In an effort to settle a strike a federal mediator has arranged a meeting of union and company officials at 9:30 a.m., today at Salisbury, Md.

Some 630 members of Local 1307, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (AFL-CIO) have been on strike since July 31.

Meanwhile, two Cambridge (Md.) brothers were placed on a year's probation Monday after they agreed to make restitution to the utility for damages caused to a 12,000-volt power line west of Cambridge August 10th.

Harry and Edward Inslay, both in their mid-20's, pleaded guilty in Dorchester County Peoples Court to shooting at the power line. Judges J. Otis McAllister and Robert E. Parnell III fined them $500 each but suspended the fines and ordered the restitution.

A DP&L spokesman said a $2000 reward was paid to an informant after the arrest of the two brothers. They are not DP&L employees or members of the union.

About 200 supervisory personnel have managed to keep customers supplied with power despite minor breakdowns.

The strike has been marked with damage, on several occasions to DP&L property. Two flat cars of utility poles were burned early Thursday morning, Aug. 14, on a siding south of Harrington. Damage was estimated between $28,000 and $30,000. The poles were to be used for the construction of a transmission line between Harrington and Milford.

Flames burned through the telephone lines parallel to the Penn Central tracks, and area communications were knocked out temporarily.

In another incident, in this area, an insulator was shot and broken near Viola.

A SLOW BURN — Attacks this cargo of utility poles on a flat car at a Penn Central siding south of town Thurs., Aug. 14. The crane belongs to Day & Zimmerman, of Philadelphia, electrical contractors, who do work for the Delmarva Power & Light Company, owner of the poles. A Harrington Fire Company truck, shown in lower righthand corner, pumps water on the smoldering pile. The flat car was one of two on which poles were affected by fire of undetermined origin. The state fire marshal's office is investigating the blaze. Meanwhile, officials of local 1307, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, striking against DP&L, has disavowed any knowledge of the accident. Journal photo

BLUE CROSS REDUCES RATE INCREASE

Blue Cross-Blue Shield of Delaware has agreed to cut its rate increase by 20 per cent, State Insurance Commissioner Robert A. Short disclosed last Friday.

Short told a press conference he has prepared legislation that will call for the regulation of hospital costs and that he hopes the measure will be instituted in the legislature in January.

Under the modified rate rises, the average payment will be 29.7 per cent higher, rather than increasing by 36.9 per cent as announced last month.

For the most popular plan, the family plan with Blue Cross, Blue Shield and extended benefits, the rate rise to $27.82 instead of the $28.84 previously announced.

The present family plan cost per month is $21.40. After Nov. 1, the family plan will cost $6.42 more each month. This is a $1.02 reduction from the first rate increase announced.

Short said: "I can assure all Blue Cross subscribers that the rate structure is fair and necessary. I think this is as far as Blue Cross can go and if we want savings in hospital costs we will have to look in another direction."

Elaborating on the legislation he proposed, Short said that it would amount to "someone looking over the hospital board's shoulder, especially."

Elisha C. Dukes, Former Secretary of State, Dies

Former Secretary of State, Elisha C. Dukes, an active force in Democratic party politics for more than a decade, died Monday morning of an apparent heart attack at a Selbyville coffee shop where Sussex County regulars gathered each morning to exchange gossip.

Dukes, who had served as a legislative lobbyist for the banking industry and ran an auto parts store in Selbyville since he left office in January died instantly.

Former Governor Elbert N. Carvel, who appointed Dukes to the post he held through the administration of former Gov. Charles L. Terry, expressed shock at Duke's death at 56.

"He was Mr. Democrat for many, many years," Carvel said from his summer residence in Maryland.

Carvel, in his formal statement mourning Duke's passing, called him a "great spirit" and a "tough, pragmatic person, who understood people and their needs."

Dukes, an airplane pilot and sports car buff, began his climb up the state political hierarchy in 1956 when he was elected as assistant state chairman.

