EASTER SEAL CAMPAIGN OFFICIALLY ENDS

Delaware's 1970 Easter Seal campaign to raise funds for crippled children and adults officially ended on Easter Sunday, but according to Mrs. Russell W. Peterson, Easter Seal Campaign Chairman, "much work remains to be done to assure the success of the drive."

"Easter Seal campaign volunteers who have finished their neighborhood collection are urged to turn their kits into their captains so that the funds can be processed. Those who have not contacted everyone in their assignment should still do so before turning in their kits in order to assure that we reach our goal of $110,000.00 for Delaware."

volunteers and contributors, "if you know of a crippled youngster or adult who might benefit from camp, therapy or one of our other Easter Seal services, contact your Easter Seal Society and give them the information for follow-up."

Harrington Phone Calls Go Up!

Harrington telephone users made over 3,209,000 phone calls during 1969.

With 2,568 telephones in Harrington, this amounted to an average of 1,249 calls per phone last year, reports Jim Strickland, Kent County manager for the Diamond State Telephone Company.

"Back in 1960, when there were 1,638 telephones in Harrington, customers here made a total of 1,777,000 calls. This amounted to 1,053 calls per phone that year, Strickland said.

To keep ahead of this growing demand, telephone engineers have made numerous additions to Harrington's switching - machine since it was converted to dial operation back on Feb. 2, 1941 at a cost of $14,924.

The first major dial addition in the Harrington office was completed in 1943 at a cost of $12,305. In 1953, the company invested $9,570 for more dial equipment. In 1962, the equipment addition amounted to $16,438. In 1966, it was for $54,205, in 1967 for $39,893, in 1968 for $39,730, and this year the company will spend $55,000 for additional dial switching equipment in the Harrington office.

Outlining statewide telephone growth, Strickland pointed out that in 1950, Delaware had 118,000 telephones, in 1960 there were 218,000 and now there are over 360,000 telephones.

"In 1950," Strickland said, "Delawareans made 196 million calls for the year; in 1960 it went to 341 million calls and last year the figure amounted to over 583 million calls for the year."

Zimmermann Bans Closed Meetings

The House minority leader proposed last week all meetings of General Assembly committees be open to the public.

Rep. Jacob W. Zimmermann, D-Dover, the sponsor said his resolution would preclude the use of any executive sessions—the named applied to closed meetings — and would include the deliberations of the Joint Finance Committee.

"I think that any time you have a session with more than one person in attendance, there's no such thing as a secret," Zimmermann said.

The resolution was a continuation of Zimmermann's irritation with the joint committee investigating the Game and Fish Commission. That has held some closed hearings.

Zimmermann's resolution was sent to the House Administration Committee.

The House also last week voted down a bill that would have created penalties for those convicted of engaging in deceptive trade practices.

The bill, one of a package of consumer protection measures being pushed by Rep. Pierre S. DuPont IV, R-Rockland, got only 11 votes.

Opposition developed after House Majority Leader W. Laird Stabler Jr., R-Montchanin, said Jerome O. Herlihy, a former deputy attorney general and legal aide to the governor, opposed it. Stabler said Herlihy believes the bill would hamper law enforcement by tempting defendants in civil suits to seek Fifth Amendment protection.

Stabler said the attorney general's office already has the power to enjoin those suspected of engaging in deceptive practices.

The roll call on the bill was tabled, meaning that DuPont may resurrect it when he finds sufficient votes.

Day Care Center St. Stephen's Opened March 31

By Mrs. Maynard Brown

The Harrington day care center held at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church opened March 31, 1969 with a two-fold purpose; first it has helped their children between the ages of 1 1/2 to 5 years taken care of during the day from 6 a.m. to 5 p.m., five days a week. And second, the children have been exposed to things they would not otherwise have known.

The children play games, sing, draw, color, paint, and do many other things, some of them are very creative.

The center has helped the youngsters to grow physically, emotionally and socially, but understanding and love has been our outstanding motive.

They have taken several field trips, which has helped to widen their experiences, such as visiting the fire department, First National Bank, railroad station, post-office, library, Harrington Journal, Hi - Grade Dairy, Wheeler's Park and Delaware State Fair.

The center opened with an enrollment of 14 children, by summer of '69 it had reached to 62 which also included school children. With the "Curtain Going Up" - A play Within A Play.

The senior of Lake Forest High School will present two performances of "Curtain Going Up" in the school cafeteria at 8:00 p.m., April 3 and 4.

This year's play could be termed "a play within a play." It relates the many problems encountered by students and teachers in the production of a high school play.

There are several mixed-up romances involving both students and teachers. Norman Carter, played by Guy Winebrenner, is the journalism teacher who falls for Miss Irene, Burgess, the drama teacher, played by Janet Hutchison. Terry Gallo plays Lorry Fuller, whose boyfriend is Andy Fullbright, played by Daryl Washold. Another romance involves Vickie Cudd as Nancy Leverage and David Lim as Jocko Guthrie.

Also included in the cast are Carolyn Pommell, who takes the part of the prim and proper Miss Carolyn Moran; Charlie Brown, who as Milt Sanders is the clown of the play; Jim Pizzadili, as the athlete Buck O'Mara; Renee Quillen, who plays Kyle Roberts, Jocko Guthrie's aunt; Gene Price in the role of Tony Peterson, the school custodian; Joyce Forrester, as Miss Henrietta Rivers another teacher; and John Brown as Nancy's father, Richard Leverage.

