

Jimmy Smith One of 5 Killed in Plane Crash

Federal investigators said Monday the small plane that carried five Dover men to their deaths was under power when it crashed into Shrewsbury Mountain in Vermont.

The plane, a Piper Cherokee, apparently suffered no mechanical failure before it crashed soon after takeoff from Rutland Airport, Friday morning, the investigators said.

The five were returning from a ski trip.

The body of the pilot, David Gamberg, 49, was flown to Dover Monday. An autopsy showed he died of head injuries.

The bodies of the others, Dr. James M. Chase Jr., 39, Turner B. Hastings, 46, James G. Smith, 40, and Matthew E. Mitten, 40, were returned home Sunday.

Edward F. Hainquet, head of the investigating team from the National Air Safety Transportation Board, said there were signs the plane may have been traveling as much as 260 miles an hour when it plowed into the mountain.

It was going straight down when it hit, investigators said. There were no signs of fire.

The dashboard clock in the plane read 10:08.

Hainquet said the plane was in the maneuvering area of Rutland airport at the time of the crash, but was 3 miles off the traffic pattern.

It crashed into a wooded area with a slope of 30 degrees at an elevation of about 2,500 feet, 100 feet from the crest of the hill, Hainquet said.

Some witnesses, he said, heard the plane.

Snow flurries had been reported in the area, but at the time of the takeoff, airport officials said, the weather was clear.

Allen Greenwood, a Rutland pilot, spotted the wreckage of the bright red and white plane Saturday morning at 8:30.

At the pilot's controls was Gamberg. His copilot was Dr. Chase. Seated behind them were Hastings, Smith and Mitten.

It was almost certain, police said, that the men were killed instantly.

The single-engine, six-passenger craft had been hired from Delaware Aviation of North Philadelphia, a subsidiary of Atlantic Aviation of Wilmington.

Stanley Vosler, chief pilot of Delaware Aviation, said the plane had about 100 hours of flying time on its engine.

The plane's model number 4850S was clearly visible on the fuselage. This is the number that was on the subject of an "Air-worthiness Directive" issued by the Federal Aviation Administration.

The FFA had warned that certain planes within that model group had cracked balance weight tubes. The balance weight tubes help control the tail stabilizers.

Vosler said, however, he did not know the serial number of the wrecked plane.

FFA and National Transportation Board investigators reached the mountain Sunday morning to examine the remains.

James Gordon Smith was born in Harrington July 22, 1930, and was reared here before going to Dover with his parents.

He was graduated from Loomis High School in Windsor, Conn., in 1948 and from Johns Hopkins University four years later. He served two years in the army infantry.

Services for Mr. Smith were held Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 in Christ Church, Dover.

Mr. Smith was chairman of the Democratic Party for Kent County and owner of J. G. Smith Autos, Inc., of station WNRK in Newark Dover. He also owned radio and station WARV in Warwick, R. I. He was formerly director of the Delaware River and Bay Authority.

Smith Sr., of Dover; a brother, Charles Murphy Jr., of Milford; and two sisters, Mrs. Sherman Leland Jr., of San Francisco and Mrs. F. Martin Taylor of Wilmington.

Interment was in the Christ Church Cemetery, Dover. In lieu of flowers the family suggested contributions be made to the building fund of Kent General Hospital in Dover.

Services for Mr. Gamberg, president of Simon's Department Store, 215 Lookerman St., Dover, were held yesterday morning at Torbert Funeral Chapel, Dover, with interment in Sharon Hills Memorial Park.

Services for Dr. Chase, a vascular surgeon, were held yesterday afternoon at Christ Church, Dover, with interment in the adjoining cemetery.

Services for Mr. Hastings, owner and operator of several laundromats and related dry cleaning establishments, were held Tuesday afternoon at Peoples United Church of Christ, Dover, with burial in Lakeside Cemetery.

Services for Mr. Mitten, president and owner of W.B. Mitten & Sons Inc., a Dover contracting firm, were held at Peoples United Church of Christ Tuesday morning with burial at Barratt's Chapel, Frederica.

He was prominent in Masonic and Democratic circles, which included Kent County Democratic committees.

Body in Hammondtown Fire Ruins Was of Man Who Had Been Shot

BODY OF MAN FOUND IN THESE RUINS—It has been determined recently that the body found in these ruins, in Hammondtown Woods Dec. 12, was that of a man who had been shot. Journal Photo.

A body found in the ruins of a fire of a shack in Hammondtown Woods, Dec. 12, was that of a man who had been shot in the back of the head, it had been revealed by Ali Z. Hameli, state medical examiner.

Charred bits of the skull in the examiner's security closet are regarded by Hameli as conclusive evidence a youth was shot in the back of the head before the body and a shack near Farmington were set on fire early Dec. 12.

Police, who were told of Hameli's findings Wed., Jan. 13, renewed their checks in the area around Farmington to learn if there have been missing persons or if anyone had seen activities in the shack which is about 30 feet off Kent County Road 311, a mile and a half north of Farmington.

The ruins of the shack are in Hammondtown woods a short distance east of the closed Farmington dump. Since the extensive woods contains but one other house, and the road is not a main one, the burning of the house was not observed. Another reason for the non-observance was that the blaze originated early in the morning since a calendar watch on the body had stopped a 2:31 a.m.

So far police are up a blind alley. All Hameli said he can say is the victim was a man in his late teens or early 20's, about 5 feet 5 inches tall. He was shot in the back of the head, Hameli said, and while he was still living, though unconscious, someone set the shack on fire.

Although most of the body was burned in the fire, enough bones and body tissues were salvaged to give Hameli his conclusions.