In 1960, however, the party leadership turned to John S. Conway rather than Dukes following the death of state party chairman Garrett S. Lyons at a vacation retreat in Florida.

But Dukes, rather than sulking, accepted the role as campaign manager for Carvel in the 1960 campaign, and Carvel gained another term by defeating John W. Rollins.

In 1961, Carvel named his fellow Sussex County secretary of state, and in 1964 Mr. Dukes was finally elected the chairman of the State Democratic Committee.

Ironically, he held the post he had long coveted only until 1966, when he was replaced by Alexis I. duPont Bayard, who still holds the title.

Dukes, however, was called back into harness as campaign manager in 1968 by Gov. Chas. L. Terry when the campaign began to lag even before Terry's heart attack and hospitalization.

While Dukes worked hard, his efforts came to naught, as Republicans took over complete control of state government and elected a mayor of Wilmington for the first time in more than a decade.

Although Dukes was many times mentioned as a candidate for high political office, including the U.S. Senate, he never stood for public office.

Gov. Russell W. Peterson was not immediately available for comment.

Gov. Carvel's statement: "When I think about Elisha Dukes I remember a great spirit who was loyally dedicated to the people of Delaware."

"He was intelligent, perceptive, with an incomparable sense of humor. He was ever faithful to his state, his nation, his party."

"He was a tough, pragmatic person, one who understood people and their needs, yet he was kind and gentle and truly knew how to help those who needed assistance, ever-knowing and understanding the limits of his capabilities."

"The people of Delaware will surely miss this faithful and effective public servant. The Democratic Party has lost a brilliant leader and friend. I share a portion of the grief which his family and friends all sustain."

FENCE TALK
with George K. Vapaa

Open burning restrictions were eased for farmers and woodlot owners in a bill passed by the Legislature and signed by Governor Russell W. Peterson on July 15.

A permit will still be needed, but action can be taken almost immediately instead of first waiting for a public hearing before permission may be granted. Open burning for agricultural land clearing purposes may be done if recommended by a County Agricultural Agent or the State Forester.

As I read the bill, a commercial type application will require the public hearing procedure. The law further spells out fines of between $25 and $100 for each violation. Failure or refusal on individual applications or not over $500 for commercial type applications.

It would seem that the interest is to maintain control of air pollution by doing the burning under more ideal conditions. Damage can be minimal, and waste removal accomplished cheaper and better than by other methods.

Half of the cows in the United States are bred today by artificial insemination. That is almost 8 million cows according to U.S.D.A. reports.

Only 2,345 bulls are used for the job, which by quick figuring means about 3400 cows bred per bull. This has resulted in the greatest giant step for the dairy business as a whole. For only the best quality, type proven bulls are used.

Delaware figures run higher than the national average, about 57 percent of our cows bred artificially.

The surplus of bull calves has led to a new type of dairy-beef. The rejected sires are finished out as dairy steers, and often rate in meat quality with beef-type steers. For the housewife is calling for leaner meat cuts, a condition which comes more easily from the more rangy or larger-boned dairy-type animal.

And to coin a pun, this ain't baloney!

The Farm and Home Field Day program at Georgetown enjoys surprising success. And in the process, estimates of attendance often go awry. For example, some 250 people made reservations for the service club dinner and we prepared for 280. Actually, over 350 people showed up for the fried chicken dinner and the chance to hear Dr. Edward A. Trabant, President of the University of Delaware.

The substitution staff has shifted some attention to more urban pursuits, but at the same time, exposes new techniques to meet modern farm demands.

I found the Demonstration Garden of great interest. Single rows of flowers and vegetables are planted near the cool grove. A visitor can move in or out several times to study the varieties of plants which grow best under our conditions.

Farmers enjoy new machines. These were assembled and in use at numerous sites. The most spectacular is probably the large caterpillar tractor which places an asphalt barrier about two feet under the surface of sandy soils to trap and hold free water.

