City Council to Ask For By-Pass Feasibility Report

The City Council, at a special meeting Wednesday night, March 18, agreed to ask the State Highway Department for a feasibility report on a by-pass highway south of the city.

The decision was made after the City Planning and Zoning Commission had approved such a study and registered its approval with the Council.

The by-pass under study would run from Vernon Road, or Delaware 14, east on Reese Avenue, cross the railroad tracks on an overhead bridge to East Street; thence eastward across the Trane Company land to emerge on the southbound lane of U.S. 13 between The Bridle Bit Restaurant and Kirby & Holloway Transportation Company.

The highway department has considered a southern bypass here many years, but that is all it has amounted to.

The request for a feasibility study was made after it was revealed an option had been taken on the Trane Company land, some 40 acres, and two other tracts, by Dudley Willis who proposes to establish an industrial park.

In other matters last week the Council acted as follows: Rejected appeals of two owners for reduction of taxes.

Authorized the purchase of a small tractor for the sewage-disposal plant and mowing of banks of adjoining ponds.

Delaware Food Market Report

'Tis Easter again and time to plan the gala dinner that marks the promise of spring. For many families ham will be the featured meat since ham for Easter is traditional in many homes. If you are shopping for hams, be sure to note the many forms available and the large number of terms used to describe ham. Basically there are two kinds of ham sold in most retail stores. They are either fully cooked or cook-before-eating hams.

Hams that are labeled as being "fully cooked" are heated to an internal temperature of about 150 degrees Fahrenheit. This insures complete protection against the danger of getting trichinosis. This ham can be eaten without additional heat, although you may want to heat it to serve it. Canned hams also fall in this group. Be sure to read the label to see if boneless rolls, or semi-boneless hams are fully cooked.

Cook - before - eating hams require additional cooking. These hams are smoked and are heated only to an internal temperature of 140 degrees Fahrenheit. This again is sufficient to kill any trichina. Remember to read the label and if he says smoked ham, treat as you would any other meat - cook before eating.

Another kind of ham is the Country-cured ham. These hams are heavily cured and usually require soaking and simmering in water before baking. If you find mold on these hams, don't get alarmed and throw away; simply take a vegetable brush and scrub clean.

If you are interested in true economy (and can use the whole ham), then buy a whole ham. A cook - before - eating ham, bone in, yields about 2 1/2 servings per pound. Thus, the 10 to 14 pound whole hams provide from 25 to 35 servings. If you do not wish to roast the whole ham at once, then ask the butcher to cut it into parts and store. A ham can be divided several ways. For example, ask to have the butt end removed and the remaining pieces split lengthwise along the bone to give a boneless roast and a piece with the bone in for a boiled dinner. Or have the whole ham cut at either end to yield the butt portion as a piece to bake and the shank portion as a piece either to bake or simmer. Then the remaining center cut may be sliced thick or thin depending on whether you plan to roast, boil, or pan-broil it.

While uncooked cured ham keeps longer than fresh pork cuts, knowing recommended storage time helps prevent loss from spoilage. As a general rule, refrigerate all mild-cure hams and use them within a week. Keep canned hams in the refrigerator too. If you decide to freeze ham, hold it no longer than two months. Cured and smoked meats deteriorate rapidly in flavor when frozen, and so should be stored for limited periods only. Canned hams should not be frozen.

