Stokes Elected Chairman Of Real Estate Com.

Paul Curtis Stokes, Jr., president of Anderson-Stokes, Inc., Rehoboth Beach, is the new chairman of the Delaware Real Estate Commission.

Stokes was unanimously elected by the Commission members at a meeting last Wednesday in Dover, succeeding Henry Topel, Wilmington.

Topel, whose term expires next year, was elected chairman at an organizational meeting last August 14 following reappointment by Gov. Russell W. Peterson of the other three members of the commission. They are Robert S. Moore, Dover; I. J. Harkins, Newark; and Calvin J. Harris, Wilmington. Stokes was appointed to the commission last year.

Stokes, who is also Sussex County Republican chairman, said he is intent on improving the commission's role of service to the real estate industry and to the public.

Since Gov. Peterson took office, Stokes has been instrumental in having the commission establish a full-time office in the Old State House in Dover and in appointing Mrs. Thelma Lewis to the office staff. One result of the new setup is a much faster processing of real estate licenses and transfers.

The commission is also empowered now to hire a full-time executive secretary. In addition, it is in the process of establishing uniform and updated courses and examinations for real estate salesmen and brokers at college in each of the counties. This is the particular role of the Education Committee made up of Harkins and Harris.

Moore is now arranging for the updating and reprinting of the commission's real estate primer.

The commission has also published the first edition of a newsletter for members of the real estate industry and hopes to continue its publication on at least a semi-annual basis.

Stokes praised Topel for his active role as Commission chairman.

Clamming Laws To Be Enforced

The Department of Natural Resources and Environmental Control has begun a vigorous campaign to enforce Delaware's clamming laws.

Field personnel will be increasing their activities in an effort to preserve this resource which must be continually protected in order that we may utilize it in the future. Our wardens will be checking licenses and limits.

Residents may take 100 clams per day, not less than 1 1/2" measured from the hinge to the mouth. Non-residents are permitted 50 clams per day. Under these prescribed limits no license is required.

Only residents may take clams for commercial use. Commercial clammers have a 1000 daily limit. The $5.00 commercial license may be purchased either at the Dover or Lewes office of the Division of Fish and Wildlife.

For further information stop by or call either the Dover office, 678-4432, or the Lewes office, 645-9351.

Burglars Haul Tractor Off Farm

State police said Tuesday they are probing the theft of a farm tractor and the looting of the owner's home on Staytonville Road Monday.

Harry Speicher, 33, reported the loss of his farm tractor, valued at $500, and the theft of costume jewelry worth $25 and about $7.50 in pennies.

Speicher told police he was away from the house between 12:30 and 3 p.m. and discovered the theft when he returned.

Peterson Signs Kent Pay Boost

Kent County Levy Court commissioners and row office holders, except the receiver of taxes, will receive $6,000 a year beginning Jan. 1, 1971, under a bill signed by Gov. Russell W. Peterson last Wednesday.

The tax receiver will be increased to $6,400; the job now pays $5,200. All other elected county officials now receive $4,800.

S.B. 396, sponsored by Sen. Allen J. Cook, D-Kent, affects Kent and Sussex Counties. However, the Sussex County reorganization bill, expected to be signed by the governor, will supersede the measure in that county.

Initially, Kent's governing body went on record as favoring a bill sponsored by Rep. W. Neal Moerschel, R-Dover, which would have allowed the court to set salaries up to $7,000.

It was later learned that Moerschel's measure would not pass the Senate. Cook said last Wednesday the House version was blocked because Kent's senatorial delegation did not favor it.

"Until the time that Kent Levy Court reorganizes, like New Castle and Sussex did," Cook said, "we feel the General Assembly should have some control." Cook is the Senate minority leader.

When commissioners discovered the House bill was destined to die, they sent a resolution supporting Cook's alternate. "I think we're satisfied with it at this point," said William C. Torbert, outgoing president of the court.

The bill was passed with an amendment, submitted by Moerschel, to have the speaker of the House and the president pro tempore review the salary schedules at least every two years.

A side effect of the bill is that deputies of row offices were granted a $600 a year raise when the bill was signed.

In action Tues., July 7, Levy Court voted to raise the deputies' salaries to $5,615. The measure passed with a single nay, provided by Commissioner John T. McKenna, who said deputies should receive $5,800.

CCD Names duPont - Hayden For Expansion

The Correctional Council of Delaware announced Monday, July 13, the appointment of chairman of two committees which will play a critical role in that's general expansion throughout the entire justice system.

B. J. Burkett, CCD president, named Mrs. William Henry DuPont as chairman of a Citizens Advisory Committee on the Judicial system, and Mrs. William A. Hayden, Jr. as chairman of a similar committee on Adult Corrections. (The CCD presently has a functioning committee on Juvenile Corrections chaired by Clairborne D. Smith.)