We still expect to see significant differences in yields of crops where irrigation was used, despite the heavy rains which came just a little late anyway.

You are welcome to visit the research farm at any time. We can usually shake a guide loose to tell you what is being done. We also have a supply of booklets that explain the research in progress. So you can look and judge for yourself.

It Seems To Me

By Janet C. Reed

That nasty old waistline seam is back again. A whole new generation is rediscovering the waistline seam and becoming aware of the problems in getting a good fit.

As long as the waistline seam wanders anywhere from under the bust to hipline, may be the problem of hitting the exact waistline won't be too serious. If you don't quite make it, you can always say the pattern intended it that way.

If a belt is worn with a dress which has no waistline seam, there is no problem either. The waistline seam won't peep out under the belt.

The problem with a waistline seam is hitting your natural waistline—for some of us, the problem is even finding it. There are a number of techniques for checking the correct bodice length. You can use the tape measure to compare your measurements with the pattern measurements. You should add one-half inch to your bodice length measurements for ease of movement.

Or, you can complete the bodice, try it on and tie a cord around your waistline. Mark with chalk where the seam should be. Again, allow one-half inch for lengthwise ease. The skirt is then fitted to this line.

If you are long waisted, this method won't be much help unless you added length to the bodice when cutting. Also, the zipper placket cannot be completed until you've determined the waistline.

The waistline should fit snugly enough so that the weight of the skirt hangs from the waist rather than from the shoulders, but it should have enough ease to allow you to move freely. The waistline should be about one inch larger than your actual waist measurement for a fitted style.

A tape sewn in the waistline seam helps keep the seam from stretching. It's especially desirable if the fabric stretches easily, or if the skirt is heavy.

On cotton fabrics, use a straight cotton tape or a strip of selvage cut from your fabric. For lightweight cottons and other fabrics, use preshrunk rayon seam tape. The tape is sewn on the skirt side and may be sewn to the seam allowance after skirt and bodice are joined.

The style of the dress will determine whether the seam is pressed up towards the bodice or down towards the skirt. Press it in the direction that will more easily remain flat. A neat finish at the placket edge can be tricky—particularly in bulky fabrics. Trimming and grading seams near the placket will help.

So—here we go again with that troublesome waistline seam.

Collectors, whatever your "thing" is, you'll see it in "Collectors Items."

Guards Return From Field Exercises

Delaware National Guardsmen of the Second Battalion, 198th Artillery, returned to Camp Russell W. Peterson, at Bethany Beach Friday, August 15 after a week of field exercises.

The battalion is commanded by Lt. Col. Harry F. Kemsk of Wilmington. The battalion headquarters home station is Middletown. The four firing batteries of the battalion, equipped with M-42 self-propelled guns, are from Marshallon, New Castle, Smyrna and Milford.

During their week in the field, Second Battalion units were based at Georgetown Airport. Each battery moved one of its two platoons each day to establish simulated air defense positions at the Assawoman Wildlife Refuge.

This week the battalion will conduct what will likely be its last air defense firing against radio-controlled aerial targets. On December 31, the unit's mission will be changed from air defense to communication and transportation.

Governor Russell W. Peterson is scheduled to visit the Bethany Beach camp on Wednesday (August 20) where the traditional Governor's Day parade and review will start at 1 p.m.

The public is invited to attend the ceremonies, which will take place on the parade ground west of the camp. Entrance is through the camp gate on Route 14.

Following the parade and presentation of awards by Governor Peterson, he will be airlifted by helicopter to the artillery range along the ocean south of Bethany Beach to observe the battalion's firing, and then to a battalion field position like those occupied during the past week.

State Offers Kent $20,000 For Parks

Money coming in and money disappearing was to occupy the Kent County Levy Court last Tuesday.

County Planning Director Robert W. O'Brien is to appear before the county law body with Peter Geldof, director of the State Park Commission.

Geldof is expected to offer Kent County a state grant of $20,000 for development of parks and recreation.