Others who appear as students are Karen Bessellieu, as Elsie Hunter; Kathy Lord, as Sylvia Moore; Jackie Dewtler, as Janet Young; and Aleta Mason as Joan White. Carol Gannon appears as a neighbor and Judy Wyatt as a student's mother.

Mrs. Hazel Smith, a member of the high school faculty, is producer - director. Emily McKnatt is the student director.

Bookhammer Backs Upgrading Postal System

Lt. Governor Eugene Bookhammer Monday backed an upgrading of the U.S. postal system, noting that modernization of the mails has been "painfully slow."

"My strongest concern, however, is that we give sufficient consideration to insuring that the public interest is properly protected in any changes made."

Speaking at a meeting of the 27th Election District at St. Paul's Church, Odessa, Bookhammer mentioned both a T.V.A. - type corporation and a Comsat - type corporation as possible models for an improved postal system.

"The present point of disenchantment was inevitable," Bookhammer told his audience.

"It was foolish to expect that this service could meet the needs of a rapidly expanding population and usage with one foot stuck in the past."

Bookhammer is a candidate for the Republican nomination for Congress and said that as a U.S. Representative, "I would certainly dedicate my efforts to solving this problem. I would expect that any change should not effect the availability of convenience of this service and that the cost would be maintained so as to be within the reach of all of our citizens."

Local Poems By New York Publisher

"The Celestial Song" by Samuel A. Short, Jr., Carlton Pages Inc., New York. A book of poems with 64 pages, $2.50.

Samuel A. Short Jr. after retiring from his meat and grocery business, Harrington, in June of 1969 wasted no time and has had a book published by the above publishing house.

His book with the above title was named from the experience of that great character and religious unitarian John Wesley, who was one of the men that introduced Methodism to the United States, after hearing the great choir of Aldergate, England, while passing its doors one Sunday morning, hearing the singing he paused and the song was so touching and seemed to be coming from God above, he was converted and was a changed man from that day on.

Others who were elected to office for the coming year are: vice president - Mrs. James D. Moore; secretary - Mrs. Leon Kukulka; treasurer - Mrs. Olin Davis; student/family liaison - James Schoch; American abroad coordinator - Mrs. Albert Mason; school liaison - Mrs. William Smith; student representative - to be elected by AFS Club at Lake Forest; student AFS advisor - Miss Carol Schreiner; publicity - Mrs. William A. Minner; funds chairman - Francis Ryan.

The donkey basketball games held on March 19 were well attended and greatly enjoyed by audience and participants alike. Thomas Peck, past president of AFS has expressed his appreciation to all who took part in any manner. The receipts will total just about $500 when all of the monies have been turned in. This is a little less than the amount needed to fund the Exchange Student Program for next year. In the event that someone was not able to attend the donkey ball games and would like to make a donation to the chapter, Mrs. Kukulka or Mr. Peck would gladly accept such a donation at any time.

In general, "The Celestial Song" is an honest effort to reflect life through the medium of verse and in his homespun items he proudly offers his book to readers of poems and verse with an expression of a happy well adjusted life, of his own in Christain faith and living.

There are evocative poems here of his native Delaware, with adulation in such lines, "Wonderful Delaware, the first state of our land, with fields of level tillage, "Oh! You're grand" about prayer, praise of the Lord, spring breezes, The Death of John F. Kennedy, Green Pastures, Autumn Winds, Patience, etc.

More than 350 years later, visitors to the old Dominion, particularly those who make the journey during Historic Garden Week (this year April 18-25) are still ravished by the beauty of Virginia in the springtime.

Combination Lawn Products Leave Small Margin For Error

Lawn products that will fertilize your grass and kill the weeds at the same time are receiving considerable attention this spring. The thought of accomplishing two jobs in one is appealing to many homeowners.

Most of these lawn products work well when used as directed, but they usually have a small margin for error, cautions John S. McDaniel, agricultural chemicals specialist at the University of Delaware.

"Be sure you read and understand the direction on the package before using any of these products," he says. "And don't apply more of the material than recommended. In addition, check your spreader to be sure it is working properly; sometimes one side will release more material than the other."

McDaniel also warns homeowners about using fertilizer-herbicide combinations close to trees and shrubs. Chemicals applied over the root systems of trees and shrubs can be carried through the soil during the spring and summer resulting in damage to the plants.

To prevent these problems, McDaniel recommends applying fertilizer and herbicides separately. "Fertilize the lawn now and apply the weed killer later as a spot treatment. This will provide better timing of your applications and will reduce the change of herbicide damage to other plants."

Delaware Food Market Report

April's name is derived from the Latin aperire, meaning to open. And, in truth, April is a month of opening. It's a gardener's month, for the trees bud overhead and the bulbs at our feet open. It's a month for entertaining, and once again we open our home to company following the austerities of Lent.

April foolery, which starts off the month, separates the early birds from the sleepy heads. Jokers usually get their victims most readily before the first sup of coffee has cleared away morning melancholia. Just how the custom was started is obscure, but we do know that it goes back to the Romans' Fistum Fatuorum, or Fools Holiday. It may be of some comfort for those of us who were caught by such foolishness to know that thousands have worn the same foolish grin long before us.

April's foods are usually fairly plentiful and this year's supply lives up to expectations. The featured item on the April plentiful foods list is honey. All major producing areas in the United States had good honey crops in 1969, with total production hitting a record 283 million pounds.

Another new addition to the list is eggs. Production in April is expected to be above a year ago. While egg prices are likely to exceed April 1969 levels, they won't be nearly as high as last January, when they were the highest for the month since 1921.

Canned and frozen sweet corn, canned tomato products and peanuts and peanut products are held over from the March listing as supplies of these products remain bountiful. Also listed are canned peaches and dry beans.

