

PREGNANCY CARE COURSE SLATED

A course in prenatal and postnatal care will be offered pregnant girls in the Milford School District, the district's board decided Monday night.

The course will begin in March for girls who are students in the district with medically confirmed pregnancies. It will be staffed by local doctors and school personnel. Girls must have parental permission to take the course, the board said.

Dr. Charles A. McLaughlin, district superintendent, said 15 girls are eligible for the course this semester and "from past years this seems to be an average figure."

A four-day course in the care of the pregnant mother and her baby will be offered in October. Classes will be held at Avenue United Methodist Church, Milford.

McLaughlin told the board the doctors and school personnel teaching the course will donate their time, and the course will cost the district nothing. The superintendent said he knew of only one other school in the state offering such a course.

In other matters, the board learned that reduced prices have markedly increased participation in the district's lunch program.

Lunch prices were cut from 35 to 20 cents in three of the district's seven schools. Two of the three showed an increase of more than 10 percent in student participation, while the third remained the same.

McLaughlin also said the free lunch program for students from low-income families has shown a steady increase since September. Part of this is attributable, he said, to a program for seeking out eligible students.

The board awarded more than $58,000 in contracts for furnishings for the art and science areas of the junior high school. That school is being converted into a senior high school scheduled for use in September 1970.

The Southern Desk Co., Hickory, N.C., successfully bid $48,064 to furnish the science area; Wood-Metal Industries, Inc., Kreamer, Pa., bid $11,657 for the art area.

Del. Workmen Illegally Underpaid

Delaware workmen were illegally underpaid $129,964 by their employers last year, it was announced recently by the U. S. Department of Labor.

Charles M. Angell, regional director of the department's Wage-Hour Divisions in Philadelphia, said the underpayments were in violation of the minimum wage, overtime compensation and equal pay requirements of the Fair Labor Standards Act, Public Contracts Act, Service Contract Act, and other laws enforced by his office in the state. The underpayments were revealed through investigations by the division's field offices and involved 102 employers and 703 workers.

Angell said a large proportion of the underpaid workers had not received the overtime compensation to which they were entitled for working more than 40 hours in one workweek. Back wages due these employees amounted to $105,180.

The investigations also revealed that $24,111 was due workmen who had not received the minimum wage to which they were entitled and that $673 was due employees who were underpaid in violation of the equal pay provisions which require that men and women performing equal work be paid equal amounts.

The investigations were conducted over the 12-month period that ended last December 20.

The Wage-Hour Division reported the following underpayments to workers by county:

Kent: $49,137 was due 141 workers. Underpayments include $38,280 for overtime, $10,857 for minimum wages.

New Castle: $72,816 was due 469 workers. Underpayments include $61,833 for overtime, $10,983 for minimum wages.

Sussex: $6,011 was due 93 workers. Underpayments include $5,067 for overtime, $2,271 for minimum wages and $673 for equal pay violations.

Cable Project Improvement by Diamond State

The Diamond State Telephone Company plans to start a $298,000 cable improvement project in the Harrington - Milford area in March, it was announced today by Jim Strickland, the company's county manager.

"The project, scheduled for completion in June, will require placing 3500 feet of aerial cable and also burying over 10 miles of existing aerial cable, Strickland said.

The underground cable will leave the Milford Central Office and go to S. W. Front Street, then west to Washington Street, then north to N. W. Front Street, then west on N. W. Front Street to west of Mill Street. At this point the cable will be buried, except across the Dual (Route #113), to Road #447, then south on Road #448 to Road #445, then west on Road #445 to the intersection of Road #37 in Houston.

In the Harrington Central Office the cable will be on Route #14 from Route #13 to Road #384. Also a cable will be buried on Road #429 from a point north of Road #432 to Road #116.

The telephone Company plans to invest $70,000 more for outside cable growth in the Harrington - Milford areas during 1970 and in 1971 the company will spend about $90,000 for cable.

"This expansion project is required to keep pace with future demands in the area," Strickland added.

Inflation in College

In the depression years of the early and middle 1930's, a college education was a privilege, often reserved for those with the stamina to work and go to school at the same time. It is exceedingly difficult for people of that generation to view with a great deal of tolerance, the riots and vandalism that are making a shambles of college campuses today—a condition that seems to go along with assumption that higher education is an inalienable right. How inalienable this right remains may depend on the course of inflation.

The cost of going to school is soaring, and education is among all the other fine social goals threatened by the declining value of the dollar. Rising costs of operating the institutions of higher learning are reflected in higher tuition fees and other college expenses.

Present day affluence may partially explain the generation gap we hear so much about. But, rising costs of inflation may help close that gap as young people begin to learn that a college education is something to be respected, treasured and earned, not taken for granted.

Quillen and Governor Tour District Roads

Gov. Russell W. Peterson was taken for a ride Tuesday afternoon, along miles of dirt roads that Rep. George Robert Quillen wants surfaced.