Veterans' News

Q. - I borrowed on my G.I. insurance, and wish to start paying off the loan with monthly payments. How do I do this?
A. - Make your check or money order payable to the Veterans Administration, and mail it to the VA office where you pay your premiums. Give your insurance number, and specify that the payment is to be applied to your loan.
Q. - My mother receives a pension from the Veterans Administration because of the death of my father, a World War I veteran. She has been in a nursing home for the past four months. I recently learned that she may be entitled to an additional $50 per month because she is in a nursing home. Is this correct?
A. - Yes. Have your mother submit evidence that she is a patient in the nursing home, and the VA will be able to make the additional award. (In fact, if VA determines such a person requires the aid and attendance of another person, she will be eligible for this payment even if she is not in a nursing home.)
Q. - My husband is permanently and totally disabled as a result of injuries suffered during World War II. Is my son entitled to assistance in securing a college education?
A. - Both you and your son may qualify for this assistance which is given to wives and children of certain totally disabled veterans whose disabilities are the result of military service. After receiving counseling at the expense of the VA, each of you may be entitled to educational allowances for 36 months. Contact your VA regional office for specific information.
Q. - I served in World War II, and have a 20-year endowment plan that will mature next year. Will I have to take face value, or can I convert it to another type of insurance?
A. - You may exchange it for a policy of lesser cash value if you can prove to be in good health. This must be done before the policy matures.
Q. - I now receive a pension for non-service disabilities from the VA under the old (or protected) pension law. When I die, will my wife also be paid under the old law?
A. - No. The surviving widow must apply for pension at the time of your death under the pension law in effect at that time.
Q. - If I take a paid-up policy after changing from my World War II 20-year endowment plan, will my dividends discontinue?
A. - No. However, the dividends may be less than on your present policy.

Does Your Kitchen Fit You?

Are you one of the few who are standard height? Count yourself lucky if you are, because then the cabinets in your kitchen are the right height. And you can work comfortably.

Unfortunately, the standard 36-inch counter suits only a small proportion of home-makers. And, even these lucky few find the counter the wrong height for many jobs, according to Miss Coral K. Morris, extension home management specialist at the University of Delaware. "Working at the wrong height counter is very tiring." Your elbow height determines the most comfortable work height when you're standing, according to research studies. For instance, for most activities in the kitchen, you need a work surface three inches below your elbow height.

But if you're holding a mixer or exerting force, the work surface should be six or seven inches below elbow height. When you sit down to work, the work surface should just clear your thighs. So, it's obvious even the standard height woman needs more than one work surface height, Miss Morris says.

"Here's an easy way to tell if you have the cabinet height which is best for you. Are you working with a straight back and relaxed shoulders? If so, the work surfaces are well-located."

If they need changing, don't give up. You or your husband can make some easy adjustments without rebuilding your kitchen. You can add height to the counter by putting blocks under the cabinet or by putting a platform on top.

A less expensive—and usually less bothersome—method is to use or install pull-boards above and below the top drawers in a base cabinet. These can usually supply the different work heights needed for various jobs.

Kitchen tables or study utility carts can also be adjusted to the correct working height. Use an adjustable ironing board to help you decide on the best work height, recommends Miss Morris.

Kitchen storage units are important too: Straining to reach articles stored on very high or very low shelves is tiring and can be dangerous.

Put your most-used appliances and dishes where you can reach them easily. Save the inconvenient shelf for that large meat platter you only use once a year.

Don't try to fit yourself to the standard cabinets. Your kitchen should fit you—not vice versa.

United Methodist Maintenance Of Crow Shoal Is Awarded

A contract totaling $494,000 for the maintenance dredging of Crow Shoal, which lies in the direct route of the Cape May-Lewes Ferry, was awarded today by the Delaware River and Bay Authority.

Successful bidder was American Dredging Company of Philadelphia, whose bid exceeded by only $1,000 the estimates prepared by Authority engineering consultants. It is stipulated that the dredging be completed prior to Memorial Day.

The $494,000 the Authority will spend this year for maintenance dredging is approximately one third of the total deficit at which the Ferry is currently operating. Authority Director William J. Miller, Jr. explained the continuing and unsuccessful attempts to have the Federal Government, through the U.S. Corps of Engineers, pay for maintaining an open channel across Delaware Bay is an attempt to help the ferry service meet a breakeven point quicker.

Despite intervention by members of Congress of both New Jersey and Delaware, Miller said, the Corps of Engineers has repeatedly rejected requests it recommend that the Federal Government assume maintenance of the channel. The Corps of Engineers cites its study which finds that the costs of the project would exceed the benefits to the public using the ferry system.