According to Burkett, the creation of the citizen committees is part of the agency's general expansion efforts aimed at balancing their emphasis on both correctional and judicial aspects of Delaware's justice system. He said, "Each committee will draw upon the CCD's funds and staff in dealing with those public agencies involved in their respective areas. They will support these agencies when necessary, and criticize them when criticism is justified. Most importantly, they will work with the agencies and the community to develop and implement those measures which will build Delaware's justice system to be the most effective in the nation."

"Their reports and recommendations, coupled with the professional advice of our staff and Professional Coordinating Committee, should give our board comprehensive and sound guidelines to map policy and action throughout the entire justice system," Burkett said. (The CCD's Professional Coordinating Committee is a group of officials from Delaware's courts, police agencies and correctional system which

Faculty Members Visit ROTC Cadet Training

More than 5,200 ROTC cadets and their college mentors held a reunion here over July 14-15.

About 165 faculty members and administrators from 91 colleges and universities visited their cadets as part of Institutional Representatives Day.

The educators were hosted for the two-day visit by Brig. Gen. James V. Galloway, Commanding general of the ROTC Advanced Camp.

The institutional representatives were given a briefing on the purpose and objectives of the encampment by the ROTC camp staff and taken on an extensive tour of this vast training facility. During the tour, educators were able to observe first hand the types of training experienced by the cadets.

The visitors' itinerary also included dinner in cadet mess halls.

Among the visiting dignitaries were Dr. Frank B. Dilley, Associate Provost of the University of Delaware, which has 101 cadets in the summer training program. Escorting the visitors was LTC. Harold Fearing, executive officer, and Maj. Chester Steckle, instructor in military science of the University of Delaware ROTC staff, who are on summer training duty with the cadets.

Many of the representatives attended school social gatherings on July 14 during which they were provided an opportunity to check on the performance and training progress of their cadets.

The primary purpose of the annual visit is to familiarize members of the ROTC's host institutions with the demanding physical and mental standards required for successful completion of the rugged six-week training cycle.

Frederica Man Held on Assault Charge on Police

A Frederica man is being held in Kent Correctional Institution, Dover, on two charges of assault and battery on police officers after state troopers dispersed a crowd Saturday morning at 1:30 near the Felton Tavern.

State police said they were told not to release the names of the two assaulted officers, one of whom was treated for cuts and bruises at Nanticoke Memorial Hospital, Seaford.

Felton police called troopers to help disperse the crowd. Ronnie Young, 18, 100 block S. Jackson St., Frederica, was arrested for disorderly conduct for refusing to leave the area. He pleaded guilty in Court 7, Dover, and his $10 fine was deferred.

His sister Dorothy Marie Young, 20, same address, pleaded guilty to interfering with the duties of a police officer while effecting a lawful arrest. Her $10 fine was also deferred.

The troopers, while taking Young from the tavern in their patrol car, were called back by radio and found three men insisting on knowing the charge against him. During the explanation, Miss Young's charge occurred. The alleged assault on the two officers by Young, followed.

The three men also showed up at the Dover Court but were forced to leave with the help of Dover city police.

Young is being held in default of $500 bond on each charge for a trial later in the Kent County Court of Common Pleas, police said.

Kent Candidates Attend Picnic

Two Kent County candidates attended the annual picnic of the Lower 33rd Democratic Club Monday evening at Wheeler's Park. Some 75 persons were present.

The next meeting of the club will be held Monday evening, Aug. 31.

Taxi Fare Hike Granted By PSC

The Public Service Commission last Thursday granted Diamond and Yellow Cab Companies a 10-cent fare hike to cover "exorbitant" insurance rates which no longer can be met.

The fare hikes go into effect immediately to offset the possible cancellation of insurance on July 30 for the two Wilmington taxi companies.

The taxi meters will now register 55 cents for the first "drop" rather than 45 cents, but the extra dime will be put into a separate fund to defray the costs of the increased premiums.

Norman Baylis, owner of both companies, told the Dover meeting that he was not alone in failing to cope with high insurance. He cited other companies "that are going out of business" because they can't meet the rates.

To bolster his argument, the commission learned last week that Ellis Jones, who was recently granted a franchise to operate a cab service in Harrington, has changed his mind. He told the commission he was not able to obtain insurance at a rate he could afford to pay.

Baylis, a former chairman of the PSC, and former Sussex County Republican Chairman, told the commissioners he "could be wiped out by the

COUNTY WANTS RIGHT FOR PIPELINE LAND

Kent County Levy Court started condemnation proceedings against the Holiday Inn Tuesday to gain pipeline easement rights for Phase I of the countywide sewage disposal system.

"The project is moving ahead a lot quicker than we had expected," N. Maxson Terry Jr., county attorney, told court commissioners. "We have got to gain title to the land. Then we can continue negotiations."

The county governing body included $6,000 in the motion for condemnation to be used for compensation. Terry said the funds would be used to pay off the inn at $3 per lineal foot plus damages.