Receipts of fishery products are on the upswing in April. Both fish and shellfish are more plentiful than during the winter. Southern fish are still available with bluefish, King and Spanish mackerel, mullet and croakers the more common items. Species from the North Atlantic include butterfish, flounder, Eastern halibut, sea bass, whiting and swordfish. Clams and shrimp are in moderate supply throughout the month.

Fresh fruits in April are not too numerous. However, selections can be made from among bananas, pineapples, rhubarb, strawberries, controlled atmosphere apples and pears in addition to citrus fruit. Market supplies of fresh vegetables are expected to be down from a year ago. Seasonal choices include cabbage, miscellaneous greens, asparagus, spinach, potatoes, onions, lettuce, snap beans, tomatoes, celery carrots, broccoli, and mushroom.

Veterans' News

Q. - I am a World War I veteran. Am I eligible for a GI loan?

A. - No, but any person who served on active duty in the Armed Forces of the United States for not less than 90 days and was released or discharged under conditions other than dishonorable is eligible for a special type loan insured by FHA. Ask the VA about a "Certificate of Veteran's Status."

Q. - I have been told that a veteran with a service-connected disability can apply for $10,000 worth of National Service Life Insurance. Is this true?

A. - Yes. However, the veteran with the service-connected disability must have been separated after April 24, 1951, and must apply within one year of the date that the VA informs him that he has a service-connected disability.

Q. - I am applying for a Civil Service position with the Federal Government. While in Vietnam, I suffered a gunshot wound to my left leg and am now drawing 20 percent disability from the VA. Am I entitled to any preference for a position because of the disability?

A. - Yes. Being a disabled veteran qualifies you for a 10 point preference. To secure this preference, you must submit to the Civil Service Commission a statement from the VA to the effect that you are receiving disability compensation.

Q. - A friend of mine who was a principal beneficiary under a National Service Life Insurance policy elected to take the proceeds on a monthly installment plan, even though a lump sum settlement was available. But she died before receiving all of the installments. Does the contingent beneficiary receive the unpaid portion of the policy?

A. - No. The remaining installments would not be paid to the contingent beneficiary. Where the principal beneficiary has the option of a lump sum payment and survives the insured, the rights of the contingent beneficiary are wiped out. Any remaining installments due would be paid to the estate of the principal beneficiary.

Nutrition Program Helps Delaware Poor

A mother says she and her children are hungry, but under the bed are boxes of surplus foods—unused.

One mother of eight has $138 a month to spend for food and clothes.

In some families, children have never sat down for a planned meal. When they're hungry, they open a can—or a bag of potato chips.

These are Delaware families, living in rural areas of Kent and Sussex counties as well as in center-city Wilmington.

However, more than 430 low-income families are getting special help to improve their diets through an expanded nutrition program of the Cooperative Extension Service at the University of Delaware. Twenty-two nutrition aides and two professional staff members are working in this program, according to Miss Janet Reed, state leader of Home Economics Extension.

The federally funded program began in December, 1968, in Wilmington when seven aides were hired and carefully trained. One is Spanish speaking; she works with Spanish-speaking families throughout the city. The other six are black and work in the northeast section of the city.

These aides are now helping more than 200 families representing almost 1200 people. Last summer they also worked with nearly 50 young people in the community school program in Wilmington.

Additional funds were made available in the fall of 1969 to expand the program throughout the state, according to that state, according to Miss Reed. One part time and fifteen full time aides were hired to work in Middletown, Odessa, Townsend, Smyrna, Dover, Felton, Milford, Milton, Lewes, Laurel, Seaford, Selbyville and Lincoln. By March 1, they were working with 230 families representing nearly 1700 people.

These nutrition program assistants are recruited from the neighborhoods in which they are to work. They understand the people and their needs and, following training, know what resources are available. They are also accepted by the people they're trying to help.

The aides visit homes, teaching homemakers in their own kitchens. They explain what foods are needed daily for good health and nutrition, show homemakers how to plan simple dishes using surplus foods and how to improve their cooking so food values are not lost. Homemakers learn to get more for the money they spend on food.

Through the program, many families have found that careful planning and shopping can mean more appetizing and more nutritious meals; this is a new concept for most of them. And, the money they save comes in handy for other family needs.

Miss Reed points out that poor diet and malnutrition are probably caused just as much by homemakers who simply don't know how to choose and prepare good foods as by these homemakers who don't go to educational meetings; language may be a barrier; knowledge, skill and equipment may be minimal. Person-to-person education, as in the nutrition program, is one answer that seems to be working.

For instance, the Spanish-speaking aide is reaching families that have had little contact with English-speaking people. Some did not know they could get surplus foods. The aide is helping them sign up for food, helping translate information into their language, and telling them about health services—in addition to her other duties.

Last summer, the aides were asked by PTA's to hold nutrition lessons for young people through the community school program. Classes were organized in George Gray and Northeast elementary schools for children from seven to fourteen.

The children learned about food, good manners, table setting and foods from other countries. They took trips to Longwood Gardens to see a vegetable garden and to a local good store to learn about buying food.

Already the program has produced positive changes, not only among the people who are being helped, but also among the aides, reports Miss Reed. Within three months, three of the original seven aides went off welfare programs. Four are working toward their high school diplomas in night school; several are enrolled in classes in typing, business machines or driving; one has moved to better living quarters. They, too, are improving their own food management practices and have earned new respect in their own communities.

Agricultural Needs United Voice

Agriculture must unite to make its voice heard in the city. Only a united voice can counteract the bad press agriculture has received, according to Robert C. Liebenow, president, Corn Refiners Association, Inc.