In other Authority action, Miller described present and near future measures designed to curb excessive spending on the Delaware Memorial Twin Bridges now that four lanes of one-way traffic are opened in each direction. In reply to the Commission's concern about safety and speeding, Miller reported that radar surveillance is presently in effect, and that the television monitoring system will be operative soon, providing complete control of bridge speeds and traffic conditions. Miller also reported that the Delaware Memorial Twin Bridges, largest twin structures ever built, have been nominated for the honor of Outstanding Civil Engineering Achievement of 1970. The annual award is presented by the American Society of Civil Engineers.

Tuesday, April 14 was set as the next Authority meeting.

Local Newspapers Should Print Legal Notices Pertaining to Their Areas

The Kent County Planning and Zoning Office, when it holds hearings pertinent to an area, it should publish the notice in the newspaper in the immediate area.

We have yet to publish such a notice. We are not alarmed over the loss of revenue, since it would be slight, but we believe the residents of this area would be made more aware of the hearing if it were published in this newspaper.

The residents should not have to read the fine print in the dailies to find out about it.

Once upon a time we approached John Bryson, of Water and Air Resources Commission, now incorporated in the Department of Environmental Control, and told him applications for permits from this area (for cesspools, wells, manufacturing plants which might emit offensive odors, dust, etc.) should be printed in this newspaper. No results.

Again, the small financial return was not the main issue: the chief issue was that residents in the affected area should not have to read the legal notices in the district dailies to find out what might happen in their own areas.

There is one thing sure: when one applies for a liquor license, one must publish the application in the nearest newspaper.

Many farmers in this locality are planting food and cover plants on their land in areas where they cannot raise a crop. Joe Strachar, of near Masten's Corner, plans to plant Norway spruce on a small section of his farm. These trees will provide shelter for game and can be sold for Christmas trees.

Masten - Cahall Wedding Announced

The wedding of Miss Elizabeth Jane Masten, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Townsend Masten, of Harrington, and Arthur Byington Cahall III, son of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Adams, of Pittsburgh, Pa., took place March 21st, at four o'clock, Christ Church, Milford, with the Rev. Alburt L. Gardner and the Rev. Joseph S. Hinks officiating.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore an empire gown of peau de soie, trimmed with alencon lace and seed pearls. A circular train was attached at the neck line. She wore a Dior bow attached to a silk illusion veil. Her bouquet was of gardenias, stephanotis and baby's breath.

Miss Gale Umphlett, of Harrington, was maid of honor, and Mrs. Joseph Taylor, of Milford, was matron of honor. Their floor length empire gowns were maize Karate, trimmed in Venetian lace. Their headpieces were matching Dior bows attached to illusion veils.

Bridesmaids were Miss Maggie Deputy, of Milford, cousin of the bride, Miss Deborah Adams, of Pittsburgh, sister of the groom, and Miss Diane Scheyer, of Philadelphia. Their gowns were orchid Karate in the same style as the honor attendants, with matching Dior bows and illusion veils. All carried bouquets of violets and jonquils.

Gerald Horne, of Pittsburgh, was the best man. The ushers were Donald Huffman, cousin of the groom, David Sneiderger, both of Pittsburgh, Anthony Malorana, of Youngstown, Ohio and Dale Holloway, of Harrington.

A reception was held at the Shawnee Country Club, Milford.

The bride is on staff at the Milford Memorial Hospital and the groom is a teacher in the Woodbridge School District, at Greenwood.

TWO PROMOTERS

reason to doubt the delivery of the animals after the promoters have taken the $1,000.

Secondly, the Bureau advises the chinchillas are difficult to raise, and that a knowledge of animal husbandry is necessary for successful breeding.

Thirdly, five breeding animals are hardly enough to establish a profitable business.

Fourthly, demand for specially bred fur pelts changes continually and the promoters could be offering animals whose pelts are no longer desirable because of color, quality, texture, depth and silkness of fur; and therefore barely marketable at even the lowest prices.