He said if the proceedings does reach the courts it will not take place until September. By that time, the attorney hopes to reach an out-of-

Private War On Inflation

Rent or house payment, grocery bills, car payment, doctor's fees — do they seem to take your whole paycheck with nothing to save or spend for extras?

You're not alone, says Miss Coral K. Morris, University of Delaware extension home management specialist. As the prices go up, more families are finding it hard to manage the home budget.

The secret to living within your paycheck is cutting down on unnecessary spending. Think about it — is everyone you buy really necessary or have you just become accustomed to certain luxuries?

Remember, the more labor required to produce a product, the more money it will cost. Ready-to-eat or partially prepared foods are high in labor content so decide how much you are willing to pay for conveniences.

Sacrifice isn't only an ancient Biblical term; try sacrificing some products to cut down on the budget. Free libraries offer books, magazines and records; you really don't need all the book and record clubs or magazine subscriptions.

You don't need all the specialized cleaning products that are on the market either. Grandma made do with soap and water, so can you.

Store brands are less expensive but often the contents are exactly the same as the brand names. Don't be afraid to try these less expensive brands' and save money when quality is very similar. Also try substituting less expensive pet food — a wide range of prices are available.

Families are again becoming "do-it-yourselfers." Hair cuts that used to be a family project are again returning to the home. With the longer men's styles, trimming doesn't take the skill the crew out once did. Families are also doing their own painting, landscaping and remodeling. High labor costs have encouraged this, and the easy-to-use decorating products need no special skill to use. Home sewing is also popular with more and more people, including some men.

To save money, don't depend on others for your discipline. Re-examine that Christmas Club and the special weight watching group you belong to.

Learn to live without some luxuries completely, suggests Miss Morris. Long distance phone calls are expensive. Learn to use a pen and paper and communicate by letter, especially to those far away summer camps and schools.

Meals eaten away from home are definitely more expensive for a family. Learn to make home cooked meals a special occasion with creative cooking and appealing table settings.

Each day, today's homemakers use and throw away a large amount of expensive but convenient disposal paper napkins, tablecloths, diapers, cups, towels and plates. Is the washing, ironing and dishwashing you save worth the extra money? That's up to you.

Your private war on inflation — which spending you curtail — is your personal choice, says Miss Morris. While some cut food prices, others will cut transportation costs or medical care. Only you can decide what's important to your family.

Delaware Food Market Report

by Anne Holberton

July, the month honoring Julius Caesar, is the warmest month of the year in most parts of our vast country. It also is the month of vacations, picnics and outdoor living. When making your plans here is an old rhyme to keep in mind: "St. Swithen's Day if it doth rain

For forty days it will remain. St. Swithen's Day if it be fair For forty days 'twill rain nae mair."

St. Swithen's Day is July 15 and it is so named in honor of the English bishop of the 800's. It will be interesting to see how the rest of the summer goes.

Regardless of whether it rains or not, on vacations or at home, picnicing or eating in the house, the fresh fruits now available in good supply are ideal for eating, anywhere. Three fruits in best supply are plums, nectarines and Bing cherries and all are being shipped from California.

Although plums came to America from Europe, they are believed to have originated in Western Asia in the region south of the Caucasus Mountains. The species dates back at least 2000 years. The early colonists in America found native plums from New England to Florida and the Indians had long enjoyed this fruit.

Though there are well over 2000 varieties, we find only approximately 20 or 25 varieties here in America at our markets. Right now the Santa Rosa is in good supply and is excellent in quality.

When shopping for any fresh plum, you will find the best quality ripe fruit is plump, full colored for the variety and soft enough to yield a slight pressure at the tip. Plums are one of the most perishable fruits and once ripe will spoil quickly. Also they are delicate and are very easily bruised. Handle carefully and as little as possible. Keep them cool and dry in the refrigerator. Plan to use within two days.

The refreshing tart sweetness makes this fruit excellent for pies, stewed fruit, preserves, jellies and jams. They are tasty in ice cream, puddings, and Bavarian creams, in cakes, tarts, and pastries. Nothing could be better, though, than just to, eat them out of hand.

A nectarine is a nectarine—it is not a fuzzless peach and it is not a cross between a peach and plum. It too is one of the oldest fruits and apparently grew in China long before the time of Christ.

Like the peach, the nectarine does not gain sugar after harvest and if not well matured when picking it will be unsatisfactory tasting. Keep in a cool, dry place and use within a short time.

Fruit salads and fruit cups including nectarines are exotic dishes — and they look beautiful in a fruit basket.

Local Chit Chat

STATE LEARNS HONOR SYSTEM MEANS LITTLE WHEN IT COMES TO A BUCK

The Peterson administration is learning, the hard way, an honor system doesn't mean much where money is involved. However, the administration has given the public its chance; has found its efforts fruitless, and has proceeded to make amends. For example, the Delaware Turnpike honor system, in use less than a month, was abused and was discontinued. Meanwhile, the state lost an estimated $4000, not counting the money that wasn't collected. In the first 23 days of the system's operation, 26,213 envelopes were taken by motorists, and only 582 fares were returned. Motorists, presumably not having the correct change, were supposed to take envelopes at the turnstiles, put in the toll fee, when convenient, and mail to the state.

