Mass., and at Brentano's in Washington, D.C., Manhasset, N.Y., White Plains, N.Y., and San Francisco, Calif. Ferdinand Roten Galleries specializes in arranging exhibitions and sales of original graphic art at colleges, universities and museums throughout the country.

Delaware Farm Labor News

State Summary

Rains have finally come to help alleviate some of the irrigation on various crops. Some migrant crews have arrived and are picking snap beans and cucumbers until they get started in potatoes. Major activities are the harvesting of small grain, picking snap beans, cucumbers, sweet corn, cabbage, apples, blueberries and peaches.

Wilmington Area

Rains have slowed activities. The pea harvest is completed. Migrant crews are arriving and helping pick cucumbers until the potato harvest gets started next week. Small grain harvest continues.

Dover Area

Much needed rains have allowed growers to shut off their irrigation systems. Most work has been curtailed. Potato harvest will start next week. Puerto Rican workers and southern migrants are picking snap beans, cucumbers, sweet corn and cabbage. Small grain harvest continues.

Georgetown Area All crops have benefited from the recent rains. Local and off-shore workers are picking sweet corn, apples, cucumbers, peaches and blueberries.