Two sentences from the late President's famous Farewell Address of Jan. 17, 1961, are quoted in virtually every anti-military article:

"In the councils of government we must guard against the acquisition of unwarranted influence, whether sought or unsought by the military-industrial complex. The potential for the disastrous rise of misplaced power exists and will persist."

Clearly, this is a warning. But what did Eisenhower, the soldier, really mean? What else did he say? If he were alive today, would he permit the use of his words as a "cover" for attacks implying some kind of conspiracy between our military services and their suppliers of goods and services?

First, his whole speech was a plea for peace and "how we use our power" to achieve it. But immediately (unlike those who minimize the need for a strong defense) he declared: "We face a hostile ideology - global in scope, atheistic in character, ruthless in purpose, and insidious in method. Unhappily, the danger it poses promises to be of indefinite duration."

Turning to the "military-industrial complex" his first words were: "A vital element in keeping the peace is our military establishment. Our arms must be mighty, ready for instant action, so that no potential aggressor may be tempted to risk his own destruction."

Next, he freely pointed out the "total influence" of military security upon our lives, but came to this stern conclusion: "We recognize the imperative need for this development."

Only then came his advice to guard against "the complex" but even it was fully qualified by the phrases "unwarranted influence" and "misplaced power."

Did President Eisenhower really intend to condemn the "military - industrial - complex"? His whole address deserves to be studied. To quote sentences out of context is an abuse of the General's intelligence and an injustice to his memory.

Spartans Run In Philadelphia

A very respectable set of track records is starting to take shape for the new, Lake Forest High School. They compare favorably with the marks set at Harrington High School where track and field was contested for 14 years.

Four Spartans ran in the annual Spiked Shoe meet, in Philadelphia, on Saturday. This event took place on the all-weather, Tartan oval, at Franklin Field, home of the Philadelphia Eagles of the National Football League.

Kenny Tribbett placed third in the 60 yard dash in 6.7 seconds. His time was the same as the winners. Tribbett won the 60 in 6.8, at the recent Frostbite Invitational, in Wilmington.

Freddy White set an automatic record for Lake Forest in the 440 yard run of 55.6 seconds. This is good time. However, Freddy can run much faster and could even beat the old H.H.S. mark of 52.7 set by John Swain before the season ends.

Brad Morris was slowed by lack of training due to a cold, and was clocked in 10.48 in the two mile run, which did not threaten his Spartan mark of 10.38, set in the Frostbite Invitational. He should be under 10.30, when warm weather arrives.

Chris Wetherhold turned in a good 4.38 for the mile run, which beats the 4.39 he ran on the University of Delaware's indoor track, in February. This is Lake Forest's best event at this time and compares favorably with the old Harrington High mark of 4.34.7, set by Wetherhold last May.

It will be interesting to watch Lake Forest's first track team and those to follow, as they face the challenge offered by the Harrington High records. As time goes by the Spartans will exceed the old standards, one by one. Some will be bettered this spring. The discus and mile run should fall, in 1970, to Mickey Chaffinch and Wetherhold respectively.

Which mark will be the longest-lived. Jim Schiff's 1959 clocking of 22.4 in the 220 yard run, might be one.

The Spartans open this season at Laurel on April 7.

Spartans Are Baseball Title Threat

A look at the baseball candidates at Lake Forest High, indicates that the Spartans should field a strong team.

Coach Bob Young has many starters returning from both the former Felton High and the Harrington High nines, plus a group of lads, who have been playing baseball for years in Little League, Senior Little League, Pony League, etc.

John McCloskey hit a ton last summer to lead all hitters in the Big League, a loop that included some college players.

Mike Fisher had an earned run average, as a southpaw fine harler in the same competition and also hit well.

Dave Newnom and Chris Moore, along with Fisher, comprise a strong mound staff.

Bob Wyatt, a slender lad, who hits the long ball, was used as a pitcher in Big League play and did surprisingly well, since he was not an experienced hurler.