Another flagrant abuse, or fragrant as the guy from Sockum said, was the state administration's so-called debtor prison plan. Under it, persons unable to pay fines in certain cases, were not put in the pokey but were allowed to pay on the deferred payment plan. State violators now owe some $28,000, as of two weeks ago. The City of Harrington has some $1400 supposedly coming from the state's magisterial courts.

But—the current General Assembly has amended the law. Those who do not pay within a reasonable time, will find themselves arraigned on a contempt of court charge and this they must pay, or else go to jail if wages cannot be attached.

THE CITY WITHOUT A JAIL

It may not be so bad, after all. Harrington closed its jail when the State Board of Health condemned it. It was in the near-by firehouse and needed repairs at a figure prohibitive to the City's pocketbook.

After all, it was used mainly as a temporary detention center. Those serving terms went to the Kent County Correctional Institution in Dover.

Until recently, those convicted of minor offenses had the benefit of a state law allowing them to be freed on a deferred payment-basis on fines.

The recent General Assembly, however, has amended the law and those released on the deferred-payment basis must pay or else their wages will be garnished by the state or they will be fined for contempt of court and, if they still do not pay, will be incarcerated in the county institution.

It appears, thus, the City will look long and hard before it puts out any considerable amount of money for a jail.

The EISENHOWER—MONTGOMERY SQUABBLE

By W. C. Burgess

To start off with, Ike was named over Monty as Supreme Commander!

Why? Simple enough! Whoever pays the bill, have the most say-so as to how it should be spent! Right, with Ever-sharp!

THE FALAISE POCKET

Always a battle, between Monty and Ike! When you talk about schoolchildren; please include 'em both in; and especially Monty!

Why sure, but of course; me and the boys were there; so this information don't come out of any book, either!

Now pore' ole' Monty was up around Caen, which is in Brittany, France, and us poor ole' boys was down south! And, you guessed it! Ike and Monty; at it again! Finally, it was agreed, but, of course!

An imaginary line; us poor old boys was supposed to wait for the Limeys; and we weren't supposed to do nothing but to wait around for a linkup with Monty's boys, who were coming down from Caen for the grand ole' reunion!

Well, lo! and behold! Lieutenant General Kesselring—A Kraut General—showed right up, and said: "What you guys waitin for?"

"Why we're waiting for Monty to come down from Caen!"

It seems like Monty was a little too cautious; so it seems!

So, Kesselring, or I think it was him, came in and cut us off for a couple of days!

Now, it seems like the Army travels on its stomach, so they say!

But anyway, thanks to the manure spreaders—or farmers back home—we ate the two days out just like nothing had happened.

Eisenhower was a good general, don't you think he wasn't?

There are only two mistakes, that he made that I know of, myself.

He did not interfere when the Army shot a conscientious objector; and then he took our German books away; so we couldn't get next to the broads! Pore' ole' lonesome me, signing off!

U. of D. Lifts Residency Requirements

The Faculty Committee on the Academic Status of Undergraduates at the University of Delaware, with the approval of the faculty, removed the residency requirement for the baccalaureate degree.

The residency requirement stated that either the first 90 or the last 30 credit hours had to be taken as a full-time day student at the university.

The new ruling means students who have been officially admitted to a degree program may opt to take courses in the daytime, evening, or whenever courses are offered. There is no time limit for the accumulation of credits for graduation.

In the past, those taking work on a part-time basis (registered for less than 12 credits during a regular semester) could not complete their degree work unless they included the first six semesters or the last two semesters as full-time students at the university.

According to the Office of Admissions and Records, this presented a hardship to people who were working and going to school or could not afford to devote that much time to full-time academic work.

Several students petitioned the academic status committee requesting that the mandatory residency rule be changed. According to Dr. Robert Mayer, director of the Office of Admissions and Records, there were over 100 petitions received in the last three years.

Dr. Mayer said, "the committee made some exceptions but tried to preserve the intent of the rulings by either requiring the student to register for more than a part-time load or asking that the schooling be taken in consecutive semesters."

He added, "We know that this was a problem for people and we recognized that we have an obligation to assist people who are unable to attend school full-time."

Dr. Mayer said he does not expect a deluge of students to apply for their degree as a result of the policy change. He said, "There might be an upsurge in applications from students who have worked to accumulate a lot of credits but could not meet residency requirements and have stopped taking courses."

One area of concern to the university and to the committee will be the student whose credits date back several years.

Dr. Mayer said, "When somebody comes back after a long period of time, we'd have to evaluate them very carefully. Content in a course such as engineering has changed so much in the last 20 years it would be unfair to grant a degree to someone who could not meet contemporary standards."