By putting fragments together as if they were parts of a jigsaw puzzle, Hameli discovered a hole, one third of an inch in diameter, made by the bullet that pierced the victim's skull, he said.

The bullet was discovered on the remains of the floor near the body. As the fire developed, the victim's head exploded and the bullet fell out, Hameli explained. An FBI study of the projectile has determined it to be a copper-jacketed object fired from a .25-caliber automatic weapon, he said.

After detailed examination and checking, Hameli decided the case was not a suicide because the bullet entered the back of the victim's skull. He said the course of the bullet was "upwards and a little to the left."

A carbon monoxide test on the remaining body tissues revealed that the man had not been killed outright by the bullet, but was still alive at the time of the fire.

Hameli said he was not able to do much with the tiny pieces of clothing recovered in establishing the man's identity. Also found on the body was a calendar watch which showed the date Dec. 12 and the time 2:31.

People in the neighborhood of the frame shack which is 450 feet from the nearest house, believed that it was used by drunks and tramps as a shelter in the fall and winter.

Its destruction caused little attention at first.

School Board Adamant On Resignation of Girls Coach

The Lake Forest Board of Education met Monday evening in the library of the Lake Forest High School at 8 o'clock with all members present.

Melvin Luff, administrative assistant, introduced Richard Keuper of Kaiser Designed Facilities Corporation, who showed slides of the Kaiser modular approach to school buildings.

The Board recognized Charles Bessellieu, spokesman for a group questioning policies on girls' sports. He said the group was not satisfied with the letter he had received from the board president answering the questions they had asked.

They expressed doubt that a proper investigation could have been made in such a short time, saying they felt Miss Teserman should have been consulted. Supt. Albert W. Adams answered Miss Testerman had resigned voluntarily and under no pressure from the administration, the job vacancy had been advertised according to policies set forth by the negotiating team, and that inasmuch as only one person ap-lied, she was given the coaching position.

The Board tabled a recommendation the school should join the newly organized Educational Research and Development Council of Delaware, Inc. and a member of the council be asked to attend a board meeting to explain its purposes.

School policies on emergency disaster plans, fire, tornado, blizzard, snow and ice, civil disturbances and nuclear attack were presented for consideration by the Board and were approved. Policies concerning student rights and responsibilities were tabled for further consideration and clarification.

Luff reported he had received a bid of $912 from Joseph Richardson, Inc. to install a 1-hp Gould pump to furnish untreated water for irrigation purposes in the greenhouse and on the athletic field at the high school. It was regularly moved, seconded and carried the purchase of the pump was approved provided the Agriculture Department at the high school was willing to pay one-half of the costs.

Luff also brought up roofing problems at the high school saying he would like authority to call in a consulting engineer, have him make a detailed inspection of the roof in question, including the taking of core samples to see if the roof is finished according to specifications and have him make recommendations, and at the same time contact the school attorney to see what legal recourse was possible under the provisions of the 20-year bond.

Mrs. Florence Travers, teacher at Lake Forest East, expressed the desire to retire. The Board accepted Mrs. Travers' retirement and ordered proper papers submitted to the office of the state treasurer.

The Board authorized the transfer of the bus route now operated by Carl Moore to Floyd Moore.

In other action, the Board approved the hiring of a professional negotiator to replace N. James Schoch as chief negotiator for the Lake Forest District.

The Board adjourned at 12:20 a.m.

FENCE TALK

The State's Association of Soil and Water Conservation District Supervisors had a very successful annual meeting last Wednesday, January 13th, at the Capital Grange Hall in Dover. Featured at the meeting was a biologist, Dr. Norman Dill, private forester, Sam Dyke, and a naturalist, Charles Mohr, to give their opinions on the ecosystem in relation to watershed ditching through woods and open farm land. There seems to be a lot of controversy over ditching and its effect on the wildlife involved. The general concession that came from this discussion was that both wildlife and man can benefit from ditching if handled and planned properly.

To highlight the luncheon program, Senator J. Caleb Boggs spoke to the conservation group and commended them for the State's progress in soil and water conservation efforts. However, we all realize that such progress could not have been made if it had not been for the help and support that Senator Boggs has given us over the years. As governor, he endorsed the State's first watershed project, and this was the big start in bettering community living and productiveness through planned soil and water conservation.

There were many other outstanding speakers that made the entire day enjoyable and informative. The 1971 crops fertilization recommendations bulletins are now available to you for the asking. If you would like to have a copy or copies, call or write your nearest County Extension Office. Kent County is P.O. Box 340, Dover; phone 736-1448.

Also do not forget the annual Delmarva soybean meeting on January 28th at the Civic Center in Salisbury. Free lunch tickets are available at our office and every one of us are invited to attend. Pneumonia and scours of dairy calves account for the highest cause of mortality during the winter months. Studies indicate that the value of a calf at birth is approximately $50.

A dairyman with 100 cows and a 15% mortality rate would lose $750, which could be prevented by proper management. To minimize calf mortality, particular attention should be given to colostrum feeding and housing. Nature provides the best food for newborn calves. The first 24 hours of life is most critical with the newborn calf. Without colostrum, the newborn calf is without the necessary serum, proteins, and antibodies. The calf is subject to numerous diseases and its chances of survival are limited if it is deprived of colostrum.

Colostrum is very important to the newborn calf. It contains 10 to 100 times the normal amount of Vitamin A, about three times the amount of Vitamin D, and a very high level of antibodies. It is a richer source of Vitamin B2, Vitamin C, and other vitamins than normal whole milk. It contains two times the level of solids, a higher level of trace minerals, and has a laxative action. The calf should be permitted to nurse the dam for the first three days of life.