Quillen's goal was to convince the administration it should back an $18.2 million dirt road bonding bill which has been idling in the House since April, but Peterson quickly pointed out other fiscal priorities.

The Harrington Republican's gripe paralleled those of several other legislators — especially those from downstate — that weather conditions made many of the unpaved roads virtually impassable.

Last spring, Reps. Quillen and Robert M. Dodge, Rehoboth Beach, co-sponsored a measure to authorize the highway department to borrow enough money to surface all remaining dirt roads in Delaware over a five-year span. The bill was released from committee in October, but never called up for a vote.

Tuesday, with Highway Operations chief Ernest A. Davidson and Kent County Division Engineer John L. Sipple the governor was driven around several dirt side roads in Quillen's 33rd Representative District.

Actually the roads did not prove as un-navigable as complaints of past week had described them. Quillen said constituents seemed to be calling him every morning, telling of school bus drivers refusing to use the roads for fear of overturning or fuel trucks unable to get through.

Perhaps, as Davidson acknowledged, the passability of the roads was improved by two factors, the warm dry weather during the past week and the fact the highway department had sent grading equipment along each road the governor was scheduled to inspect.

Davidson noted that of the more than 1,600 miles of unsurfaced byways that existed in Delaware in 1955, only about 443 miles, mostly in Kent and Sussex Counties, still needed surfacing. The highway head said his department "has been whittling away at it each year," but called the original 10-year deadline unrealistic.

He gave Quillen and Peterson a report on the number of miles a dirt road to be surfaced throughout the state, showing approximately 258 miles for Sussex County, at a cost of $29,000 per mile, 139 miles in Kent at a $34,000 per mile cost estimate, and 49 miles in New Castle County with a mile price tag of $79,000.

"It's gotten to a point in New Castle," Davidson quipped, "where people don't want the dirt roads to be improved... until a thaw comes and then it's a different story."

The highway department's policy, Davidson explained, was to select certain dirt roads each year on the basis of traffic count and treat them with a tar and chip surfacing. He estimated that it would cost the state about $16.1 million to implement a concentrated dirt road resurfacing program.

Most of the remaining unpaved roads, Davidson said, involve anywhere from 35 to 75 vehicle count per day, including school buses. He said the highway department attempts to pay special attention to roads used extensively by school buses, mail trucks, milk trucks and fuel deliverymen.

"That's quite an obligation to spend $30,000 a mile," Peterson observed, "when a car may go by only about every half hour."

"Of course" Quillen replied, "But when you talk with the people that live along these roads, their argument is that they're taxpayers just like he ones living along I-95."

Chicken Barbecue Stands Must Have Permit

All chicken barbecue stands are required to have a permit from the State Board of Health before opening for the summer season.

Under Section 133 of the Board of Health Esting Place Regulations, no one may operate a public eating place unless the health department has inspected the sanitary facilities and issued a permit.

Board of Health officials remind operators that this regulation includes chicken barbecue stands and other temporary stands which serve food to the public.

Social clubs, private individuals or other groups who intend to operate such roadside stands are urged to contact the Board of Health as soon as possible.

Diamond State Tel. Co. Improves Local Building

A $63,000 addition to Diamond State Telephone Company's Harrington central office building has just been completed which adds 947 square feet to the structure on Hanley Street, reports Jim Strickland, the company's Kent County manager.

Strickland said the addition will provide floor space for a $55,000 dial hardware addition scheduled to get underway in June and be completed September, 1970.

Delaware Food Market Report

Americans ate a record amount of food per person last year and paid over five percent higher prices for it. This year, despite a slight further increase likely in food supplies per person, retail prices will again rise—perhaps 3 1/2 to 4 percent reflecting continued strong demand.

The increase in food consumption came primarily in chicken and turkey, vegetable oils, fresh and processed fruits, and processed potato products. Consumption of red meat per person was slightly less, with more beef but less veal, lamb, and pork. Consumption of eggs, milk, and most manufactured dairy products declined. Cheese consumption increased.

Despite the continued high level of availability, retail food prices moved up sharply in 1969. Restaurant food prices moved up steadily throughout the year. Red meats and eggs led in price advances for store-bought food. Most other store items also moved up, but prices of fats and oils leveled and prices of fresh fruits declined.

Meat prices began this year about 10 percent higher than in early 1969 but differences are expected to be narrow by fall. Dairy products prices probably will increase gradually. But egg prices are likely to decline more than seasonally as production increases over last year's levels. Broiler prices will rise seasonally through the summer, although by year end they may be below 1969.

Among the crops, fresh fruits supplies are plentiful and prices will be lower than last year, at least until summer. Prices of fresh vegetables currently are higher than a year ago but may be lower after the winter quarter. Processed fruits and vegetables are in ample supply. Prices of cereal and bakery products are expected to advance moderately with further increases in processing costs.