The money would be advanced to hire a director, obtain office space, and come up with a program for leisure-time Delawareans "but only if Kent County can demonstrate continued interest in recreation for its citizens," said O'Brien.

The Levy Court apparently has impressed the park commission along the lines of "continued interest" by creating a county parks commission last month. This group will make an effort to find land for future recreational use.

In other action, the County Comptroller A. Richard Barros will seek Levy Court approval to launch a "full-scale investigation" into an alleged disappearance of $10,000 given to the county 10 years ago to buy a generator.

The generator—to be used for civil defense purposes—was never bought, and the county never saw the money, said Barros.

"I have the records showing the money was appropriated by the federal government and that we received it," said Barros, "but it disappeared."

The county has been using rented and used generators ever since, the comptroller said, "and we have to have a new one. I want to know where the money went."

THE BOSS'S LAMENT

We see it every morning,
It happens every noon,
A double file of female clerks,
Bound for the "Ladies Room."

Perhaps the trip is long and rough;
The hallway dark and lonely
But two by two they always go,
To the room marked "Ladies Only."

The poor boss raves and tears his hair,
He's simply torn in grief,
The day's production goes to h—
While the girls go on relief.

Perhaps the need to bum a light,
Or shine each other's shoes,
When the girls go to the Ladies Room
They always go in two's.

At two o'clock each afternoon
The march begins once more,
Now what the heck goes on in there
That cannot wait till four.

The only thing that I can see
To make production boom
Is to move this whole damned office
Into the "Ladies Room"!!!

In all more than 80 papers will be read by physicists from Canada, England, Estonia, France, Germany, Hungary, Israel, Japan, the Netherlands, Puerto Rico, Romania, Russia and the U.S.A.
English will be used as the first language of the conference but papers may be presented in other languages if English translation is provided.
The proceedings of the conference will be published as the first two volumes of a new periodical to be called The Journal of Luminescence. Luminescence is the term used to describe the light given off by certain materials when they absorb some form of energy.
If the energy source is light, it is called photoluminescence, as found in the fluorescent light. If it is from a beam of electrons, it is cathodoluminescence, as found in the cathode ray tube and the television picture tube.
Another form of luminescence is caused by some biological process. Examples of bioluminescence are found in a mushroom called Mycena luxcoeli and the firefly.
The Mycena glows by the energy created in breathing oxygen, the physiological reason for the firefly's glow has not been completely explained. There also are a number of other kinds of luminescence.

Participation Sought In ASCS Elections

Every eligible voter is urged to participate in the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation (ASC) community and county committee elections Kent County ASC Committee Chairman J. Heyman Roosa, said today.

ASC Community committee elections will be held the third week in September, and slates of nominees now are being compiled at the ASCS County Office in Dover.

"This year it seems to me especially important that the farm owners, operators, tenants, and shareholders not only vote but also nominate and work for candidates of their choice," said Chairman Roosa.

"The ASC committee system is the vital connecting link between the individual farmer and Washington in the administration of farm programs such as crop acreage stabilization and commodity price supports. Farm programs are changing as national needs and concerns change."

County ASC Committees may well be called upon for local administration of new farm programs before many months have passed. We need the best possible representation of farm interests in our area. We need community and county committee members who will give time and effort to providing fair, effective, and knowledgeable administration of the programs, Mr. Roosa continued.

Nominations for community committee candidates may be made by petition by eligible voters and by incumbent ASC community and county committees. Boundaries of each community will be publicized, as will more detailed information on eligibility of voters and candidates, nominations and elections.

The County ASC Committee is elected by newly elected community committeemen who serve as delegates to the county convention, said Chairman Roosa.

Delaware Food Market Report

By Anne Holberton

Three important factors—continued inflationary pressures, a decline in meat consumption the second quarter, and prospects for lower production of pork later in the year—alter the national food outlook for the rest of 1969.

Per capita consumption of all animal products this year show signs of declining following three years of advancing. Dairy products, eggs, veal and probably pork each may contribute to the decline.