After weaning, is possible, individual pens with solid partitions should be used. These reduce the spread of disease from calf to calf, prevent calves from sucking each other, help prevent drafts, and more individual attention can be given. (Observation of droppings, etc.) Slat floor pens have been found to be quite useful. They require less space, are easy to clean and disinfect and can keep the calves dry.

In any calf housing system, along with proper feeding, the prevention of drafts are important. Drafts are more of a cause of pneumonia than temperature. Calves can tolerate cold environment provided drafts do not exist. However, it is important to have well-ventilated calf pens as stale, moist air can lead to respiratory diseases. After the calf is on a milk replacer program, observe the droppings carefully. Loose droppings do not always mean scours. Over feeding is often the cause. Bacterial scours will produce a strong putrid odor. When that occurs the calf should be treated immediately. Delay of treatment could result in death.

Do the signs of the zodiac your way of dressing? Almost every magazine you pick up these days has information on the signs of the zodiac and how they can guide your decisions — even to the choice of clothing. Probably not many people take this advice very seriously, but I, for one, think it's being overdone a bit, says Miss Janet Reed, extension clothing and textile specialist at the University of Delaware.

Recently, I read that clothes bought under certain astrological signs were apt to turn out to be failures — either poor choices seldom worn or ones that would be damaged enough so that you wouldn't get your money's worth from them. I doubt there is any research to back up this statement, and it may be just a good excuse for poor judgment.

A better buying practice would be to consider your needs and way of life and to analyze your figure and coloring in order to develop your own clothing style, according to Miss Reed. In what style of clothes do you feel most at ease? Which clothes bring the most compliments? Try to analyze why this is so. Is it because of the color, the line, the fit, the general style, your bearing when you wear it? Do you really like it very much? The answers to these questions may be your clues to clothing choice.

If you know your own style and preferences, you can select the most suitable clothing, no matter what the fashion trend. We all may have different and unconscious reasons for clothing choices. We may dress to attract attention to flout convention, to enhance appearance or to disguise figure faults, or purely for comfort.

Soil Texture Important For Crops

Soil texture of the land plays an important role in determining what crops farmers should plant, according to Leo J. Cotnoir, associate professor of plant science at the University of Delaware. The soil texture, or the amount of sand, silt and clay in the soil, strongly influences the quantity of water the soil can hold and supply to growing plants, he explains. For example, coarse-textured soils such as loamy sands have an average of 1/2 inch of water available to plants per foot of soil. This amount of water is enough to keep a corn plant growing for four to five days.

Medium-textured soils average about two inches of available water per foot of soil, and fine-textured soils, or those of high in clay, average about 1 3/4 inches of available water per foot of soil. Since water makes up nearly 85 percent of the weight of growing plants, yields are sharply reduced when the soil cannot supply the needed moisture.

Cotnoir's studies show that 30 percent of Delaware's soils can only hold enough water to supply a corn plant's need for four to five days, while 50 percent can hold enough water for 6 to 10 days of growth. Only 20 percent of the state's soils can keep a corn plant growing for more than 12 days without extra moisture. Most of the latter soil are found in northeastern Kent County and New Castle County.

On most soils, high cash value crops such as vegetables have to be irrigated, says Cotnoir. And crops such as corn and soybeans which are not irrigated must be managed in such a way as to take maximum advantage of the moisture that is available.

Gypsy Moth Infestation Spreads

Last summer, 800,000 acres of woodland in the northeast were defoliated by the gypsy moth. This was three times the acreage stripped in 1969 and six times that damaged in 1968.

Because of the continuing spread of gypsy moths and the damage they cause, the U.S. Department of Agriculture is stepping up its regulatory action to prevent further infestations, according to John A. Franklin, district supervisor of the USDA's Agricultural Research Service Plant Protection Division.

Speaking at the University of Delaware Nurseryman's Short Course, Franklin said the USDA's recent action of extending federal gypsy moth regulations to 14 previously unregulated counties in New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania is designed to prevent the artificial spread of gypsy moths to uninfested areas.

Under the federal regulations, timber products, nursery plants and other articles that might be carrying the insect must be inspected and certified free of insects before being moved.

Gypsy moth larvae feed on a wide range of hardwood trees including birch, apple, boxelder, oak, barberry, maple, cherry and others. If the hardwoods are defoliated, adult moths will also attack pines, holly, dogwood, ash and even grape, says Franklin.

When the gypsy moth larva hatch in the spring or early summer, they are approximately half an inch long. But by the time they reach the pupae stage of their life cycle, a gypsy moth may be three inches or more long.

Studies have shown that wind can carry young caterpillars at least 20 miles from the area where they hatch.

Franklin adds that the gypsy moth caterpillars can be easily identified by the short, black tufts of hair extending from pairs of blue and brick red warts lining the back.

Although the USDA recommends use of the insecticide Sevin to control gypsy moth caterpillars, the pest continues to move into new areas, notes Franklin. Scientists have also introduced small parasitic wasps to control gypsy moths. And are you and your family adequately protected against major catastrophes? Even if a banker doesn't ask all these questions, farmers should know the answers, say McAllister. Financing a large farm business that is hopelessly inefficient is a disservice to the borrower as well as lender. On the other hand, many far businesses could be more profitable, if more credit were used.

Farm Credit Necessary

In their plans for 1971, Delaware farmers should be sure to include provisions for borrowing money to help finance their operations, according to W. T. McAllister, extension agricultural economist at the University of Delaware.

As farm businesses continue to increase in size, the need for additional operating capital grows, he explains. Today's vegetable, potato or grain farmer may need $40,000-$60,000 available in standby credit to take advantage of cash discounts for fertilizers, seed, chemicals, fuel and other large expenditures.