Commenting on how the university would deal with this type of situation, Dr. Mayer said, "It will be up to the individual department in the college where the student is enrolled to decide whether to grant the degree. Of course, this office will also be involved." University officials express caution to those students with accumulated credits who want to go on for their undergraduate degree.

To qualify for graduation, a student must first be admitted to a degree program. He must then satisfy certain requirements for graduation according to the particular college and curriculum he has chosen.

Although the dropping of the residency requirement will benefit many students, it will not necessarily follow that someone could complete all their college work in the evening, since not all university courses are offered at night.

All questions regarding admissions and degree requirements should be directed to the Office of Admissions and Records on the Newark campus.

FENCE TALK

Are you ready for the Delaware State Fair which explodes on Friday, July 24, with the Demolition Derby as the first evening event?

The general manager, George Simpson, has most everything ready for a full week and a day of farm and craft exhibits, judging contests, parades of new and old farm machinery, you name it. There is nothing on the Delmarva Peninsula to begin to compare with this 51st State Fair.

Children's Day on Tuesday will see free admission to the grounds and grandstand events for school kids. This may be the best single day to go if you and your family must settle for one. All exhibits will be in tip top condition, and much of the livestock and crops judging will be going on during the daylight hours.

Your county agents will be there every day working with one event or another. We should be able to stop and talk much of the time - and we want to do so.

Check the ads on your catalogue for the complete listing of events. Then you can be sure catch what you want to see.

Amos Kirby of Mullica Hill, N. J., showed up for our Monday noon Pest Control meeting at Harrington with his son, Burton Kirby, a retired colonel.

He is 83 years old, and the long time veteran of Philadelphia farm radio; out of it now for 11 years, but still active as a free lance writer with farm news.

Amos is as spry and interested in everyday farm events as ever. We were all shown a horsehair worm, a parasite of grasshoppers and crickets, which does no harm to man or other beasts. The insect is usually found in places where pets drink water. So if you find what looks like a moving horsehair, put it in a small jar of water and get it to us for positive identification.

But don't trap yourself like one of our neighbors. She was weeding her fine garden and flicked at a "worm" that hissed in reply. That worm turned out to be a piece of rubber from the core of a golf ball.

Back to the horsehair worm which serves at least one useful purpose. It ruins the reproduction capacity of the grasshopper.

We heard Dr. Dale Bray, of our University of Delaware Entomology Department warn against an influx of gallinippers, the largest mosquitoes in the state. But relax. They don't bite very hard compared to others.

Dr. John Huebner also advised that current air pollution damage on potatoes and other vegetables is coming from ozone injury carried by the winds from Baltimore and Washington.

It seems the Haig variety of potato is hurt most by air pollution injury. It shows up in reduced yield at harvest time, and so, less profit.

Amos came away from the meeting as pleased as one can be. "Gee," he said, "I learned a lot and almost wound up as the speaker of the day with so many questions."

This is the time of year when folks call your county agent on the phone to say: "Do you know I have tomatoes growing on my potato plants?" Well, then look something like small tomatoes, but are actually potato seed pods which may form after the potato plants bloom. Rest easy.

It can't happen, even tho the potato and tomato are in the same nightshade plant family.

Discussion by Francis J. Webb

Most of the field corn in Kent County is progressing very well because of adequate moisture. These lush green plants are tasseling out in many locations and the farmer may have his yield goal set for 120 to 150 bu/ac. The farmer takes a walk through his fields with the giant plants growing very well and he finds that something is eating the stalks, leaves, and everything else that is green.

Most of you corn growers know what this varmint is, the European Corn Borer, and it is down right sickening to know there is very little that you can economically do to prevent or control these insects. Sure there are insecticides which will give excellent control of these pests, but the number of sprays that are required makes it not feasible for field corn.

The moths are flying every night laying eggs that will emerge in a few days as larva to infest the plants. For adequate control you would have to spray about 4 or 5 days until the end of the growing season.

This is the heartbreak, to anticipate one of the best yields in quite a few years and find you have this insect eating away at your profit and find there is little that you can do to stop it. The entomologist recommend spraying for corn borers when you have a 75% or greater infestation in the field.

If you are going to spray and would like chemical recommendations, contact your nearest county agents office (Kent County Office, P.O. Box 340, Dover, 19901, or call 736-1448.)

There's no doubt about it? Making lingerie is the biggest news in the home sewing field. Many commercial companies displayed their products at the recent annual meeting of the American Home Economics Association in Cleveland, O. Any of the companies with products or equipment in the home sewing field were pushing making lingerie.

Every sewing machine company was promoting its machine as having features particularly suited for sewing stretch fabrics, knits and elastics. But if you have a zigzag-stitch machine, you can easily sew your own.

Threads, laces, trims and elastics for lingerie were shown by thread and notion companies. Several companies are making the special patterns you'll need.

New sewing books and instructions all deal with sewing lingerie. Garments on display in various booths would surely tempt you to try. Double layers of sheer iridescent nylon tricot produced lovely subtle colorings for gowns and robes. Slips and gowns were beautifully trimmed with lace applique and lace edgings.