But consumption of all crop products—spurred by a large gain for fruit—likely will set a new record.

Food prices have been steadily advancing and meat prices accounted for over half of the increase. From the latest data available beef prices were up 15 per cent, pork 11 per cent and prices were also up on eggs.

Current supply and demand prospects seem to indicate further increases in food prices for the rest of the summer and perhaps this fall. But no food shortages are in sight. In fact, larger supplies of feed beef broilers, eggs, and most fruits are in prospect. And there is hope that the crest of the tide of inflation may be at hand.

This week prices on all meats are holding firm, and there seems little prospect for any significant price change before fall, if then. The beef cuts to check are rib roast, rib steaks, some sirloin steaks and ground beef. Pork loin roast, ham and some brands of bacon are the best pork selections.

Poultry prices are up slightly and turkey prices are pretty firm now. The large size turkey represents the best buy.

Don't overlook fish to help stretch the food dollar. Supplies are adequate for fresh, frozen and canned. Shrimp is a bit more reasonable this week, though selling for well over a dollar a pound. Porgies, rock fish, bluefish, Bohton mackerel are just a few to choose from.

Two or three fresh vegetables are a bit cheaper this week, but a number of old standbys have advanced. Those waving lower price tags are carrots, celery, and beets. The more expensive are all types of onions, white potatoes, radishes, lettuce and loose tomatoes.

Peaches, watermelons, cantaloupes, and limes are all reasonably priced. Avacados have advanced in price as have bananas. The blueberry season is about over, so enjoy this fruit often while it lasts.

ASCS Examines Farm Economy

American farmers today grow more than 20 percent more products on six percent fewer acres than they did 10 years ago, reports Richard H. Lester, chairman of the Delaware Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee.

Unfortunately, while farm production was rising 20 percent, farm production expenses increased about 44 percent, he says. In fact, expenses rose

Univ. Schedules Research Farm Tours

For the 12th consecutive year, the University of Delaware's College of Agricultural Sciences will provide guided autumn tours of its Newark research farm for kindergarten and elementary school classes.

Kindergarten classes are invited to visit the farm from September 23 through September 30; elementary grades one to three may tour the facility through October 31.

Tours, which must be arranged by appointment, are conducted Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Each tour lasts about an hour.

Many Delaware youngsters, particularly city-dwellers, never have seen a farm, observes New Castle County agricultural agent Ed Schabinger. They've never had an opportunity to see where their food and clothing comes from and to examine farm animals and crops on a first-hand basis.

Tours of the University farm answer a great many questions for these youngsters. Children have a chance to watch cows being milked and animals being fed. They see chickens, cattle, horses, pigs, sheep and other farm animals; they see farm machinery and field and vegetable crops; they see for the first time what a farmer does and how he does it.

More than 60,000 school children have visited the University farm since the annual tours began in 1957. Last year, more than 6,000 kindergartners and school age children joined the tour.

"We think this tour is a worthwhile experience for all youngsters," says Schabinger. "Particularly for the urban and suburban children who have no conception of the American farm."

Teachers wishing to have their classes tour the University of Delaware farm may schedule visits by telephoning the New Castle County Extension Office—738-2506—after September 4.

"Be sure to make your tour reservations as early as possible," says Schabinger. "The number of tours is limited."

Del. 4-H'ers To Host State 4-H Conference

Delaware 4-H members will convene their 48th annual conference on the University of Delaware campus August 25-27, according to state 4-H leader James O. Baker.

Featured speakers at the 3-day session will include Miss Dorothy Emerson, consultant to the National 4-H Foundation, Washington, D.C.; Paul Dodson, Delaware State Police; and C. P. Dorsey, retired West Virginia 4-H leader. Miss Emerson will present "Confidence in Leadership" while Dodson will discuss "Harmful Use of Drugs," and Dorsey will examine "Using Hidden Talents."