He spoke to Delaware agricultural leaders at the recent Delaware Farm Press Institute in Dover. The annual meeting is sponsored by the Agricultural Editor's Office at the University of Delaware.

Liebenow stated that getting the story of agriculture told is particularly critical in the months ahead. "Rural America—with its dwindling portion of our national population—no longer commands automatic attention from the general press."

However, Congress will debate new federal farm legislation this year, which will assure publicity for farm issues and problems. But, as things now stand, that publicity will probably be bad because the most newsworthy issue in this year's farm legislation is that widely misunderstood term—subsidy.

According to Liebenow, "subsidies are not new. Nor have they been confined to agriculture." In fact, the government has subsidized private enterprise throughout the nation's history, he added.

"It's high time we pointed out farm subsidies are not dirty words," Liebenow said. They are actually incentives ensuring adequate supplies of food and fiber at reasonable prices, while promising a reasonable return to growers.

However, telling the story for agriculture is more than just talking about subsidies. "Urban legislators, housewives, city strap-hangers in subways must comprehend the enormity of American agriculture," Liebenow said.

This industry has assets totaling more than $300 billion, nearly four times the nation's top ten industrial giants. Also, he added, farmers have responded to the nation's population increase of 16.7 percent by producing 21 percent more—on six percent fewer acres.

The fact that farmers are also consumers is overlooked, according to Liebenow. "While your evening news may have mentioned higher livestock prices or housewives picketing supermarkets, it didn't point out that, in 1969, farm families spent a record amount—nearly $40 billion, to pay the costs of production." They spend record amounts to earn profits which have not increased as much as those of most industries.

He admitted that telling the story of American agriculture to a nonfarm audience is more difficult today than ever before. But, farmers—and agribusinessmen have the responsibility to unite and face the problem of agriculture's public relations.

Liebenow concluded, "If the story of agriculture is to be told, the time to tell it is now. If our agricultural community is to continue to grow and continue to meet the needs of the decade ahead, we must reach the full public with our side of these issues."

Fingerprint Bill Falters in Senate

A House measure that would make minors arrested on felony charges be photographed and fingerprinted by police faltered in the Senate last week.

The legislation, which circumvents the authority of the Family Court, became snagged on an identical amendment which fared unsuccessfully in the House the previous week.

Sen. Michael N. Castle, a Wilmington lawyer, echoed the sentiments of Rep. Sidney Balick, another city lawyer, that juveniles should not be forced through the police process unless convicted of the charge.

Castle, a Republican, said the Democratic representative's amendment held considerable merit and an effort should be made to reattach it to the bill of Rep. William

L. Frederick, R. Cedarcrest. Basically, the Frederick legislation, which passed the House after the sponsor agreed to amend it to deal only with felony arrests and printing of juvenile suspects. Presently, this can be done only with the permission of the Family Court, something which the legislators contended is hardly ever allowed.

Castle, recalling personal knowledge of an incident, argued that anyone—minor or adult—could be arrested by authorities acting on misinformation. However, he continued, even if found guilty, the fingerprint-photograph remains on file with the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

This leaves an innocent party with a "prejudicial record," Castle commented, "taint" which is hard to erase when seeking employment or admission to a program which necessitates a security check.

Several senators sided with Castle, but Sens. Margaret R. Manning, R-Marshallton, and Thomas E. Hickman Jr., R-Baynard, criticized the Wilmington lawyer. The amendment was defeated in the House, Manning said, and the bill was aimed at "protecting John Q. Public."

"Assuming we are still presuming people innocent until proven guilty," Sen. Andy Foltz, R-Dover, retorted, "I can't see how we are protecting society against people who are innocent."

"Good point, good show," muttered Mrs. Manning as she sank back into her chair. Citing against the "taint of suspicion," Sen. William F. Hart, R-Chesnut Hill Estates, sided with Castle. But Sen. Dean C. Steele, R-Windsor Hills, said the measure was destined to help law enforcement officers in the fight against the rising crime rate and Hickman claimed any conscientious employer would check thoroughly enough to find the arrest was unfounded.

Frederick, brought before the Senate to defend his measure, said today's youth wanted to act and be treated like adults "so they should be held accountable for the same responsibilities an adult must face."

In addition to contending he saw no validity in the "stigma" argument, Frederick informed Castle that his amendment like Balick's—was technically in error when attached to the original bill. With this in mind, Castle managed to force a deferment on the legislation until he could consult with an attorney and have a "proper amendment" drawn up.

Castle was more successful last week in getting a state statute revision through the Senate, one which mandated that courts must conduct a biannual review of persons committed to a mental hospital in connection with a crime.

Basically, Castle explained, the measure "makes the Court an overseer" of a mentally ill offender and requires a closer check on the committed on the strength of an insanity plea. Also, he said, one section of the bill requires that convicted offenders must complete the necessary term of imprisonment once they are discharged from a hospital.

Recalling his experiences as a deputy attorney general, Castle said he concluded that individuals were released too hastily from the Delaware State Hospital. The bill passed with a 15-vote majority.

Rep. W. Laird Stabler Jr., R-Montchanin, also fared better than his colleague, Frederick, when he explained to the Senate his sponsorship of a measure to permit adoption procedures to transgress State lines.

Primarily, Stabler said, the legislation, endorsed and prepared by the Interagency Council Adoption, permits a family in the process of adopting a child in Delaware to move to another state without jeopardizing their application. Now, according to Stabler, one member of the family must remain in the state until the one-year trial period is completed. He added that this would also apply to couple moving into Delaware under similar circumstances.