Half-slips and panties were suggested as beginning sewing projects in school classes. They're easy to do, can be completed in a short period of time and have a professional appearance.

Lingerie fabrics, patterns and supplies are all available in fabric shops in Delaware.

It's easy, it's fun and you'll save a lot on your clothing bill. So why not give it a try?

Roadside Markets Offer Gold Mine Of Flavor

A gold mine of fresh garden fruits and vegetables is available at Delaware roadside markets, according to Roger Ginder, extension crop market specialist at the University of Delaware.

You can get fresh from the flavor because roadside markets offer just that - produce only minutes from the field. There's no transportation time from farm to store involved if you buy local produce.

Of course, be sure you are buying local produce. Occasionally, produce is trucked here from other areas and sold at roadside stands. Find a market you believe is reliable and become a regular customer, suggests Ginder.

In-season vegetables and fruit are the best buy. Sweet corn is now being harvested in Delaware and will be available from the first week in July throughout the summer until about the 10th of September.

Summer squash, cucumbers and cabbage are also good buys at local stands and offer menu variety for many cool summer dishes. Tomatoes are one of the most popular roadside offerings; Delaware tomatoes are available now but the peak supply will be somewhat later.

The potato harvest will begin this week and should soon be hitting the local markets. The white round potato is a favorite; it's good for general all-round use.

Blueberries will be at their peak about this week. They're good quality this year, Ginder says. Some "pick-your-own" blueberry patches will be open in lower Delaware.

Peaches are also being picked locally now. However, quality will be best from mid-July until August 20th.

Early transparent apples and the Lodi variety, being harvested now, will also be offered at roadside markets. Although not the ideal eating apple, they are excellent for applesauce and other cooking purposes.

A key to satisfactory roadside stand buying is don't over-buy. Don't buy more than you can use or preserve quickly. Remember, fresh produce spoils much faster than frozen or canned. After all, you want fresh flavor, storage for a week even in the refrigerator won't help.

It takes more work to get some fresh produce ready for the table than the prepared convenience foods you're used to getting in the store. For instance, corn has to be shucked.

Also, unless you use a pressure cooker, preparation time may be longer. And sauces and seasonings don't come with fresh produce; if you want them, you'll have to make your own. However, many people prefer fresh vegetables with little additional seasoning.

Since your main reason for shopping at roadside markets is the added flavor of fresh produce, be sure you get it at the peak of ripeness. The best quality is usually field-ripened, but some varieties will continue to ripen if harvested unripe. Smell and feel are good signs of ripeness in fruits. A visual check of most vegetables can predict ripeness even through a shell. A plump, nice color usually means the produce is properly matured.

Shop with the same care as you would in your supermarket, advises Ginder. Prime quality produce will naturally be the most expensive; however, for some uses a less expensive quality will be adequate.

For additional information on peak produce seasons locally contact the county agent's office in Newark, Dover or Georgetown.

Farm Outlook Appears Favorable

Although many areas in the state experienced a cold, wet spring, Delaware crops, particularly corn, soybeans, hay and potatoes are off to a good start, according to W. T. McAllister, extension agricultural economist at the University of Delaware. "Farmers could harvest a bumper crop this fall, if they get ample rainfall during the critical month of July.

The early crops of vegetables for processing were disappointing, but the watermelon, cantaloupe, pickle, sweet corn and tomato crops look promising, he adds.

McAllister says corn and soybeans should bring better than average prices this fall due to larger than anticipated export sales and a strong demand for livestock feeding. Cattle prices are very strong now and should continue above average for at least another year.

Hogs look like good money makers until fall when increased supplies may cause prices to dip. Feed costs will also rise and cut into hog profits.

Broiler production on the Peninsula continues to expand, in spite of lower market prices and rising production and marketing costs, says McAllister. Current prices and efficient production permit a small profit margin with broilers, but industry leaders expect another price decline in the fall.

Egg prices have taken a slight dip from last year's average. But milk prices continue strong. Dairymen are milking more cows, average production is increasing, feed crops look good and so does the dairy farmer's profit potential.

"With continued good weather and favorable markets farm commodities, it appears that most Delaware farmers can look forward to another good year in 1970," says McAllister.

"Army 804, you are cleared to land on runway three-zero west."

The reassuring voice from the tower belongs to a competent young man or woman trained as an air traffic control tower operator at the U.S. Army Aviation School, Ft. Rucker, Ala.

This 13-week school instructs Army men and women in the methods and working positions of a VFR (visual flight rules) control tower.

Academic subjects give students a broad background knowledge of air traffic control operations and procedures necessary to qualify them as control tower operators, in accordance with Federal Aviation Agency regulations.

Control towers at Army airfields throughout the world are manned by graduates of this school. With the rapid growth of civilian and commercial flying, the Federal Aviation Agency is constantly in need of trained personnel. Many of those trained as air traffic control tower operators by the Army's Aviation School join the FFA as civilian employees, upon completion of their military service.