McAllister says banks and other lending institutions serving farmers want to know how farmers applying for large loans plan to use this credit, and how and when it will be paid back. Here are some questions a farmer should be prepared to answer when he applies for a loan.

- 1. Can you show that the proposed loan will earn enough extra income to pay the interest, pay back the loan and add to your income? A good loan does more than trade dollars, it adds to the net income of the borrower.
2. How do you rate yourself as a farmer—above average, average or below average? And what records do you have to support this?
3. What factors now limit the profitability of your farm, and will the proposed loan correct this situation?
4. Do you have good credit? Do you get most of your credit from one source? Are you honest in your dealings with lenders? Do you maintain a cash reserve to meet day-to-day expenses? And are you and your family adequately protected against major catastrophes? Even if a banker doesn't ask all these questions, farmers should know the answers, say McAllister. Financing a large farm business that is hopelessly inefficient is a disservice to the borrower as well as lender. On the other hand, many far businesses could be more profitable, if more credit were used.

Know Your Plywoods

Plywood is one of the most important and useful building materials available. It can be used to build a house, a boat, a box or any one of a thousands things. Before buying plywood, however, decide on the use and then buy the right grade for the job, says Ernest Walpole, extension agricultural engineer at the University of Delaware.

Grades of the veneer cover on plywood vary from fine decorative woods marked N (for natural finish) to the standard grades marked A through D, he explains. Grade A veneers are smooth and paintable; B allows repairs and small knots; C allows knots up to 1.5 inches in diameter and small splits in the surface. Grade D plywood shows knots up to 2.5 inches in diameter and larger splits.

Plywood is also graded according to its surface: AA is good on both sides, while AD is good on only one side. In addition, the plywood will be marked interior (INT) or exterior (EXT) depending on the kind of glue used in the manufacturing process. According to Walpole, interior grades use a water-resistant glue, but continued weathering or wetting will cause the glue to weaken. Exterior grades use a completely waterproof glue which will take continuous immersion in water. The core plys are usually C and D veneers. Marine plywood, however is an exterior grade with higher quality core plys for greater strength. Plywood is usually sold in sheets four feet wide by eight feet long, but larger sheets are available, says Walpole. Thicknesses usually come in 1/4, 3/8, 1/2, 5/8 and 3/4 inch. Special materials are sold in 1/8 or 3/16 inch thicknesses such as plywood paneling, and heavier plywood is available in 1 inch and 1 1/8 inch thicknesses.

Delaware Food Market Report

by Anne Helberton
Pork production has been good so far in this first month of the new year and all indications are that this situation will continue for the weeks to come. Plentiful supplies mean economical buys, so use pork often.
True, per capita consumption of pork has been on the decline in the last two decades, and this is unfortunate since pork is packed full of so many things we all need. One of the reasons for this decline is the false impression that pork is not easily digested and is much too high in fat. Yet both of these ideas are untrue.
The facts are that pork is one of the most nutritious foods available, and when you read these comparisons you will understand. It would take 16 slices of bread to provide as much thiamine as one pork chop, 17 bowls of cereal to provide as much protein as a pork chop; 15 servings of spinach to provide as much iron as a serving of pork liver. Just one serving of pork will provide almost 69 percent of the recommended daily allowance of thiamine for the average man, and thiamine is essential for healthy nerves.
Pork is an excellent source of protein and it is a high quality protein at that. One 3 1/2 ounce cooked portion of lean pork provides an adult man with 45 percent of his daily protein need. As far as calories are concerned, a 3-ounce serving of roast Boston butt with the fat trimmed off contains approximately 205 calories; a 3 ounce serving of cured ham, fat trimmed off, contains about 160 calories. Servings of pork such as these contain no more calories than similar cuts of beef.
This week there are many good buys on pork. Check porkchops, for instance, but before you buy here are some things to consider. The pork loin lies along the back of the pig and this is where the chops come from. This loin may be divided into three nearly equal parts—a center section and two ends. The end near the shoulder is usually called the shoulder or rib end; the other end near the leg is called the loin end. Since center-pork chops are very popular, meat cutters take as many center-cut chops from the loin as they can. So it stands to reason the kind of center chop you get depends on the part of the center portion it comes from. Usually the price is the same. You may want to consider a loin end roast sliced into chops to get more for your money.

With whatever cut of fresh pork you buy, be sure to cook it well done. Remember too, pork cooked at low to moderate temperatures is generally more tender, juicy and flavorful than pork cooked at higher temperatures. Also, there will be more meat to serve because of less shrinkage.
Don't be surprised if the price of eggs starts to climb. This may be the result of the severe winter weather, since bad weather could trim production of eggs and demand gets greater than the supply.

Mrs. Bartholomew Thompson
Mrs. Janie Perkins Thompson, 79, of near Greenwood, died Tues., Jan. 12, at the Delaware State Hospital after a long illness.
Mrs. Thompson had been a lifelong resident of the Greenwood area.
Her husband, Bartholomew Thompson died in 1967.
She is survived by three brothers, Fred D. Perkins of Smyrna, and Harry and Norman, both of Townsend, and two sisters, Mrs. Elsie P. Payne of Wilmington and Mrs. Dorothy P. Seaton of Chester, Pa.

Services were held Saturday afternoon at the Hardy Funeral Home, Bridgeville. Interment was in Middleford Cemetery.