Speakers at the annual conference banquet will be Geo. Bailey of Freeport, Pa., "the man with the marvelous memory."

Youngsters will live in University of Delaware dormitories during the conference and will have an opportunity to use many of the University's recreational facilities, says Baker. All 4-H'ers at the conference are also invited to attend a dance on Tuesday evening. Conference sessions will meet at the University of Delaware Student Center.

The state 4-H conference is open to any active 4-H member who has reached 14 4by August 25.

Heavy Rains Cause Mosquito Increase

Unusually heavy rains during July and early August have caused a dramatic increase in the Delaware mosquito population, reports University of Delaware entomologist Bob Lake.

Perhaps the greatest "population explosion" has occurred along the floodwater, or upland, mosquitoes, he says. During dry weather, adult floodwater species deposit thousands of eggs in woodland depressions. As heavy rains flood these depressions, the eggs hatch. Mosquitoes mature in eight to 10 days.

"Most people don't realize the actual mosquito population potential," observes Lake. "Research indicates, for example, that floodwater mosquito eggs can survive for years. And of course these eggs will hatch if conditions are favorable. Thus, at any given time, we have dramatically large mosquito populations just waiting to occur."

Unfortunately the abundance of mosquitoes this summer may be more serious than discomfiting. Some floodwater species harbor the eastern encephalitis virus.

"This does not mean that an abundance of mosquitoes means an outbreak of encephalitis," says Lake. "It only means that an outbreak is within the realm of possibility."

To reduce the possibility of eastern encephalitis in Delaware, a committee of University specialists and state officials recommend that homeowners remain indoors during the evening hours or apply a commercial insect repellent before venturing into mosquito infested areas.

Campers in the area are advised to use mosquito netting in wooded areas.

For successful mosquito control in residential areas, Lake recommends the University of Delaware bulletin "Mosquito Control Around the Home." Copies are available from the Mailing Room, Agricultural Hall, University of Delaware, Newark, 19711.

Heavy Rains Helps Locate "Wet" Areas

Abundant rainfall during July and early August has provided Delaware home owners with an unusual opportunity to locate "wet" areas on their property, observes Robert F. Stevens, extension horticulturalist at the University of Delaware.

Having located these high moisture areas within the home landscape, the family gardener can plant moisture resistant ornamentals in fall or spring, he explains.

Plants such as yew, birch and juniper cannot tolerate water saturated clay soils for extended periods, says Stevens. Other varieties, however, will live and flourish under such conditions.

In short, this is an excellent time to assess summer rainfall damage and to replace injured ornamentals with moisture tolerant varieties.

The winterberry, or coccinifer, is particularly moisture resistant, growing naturally in swamps and other wetlands. This beautiful holly loses its leaves during the autumn months and produces a brilliant display of red berries throughout the winter.

A second moisture tolerant plant, the Tulepo, or sour gum is known as the tree with the most brilliant fall foliage in the area. Unfortunately, the sour gum is most difficult to transplant unless it is purchased in a container.

There are many additional trees and shrubs that will tolerate "wet feet," says Stevens. And a careful selection of moisture resistant plants will provide long lasting beauty in the wet areas of your yard.

Heavy Rains Helps Locate "Wet" Areas

Abundant rainfall during July and early August has provided Delaware home owners with an unusual opportunity to locate "wet" areas on their property, observes Robert F. Stevens, extension horticulturalist at the University of Delaware.

Having located these high moisture areas within the home landscape, the family gardener can plant moisture resistant ornamentals in fall or spring, he explains.

Plants such as yew, birch and juniper cannot tolerate water saturated clay soils for extended periods, says Stevens. Other varieties, however, will live and flourish under such conditions.

In short, this is an excellent time to assess summer rainfall damage and to replace injured ornamentals with moisture tolerant varieties.

The winterberry, or coccinifer, is particularly moisture resistant, growing naturally in swamps and other wetlands. This beautiful holly loses its leaves during the autumn months and produces a brilliant display of red berries throughout the winter.