As far as the month of March is concerned, the food picture looks much as it has been. Prices are not expected to change much on red meats. Supplies of beef will be adequate but not abundant and prices are expected to be fairly stable. Hog numbers on farms are below a year earlier and marketings are averaging about five percent less than last year at this time. Marketings of veal and lamb are also below last year. Broilers continue to be in good supply at low prices. These small tender birds are the really bright spot in the overall meat picture. Turkey marketings are expected to be about the same as a year earlier. Egg prices recently declined but significant reductions probably will not come for some weeks.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture has listed the Plentiful Foods for March as follows: peanuts and peanut products, canned tomatoes and tomato products, canned and frozen sweet corn, canned pears, broiler fryers, and rice.

Silliness

It makes little or no difference to newspapers, magazines or any other printed publication as to whether they run separate classified columns for males and females; the only reason not to run them together was to help those looking for work. As usual there are some who just can't leave well enough alone; so they throw the whole classified advertisement business into a mess by ruling that civil rights are being hurt by specifying whether the hiring agent wants a man or woman, boy or girl.

More trouble will come out of this than you can imagine. For one thing the applicant and the employer will have to get eyeball to eyeball before a hiring act can be done. None of this business of phoning; that is out. And there is no such thing as freedom of choice, for just as sure as shooting, if the applicant, even though a mere wisp of a girl, wants to drive a 5-ton truck and doesn't get the job, her civil rights have been violated. We seem to get into this realm of silliness every year about now, the courts and the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) certainly contribute their share.

McReynolds Serving In Vietnam

Sgt. Gail McReynolds, son of Mr. and Mrs. Novelle McReynolds, 20 High Street, Harrington, after spending a 30 day leave at home is now serving with the 24th Inf. in Vietnam.

Sgt. McReynolds a 1967 graduate of Harrington High School, entered the Army in Feb. 1969. He completed his basic training at Ft. Bragg, N.C., took his A.I.T. training at Ft. McClellan, Ala. He then attended N.C.O. school in Ft. Benning, Ga., and futhered his training at Ft. Riley, Kan. Before entering the armed services, Sgt. McReynolds was employed by the State Highway Department.

A Paradox

Consider this paradox: Today a larger percentage of the American population than perhaps ever before is aware of the need to help one's neighbor secure a greater measure of social justice, and economic well-being.

Yet seldom, if ever, have so many Americans been ready to engage in lawlessness, inflict pain and injury, and mock the rights of others in order to "do good," and accomplish such change.

Instead of greater order and tranquility having come with this growth in social conscience, there has come a decline. In short, what we see is an increasing willingness to do harm and hurt in order to achieve what many feel are worthwhile ends.

Clearly, when such a situation arises, something has gone badly awry. Indeed, society is even justified in asking if the good being sought through today's violence and agitation may not be canceled out by the volume of injustice and injury being perpetrated.

When, as an example, a whole university is upset, teaching or some negligence, can really say that the end result will be a gain? When student militants reassert the old, discredited claim that the end justifies the means who can truly state that not more harm than good is being done?

There are few more dangerous doctrines than that which says that, merely because than that which says that, merely because one believes ardently enough in a goal, one has the right to use almost any means of winning it. This is the argument of the assassin, the war-maker, the mass-murderer.

There are times, as during the patent and immoral denial of civil rights, when vigorous action is called for, and when an improved situation can result. But such action seldom requires the activists or the militants to step on the rights of others, to run the risk of killing or maiming either their opponents or guiltless bystanders.

It cannot be said too often that in a democracy there are means of making oneself and one's group heard without recourse to undemocratic action. Colleges and universities, say, can be made well aware of student demands without the seizure of buildings, the wrecking of property, the denial to others of the right to go to classes. Indeed, when authorities acquiesce in such actions, they themselves are showing a lack of regard for others' rights. No rights can be permanently or honorably won through infringing the other man's liberties.

Poems from Paradise Pastures

By W. Cliff Miller

— SMILE AND THE WORLD SMILES WITH YOU —

Grant me the gift of laughter, Lord, And ability to smile; Let my heart be big enough, To walk another mile.

With a lonely and tired friend, Who may have lost his way; And I shall count these gifts worthwhile, At the closing of the day.

Grant me the understanding, Lord, To keep my soul serene; That I may share the strength of it, When shadows intervene.

In the life of a friend whose courage lags, As he walks the daily road; For I would count it an honor, Lord, To share another's load.

FENCE TALK

Francis J. Webb, Asst.

The best time of year to look at land drainage systems or land drainage problems is now, or when the soil is occasionally thawing out. At this time of year the land has a full tank of water, so to speak. The soil is usually saturated so that the problems are exposed for everyone to see.

Fred Mott, our soil conservationist in Kent County, and I rode out to the Culbreth Marsh Tax Ditch Company system near Marydel to see work in progress by the Kent Soil Conservation District. The results are encouraging.

The most spectacular drainage job is the Marsha Hope system west of Harrington. It drains about 50,000 acres in the southwest portion of Kent County. Prongs are being dug on both systems.

Tax ditch systems provide every farmer in the watershed with a drainage outlet for surplus water. The farmer is urged to drain nearly every acre on his farm except for ponds and such, of course. Fred's men are assigned to the Kent District to plan supervise construction on the farm.