The Army offers young men and women training of their choice in more than 300 skills, many of which will meet the needs of the future. Further information about the opportunities offered by the U.S. Army can be from Sfc. James L. Gallagher at the Blue Hen Mall in Dover, or by calling him at 736-6937.

The Case Of The Racing Ambulance

Once more the value of the "speeding ambulance" has been called into question. A recent report by the President's Committee for Traffic Safety concluded that the dangers involved when an ambulance races through traffic with siren sounding, ignoring stop lights and signs, simply aren't worth it. In only a few cases, the safety people decided, is such haste vital to saving a patient's life. In far more instances, the ill or injured person may be harmed by the rough and twisting ride.

In cases of cardiac arrest, poisoning or a crushed chest injury, for example, there is validity in hurrying to the hospital. But the safety group's study found that in 92 per cent of ambulance calls surveyed, there was no such justification. In traffic, in fact, the time saved by the ambulance violating traffic regulations was only 2.7 minutes, on the average, in an 8-mile trip.

Surgeons who have participated in ambulance studies say that a speedy trip to the hospital is of much less importance than the proper physical handling of a victim at a crash or other emergency scene. Care in moving the patient, or administration of oxygen where needed can mean more to his survival or escape from permanent crippling.

Years ago interns rode in many city ambulances, furnishing emergency medical care to the ill and injured at the scene or on the way back to the hospital. The shortage of interns have largely eliminated this practice, however.

Particularly in the cold weather months when cars operate with windows up is there a hazard that a driver may fail to hear the approaching siren, may become confused or simply ignore it and cause a violent intersection collision by failure to yield.

Next time you see an ambulance weaving through heavy traffic, red light on and siren sounding, notice that the speed is not really too great. Movement is difficult at best and the driver, even with theoretical right of way, is wary of running those red lights. The total time thus saved is minimal and the hazards high.

Engineer Gives Air Conditioning Hints

Delawareans trying to beat summer heat on a limited scale may wish to consider the comforts of room air conditioning.

A room air conditioner does exactly what its name implies, says University of Delaware agricultural engineer Ernest W. Walpole. It cools air in the one room or area in which it is located.

It cannot effectively cool adjoining rooms or the room down the hall.

Location of the cooling unit is an important factor in effective air conditioning, explains Walpole. A window unit, for example, limits your choice of location options. But a permanently mounted, through-the-wall model can be installed virtually anywhere.

In either case, you must consider air and heat conditions outside the house and indoor air circulation patterns before installation.

That part of an air conditioner outside the house must effectively disperse heat taken from within. This of course, becomes difficult if the machine is placed in direct sunlight.

For peak efficiency, the north side of the house is usually the best location for a room air conditioner. But any shaded area is satisfactory.

Free air circulation around the condenser, the heat dispersing unit, is also important. So don't hide your air conditioner with trees, shrubs or other objects that may reduce air circulation.

Indoor air circulation is less critical because air deflectors in the machine let you direct cooled air where-ever you choose, says Walpole. Make sure, however, that drapes, high furniture or other household furnishings do not obstruct air flow from the cooling unit.

Selecting the right air conditioner for a given room is critical, he adds. You will certainly be disappointed if the unit is too small to perform effectively. And too large a model may cool the room too quickly, cutting off before much dehumidifying has occurred. This, in turn, will result in a cold, clammy feeling often experienced in air conditioned rooms.

Sizing an air conditioner can be quite technical," Walpole concludes. Best most manufacturers provide their dealers with a cooling load estimator that is quite adequate.

Size estimations are based on type of construction, orientation and room size and assume normal family residential activity in the area being estimated.

H. Parker Wins Mile Run in Wilmington

Howard Parker turned in the top local effort at the Delaware Track and Field Club meet, held at Wilmington's Baynard Stadium, last Wednesday night. Howard captured the mile run for boys age 11-and-under in 5.48. He defeated his arch-rivals, Gordon Thompson of Newark and Keith Watson of Penns Grove. This trio of 11-year-olds is flirting with the world mark of 2.29.7 for their age group in the half mile. We predict they may break records in other distance events as well.

Some 20 Harrington-area boys and girls made the trip to Wilmington last Wednesday. Elwood Baynard finished second in the 12-13 100 yard dash. Kenneth Thorpe and Tim Christopher were third and fourth in the 9-and-under 50 yard dash, to give this city two of the six sprinters to reach the finals. Thorpe won his heat in the semi-finals. Tony Smith was third in the 12-13 100 to win Harrington's final medal.

McCloskey Heroes Suburban Game

Johnny McCloskey was a main attraction in Sunday's game with Suburban. He stole what could have been the opposition's only score when he backed up to the left field fence and snagged a homerun ball from the air. As it was, Harrington's Big League maintained its second place American League standing with a 5-0 shutout of Suburban. Bobby Wyatt pitched the four-hitter and struck out seven batters.