A second moisture tolerant plant, the Tulepo, or sour gum is known as the tree with the most brilliant fall foliage in the area. Unfortunately, the sour gum is most difficult to transplant unless it is purchased in a container.

There are many additional trees and shrubs that will tolerate "wet feet," says Stevens. And a careful selection of moisture resistant plants will provide long lasting beauty in the wet areas of your yard.

Can Lake Forest Spartans Win State Harrier Title In First Try

Coach Harold McDonald had amazing success as cross country coach at Harrington High. In eleven years, his harrier teams won 108 and lost only 7 meets, won two state championships and in Harry Knotts had the only state individual champion who was not from Wilmington, in history.

Now, a new challenge is in the offing. Coach McDonald and his runners filled the trophy case at Harrington High and would like to start things off with a bang at the new Lake Forest High School by winning the 1969 Delaware State Cross Country championship. This would enable the Spartan harriers to christen the new trophy case with the big cross country title trophy.

This writer is putting McDonald and the Spartans on the spot but the idea is not far fetched at all. In 1968, H.H.S. almost won the crown finishing second to Archmere Academy. The Lions had four finishers in the top fifteen runners and needed five to win it all.

Chris Wetherhold was 2nd, Danny Hitchens was 11th and Brad Morris was 15th. Morris has improved tremendously in the last year. Wetherhold and Hitchens are better also. All are juniors.

What is needed to put the Spartans on top at the state meet is two more good runners. One of these may be in the fold, already. More later on this.

Roger Jarrell, No. 5 harrier in 1968, has been slowed by leg troubles, including a broken leg while pole vaulting on the track team. In top shape, he could give the team a big boost.

Leonard Palmer and Bill Stubbs, numbers 6 and 7 last fall, with normal improvement could help. Dan Bell and Johnny Jackson turned in some fine races, also.

Perhaps, the impetus to a state crown will come from former Felton High athletes. Several have been contacted including some boys who are winning performers in other sports. Boys used to winning have the type of drive needed to get ahead in cross country.

Now, to get back to the one boy who might be one of the two needed to go all the way, Curt Bowers, a Lake Forest senior, was the No. 3 runner on Felton's 1966 cross country team. This squad formed in late September of that year tied Milford and beat Caesar Rodney in a couple of giant upsets. In five weeks, the Green Devils whipped up a good team and surprised by putting Trace Williams and Lloyd Shelman on the all-Henlopen team. Bowers was almost as good. Our scouts say he runs a lot, is in shape and will be a candidate. With the maturity he has picked up in the last three years, he might drop some of the top trio down a notch or two in the team ranking.

If Bowers fills the bill, the Spartans still lack one top-flight runner. Who could do the job? We have received reports from several sources that indicate John McCloskey could. McCloskey is a senior and is terrific in both baseball and basketball. He's lean, fit and a competitor. At Felton, he had a reputation as a winning athlete.

Chris Moore is another of this stripe. He is in position to become the most prolific scorer in Delaware scholastic basketball history. At a lanky 6 feet 4 or 5 inches, he can take giant steps without saying "May 1?" Chris also ran cross country in '66.

Jerry Scott is younger than the above but is as big as Moore and might be a surprise in cross country. What is needed is another quick-bloomer like Trace Williams, Lloyd Shelman or Curt Bowers.

24 brand new sweat suits of the new colors, Colonial Blue, Buff and White, have been ordered for the Lake Forest Spartans. They will be given to the best 24 boys. Who will wear these suits? Will you?

Local Raceway Preps For Sept. 5th Opener

With the 62 night harness race meeting at Harrington Raceway three weeks away from opening date, September 5th, more than 150 horses are now on the grounds and more are shipping in each day.

A tour of the Kent oval and stable areas this week found several of the mid-Atlantic top driver, trainer, owners preparing for this raceway's 24th year.