The legislation, which passed the House unanimously, also received a 17-vote majority in the Senate. The two missing votes were the result of absent legislators.

Poems from Paradise Pastures

By W. Cliff Miller

— SPRINGTIME —

When winter months are over,
 And it's been cold since October;
 And the ice and snow were thick upon the ground.

And you've lived in wool and flannels,
 And have read up on all the annuals;
 From the Farmer's Old Almanac neatly bound.

Then you come from under cover,
 And just like a youthful lover,
 Roam the woodland and where pasture fields abound.

Don't it make you feel lots better,
 Just like a friendly letter,
 When you see some nice green grass upon the ground.

See the placid waters glitter,
 When you hear the songbirds twitter,
 In the pool for months before in ice were bound.

When you hear the rooster crowing,
 And you know that winter's going,
 Being chased away by Spring in leaps and bounds.

FENCE TALK

How about a short lesson in the Finnish language today? Many of you know that my parents emigrated from Finland about 1909, were married here and became U.S. citizens in time.

Which brings up the matter of my Finnish name and the correct way to pronounce it. It should be pronounced Vahapah, with the accent on the first syllable, rather than Vaypaa or Vaapae, which is what I usually get. Those who come from Europe usually have very little trouble with it. For that matter, I answer to most anything. Pronunciation does not bother me as long as folks try.

It is an interesting name that means "free" in English. Most of the taxicabs in Finland carry a sign that lights up on top to say Vapaa or Free, meaning available. Our family ran into an odd experience when we were there in 1961. It seems that the hotels fly the flag of their foreign guests at the front door.

Some Americans were taking a college course in one town where we stayed and they wanted to celebrate the Fourth of July by borrowing the hotel flag.

They also wanted to invite the hotel's American visitors, but noted on the hotel register that it said Vapaa and they assumed the room to be vacant.

The matter was soon clarified and we all spent a happy Fourth of July at the college.

Let's get on with something else while we're ahead. Finnish is tough to learn anyway.

Industrial executives looking for new or expanded activity in another location want the needed environment already in place prior to their final selection of a location place. This built-in environment includes a quality educational system, water and sewage systems, transportation, communication, health facilities, recreation and parks, libraries, electric and gas distribution, and others.

These are some thoughts that came out of a conference on community and resource development at the College of Agriculture of the University of Georgia. I tend to agree, and believe that this has been amply demonstrated in Kent County, Delaware in recent years with the coming of General Foods and other companies.

It takes industry jobs to balance out our local farming interests. Quality schools require a larger tax base than farming alone can meet. In any event, new jobs mean more people, tho these industry jobs do not need much land as does farming.

We're attracting more people to Kent County because of these newer jobs, some of which change rapidly. I believe our county population now stands at somewhat like 82,000 people. The 1970 census should give us more precise figures.

More people means a greater need for carefully planned community growth, something that is evident on each succeeding day, largely through Bob O'Brien and Pete Brockstadt, our County Planners, as well as the County Planning Commission headed by G. Wallace "Pat" Caulk.

Discussion by Francis Webb: Many of you farmers and home gardeners have been reading and hearing of our new and revised 1970 bulletins covering fertilization, pest control, etc. Following is a list of all the current publications:

Weed Control for Field Crops, Weed Control for Fruits & Veg., Fertilizers for Crops, Insect & Disease Control for Orchards, Pesticide Calibration Guide, Delaware Garden Calendar, Care of Ornamental Plants, Insect & Disease Control for Fruits, The Art of Lawn Care, Spring Lawn Care, Nutgrass Control in Lawns, Conversion Table for Applying Fertilizer & Pesticides to Small Areas, Veg. Recommendation for Home Gardens, Fert. Recommendation for Home Apple & Peach Plantings, Growing Strawberry in Home Gardens, Home Vegetable Gardening in Delaware.

If you would like to have a copy of these bulletins, place an X beside the ones you want; tear this section out and return to P.O. Box 340, Dover, 19901. Please include your name and complete address.

I believe spring has sprung, at least most of the spring farm work has gotten under way. Plowing and planting are signs of spring right along with the milder weather. Many times, though, some people tend to jump the gun, particularly many home owners. Don't be in a big hurry to remove winter mulches, windbreaks, and other protection from around plants because April can also put out some pretty cold weather.

Before you start removing mulches and such, be sure your trees and shrubs are pruned and fertilized, the ones that should be done at this time. You should avoid pruning spring-blooming shrubs such as Forsythia because the flowers are on the new growth. Avoid pruning maples, dogwoods and birches now because the sap will bleed out of these trees and make quite a mess around your house, plus it weakens the vigor of the tree.

All trees and shrubs can be and should be fertilized at this time.

Dormant sprays may still be applied to fruit and various shade trees. Do not spray beech, black walnut, butternut, Japanese or sugar maple, hickory, magnolia, chamaecyparis, cryptomeria, blue spruce, larch, Douglas fir, true firs, hemlock, or yews because it may injure the plant.

Now is the time to do the early lawn chores. Liming and fertilizing, seeding bare spots, applying pre-emergent crabgrass control materials and lightly rolling lawn if it has been heaved up by the thawing and freezing.

By the time you have done all of the above, it is usually time to remove protection mulches and windbreaks from around plants.

If you would like to have information on any of the above spring chores, contact your local county extension office. Kent County Office: telephone 736-1448, or write P.O. Box 340, Dover, 19901.