McCloskey had the only extra-base hit, a double, which drove in a run. He also had two single base hits. The third inning was Harrington's biggest with three runs on three hits and two walks.

This week's games are at Laurel, Thursday, July 16, at 8:00 p.m., and Sunday with Woodbridge at 2 p.m. at the Moose Home field.

Big League Moves Into 2nd Place

by Kay Raughley

Harrington claimed second place behind Laurel in the American League by beating Georgetown 4-3. Mike Fisher has won 3 and lost one game for the Big League team this year. He won the game last Thursday by striking out ten Georgetown batters and allowing them just five hits.

Norman Short hit two singles and Bobby Wyatt smacked a rousing triple down the right field line for Harrington. Down 2-0 at the top of the fourth inning, Wyatt's triple, followed by a run-scoring single by Mickey Chaffinch, tied up the game. Short lifted a base hit to right field and followed Chaffinch home on an error by the shortstop. Bob Everline got credit for those two runs. Georgetown tied the game in the fifth, 3-3. Harrington won the game in the seventh and last inning when Mike Fisher scored on Chaffinch's ground ball to the third baseman on a throwing error.

Late Model Stocks to Replace Indy Cars

The United States Auto Club has cancelled the July 19th Indianapolis Car 200-Mile race at Dover Downs International Speedway A 200 mile USAC late model stock car event has been scheduled as a replacement race on July 19th.

R. D. Forman, Dover Downs General Manager gave the following reason for the cancellation. "According to USAC the newly laid asphalt in turns No. 1 and No. 3 has not had sufficient time to "cure" and therefore is not suitable for the 1350 lb. ultra-fast Indy cars at this time."

Dover Downs had just completed a $50,000 track surface modification program especially for Indianapolis car race presentations. As a result of the cancellation, the Indianapolis cars will be idle on July 19th.

Many of the Indianapolis drivers are expected to be on hand for the 200-mile stock car event that will pay a purse of $35,000.

With the stock care now scheduled for July 19th, the original Aug. 9th USAC late model race has been removed from the calendar.

Some of the drivers expected to enter the July 19th race include, A. J. Foyt, Bobby Unser, Roger McCluskey, Art Pollard, Don White, Norm Nelson, Butch Hartman — to name a few.

This will be the richest 200 mile stock car purse ($35,000) in USAC history — on a one mile track.

Tickets for the Indy car event originally scheduled, will be honored for the July 19th stocks car event.

Those people wishing a refund on the Indy car race tickets, may present them to the Main Ticket Office at Dover Downs.

The USAC late model race gets underway, Sunday, July 19th at 3:00 p.m.

advises the board.)

In explaining the reasons for the new committees, Burkett said, "The Correctional Council cannot and will not stand still while the pace of today's social changes moves by us. We must keep abreast of up-to-date measures for the prevention and control of crime."

"For several years we have seen the need to move beyond the narrow scope of adult corrections. Last year we moved into the area of juvenile corrections. Since that time we have carefully been developing the resources that would allow us to move effectively into the full range of judicial matters in Delaware. Now we are ready for that step."

Burkett said, "Mrs. Dupont's extensive involvement with the recent Family Court revision had proven her to be a determined and enlightened fighter for necessary court reform. She will be a definite asset to both our agency and the judicial system as her committee tackles the broader court system from the magistrate level through the Supreme Court."

"Mrs. Hayden has demonstrated her tenacity and thoroughness during her years of service on our board and its executive committee. As our newly elected first vice president and chairman of the new committee, she will have the opportunity to apply her abilities to the special area of adult corrections."

When questioned about plans for future expansion, Burkett said efforts were underway to spread the agency's activities throughout the lower counties as well as efforts to revise the CCD constitution and by-laws to accommodate the broadened emphasis of the agency.

COUNTY WANTS

will tie into the total $11 million system, which is planned for completion by early summer 1972.

Phase I will be dedicated at 11 a.m. Saturday. The public is invited to the ceremony. About 80 federal, state, county and local officials are expected including William C. Torbert, president of Levy Court; U.S. Sen. J. Caleb Boggs, R-Del.; U.S. Rep. William V. Roth Jr., R-Del., and Austin N. Heller, secretary of the Department of Natural Resources and Environmental Control, representing the governor.

In other matters, the court set 7:30 p.m. Aug. 4 as the hearing date for a controversial mobile home development, Derby Shores, at Derby Pond. The session, open to the public, will be in the civil defense conference room of the courthouse.

The League of Women Voters of Greater Dover and 106 petition signers have opposed the 59.6 acre project, sponsored by International Acceptance Co. The firm is headed by state Sen. Andy Foltz, R-Dover.

The meeting is for action on the final plot plans, but no vote is expected.

"There will be no vote taken on Derby Shores unless all seven members of Levy Court are present," Torbert said. Commissioner Isaac Thomas said he will be out of town on business.