Fred has taken many color slides of the drainage work. He makes himself available for talks to service clubs and school classes. I don't know of anyone who is more committed to soil conservation efforts. Well, like Thomas, the District chairman, might argue the point, but he also sings Fred's praises with the rest of us.

Last call for anyone who may want to attend the annual banquet meeting of the Kent County Dairy Herd Improvement Association on Wednesday, March 4. The meal will start at 7 p.m., in the Felton Fire Hall and feature fried oysters and chicken salad.

Clarence Parsons, retired extension dairyman at the University of Massachusetts, will present his entertaining slide talk on Africa.

Cost of the meal for non-member is $2.25 each. But reservations ahead of time are important. Telephone 736-1448 as soon as possible.

Francis Webb here again to inform you on current issues. I would like to say that any of you soybean producers that could not attend the 4th Delmarva Soybean Meeting on Feb. 12, your local county extension office has copies, which we will send you upon request, of the talks presented and the soybean literature that was distributed. This information may be very helpful to you for making production decisions for 1970.

Here are a few pointers for you farmers to keep in mind when choosing chemicals to control your weeds. You should choose a chemical or a combination of chemicals to eliminate your specific problem just as a doctor does for you when you become ill. It may be thought as prescribing chemicals for weed control.

Following is a list of factors to keep in mind when making these decisions.

1. - The crop to be grown,
2. - your crop rotation selection,
3. - the stage of weed growth,
4. - the stage of crop growth,
5. - and, one of the most important: Know the weed species present.

If you need help in making your weed control prescription, just call on your county agent and we will be delighted to help you. You might remember that weed control does not cost, it pays.

We now have available, upon request, the 1970 recommendations for Insect and Disease Control on Vegetables; 1970 Recommendations for Vegetable Varieties; and a bulletin for the homeowner on Spring Lawn Care. If you would like a copy of any or all of the above, contact us by calling 736-1448, or writing P.O. Box 340, Dover, 19901.

It Seams To Me

By Janet Reed

The days of hand sewing may seem numbered. New sewing machines can do almost any stitching we used to do by hand. "Iron-on" tapes and other fabric adhesives are on the market; predictions are that in the future we may use adhesives instead of sewing a garment together.

But we haven't quite reached that stage yet and most of us occasionally have some hand sewing to do. You may reach for needle and thread without much thought but the right thread and the right needle can help do a better job.

Hand stitching should be neat and inconspicuous and this means using a needle as small as possible for the thread you are using. If you don't like using a small needle because you have difficulty threading the eye, choose a small crewel needle, the long eyed type; or even a small self-threading needle.

And did you know that the eye will thread easier if you thread the end that comes from the spool, rather than the end you just cut off? It's the twist of the thread that makes the difference.

Thread should be compatible with the fabric you are using. If you're sewing synthetics try Dacron polyester thread. This has a core of Dacron covered with cotton for easy handling.

Dacron polyester thread is also useful where sunlight deterioration can be a problem. Some dressmakers prefer silk thread for sewing silks and fine woolsens. It's more elastic than cotton thread and may require a loosened machine tension on some machines. For decorative top stitching, use the heavier silk thread, button-hole twist.

It is possible to buy white cotton thread as fine as size 150 (mercerized thread is number 50) and black cotton thread is size 100. These threads are used for mending and sewing fine fabrics.

Mercerized cotton thread is acceptable for most sewing and is available in a wider range of colors in both regular and heavy-duty sizes. The mercerization process makes cotton appear more lustrous and adds strength.

Choose thread slightly darker than your fabric. It will work into the material somewhat lighter than it appears on the spool.

Needle, thread and fabric should be suitable for each other. Fine fabric requires fine thread and a small needle for either hand or machine sewing. Sturdier needles and heavier thread are used on coarse fabrics.

Elementary? Yes, but it's easy to overlook or forget these basics of sewing.

Insect Problems Increase For Soybean Growers

Until recent years, Delmarva soybean growers had relatively few insect problems. This is no longer the case; losses due to insect outbreaks are on the increase.

To prevent these losses and maintain soybean production at a profitable level, growers must be aware of these destructive insects and be prepared to control them before they can cause much damage, according to Robert G. Miller, Wicomico County, Md., agricultural agent.

He told those attending the fourth annual Delmarva Soybean Meeting in Salisbury, that research has shown that during the vegetative growth of the plant, defoliation by insects had little effect on yields even though the plants had 50 percent or more of the leaves removed.

On the other hand, foliage loss during pod-set and pod-fill resulted in heavy losses, added Miller. Tests have shown that definite yield reductions result when 33 percent or more defoliation occurs at the time soybeans are half developed in the pod.

"These findings suggest that proper timing for the insecticide application is very important," said Miller. "In some cases, insecticides applied too soon may have to be repeated, or they may not have been necessary in the first place."