It's A "Dog's Life"

Although it's still a "dog's life" for many household pets, a growing number of American dogs are better off today than they were a few years ago.
A rapidly expanding industry specializing in pet products along with more extensive veterinary care are making a "dog's life" considerably more comfortable, according to Dr. William C. Krauss, associate professor of animal science at the University of Delaware.
The average dog may not receive such luxuries, but a well-kept pooch could have such items as a mink coat or for the slightly less fortunate, maybe a sweater, he explains. Dog collars covered with rhinestones are now selling for $30 or more. And some dog owners prefer the matching collar-leash set—they come in velvet and patent plastic.
There's no end to the products and services available to dog owners, says Krauss. They range from a three-week protection in flea spray to rubber toys resembling fruits, vegetables and even people.
Interest in dog hygiene has resulted in the growth of businesses in nearly every community that bathe, groom and de-flea all breeds. The price of the job depends on the condition of the dog.
Of the more than 262 million dogs in the United States over 800,000 are registered, according to the American Kennel Club. The registered, purebred dogs are growing in number and no doubt receive more than the normal amount of attention from their owners.
But Americans have more leisure time today. Shorter weeks and earlier retirements enable dog owners to spend more time hunting, training, showing and simply enjoying their pets, says Krauss.
More people are also moving to the suburbs where dogs and other pets are a natural part of the daily life.
Dog owners today accept the obligation to guard the health and provide good medical care for their animals. More veterinary hospitals are being built and veterinarians provide routine services that were almost unheard of a few years ago.

Pets entering small animal hospitals now receive the benefits of modern medicine that their owners have known for years, Krauss says. Today's veterinarian employs x-ray equipment and the latest wonder drugs in treating the injuries and ailments of household pets.

Del. River And Bay Authority News

Dr. Albert F. Smith, of Wilmington, Jan. 12, was elected chairman of the Delaware River and Bay Authority for a two-year term. He succeeds Clarence B. McCormick, of Bridgeton, N.J., who was elected vice chairman for a two-year period.
In accepting the chairmanship, Dr. Smith expressed the hope that the next two years would provide as much progress as the last two. Many constructive steps undertaken in the last two years at Mr. McCormick's direction resulted in considerable savings, said Dr. Smith.
As he stepped aside, Mr. McCormick said, "The world moves too fast for us to sit still. We regularly need a new outlook and I am sure we will get this from Dr. Smith."

Under the bi-state compact between Delaware and New Jersey, the chairmanship of the Authority is rotated between the two states on an every-other-year basis.
In other business, the Delaware River and Bay Authority approved a three-month study of operations by Cresap, McCormick and Paget, Inc., management consultants, of New York City. The study team will give particular emphasis to the Cape May-Lewes Ferry.
The proposal that the Delaware River and Bay Authority be merged with the Delaware River Port Authority will be studied at the next meeting when representatives of the tri-state committee will be invited to make a presentation. Dr. Smith, Dr. Mc-Cormick, executive director William J. Miller, Jr., and the two solicitors for the Authority, Bruce M. Stargatt and Robert Halpin, were named a committee to keep the other members of the Authority apprised of the three-state tri-pact proposal.

A MODERN WRIT OF INDENTURE

"The requirement that an individual pay dues to a private organization in order to work is a modern writ of indenture; the requirement that he do the same in order to express an opinion over the public airways involves an act of coercion by a private organization operating under government sanction."

That's the way William F. Buckley, Jr., noted editor, syndicated columnist and television commentator, recently described conditions in the nation's broadcast industry. Conditions possible only through the compulsory union shop power wielded by the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists (AFTRA).

AFTRA has wielded that power ruthlessly. Many in the broadcast industry — including those familiar faces on the evening news — are forced to join and pay dues to the union. It's either that or get off the air.

Is this the American way? Bill Buckley doesn't think so and has filed suit against AFTRA and RKO General, Inc. (the organization that distributes his TV show, "Firing Line").

The formal complaint says that the compulsory unionism requirement deprives Buckley of "his property without due process of law, and breaches his rights under the First, Fifth and Ninth Amendments of the Constitution, which Amendments guarantee the individual citizen freedom of association, freedom to pursue the occupation of his choice, freedom from unwarranted invasion of privacy, and other fundamental personal and private rights."

But that's lawyer talk. Here's how the eloquent Mr. Buckley describes it, "What is involved here is a fundamental civil and human right. And unless this country has lost hold of its reason, the Supreme Court will acknowledge, as I am confident it will, the right of the individual to exercise his rights as guaranteed under the First Amendment, even if he declines to join a union."

"Many of the people in this country labeled as 'liberals' eloquently object to any compromise of the individual rights of the citizen against the government — particularly free speech and privacy. I think it is time they join me in demanding that the individual have a right to join or not join, to pay dues or not pay dues, to a private organization without surrendering his right to speak."

Citing well known TV personalities who have expressed concern over control, intimidation and harassment of free speech — among them Sander Vanocur, Frank McGee, Eric Sevareid and Walter Cronkite — Buckley adds, "I expect formal and informal support from many other analysts and commentators and critics who use the broadcast media. I shall welcome them to join me in this lawsuit as co-plaintiffs. I hope that these gentlemen, and others, will join me."

So do millions of concerned Americans. They might well be puzzling over the answer to the question raised by former NBC newsman Chet Huntley when he told his national TV audience: "It's difficult for the average citizen to understand what there is about labor that is so special that it requires the weapon of the union shop . . . but labor clings tenaciously to its right to coerce."

It is indeed difficult for Americans to understand why union officials should have such a weapon and it's time for the courts to rule that citizens should have the Right to Work without being forced to pay tribute to a labor boss. Or maybe we should quit pretending this is a free country?

Letter to Editor

Dear Editor:

I have been waiting for several weeks to see some sort of reply in your paper concerning the letter you printed about Lake Forest School District violating Delaware Secondary School Athletic Association rules.

I wish to congratulate a former member of the School Board. In this day and time it is very rare to find someone who will call a spade a spade.

