— "SPRINGTIME" —

There is something in the woodlands, About this time of year; That makes me want to wander, From duty's pathway drear.

I want to ponder along the stream, And pathways through the trees; To where the snow is melting, And shows the old dead leaves.

I feel the pulse of Springtime, Beneath the sodden mound; I know there's life pulsating, Beneath the marshy ground.

It seems each seed and sapling, That slept beneath the snow; Throughout the long cold winter, Is craving now to grow.

Each feels the urge of Springtime, And from their winter sleep; Is pushing up towards the blue, As if their God to greet.

The open road is calling, My thoughts have taken wing; To woodlands near the pastures, Where winter's greeting Spring!