Mickey Chaffinch, Mike Davis, Mike Trotta can pitch if needed.

Jim Dill, a tiny carrot-top was a starter at second base for Felton High, as an eighth grader. He was an outstanding pitcher and slugger in the Dover Pony League and paced the Dover Pony League all-stars to several victories in tournament play.

Dale Motter, Chester Scott, Dan DeMora, Dennis Layton, Sam Bostick, Larry Larimore are experienced capable players, back for another campaign. Bostick had nine hits in thirteen trips to pace the Harrington Senior League All-Stars in the Senior League Tournament, last summer, as the locals compiled their best tournament record, ever.

Norman Short, Bob Everline and Tony Burton have been playing baseball for several years. The remainder of the candidates are unknown to this writer. There may be a future star in this group but chances are most of them will be out, as Coach Young pares his squad down to the 18 or 20, he plans to keep.

We feel this number of players will guarantee lots of bench time for a few of them. Baseball, especially at the high school level, usually sees a few of the best players getting most of the action. If winning is the name of the game, this seems to be the right course of action.

Other aspirants are Ken Copper Ben Hicks, Nat Artis, Charles Mosley, Gene Cain, Dave Cacace, Curt Powell, Ricardo Waples, Ray Scott and Dave Brown.

Harrington Bowling League

By Leah S. Wheeler

ATTENTION! All members. There will be a meeting at the beginning of next week's bowling to elect officers and set plans for a banquet to be held at end of season. Try to be a little early and be on time. No latter than 6:45! Spread the word.

Hank Wheeler seared the boards for a superb 598 series, including games of 205 and 213 to lead Gerardi Bros. in a four game victory over their closest opponent, Jarrell Fuel. Also contributing heavily toward Gerardi's conquest was Kenny Layton who rolled a grand 226 game and a fine 546 series, and Don Jester, who chipped in with a very fine 518 series. Jarrell Fuel countered with a fine effort by Dallas Hayman, who rolled a fine 210 game and good efforts by Robert Jarrell and Howard Tibbitt.

Gerardi's moved way out on top, stretching their lead to seven games on their fine showing.

McKnatn Funeral Home put together one of the strongest showings this season as they swamped Hamilton Funds in four games to remain high in third place. McKnatn's 2691 team series for the night moved them up in second place in that category. Robert Garey was the big gun for McKnatn's who scorched the boards for a superb 602 series, with games of 202 and 204 included. Donald McKnatn, with a grand 567 series, including games of 200 and 244, and Donald Garey with a grand 222 game and a fine 233 series added the extra scoring power to overcome the opposition.

Harold Brode who contributed a good effort for McKnatn's. Hamilton Funds received good efforts from Burton Case, Wayne Creadick and Clarence Jarrell in defeat.

Taylor & Messick, like McKnatn's, is getting primed for their head-to-head battle for the championship tilts by using their opponents in each ensuing week as a stepping stone to the finale. Penn Central was their victim this week, dropping three games to them on fine efforts by George Collins, who rolled a real fine 561 series, and Snooky Collins, who rolled a very fine 219 game and a 539 series. Bobby Collins also rolled well for the Taylor & Messick team. Penn Central's Ray Baker, Kenneth Baker and Marion Brown rolled very well, and enabled the railroaders to salvage one game.

The Spoilers are still in the thick of things on their three victory over Butler's Fuel in Tuesday night's clash. Carl Wright surprised with a great 212 game and a personal high 570 series; Richard Wilson added a very fine 210 game and fine average effort, and Leonard Outten chipped in with a great 514 series to make a winning combination for the Spoilers. Sam Lyons, Larry Larimore and Robert Wright rolled well for Butler's, which enabled them to eke out a game.

Gallo & Stevenson is also in good position on a three game win over Quillen's Market. Ernest Gallo, Carmine Gallo and Ed Hobbs figured heavily in the construction boys' conquest over their opponents. Ernest Gallo Jr., also rolled well for the Gallo quintet. Donald Wilson, Edmund Kemp and Earl Quillen rolled well for the market boys enabling them to salvage one game.