Most adults know the way to get by in this life is to do everything you can get by with, and accomplish your goals no matter what the means.

Our athletes in this district are tough, they don't need protection from Delaware Secondary School Athletic Association. There is no doubt about it, while most youth leaders are decrying the fact that there is general lack of a moral code among our young people, it is wonderful to see someone who doesn't pussy foot around and lets them know there isn't any need to follow the rules. It isn't the person who breaks the rules who is bad, but the person who finds out about it, and it is about time someone said this. People are just too quick to criticize.

Our football coach in his rookie year certainly had no way of knowing about this rule. He would not have deliberately violated it. After a few years of experience he will certainly become acquainted with the rules concerning this game.

Three cheers for a marvelous community leader and three cheers for this paper for printing it.

Respectively yours,

A Lake Forest District resident

Ralph P. Unruh

Interment was in Bridgeville Cemetery.

Letter To The Editor From Vietnam

The Man Inside is a mystery of startling originality. It could read as a parody of The Redden Story - the opportune boy whose struggles lead him down and down until success comes at the bottom. A ceaseless quest for meaning of life, always baffled by the cruel traps of mankind. Or a journey towards wisdom, in the manner that culminates oddly and creates the image of a robot. But such suggestions can give only a faint indication of the strange and haunting power of a person of strong-will. A man who wants more than he gets and when he has obtained the unreachable goal, he laughs and tries for more.

Sometimes a boy is made in a man while he is away from the life that he knows and loves, but very often a man is made into a meaningless bit of existing matter. If he tries to think for himself he is over ruled by those who do not care about reality but instead care more for a personal upgrading achievement. How can we try to show ourselves as men when we can't be free enough to express our opinions to the people above us? We can not.

There are over a million young men in Vietnam today who are here, not because they want to be, but because they have a job to do. When at the same time there are people back in the world who would stoop in their ignorance to say that we are wrong and condemn us from their society because we act as men and present ourselves to all the dangers that are not even known to those who aren't there to see. Do they expect us to return to our normal selves and go on through life silent, when we have seen war in full living color? I should hope not. And with God's help some day we may be able to obtain peace.

It was once said "When the power of love overcomes the love for power, then we shall have peace." We should all hope that day is in the near future. For those who are in Vietnam when they read this bit of informative literature I want to say good luck and for those who are reading this while still enjoying the comforts of civilization, I ask for your prayers.

supervisor for the group opened the seminar Friday evening with a discourse entitled "God's Word is Alive". This theme was carried on through the entire program. He showed that God is not dead and that much power to individual Christians comes through conscientiously applied study of God's word.

He based his comments on the passage in the Bible at Hebrews 4:12. On Saturday, he charged 25 new ministers, who submitted to water baptism, regarding their new privileges and responsibilities. The baptismal ceremony took place at the assembly in the Witnesses own portable immersion pool.

The peak attendance was reached on Sunday when Mr. Beda spoke to the general public on the subject "Who Will Conquer the World in the 1970's?" The Witnesses do not believe that peace will ever come to this earth by the efforts of man but is attainable only by divine intervention on the part of God. They feel the world situation proves this imminent.

Vernon Metz, presiding minister of the Dover group said that meetings for the local group will resume this weekend at the regular schedule. He said application of the points made at the seminar would begin right away by local groups.

Grapplers Lose Twice

Lake Forest's wrestling Spartans are experiencing a frustrating season, thus far. The locals are winless in four starts, after dropping decisions to Milford and Cape Henlopen.

Milford edged Lake Forest 28-23 in a match that could have gone either way. Cape Henlopen triumphed 28-14.

Frank "Skipper" O'Neal remained undefeated with a quick 10-3 decision over Eastburn of the Cape. Eastburn who sometimes wrestle in the unlimited class, was the first rival to go the distance with O'Neal, this campaign.

Norman Baynard recorded two victories by decision to stay unbeaten.

Bruce Patten has two victories in two starts after a 8-4 verdict over Dickerson of C.H.

Tommy Clarke pinned Allen of Milford in 4:45 at 107 pounds.

The Spartans are a young team and can be expected to improve when they get that all-important experience.

Leah S. Wheeler

Last Friday evening saw Gerardi Bros. meet in a clash with the Spoilers in a make-up match, with Gerardi's coming out of the fray a three game winner over their opponents. LeRoy Wheeler scattered the pins for a superb 614 series, and a 234 game, and Don Jester crippled in with a fine 203 game and a good series with Charlie Hayes adding a real good 205 game effort as Gerardi's closed in on the leaders with their win. The Spoilers' Jack Sapp rolled a real fine 539 set, and Billy Morris added a real good effort, enabling their team to capture one game to stay close to the front of the htap.

Butler's Fuel and Penn Central will roll this previously postponed match tomorrow night at the Milford Lanes.

Parrell Fuel was rudely dumped out of the first place spot by Gerardi Bros., Tuesday night, although Preston Carmean rolled very well, enabling the fuelers to come away from the setto with one game to their credit. Dallas Hayman also did well in earning a triplicate patch by rolling three consecutive 175 games. John Forbes proved to be the big gun in the win over Jarrell's with a real good above average effort. Neither team could give much headway over the other as they both bowled below their capabilities.

Taylor & Messick moved up into a good advantage point, where they are usually more effective, being considered good pressure bowlers, as they split four games down the middle with Wally's Garage. Having the knack for getting a win when they really need it, makes Taylor & Messick the team to watch very closely in the remaining two weeks of his third. George Langford, coming back to bowl after a long rest, sparked the team to their two game win, with a real fine effort. Help keeping things even, Frank Collins blustered the boards for a grand 234 game and a grand 575 series, to give Peoples' their two games.