Wayde Marsh, originally from upstate New York, but who now makes his home in Harrington, was hard at it mucking out one of his 11 stalls. Young son, Jimmy was helping, along with the family's one-year-old Weimeraner, Penny and her (count 'em) 10 blue-eyed pups. Marsh' good nine year old mare, Hope Galon, (2:03) fresh from victory the previous night at Ocean Downs was busy with breakfast. Marsh, a favorite competitor with Harrington fans recently wound up a very successful meet at Laurel raceway in Maryland where he finished this season as third leading percentage driver.

Over in the west stable are young Frank Abbott, of Federalsburg, was rubbing down one of the eight horses he'll be racing here. Abbott was fourth leading driver at the Maryland track.

Stabled next to Abbott is "downstater" Algie Angelone from Portland, Me., who is now training a green three year old filly, Adious La Prad, for Billy Myers. Hartly's John Childress is on the scene, too, with 13 head, and Rodney Warren of Kiptopeke, Va., is here with Just Walter. Childress will race Afton Mike (2:04 2/5) and Rudagar Flame.

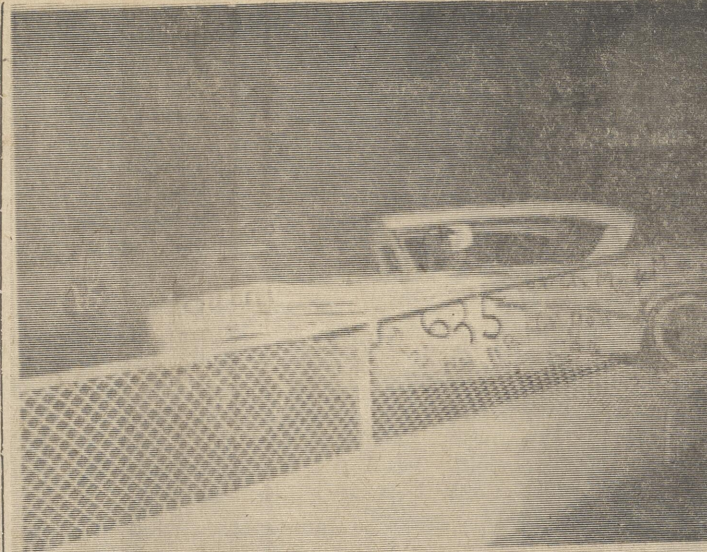

Sam Matthews of Harrington and Elmer Wilson of Houston are also here. Other driving aces who'll be arriving soon at Harrington are Paul Myer, Vernon Mitchell, Dick Ring, Bill Spencer and Harrington's Jim Wilson to name a few.

ton in 1914. Mrs. Hastings said she had not been back to Delaware since then.

The Porter and Hastings reunion was mere coincidence. In Florida, the Hastings live across the street from William Wheeler, son of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Wheeler, of Harrington. When Mrs. Hastings learned Wheeler was from Harrington, she said, "I used to live there." She asked him to locate the former Irma Scott. He did.

Tribbett, Wetherhold Vie In Jaycee Track Meet

Ken Tribbett, Harrington's best sprinter and Chris Wetherhold, the best distance runner locally, were among the contestants in the Delaware State Junior champs track and field championship meet, held at Bayard stadium, Wilmington, last Wednesday night.

Tribbett was runnerup to Adolphus Ward of P. S. du Pont High in both the 100 and 220 yard dashes.

Wetherhold uncorked a good 2:05 half mile to finish second to Bob Fehr of West Chester, Pa. Fehr is two years older than Wetherhold and was allowed to run in the meet because he is a member of the Delaware Track and Field Club.

Mike Smith, a winner one week earlier in the 11-and-under 550 yard dash, qualified for the final with a 7:1 second place finish, but didn't get a good enough start to get in the money in the final.

Harrington runners have been collecting good looking track awards all summer in the form of ribbons, medals and plaques. But the three trophies brought home by Wetherhold and Tribbett, classy black-and-silver creations, topped all the rest.