It Seems To Me

By Janet Reed

Sewing for the handicapped—what a worthwhile project! This year, the Federation of Women's Clubs and the President's Committee on Employment of the Handicapped have co-sponsored a home sewing contest of fashion for the handicapped. The contest focuses on a real need. Many handicapped find it difficult to buy clothing for their particular disability. They like attractive, comfortable clothing and it may be hard to find unless a clever seamstress can design or adapt the clothing items.

It was my privilege to be one of the judges in the recent state contest and it was an inspiration to see how the contestants had reasoned through and solved a particular problem. Some of the contestant's ideas may help others who solve for the disabled.

Fasteners were designed for independent dressing. Spots of Velcro tape are easier to manage than buttons and buttonholes or snaps if hands have limited use. One contestant used a large ring as a zipper pull so an arthritic patient could more easily control the zipper. Zipper plackets were moved to the front of the garment for easier management.

Big, sturdily stitched pockets allowed the patients to carry articles with them. Pockets were placed where the patient could most easily reach them.

Comfortable fit is essential. Some patients develop muscular arms and shoulders because of the extra work these muscles must do.

Patterns must be adjusted to allow for extra movement; gussets, insets or shoulder pleats can be added. Knit fabrics have more stretch than woven fabric. A raglan sleeve or sleeveless style may be less binding than a set-in sleeve.

Two piece garments may be easier for some woman to manage. A one piece dress can bunch at the waistline when the patient is seated.

If the patient is confined to a wheel chair, allow plenty of width at the hipline and in the skirt so the skirt does not "creep up." However, extremely full skirts can get caught in the wheels of a wheel chair.

Elastic at the waistline of skirts or slacks is easier to manage, more comfortable and adaptable than a placket. Choose an elastic that can withstand hot water temperatures.

Fabrics must be sturdy, easily washed and resist wrinkling. Garments may need frequent laundering, so sturdy construction and finished seams are desirable. Wrinkle resistant fabrics help keep the patient looking neat and well dressed.

Attractive and becoming clothing are important; we all know what a morale booster attractive clothing can be. And the handicapped, more than any of us, need and appreciate attractive and comfortable clothes. They may not be able to find them, unless loving and capable hands take on this job.

Two-Eared Hybrids May Boost Corn Yields

As researchers look for new ways of increasing corn yields, one approach that will receive more attention is the use of two-eared hybrids, says Dr. William H. Mitchell, extension agronomist at the University of Delaware.

He notes that two-eared hybrids have several advantages over the single-eared varieties. For example, a field planted to a single-eared variety may have many plants without ears, if the plant population is too high or if there is an extremely dry spell when the ears are being formed. On the other hand, two-eared hybrids tend to produce at least one ear under these same conditions.

Double-eared varieties will also reduce the risk of low yields from poor stands, points out Mitchell. If rodents, cutworms or the cultivator reduces the population before the plants are pollinated, the two-eared hybrids make up for the loss with more than one harvestable ear on the remaining stalks.

But growers shouldn't expect to harvest twice as much corn with the two-eared hybrids, says Mitchell. Two-eared hybrids don't produce two ears on every plant any more than single-eared varieties produce one ear on every plant. The two-eared hybrids merely have the tendency to produce the second ear.

Seventeen-year-old Miss Hein, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Rowland F. Hein, has been in 4-H six years. She has earned state honors in Reddy Foods and clothes judging and county medals in dress review and health demonstration. Miss Hein is a senior at Mt. Pleasant High School.

Miss Messick, 16, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Messick. An eight year 4-H'er, she has won county medals in photography, health, dress review, food, clothing, horticulture, leadership and achievement. Miss Messick, a junior at Woodbridge High School, has also been state winner in public speaking and photography.

Vanderwende, 17, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William W. Vanderwende. He has completed eight years of 4-H work and has earned county honors in petroleum power and dairying. Vanderwende, a senior at Woodbridge High School, also won the state tractor driving contest last summer.

Delegates to the conference were selected on the basis of 4-H activities, leadership abilities and community service, says Baker.

The conference is designed to help delegates learn more about the problems facing America and to increase their understanding of democratic values and citizenship responsibilities.

Communications Problem Faces Agriculture

Lack of effective communications between the farm and non-farm segments of our economy in general—and the food industry in particular—is causing many of the problems facing farm leaders, according to Chester J. Teller, director of agricultural communications at Rutgers University.

Speaking at the University of Delaware's Farm Press Institute, Teller said "maybe there's no such animal as 'agriculture.' Maybe there is just the food industry, of which farmers are an essential though, as yet, unrecognized part."

How to help farmers become a recognized part of the food industry should be a major objective of agricultural leadership, he stressed.

Teller explained that the efficient farmer should occupy the same relative position to the food industry as the spark plug manufacturer does to the automotive industry. Both are faced with elastic demands for their products; both are removed from the ultimate consumer; both supply essential ingredients; and both are businessmen.

A market can be established for this arrangement that will provide farmers with returns somewhat above their cost of production, Teller pointed out. Of course, increased costs of this relationship would have to be passed on to the consumer. Food would still be a bargain, but not at the expense of the farmer.

The integrated broiler industry is a good example of this type of production-marketing system, said Teller. "There hasn't been a market for live broilers for years. The producer is under contract with the processor. Each understands his managerial function and decision-making responsibilities. Each achieves a return based on costs. All things being equal, each should be in business as long as the demands of the ultimate consumer are met. Other agricultural enterprises, notably turkeys, beef and hogs, are moving in this direction."

Only if farmers join with the food industry on a business-like basis can our economy be assured of a continuing food supply, he added.

Teller also said farmers are seeking—and clearly need—new lines of communications within the food industry.