Harrington Package, which only had to win four games to move into second, fell down into fourth place by falling a three game victim to Wally's Garage. Harry Brown rolled a fine 203 game, and Frank Robbins bowled well enough to help keep the Package team alive in this third, as they took one lone game from their opponents. A full team effort was responsible for the garage boys win over their adversaries.

Leonard Outten set the pace with a great 553 series, with a good 206 game included, and Jack Sapp chipped in with a fine 201 game and great 531 series with John Shaffer adding a good 202 game and series to give the Spoilers a three game victory over McKnatt's. Donald McKnatt led his team in scoring with a good 544 series and a great 223 game, although they were only able to record one game in their win column. There is still a slim chance that McKnatt's or the Spoilers could be the second third winners but they cannot afford to lose any more games in this third.

George Hobbs and Ernest Gallo led Gallo & Stevenson on a four game romp over Penn Central in Tuesday night's contest. Ray Baker rolled very well for the rail-rollers in defeat. Though these two teams are pretty much out of any chance of winning his third, they can both play havoc with the top teams, via the role of the Spoilers.

Ned Parsons led the losers with 22 points. Dave Newnom was perfect at the foul line and wound up with 15 points. Mark Dalton, a former resident of Harrington and Felton, had 17 points for Smyrna.

Nazarene Church News

Revival 7:30 p.m., nightly January 26 thru 31. "Jesus isn't anything until he is everything"

Gloria Files and Dorothy Adams are devoting all of their time to evangelism in the Church of the Nazarene, an international denomination with headquarters in Kansas City, Mo.

This effective team offers a complete gospel program, appealing to every age group. Miss Files, an ordained elder, is an effective speaker with a Christ-centered message. Miss Adams directs the musical part of each service, sings solos, and joins in duets with Miss Files.

Well qualified for their work, both girls have had extensive experience in revival campaigns, held many youth revivals, Bible schools throughout the entire summer in churches and corps, have assisted in the organization of new churches, radio work, and also conduct revivals for the "Little People" of our church. God is honoring and blessing this ministry. Let's close the teen-gap by winning our children to God.

Gloria attended Trevecca Nazarene College, Nashville, Tenn. Dorothy attended Allentown Bible College, Allentown, Pa. They have worked together as a team for many years.

Music Recital To Be Held At Wesley College

A music recital featuring flute and piano will be held on the Wesley College campus on January 25. Deborah Carter playing the flute will be accompanied by William Smith on piano during the 8 p.m. recital in the Carpenter Hall formal lounge.

Deborah Carter determined upon a career as a solo flutist at the age of eleven, after hearing the late William Kincaid perform with the Philadelphia Orchestra.

In the pursuit of her ambition, she studies with Robert Cole, Kenton Terry, and ultimately with Kincaid, both privately, and as his last student at the Curtis Institute of Music.

Prior to her graduation from Curtis, in the spring of 1969, as an artist-pupil of John Krell, she appeared as soloist with the Philadelphia Orchestra, performing Mozart's Concerto for Flute and Harp, a distinction earned as a winner in the Student Concert Auditions.

In past years she has appeared as a soloist with the Youth Orchestra of Greater Philadelphia (1965); the Haverford Chamber Orchestra (1966) and the Mozart Festival Orchestra (1967). In 1965, she was a winner in the woodwind division of the Tri-County Concerts Association. In 1967 and 1968, she performed works by Bach and Nielsen with the Curtis Symphony Orchestra.

She has performed frequently in the Philadelphia area as recitalist and guest artist, and has made frequent appearances at the music festivals held at the Central Moravian Church in Bethlehem, Pa.

Miss Carter is currently solo flute with the Greater Trenton Symphony Orchestra and a founder-member of the Philadelphia Baroque Quartet.

In January, 1970, Miss Carter presented her debut recital at the Ethical Society Auditorium in Philadelphia. Prior to that she was featured soloist at the Museum Concerts, University Museum. The public is cordially invited to attend.

William D. Guthrie Resigns From Public Service Commission

William D. Guthrie, chairman of the Public Service Commission of Delaware, Monday, Jan. 18, tendered his resignation to Governor Peterson. Cited as a reason for this action was the recent allegation, that because of Guthrie's position as a vice president of WSFS, and the fact that WSFS owns stock in a public utility, there was a possible conflict of interest.

A letter from Fred T. O'Donnell, president of WSFS, to Guthrie indicated regret over the allegation since the bank feels that its people have a civic duty in government. It further states that no possible conflict of interest could exist since Guthrie's duties do not involve investment decisions. Guthrie said he deeply regretted having to make this decision. He stated that he learned a great deal about the regulatory business during the year and a half he chaired the commission, from both the public and the utilities. "In this age of conservatism," Guthrie said, "it becomes extremely important that we meet the needs of the general public yet at the same time make them aware of the utilities' needs. I would like to feel that we have at least started to move up this path of understanding."

Veterans' News

Leon Fields, director of the Veterans Administrative Regional Office, reminded Delaware recipients of monthly pension checks to carefully fill out, sign and promptly return their annual income questionnaires - by January 15 at the latest.

Mr. Fields noted that one-third of the Delaware veterans and dependents, including parents of deceased veterans drawing dependency and indemnity compensation, have returned the questionnaires received with their Nov. 1 checks.

The questionnaires request information on the amount of income the beneficiary received in 1970, and the amount expected in 1971.

Since 1971 pension payments will be based on this information, it is important that questionnaires be filled out accurately and completely, signed, and returned no later than the Jan. 15 deadline, Mr. Fields explained.