Allan Young continues to bowl well as he set the pace for People's Restaurant with a very fine 216 game, amassing a great 548 series, as the restaurant boys crushed Wally's Garage in three games. Also aiding People's were Shanley Smith and Frank Collins, who rolled fine above average series. Dave Ryan, James Shultie, and Wally Ryan bowled well for the garage boys in defeat, and enabled them to win one game.

FENCE TALK

Francis J. Webb, Asst.

You see them in every city or town in America, fields with marble monuments stark against the sky. These are the cemeteries. A community may lack a real park, but it always seems to have a cemetery. The headstones may outnumber the trees.

Where will all the cemeteries end? Each new burial claims 40 square feet of land, 1500 plots to the acre. Already, thousands of square miles are occupied by the dead or reserved to bury those who die.

Distribution of the land also for the living has become a problem in many places. In some parts of the world, cemeteries are also developed as parks, with only flush stones to mark the graves. The land can then also be used for picnics and the like.

Some will argue that this does not show proper respect for the dead. I don't want to try to defend this thesis.

One professional planner has suggested that we locate our cemeteries along the rights of way of turnpikes. His argument is that people might use more caution in driving. There is scarcely anything more difficult to move than an old cemetery, unless it is another highway. The planner has a point worth considering.

Time will force some changes in thinking, and is already doing so, especially in Europe and older cultures. The Northeastern states market around 53 percent of its fluid milk production in recent years. The rest of the production goes into the higher valued fluid products and in manufactured products according to Robert D. Miller of the USDA Economic Research Service.

Changes in demand have cut butter and evaporated milk manufacturing, while more is moving into cheese and frozen dairy desserts since the late 1940's. Among fluid products a larger proportion moved into fluid whole and low fat milk; less was processed into cream than in 1949.

The use of milk supplies varies widely among regions within the United States. About 75 percent of milk and cream marketings from farms in the Lake States and Northern plains went into manufactured dairy products last year. The Corn Belt and Mountain areas also used a large proportion in manufactured products.

Only 20-40 percent of marketings in the Northeast, Southern and Pacific regions moved into manufactured products.

Regional patterns of milk usage are changing. Population and consumer income changes have been uniform among areas. Both affect regional demand for milk and dairy products.

Since 1949, fluid milk and cream use fail to keep pace with increased marketings.

The Lake States account for half of butter production in the United States and output is becoming more concentrated. The second largest butter producing area is the Corn Belt, but is dropping sharply as milk cows are sold off.

Output of non-fat dry milk is concentrated in regions with large butter production. Over half of the production last year came from the Lake States area, mostly Wisconsin and Minnesota. The Northeast state of the national output was 11 percent in 1968. In our area, non-fat dry milk output occurs as a byproduct of cream, than of butter. Our high population concentration utilizes cream for bottling and ice cream, rather than butter.

Ice cream output is centered in the populous states of New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, and California.

Only since 1949 has ice milk production been legalized in some states, but all regions now show substantial gains.

Evaporated milk production has fallen by half since 1949 due to reduced demand. Substitutes, canned liquid baby formulas, improved refrigeration, and the use of coffee whiteners have been responsible.

The dairy picture looks very bright for our farmers who can deal with their hired labor problems.

This calendar explains and suggests certain gardening practices that should be carried out at a particular time for your lawn, home vegetable garden, flower gardens and for your ornamental shrubs and trees. Agricultural does add to water pollution. The quality of our environment in the fact of our rapidly growing world and accelerated consumption and use of food and fiber is one of the difficult changes facing our country. Today's agricultural with its intensive cropping and livestock production is just as likely to add to the pollution problem as are the factories and cities.