Miller pointed out that the greatest damage to soybeans from leaf-feeding insects on Delmarva is caused by Mexican bean beetles, green clover worms, bean leaf beetles, spider mites and thrips. Any one or all of these pests may be found in a field at the same time.

Insects that feed on the pods of soybeans are less numerous but are often more destructive. The corn earworm heads the list of these pod-feeding pests, according to Miller.

"A few earworms are present in most soybean fields every year causing only slight damage," he pointed out. "Periodically, large numbers of earworms will appear and it is generally these unexpected outbreaks that can cause extensive damage. Sudden outbreaks can occur if there is a heavy buildup of adult moths in mid to late August."

For effective control of these insects, growers should check their fields during the pod - development and pod-filling stages for the foliage-feeding pests. If more than 25 percent of the leaves are damaged, the field should be treated, said Miller.

Timing is even more critical to control earworms, he added. "Entomologists suggest spraying or dusting when you find an average of one worm for every three feet or row."

Guide For Fertilizing Small Areas

Homeowners often want to fertilize or lime a flower bed, lawn or small garden, but the rates recommended for the fertilizer is stated in pounds per acre.

Robert F. Stevens, extension horticulturist at the University of Delaware, says that many homeowners apply the wrong amount of lime and fertilizer to their gardens because they don't know how to convert these weights into the measures needed for a small area.

As a rule of thumb, remember that for each 100 pounds of fertilizer of lime recommended per acre, you need 2 3/10 pounds for each 1,000 square feet of garden, says Stevens. This equals 3 7/10 ounces — or approximately half a cup—per 100 square feet. If your rows are spaced three feet apart, this would be 2 1/2 tablespoons per 10 feet of row.

If the recommendation is for 400 pounds of fertilizer per acre, multiply the above figures by four to get the amount to use.

Stevens points out that it is very easy to apply too much fertilizer on small areas resulting in plant injury—so measure carefully.

Additional information to help you calculate small measures of fertilizers from recommended rates is available in a pamphlet "How Much Fertilizer Should I Use?" Copies of this booklet are available from county agents in Georgetown, Dover and Newark.

Soybean Fertility Discussed

Although soybeans don't respond to soil fertility like other crops, they require an adequate supply of plant nutrients for high yields, says Dr. William H. Mitchell, extension agronomist at the University of Delaware.

Speaking at the fourth annual Delmarva Soybean Meeting recently, Mitchell said it takes more nitrogen to produce a 50-bushel-per-acre yield of soybeans than a 150-bushel-per-acre yield of corn.

However, direct applications of nitrogen are not usually recommended for soybeans. Nitrogen fixing bacteria enable soybeans to take much of the required much as 60 percent, explained Mitchell. In fact, research has shown that direct applications of nitrogen often reduces nodulation and does not increase yields.

Phosphorus and potassium usually provide the greatest response from soybeans, if other nutrients are in good supply, he added. Good yields are obtained with a fertilizer program that builds soil fertility to a medium or higher level.

But Mitchell cautioned Delaware growers against adding unnecessary fertilizer just because yields are low. "When soybean yields are 10 to 20 bushels per acre, it usually isn't fertility that's lacking—it's moisture," he said.

The average Delaware soil tested at the University last year had a high phosphorus content, medium potash level and a 6.0 ph, according to Mitchell.

"With this type of soil test, growers won't receive much direct response from extra fertilizers," he stressed. "In nitrogen from the air—in this case, you need moisture for high yields!"

Convenience Foods

Who slaves over a hot stove these days? Not the modern homemaker — convenience foods have taken most of the work out of cooking. But not the expense.

You can "convenience" yourself right out of your food budget if you buy only the quick to prepare breakfasts, lunches and dinners. However, convenience foods do have their place, says Miss Marguerite Krackhardt, extension food and nutrition specialist at the University of Delaware.

First of all, what is a convenience food—Everything from topless fresh carrots and pasteurized milk to "pop-in-the-toaster" foods or boil-in-a-bag frozen vegetables qualifies. Any food that has been changed in some way to make it easier to cook is a convenience food. A. A. no modern homemaker would want to give them up.

On the other hand, any food — convenience foods included — is a good buy only if it fits your budget and your family's needs and tastes. Selecting the best buy from some 8,000 pretty packages at the supermarket can be pretty frustrating, though.

You'll be less tempted by expensive, impulse products if you're following a shopping list, says Miss Krackhardt. "Stick to the list, but know food prices well enough that you can take advantage of unadvertised bargains that suit your family." Buy those "3 for $1" specials — if you have storage room, and if you can eventually use all eight cans. Check weekly specials before you even go to the store.

Read labels and check prices; be an informed shopper. Do you know whether that frozen meat pie has more gravy, more potatoes or more meat? Read the label; by law the ingredient present in the greatest quantity is listed first.

You can save significantly by preparing your own potatoes, by adding the garlic yourself to bread, and by buttering your own peas. You can pay more than $1 a pound for those potatoes by buying them frozen, creamed, scalloped or frozen baked. Fresh potatoes rarely cost more than eight or nine cents; is the time you save when you buy already-prepared potatoes worth the extra cost? That's a decision only you can make.