The veterans' agency stresses that if they are not returned, beneficiaries, under the law, will not only lose next year's benefits, they may also be required to refund payments received in 1970.

Mr. Fields urged veterans and dependents in Delaware who need help with annual income questionnaires to contact the nearest VA office.

News from Greenwood Kiwanis Club

The Kiwanis Clubs, meet of the new year, held Jan. 7, was highlighted by a record turnout, 27 in attendance; including visitors from the Seaford club, Dave Webb and Gene Horner; the awarding of attendance pins by attendance and membership chairman, Ebe Reynolds Jr., and the directors' meeting which followed the regular dinner meeting.

Although dinner guests were some greater than expected, there was ample food, prepared and served by our friends from the Tressler Mennonite Church, Mrs. Treva Zook serving as dinner chairman.

Those receiving attendance pins were Stanley Cahall, 24 years; William Fleischauer, 16 years; Laurence Graham, 12 years; John Turner 4 years; president, John Dorofee, Jr., 3 years and Charles Elliott, one year. Congratulations and club approval was awarded these men in their achievements.

In the directors' meeting which followed, president John Dorofee voiced his desire for a progressive club year, including new programs, new members, and a general club revitalization. In the committee reports, one committee chairman reported 75 man hours in labor and $10 in cash provided the Wesleyan Church of Greenwood, by six members of the club, in the church's panelling project; also that the club had purchased an additional walker for the use of those who need such equipment.

Tuesday evening, Jan. 12, president, John Dorofee and Virginia; Nelson Meredith and Minnie; Leon Rust and Betty; Ebe Reynolds, Arthur Tatman, Lawrence Meredith and John Turner joined the Georgetown Club in a ladies night program, honoring the Capital District Governor, Wm. S. Footer Jr., whose home club is Seaford. All reported a very good dinner and a pleasant evening.

Last Thursday evening, the attendance slipped to '8, but all seemed to enjoy the supper prepared for them which included fried chicken, dumplings and cornbread. Mrs. Cora Tennesse was in charge of food preparation.

Without a planned program president John Dorofee suggested a group discussion of club programs and ways to increase our membership, thus booming a more vibrant force in the community, for the betterment of that same community. It was an interesting discussion.

Army Private Norman L. Gearhart, 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald L. Gearhart, 1084-4A Third Ave., Dover, recently completed an eight-week military police course at the U.S. Army Training Center, Ft. Gordon, Ga.

During the course, he was trained in civil and military law, traffic control, patrolling, techniques of quelling riots and disturbances, prisoner-of-war control, communications, care and use of authorized weapons, and unarmored defense methods.

Pvt. Gearhart entered the Army in July 1970 and completed basic training at Ft. Dix, N. J.

He is a 1969 graduate of Misawa (Japan) Dependents High School.

Coast Guard Seaman Apprentice Samuel H. Williams Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel H. Williams of 411 S. Washington St., Milford assisted in the rescue of 23 crewman from the sinking motor vessel Joy Taylor in the South China Sea.

The Joy Taylor, taking on water at 200 gallons an hour reported that her cargo of lube oil drums had shifted causing a 15 degree starboard list. The cargo shift prevented access to the ship's holds and all pumping equipment failed to operate.

Upon receiving the "SOS" the cutter Morgenthau sped to the scene to find the ship near floundering in eight foot seas, high winds and her crew overboard. Three hours later the Joy Taylor capsized and sank.

The cutter Morgenthau is currently serving with the U.S. Seventh Fleet in the Western Pacific.

Health Foods Or Healthy Foods?

Americans have a right to be concerned about their diets. But, buying $750 million worth of health foods per year is not the best way to show this concern.

Relying on "magical" foods or "miracle" supplements is both questionable and expensive, says Miss Marguerite Krackhardt, extension food and nutrition specialist at the University of Delaware. "The vitamins and minerals in health foods are just the basic four food groups—meat, vegetables and fruits, breads and cereals, and milk.

Many times health foods in themselves are not harmful, she adds. In fact, they may be beneficial—if you use them as part of a well-balanced diet. But, spending money on these expensive products too often means you can't afford some of the foods you really need.

Health food faddists are right in one of their claims: many Americans are eating non-nutritious foods. But, blame the family meat planner, not the source of food. How often have you seen grocery carts loaded with sweets, rich desserts, soft drinks, chips and crackers? Foods for good health are available in your grocery store—at prices far below those in health shops. For example, whole grain bread, flour and cereals are in every store; why pay an inflated price at a special store? For that matter, enriched grain products offer equal nutrition. Wheat germ, a highly publicized health supplement, can actually cause digestive upsets if you eat too much of it.

Vitamin supplements are also widely advertised. But nutritionists, doctors and home economists agree that vitamin supplements are not needed except in very special cases, says Miss Krackhardt. A well-balanced diet provides all the protein, vitamins and minerals most people require.

Dosing yourself with non-prescribed vitamin or mineral tablets is expensive, probably unnecessary, and can be harmful if used in excess. Too many nutrients are often just as dangerous to good health as nat enough.

Health food promoters often claim there are poisonous substances in processed foods. Actually, our nation's food supply is guarded by law; inspection procedures insure wholesomeness. When a food or an additive becomes suspect, it's banned, Miss Krackhardt points out.

Remember, most people who promote special foods have an ulterior motive—they want to sell you something. Sometimes it's a book; other times it's a product, pill or supplement—or a magic diet that will solve all your problems. Always it's expensive.

Be suspicious of anyone who wants money in exchange for the "secrets of good nutrition," warns Miss Krackhardt. "Good information on nutrition is free, call me at (302) 738-2537. Or write me at Room 125, Agricultural Hall, University of Delaware, Newark, 19711."