There are seven basic waste materials, according to the March issue of "Crops and Soils", that are the by products of agricultural production; organic matter, disease organisms, pesticides, fertilizers, salts, soil, and heat. All of these pollutants can be controlled or at least kept to a minimum, but we expect the farmer to deliver adequate, wholesome food-stuffs, and we want them at a minimum cost. We do not yet seem willing to acknowledge that prevention of agricultural pollution has a price tag which we, as food consumers, must ultimately pay as part of our grocery bill. The farmers' share of the consumers dollar today barely pays the production bill, let alone the added cost that it would take to deter some of this pollution.

Soil Test A Bargain Farmers, homeowners and commercial concerns throughout Delaware send soil samples to the University of Delaware's soil testing laboratory each year. Individual recommendations based on test results help these Delawareans increase crop yields, improve home lawns and maintain commercial landscapes, according to Leo J. Cotnoir, Jr., associate professor of agronomy.

A routine soil test begins when you stop in at your county agent's office and purchase a $1 soil sampling bag. For that dollar, University specialists determine the PH of your soil; the phosphorus, potassium and magnesium content; and send you individual recommendations for fertilization. To prepare your soil sample, simply follow the instructions printed on the sampling bag, points out Cotnoir. Fill out the enclosed information sheet and send the sample directly to the soil testing laboratory. The laboratory is also equipped to test soils for micronutrients, nitrogen, boron and organic matter. However, an additional service charge is required for these tests. An accurate soil test can solve many of the farmer's production and fertilization problems. It can also solve many of the problems that plague home lawns and gardens. And for the $1 fee a soil test is a real bargain.

It Seems To Me

By Janet Reed

The interest in home sewing has brought forth a deluge of sewing gadgets which are supposed to make sewing easier or produce better results.

Many of the gadgets are of questionable value and simply waste your money and clutter your storage space. A gadget should not be used as an excuse for not developing your sewing skill. A skilled seamstress realizes that the more she perfects her skill, the less she needs sewing gadgets, although some may save her time.

When considering the purchase of a gadget, ask yourself:

Is it easy to use? I bought a pleat maker once for which I never could figure out the directions. Now that pleats are coming back in style, maybe I should have another try, if I can find it.

Does it really save time? The sewing machine attachment to make worked buttonholes is a classic example. Not only does it save time but gives professional results. Hand worked buttonholes are practically a lost art.

How often will I use it? The gadget that attaches buttons without sewing them on is a novelty with limited practical use. The odds of having the right type and color of fasteners on hand for the job to be done are not very good.

Of course, if you have a laundry that tears all the buttons off your husband's shirts and you expect him to sew them on, your husband may prefer to use the gadget instead of needle and thread. But sewing on buttons isn't really that great a chore.

Does it give better results than I could get without it? Many women like the gadget for making bound buttonholes because they say it gives uniform results. Bound buttonholes do seem to be a block to some women, so the bound buttonhole maker may be worth the investment. It works well on most fabrics but may make too wide a buttonhole on fine fabrics. It's also possible to buy a larger version of this tool for making the bound buttonhole type of pocket.

Do I have to develop skill each time I use it? Some of the sewing machine attachments are not used frequently enough to develop much skill. By the time you relearn their use, you could have accomplished the task by other methods.

Do I have a convenient place to store it? The best tool in the world is no good if you can't find it when you want it and have to spend time looking for it.

Everyone sees gadgets in a different light but consider their value in terms of their cost and their usefulness in meeting your needs.

Agriculture Speaks Up

A University of Delaware survey of Delmarva farmers reveals that many of them feel the role of farm organizations in making the farmer's voice heard is becoming more important.

The survey, administered by the Agricultural Editor's Office, shows that nearly three-fourths of the farmers interviewed believe farm organizations are doing an effective job in promoting agriculture and agricultural products.

Seventy-seven percent of those questioned said it is important that farm organizations try to present a united front—at least on a state level and in areas where agreement is possible. Another 21 percent of the farmers agree that it is important, but they feel the organizations will never do it.

The cost price squeeze is the number one farm problem encountered by most of the farmers surveyed. Other problem areas include marketing, farm labor and financing.

Half of the farmers surveyed indicated they want their farm organizations to support increased dependence on market supply and demand conditions to help establish the prices farmers receive.