Those heat-in-the-bag foods allow you to cook several kinds at one time in one pot; but, they are expensive. However, large bags of plain frozen fruits and vegetables are money-savers; just pour out what you need and save the rest. You can add mushrooms one day, slivered almonds to another portion the next week, tiny onions or a delicately seasoned cream sauce the next. How long does it take to whip up a teaspoon of flour, butter, salt and milk or water for thickening?

Take time to compare different forms of the same product, says Miss Krackhardt. Whole fruits and vegetables in a can or frozen are usually more expensive than slices or chunks; small or mixed pieces cost even less. Of course, if you're preparing a fancy salad for guests, you may want the more expensive fruit. But, otherwise?

Water can be very costly in a can. For instance, soup served as it comes from the can may cost twice as much as a condensed soup. Is it really that much effort to turn on the water faucet?

Dry cereal continues to be one of the most expensive buys at the store—even if there's a "free" toy inside. Sugared cereals are high in cost and the new instant hot cooked cereals are even more so.

Those new toaster items—waffles, jam-filled tarts, french toast—save on time and they're dearly loved by most youngsters. But they don't help the food budget.

The cook who has the time can cut grocery bills by preparing attractive meals from less expensive foods. However, the homemaker who is employed, in poor health or busy with outside activities may find the time she saves with convenience foods to be worth the cost. Both need to shop carefully.

Don't let convenience cooking turn into lazy cooking, warns Miss Krackhardt. "Good cooking is still a challenge—so is staying within the food budget."

Veterans' News

Some 5,400 veterans are participating in the Veterans Administration's on-the-job training programs for policemen and firemen, according to Leon Fields, manager of the VA Regional Office in Wilmington.

In making that announcement today, Mr. Fields said Administrator of Veterans Affairs Donald E. Johnson reported last July that some 4,300 veterans were in VA-approved programs of these types at that time.

Mr. Fields said that 5,400 veterans now in training under PL 90-77 in programs that got underway in 1968 include 4,100 policemen and 1,300 firemen.

Of that number, 100 members of the Delaware State Law Enforcement Agencies are in training in Delaware.

According to the VA official, the largest on-the-job training programs are in the following states: California, with 845 policemen and 127 firemen; New York, with 556 policemen and 272 firemen; Pennsylvania, 490 policemen and 173 firemen; District of Columbia, 314 policemen, 54 firemen; Connecticut, 263 policemen, 149 firemen; and Missouri, 252 policemen and 61 firemen.

The VA supplements a policeman's or fireman's earnings during his training period, but requires that he be paid at least 50 percent of the regular salary. A minimum of 85 percent of the regular wage must be paid the trainee during his last month of training.

Mr. Fields said basic requirements for veterans interested in applying for the programs include a personal interview, character investigation and driver's license.

Police and fire department interested in these programs should seek the approval of their state — approving agencies, the VA official explained.

BE WISE — ADVERTISE

Timing Important In Soybean Weed Control

Timing is the most important factor in controlling weeds in soybeans, according to Dr. James Parochetti, extension weed specialist at the University of Maryland. Weeds should be controlled before they have a chance to compete with soybeans and reduce yields.

Speaking at the fourth annual Delmarva Soybean Meeting in Salisbury, Parochetti said properly timed cultivations are usually the most economical approach to controlling weeds.

"Working the soil two to four weeks before planting as the weeds germinate eliminates many annual weeds and results in some control of Johnsongrass and nutsedge," he explained.

A sound herbicide program can help insure weed control success and at the same time, enable growers to plant more acres with less labor, added Parochetti. Proper and timely applications of preplant incorporated and pre-emergent herbicides are necessary for maximum control.

Although many herbicides are effective on specific weeds, no one chemical will do a good job of controlling all weeds, he emphasized. Growers have to determine which weeds are the most serious and select a herbicide or combination of materials that will provide the most effective control.

Preplant incorporated herbicides (Treflan, Vernam, and Planavin) and pre-emergent materials (Lorox, Lasso and Dyanap) are excellent on grasses, but are not as effective in controlling the large-seeded broadleaf weeds such as morning-glory and Jimsonweed, said Parochetti.

Where broadleaves are a problem, growers should use a post-emergence application of Tenoran with a surfactant.

Parochetti also pointed out that soybeans should have at least two trifoliolate leaves before applying Tenoran. And broadleaf weeds should be no taller than one inch and grasses should not be developed beyond the two-leaf stage for best results.

Double-Cropping Soybeans

Salisbury, Md., Feb. 12—Double-cropped soybeans following barley have produced very well in narrow rows. But you have to choose the right soybean variety, says a University of Maryland agronomist.

Speaking to nearly 1,000 growers at the recent Soybean Clinic, Dr. John Schillinger said Delmar and Dare soybeans showed up poorly in nearly every test when planted after barley.