The continued specialization in agricultural by farms and by regions has reduced the ability of general farm organizations to act as a dominant political force in agriculture, he explained. The interests of a Midwest corn grower and an eastern dairyman do not always coincide, and farm organizations cannot speak for both on many issues.

In addition, if agricultural production is to survive in Delaware, Teller said farm leaders must show the public that producers are concerned with them and the rest of society. "We must help solve national problems and not just be concerned with ourselves. We are interested in the maintenance of the quality of our environment—but we must make it believable to others."

Time passes, things change. Sometimes you have to discard something—a favorite sweater, say, or a book you've read to pieces. And you remember that thing occasionally. Wish you had it back.

Your neighbors, enlarging your world, through service and science.

Neighbors—Science . . . we could write a book about each of them. But it's that other word, "service," we want to pause on here.

From the Operator who is there when you need her, day or night . . . all the way to the helpful Installer who connects the new phone in your home, this is a company of people who specialize Thursday, March 19, studente at W. T. Chipman listened in assembly to the distinguished "Dover Committee on Drug Abuse."

The panel was moderated by Robert Samuel, local pharmacist, who informed the students of the types of drugs and what harm they can do.

Frank Exerett, of the Mental Hygiene Clinic, spoke on the sociological view. "I am a family repairman," said Mr. Everett as he pointed out that a breakdown in the family often causes drug abuse. John Gray, of the Board of Health, told the pupils that "the drug abuse problem is a medical problem." "Anybody who has a drug problem can call me," he said. He also mentioned the services of the two drug clinics in Dover and Wilmington. Mr. Peter Tighe, ex-narcotic addict, spoke next. He briefly told them of his personal experience with drugs and the harmful effects. Wisely the major portion of the program was given over to answering questions written by the students on unsigned cards.

Lake Forest's Track Slate Starts April 5

Coach Harold McDonald's Lake Forest High School track team travels to Laurel on April 7th to inaugurate the Spartan's first season in the cinderpath sport.

It is expected that the locals will not fare well, percentage-wise, in 1970 for two reasons. First, the Spartans will be meeting the lower Delaware track powers such as Dover, Milford, Caesar Rodney, Seaford, which have been competing in track much longer, than any other Henlopen schools and have much larger enrollments than does Lake Forest.

In addition, Harrington High, which had track, consolidated with Felton, which did not, to form the new Lake Forest School. This means that roughly half of the Spartan enrollment has not been exposed to the sport.

Meanwhile Lewes, Rebooth, and Milton all had track teams and united into one school, Cape Henlopen. Two other track schools, Georgetown and Millsboro, joined to form Sussex Central.

Thus, Lake Forest is meeting larger and more experienced foes in almost every outing. However, track is a sport that can see a team rank low in league standings, but still show a few bright spots to the team's fans. These occur when the squad has several outstanding performers, that come through in fine style, from time to time.

The Spartans have already competed in four meets, prior to the opening of the Henlopen schedule. These were: The Delaware Valley Scholastic Championships at the Convention Hall Civic Center in Philadelphia. The Delaware Scholastic Championships (indoor) at the University of Delaware, The Frostbite Invitational in Wilmington and The Spiked Shoe meet in Philadelphia's cavernous, Franklin Field.

Since Lake Forest is a brand-new school, its only track records are those set in two meets above, that were held outdoors. Fred White is record holder in the 440 (55.6), Ricky Hamm holds the 880 mark of 2:17, Chris Wetherhold has the mile standard (4:38) and Brad Morris owns the two mile best of 10:38. This leaves 12 other events with no record holder, as yet.

When the Spartans vie at Laurel, a minimum of twelve new records will be automatically set by the top local performer, in each event. It will be nice for some of these trackmen to be able to say to their offspring, "I once held a Lake Forest High School track record." Some of these instant, record holders will be deposited in the second meet, but may forget to mention that fact in future reminiscing.

Chaffinch was credited with a discus toss of over 125 feet in Reading, Pa. last summer. This is better than the old Harrington High mark. Robin Callahan could help in this timely - manned event.

Roger Jarrell cleared 10 feet, 6 inches last year in the pole vault but the Spartans may have a foreit second and third place points if no other vaulters appear.

Dale Motter and Norman Baynard are the high jumpers. Dave Gustafson is another. Ned Parsons, who was a varsity high and long jumper at Laurel last year, has not and may not compete for Lake Forest.

Motter, Baynard, Bob Butler, George Turner,

Shulties, Jarrell, Cagle, Guinn and Parker are long jump possibilities.

Walls and Cagle are doing well in the new triple jump. Callahan, Walls and Neal Travis have shown the ability to scoot over the low hurdles. The highs are wide open at this time.

Rick Porter and Phillip Thomas are strong youngsters able to throw and run well.

Others out for the team are: Harvey McAdams, John Gray, Hal Blades, Fred Parker, Gus Taylor, Jon Barr, Ed Ralyea, Joe Craig Moore, Mitchell Donovan, Leslie Berry, Robert Thomas, M. Berry, Green, Hicks, Scarborough.

Lack of depth will hurt the locals in the running events, as the Spartans usually offer one good man with little to back him up, in the battle for second and third place points.

In the field events, the picture is even bleaker. The Diamond State schools, that joined the Henlopen Conference, brought with them three new events, the low hurdles, high hurdles and triple jump. Coach McDonald will have to find and train competitors in these unfamiliar tests.

Tribbett also leads the 220 with Bob Smith giving this event more strength than the 100. Randy Cagle, Gunnar Dale may compete also.