Farmers also seem to agree that farm organizations should speak out against the pesticide restrictions facing agricultural production. Sixty-one percent of those questioned said agricultural needs should be more carefully taken into consideration, while another 28 percent of the farmers believe the public should be warned that food prices will increase if pesticide uses are limited too much.

Some farm organizations are promoting new uses of specific crops, fostering research and trying to increase sales on a national scale. Delmarva farmers feel that local farm organizations should be doing more along these same lines for local farm production. Eighty-two percent of the farmers surveyed said that they would support a check-off program to provide funds for local organizations to expand their marketing programs.

The survey also revealed that farmers feel the main reasons why so few young farmers enter agriculture include "too large an investment is required," "better opportunities lie off the farm" and "there is too big a gamble compared to other jobs." But 90 percent of the farmers questioned indicated that farm organizations could help relieve this problem by conducting public relation programs aimed at highlighting the opportunities that are available in agriculture.

Proper Care will Keep Easter Lilies Blooming

Easter lilies are a symbol of Easter for millions of people. They can be a lovely reminder of the holiday for several weeks if you choose good plants and take proper care of them, according to Dr. Charles Dunham, associate professor of horticulture at the University of Delaware.

First of all, choose lilies that are compact with bright green leaves all the way to the base of the plant. A lily will flower longer if he has buds of several different sizes, Dunham points out.

Check open blossoms for yellow anthers; if there are any, remove them as soon as you can to prevent blossoms discoloring. This also keeps the blossom from being accidentally pollinated and closing sooner. Dunham recommends keeping lilies in a moderately cool, draft-free area to prolong the life of the flowers.

Lilies require adequate drainage, too. Don't let water accumulate in the bottom of pots which are wrapped in waterproof material such as foil or cellophane.

Water the lily when it needs it; keep the soil moderately moist, neither water-logged nor bone-dry. When watering, add enough water to wet all of the soil in the pot, not just the top inch or two. Don't water again until the soil begins to dry out, suggests Dunham.

You can make Easter lilies bloom again in the late summer. When all the blooms have wilted, place the potted plant in a sunny window until early May when you can plant it outside, six to eight inches deep. It will die down completely, but with normal growing conditions, it should come up and bloom again late in the season.

However, don't plant your Easter lilies outdoors if you have other lilies in your garden, cautions, Dunham. Most Easter lilies are infected with a virus that will spread to other lilies growing nearby. Easter lilies planted outdoors may live over the winter but generally they are single-season plants.

Farmers Need Current Pesticide Information

Rapid changes in regulations governing the legal use of pesticides demand that farmers have the largest pesticide information, says John S. McDaniel, agricultural chemicals specialist at the University of Delaware.

Labels on leftover pesticides do not necessarily contain current recommendations for the product, he warns. Many changes in pesticide regulations have occurred since last season. Responsibility for proper and acceptable use of agricultural chemicals rests with the individual farmer. Improper use of chemicals may result in unlawful residues. For example, if forage containing harmful residues is fed to livestock, residue could later show up in milk, meat or butterfat.

To avoid unlawful residue, be sure you have the latest information necessary for proper pesticide use. Make sure you understand the

Why AMIBEN is today's No. 1 soybean herbicide

Because it gives you, in your choice of liquid concentrate or granules, the broadest range weed and grass control on the market.

Other soybean herbicides are essentially grass killers. AMIBEN™ preemergence weedkiller not only controls a full range of grasses but also, as a bonus, controls a full range of broadleaf weeds. In fact, Amiben controls more grassy weeds and more broadleaf weeds than any competitive chemical you can buy.

Amiben gives you these advantages with safety to your crop (even in wet weather), safety to adjacent crops and to crops you may plant on the same ground next year. Other soybean herbicides may perform well within their own limits, but they are no match for Amiben... the nearest thing to a perfect soybean weed and grass killer that science has yet come up with. That's why more farmers use Amiben than any other soybean herbicide.