York, Kent, Wayne and Cutler, on the other hand, all showed up well following barley. York showed the highest yields during two years of testing at both Hurlock and Snow Hill; it appears to be one of the better adapted varieties for double-cropping on lighter soils.

Both York and Cutler showed up well in variety yield plots at Linkwood and the Wye Institute near Queenstown. York was slightly better on the lighter soil at Linkwood, but Cutler was "distinctively" the better variety at the Wye Institute.

"What we need," Schillinger added, "is a high yielding variety of the Delmar maturity."

Schillinger also reported that soybeans in narrow rows outyielded beans in wide rows five years out of six for full season beans and soybeans double-cropped with barley.

At one location in 1968, soybeans in narrow rows (7" to 14") showed yields increased up to 47 percent more than beans in conventional 30" rows. Other increases were not so dramatic, but Schillinger believes that his tests show a definite advantage for narrow rows.

His experiments showed that seeding rates also influence yields. A rate of 35 to 45 pounds per acre in 30-inch rows gave the highest yields. Increasing the seeding rate in these rows tended to increase lodging.

However, when beans were planted in seven-inch rows, Schillinger found that he could increase yields by seeding 75 to 90 pounds per acre.

In addition to his soybean research, Schillinger also evaluated new barley varieties under various fertility levels. He said Barsoy, Jefferson, Hanover and Knob have good lodging resistance. However, Barsoy yields were highest with 40 to 60 pounds of nitrogen per acre.

With barley yielding 70 to 80 bushels per acre and York soybeans making 40 bushels, Schillinger estimated a possible net income of $70 per acre.

Q - The company retirement benefits I receive each month from my former employer are to be increased. If this increase makes me ineligible to receive my veterans pension, may I refuse to accept the increase in order to remain on VA pension rolls?

A - No. Your refusal to accept the monthly increase on your retirement from your former employer would constitute an unauthorized waiver. However, the law provides that 10 percent of all retirement income is not counted as income for VA pension purposes.

Q - How long will the VA pay training assistance allowance to a veteran who is in a four-year apprenticeship program?
A - Training assistance allowance will be paid for 36 months, or to the expiration of the veteran's entitlement. The amount of the allowance is reduced at the end of the first three six-month periods.

Q - I am a serviceman enrolled in a half-time course in a nearby school. Will the VA pay the full cost of tuition?
A - The amount you receive through the VA may not cover the complete cost of your schooling. You will pay either the cost of the course, or at the rate of $60 a month for a half-time course, whichever is less.

Q - I was released from the Army six months ago. Can I get dental care through the VA?
A - A veteran has one year from the date of his release from active duty to apply for dental care from the VA. If he applies within the first six months, it is presumed that his dental condition is service-connected.

New Camaro. Feb. 26th.

We've never announced a car at this time before. But when nobody's ever announced a car like this before.

Super Hugger

If it were an ordinary sportster, we'd have introduced it at the ordinary time.

Instead, we took the time to build a whole new Camaro.

We started with a sleek new shape and a low road-hugging stance.

And added more hood. A faster fastback. Wider doors. And new deeply contoured bucket seats.

The instrument panel wraps around you. With enough dials to make you think you're piloting a 747.

There are four transmissions. And six power plants up to the Turbo-Jet 396 V8 that you can order.

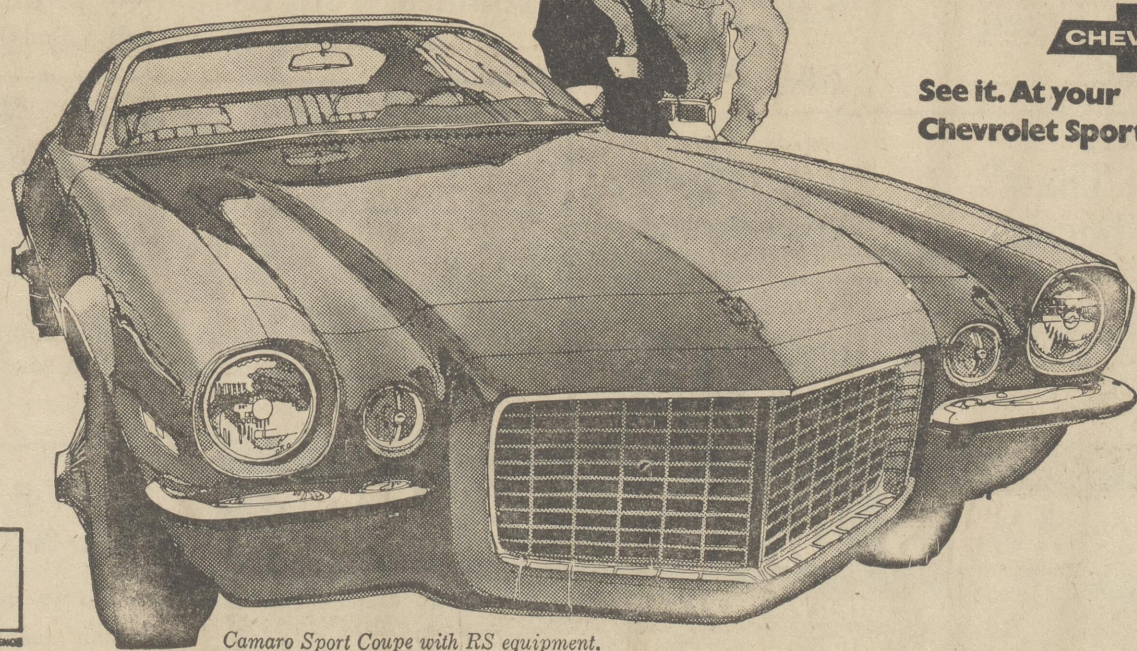

Pick the one that best suits your driving. Then go pick on an open road.