Fred White and John Shulties comprised half of a mile relay team, that broke school and state records in the mile relay in 1969. They could give the 440 a good 1-2 punch. Jerry Scott, Eldon McAdams, John Brown, Dale, Cagle, can turn in good, one-lap efforts. Sam Bostick should be mentioned, at this point. Bostick was a tremendous, first - year, cross - country runner. He furnished much of the drive, that pushed the Spartans into their state harrier crown. Cross - country runners are almost automatically pushed into the one and two mile run. But, Bostick has flashed unexpected speed and may be used in any event from the 440 through the two mile.

The 880 and mile runs feature Chris Wetherhold, who has clocked 2:03.6 and 4:34.7 and is still only a junior.

Rick Hamm, Rick Collison, Johnny Packson, Ed Kukulka are other middle-distance hopes.

The two mile run, another strong event, is headed by cross - country veterans Brad Morris, Danny Hitchens and Jackie D. Parker. Other candidates are: Dave Butler, Dave DeMora, Greg Patten and Ed Gerardi, Gerardi transferred from North Carolina High, near Denton, Md., and has had some previous distance training. He has done well in practice.

The 880 relay unit may be composed of Tribbett, Bob Smith, Walls and George Turner or John Brown.

Mile relay candidates are: White, Shulties, Brown, Roger Jarrell, Walls, Eldon McAdams, Bostick, Mike Davis, Dale, Jerry Scott, Cagle. All of these boys can break 60 seconds for 440 yards.

Lenny Donovan, Mick Chaffinch and Dale Motter form a good shotgun trio. Curt Powell, a tall, muscular, 200 pounder may be a most welcome surprise. Though completely inexperienced, he is turning close to 40 feet, already.

One day of rain made much of the track unusable for several days. Meanwhile, those fortunate upstate schools with all-weather tracks didn't miss a day. Someday Lake Forest will have such a track.

Harrington Bowling League

By Leah S. Wheeler

Bowlers, next Tuesday night there will be a collection taken for the "Michael S. Seaford Fund." Pass the word to fellow bowlers in the league.

A meeting was held at the beginning of Tuesday night's action at which time officers were elected for the 1970-71 campaign. All officers were re-elected to serve another term and are as follows: President, Tom Brown, vice president, Donald McKnatt, secretary, Leroy (Hank) Wheeler, and treasurer, Donald Wilson. The banquet was voted on and will be held Tuesday, May 5, at 7:00 in the Farmington Fire Hall.

Gerardi Bros., sewed up the last third title as they swept three games from one of their upcoming opponents in the championship tilt, McKnatt Funeral Home. Hank Wheeler once again paced the way to victory for the furniture boys, amassing a grand 587 set, with a real fine 202 game included. Also bowling very well was Kenny Layton, who rolled a very fine 549 series, searching the boards for a grand 236 single game, and Don Jester, with a great above average performance; with John Forbes also bowling well for the victors. Harry Jack rolled a great 554 series, with a grand 210 game included to lead the McKnatt quintet for the night. Harold Brode chipped in with a real fine above average effort, to help aid McKnatt's to eke out one game. The one game victory moved McKnatt's up into second place, dethroning Jarrell Fuel from that position.

Never underestimate your opponent may be the key word to use in the following weeks to come, as Jarrell Fuel found that out the hard way. The fuelers had a chance of catching the leaders, but blew all their chance of catching the frontrunners by dropping all four games to Penn Central in Tuesday night's setto. The fuel boys were hampered at the onset by going into the fray with only four men and took a solid thrashing by their opponents leading the way in the railroaders upset victory was Robert Murphy, who rolled a very fine 510 effort, getting good assists from Paul Baker, with a good 519 effort, and Ray Baker with a good above average performance. Preston Carmean tried to pull the fat out of the fire with a very good above average effort for the losers, but the skillet was too hot. Though Penn Central won all four games, they still must be content with the cellar spot for another week.

Kenny Paul Outten paced Taylor & Messick with a superb 565 series, with a great 214 game included as his team split with Hamilton Fund in their head-to-head clash. Tom Brown bowled very well for the Taylor quintet, as did George Collins, who amassed a 549 set to help keep things even. Offsetting some of the power by their opponents were real fine efforts rolled by Clarence Jarrell, with a great 523 series, with Burton Case, Jon Chapman and Wayne Creadick each adding good performances.

Richard Wilson recorded a season high 558 series and a grand 223 game to lead the Spoilers in their conquest over Gallo & Stevenson. John Shaffer also rolled very well, rolling a great 523 series, with Billy Morris and Leonard Outten chipping in with fine efforts. Ernest Gallo, who has steadily improved his game as the season comes to a close again set the pace for the construction boys with a grand 574 set, with a real fine 210 game included. Ed Hobbs, Ernest Gallo, Jr., and George Hobbs also chipped in with real fine efforts, enabling Gallo's to put one game on their side of the win column.

People's Restaurant dropped three games to Butler's Fuel, altho Alan Young rolled a very good 544 series and Cloyd Bushy, rolled a real fine above average effort. Charles Brown, with a very good 501 series and Sam Lons and Ralph Butler with good above efforts supplied the offensive power that netted the fuelers three-out of four games.

Wally's Garage and Quillen's Market split two games down the middle in Tuesday Night's contests. Larry Breeding rolled a grand 522 series to lead the garage boys, getting good assists from Norman Woodall, Dave Ryan, John Winkled set the tempo for the marketers, as he rolled a very fine 208 game and a great 535 set, Donald Wilson and Edmund Kemp helped even things out by rolling good above average series for Quillen's.