And make it one with plenty of twisting turns. Because Camaro has a remarkable new suspension. And standard front disc brakes for a leech-like grip on the road.

New Camaro. The Super Hugger. Other sportsters always feared it might come to this.

And they were right. Only their timing was wrong.

Putting you first, keeps us first.

See it. At your Chevrolet Sports Dept.

1969 was coach Harold McDonald's year to coach another state champion cross-country team. He had done so in 1963 and 1966. Every third year he's back on top.

At Lake Forest High on August 25, it became apparent that some help would have to come from the Felton area, if McDonald was to be victorious in the state meet, at the University of Delaware's Cross-country course, at Polly Drummond Hill, Newark.

This aid was forthcoming in the persons of Sam Bostick and Jerry Scott, former Felton High athletes. Despite his inexperience, Bostick spent the year running in the No. 2 and No. 3 spots for the Spartans. Scott held down No. 5 with Chris Wetherhold, Brad Morris, Danny Hitchens, Billy Stubbs and Jackie D. Parker filling the other five positions, the Spartans romped to the championship, dethroning Wilmington's Archmere Academy, the 1968 winners.

In 1966, the state champion Harrington High Lions received championship jackets from individuals in the community.

Not wishing to make another public appeal for funds, only three years later, it was decided to contact the new Lake Forest High Student Council. The council generously donated almost Woodbridge led 14-8, after one period and 21-13, at halftime.

Spartans Pin Indian River, 40-6.

Lake Forest's Spartan grapplers continued their winning ways with an easy 40-6 triumph over Indian River's Indians, at Lake Forest last week.

Tommy Clarke's shutout victory, in the opening match started Lake Forest off on the right track, as Indian River trailed throughout.

Louis Kemp, Roger Jarrell, Chuck Hurd, Charles Baynard and Robin Callahan won by falls. Jarrell's 1:57 win was the quickest of the evening.

Roger Klapp's lopsided decision at 155 pounds enabled him to remain as Lake Forest's only unbeaten wrestler.

Doug Thompson, an 8-2 winner at 146 pounds, looks like a fine prospect. He's strong and quick and does especially well when it is realized, that he is a first-year wrestler.

The Donovan brothers were the only Spartan losers, but each had to give away a big weight advantage.

Doug Thompson, an 8-2 winner at 146 pounds, looks like a fine prospect. He's strong and quick and does especially well when it is realized, that he is a first-year wrestler.

The Donovan brothers were the only Spartan losers, but each had to give away a big weight advantage.

know. The ball was still in the strings, when the entire Lake Forest cheering contingent, charged on the floor and surrounded the new champ. Despite the Sussex Central County location, 90 percent of the audience came from Lake Forest territory. This group rose to its collective feet and gave Moore a tremendous ovation, one he will never forget. The clock showed 1:06 left in the first half, as Art Refosco presented Chris with the game ball.

The rest of the contest was anti-climatic. Moore returned for three baskets in the third period, then retired to rest on his well-earned laurels. Refosco cleared his bench, but the Spartans continued to draw away. Mike Fisher, John McCloskey and Ken Copper had 14, 12 and 10 points respectively for the Lenny, who could wrestle at 185, if the Spartans had a top-flight heavyweight, met Indian River's huge, Cornelius Biake. The big visitor has several pins this campaign, but couldn't put away the tough Spartan, despite the overwhelming weight edge.

Lake Forest, coached by Tom Muehleisen and Elliott Workman, own a record of 7 victories in 10 starts, at this writing.

Spartans Pin Indian River, 40-6.

Lake Forest's Spartan grapplers continued their winning ways with an easy 40-6 triumph over Indian River's Indians, at Lake Forest last week.

Tommy Clarke's shutout victory, in the opening match started Lake Forest off on the right track, as Indian River trailed throughout.

Louis Kemp, Roger Jarrell, Chuck Hurd, Charles Baynard and Robin Callahan won by falls. Jarrell's 1:57 win was the quickest of the evening.

Roger Klapp's lopsided decision at 155 pounds enabled him to remain as Lake Forest's only unbeaten wrestler.

Doug Thompson, an 8-2 winner at 146 pounds, looks like a fine prospect. He's strong and quick and does especially well when it is realized, that he is a first-year wrestler.
