

Citizens Protest at Council Meeting

March came in like a lion, as far as the City Council was concerned, when it heard protests Monday night at the City Hall.

Some 20 residents, some of whom came to protest, while others merely came to seek information.

Several protests were registered on a charge of 50c per week from residents for trash collection. The fee started Monday and will be payable monthly from the householder. Some believed it should be covered by their taxes, while others thought a slight increase in taxes should have been better.

The charge was sparked by the city's economic condition. It was in the red $10,000 last year and the municipality is still in debt.

The Council took several remedial measures Monday night, including passing a motion to increase the city's debt limit from $50,000 to $75,000. This will require an act of the legislature.

It also tabled the recommendation of Chief of Police Robert Martin on the hiring of a patrolman, for the time being, because of the economic situation.

One reason advanced for the city's situation is the delay in receiving federal funds for payment on sewer bonds. These have been held up because "of a few minor things at the sewage disposal plant," according to the city's consulting engineer, Dudley Willis. One requested item is the covering of the site of the former dump.

Mrs. Franklin Swain, Harrington Avenue, came to protest the trash collection fee and stayed to comment on the condition of nearby lots. One objection was a pile of iron work, etc. on a lot on the avenue belonging to Contractor Joseph T. Richardson. It was revealed he had ordered a prefabricated building to house the material elsewhere. City Manager, Kathryn Derrickson said Tuesday morning she had seen the contractor and he was to get in touch with city hall, when the building arrives, to see its placement on Third Street did not violate property line requirements.

Senior Center News

Busy hands? Yes, and busy feet as the month of March will prove to be a very busy month for the members of the Center. First, this is the Easter Seal month. Again this year the Center is sponsoring the drive with two of its members, Pearl Derrickson and Bessie Jester, acting as co-chairmen. Last week they were accompanied by three of their solicitors, Mrs. Edgar Graef, Gladys Hill and Jeanie Morris, to the Kent County "kick-off" meeting which was held in Dover. Governor and Mrs. Peterson attended to lend their support to a very worthy cause, that of aiding crippled children and adults of Delaware. "Of Delaware" are the important words as 90 cents of each dollar collected will be used to help our friends and neighbors in our state.

Second, on Monday, March 8, a birthday party will be held for members of the Center who will begin another year on one of the days of this month. Those to be honored are Marion Evans, Helen Graisberg, Bessie Jester, Matilda Kotlaba, Kathryn Masten and Mildred Vincent. The entertainment will begin at 1:30 p.m., with Mrs. Angela Johnston and Mrs. Catherine Errigo as co-hostesses.

Third, at present count 15 members of the Senior Center plan to attend the Community White House Conference on Aging to be held on the Delaware State College campus at 1 p.m., on Tuesday, March 16. Transportation will be provided for those members interested in attending.

Fourth, on Saturday, March 20, the Dover Lion's Club will hold its annual Senior Citizen's social at the Capital Grange building at 1 p.m. There will be entertainment, music, prizes and refreshments. Any and all senior citizens are invited to attend. How is that for a full schedule? The hot lunch program, bingo, and card party proved very popular.

The lunch for Thursday, March 4, will have fresh rock fish as the main dish. Ceramics are still very much part of the weekly program. Consult your program; there is something for everyone. Make your choice, and pay the Center a visit.

It authorized City Manager Kathryn Derrickson to get an appraisal on 55 acres of the Hammond land, on Delaware 14, and to secure estimated sale prices from three developers of mobile home lands, namely Corder Brothers, Milford, Anderson-Stokes, Rehoboth and Frank Robino, Dover.

The city manager was also authorized to get an appraisal on the former city dump, northwest of town. This includes some 29 acres, according to Mayor Burton E. Satterfield.

In other business, the Council:

Approved purchase of insecticide and weedkiller.

Cost would be a little more than $700 and the city has six months in which to pay. The device would be used throughout the community, but particularly at the lagoons at the sewage disposal plant where midges have been a problem. The city hopes to combat the pestiferous insects before they get a head start.

Zimmerman In Charge of Jefferson - Jackson Day Banquet

In recognition of the increasing political awareness of young citizens, the Jefferson - Jackson Day banquet committee has voted to make tickets to the March 31 affair available to anyone under 21 for $10 each, it was announced by Jacob W. Zimmerman, chairman of the event.

Regular price of tickets will be $35 for the fund-raising event at which the principal speaker will be Senator Edmond S. Muskie of Maine.

The dinner, and a cocktail party for those 21 or older, will be held in the Wilmington Armory.

Zimmerman said the $10 tickets will be sold only to those eligible to vote for federal offices in 1972 because of the recent act of Congress franchising citizens 18, 19 and 20 years of age, but also to those even younger.

"This generation coming of age has demonstrated deep political maturity," Zimmerman commented, "and we in the Democratic party want them to have every opportunity to meet and hear those in positions of national leadership. Since Senator Muskie could very well be the Democratic party's presidential candidate in 1972, we thought this was an opportunity to make every effort to give our younger people accessibility to his Delaware visit."

Zimmerman said the $10 tickets will be sold only to individuals and not in blocks. He said the number sold will have to be commensurate to the seating capacity of the Armory and the demand for the regular $35 tickets, but that the arrangements committee is confident it can accommodate everyone.

Chosen Friends Lodge News

Grand Master Thomas L. Kates with seven members of his staff made his official visit to Chosen Friends Lodge No. 35 here in Harrington, Thursday evening, Feb. 18. Also there were three from Ocean Wave Lodge No. 43, Ocean City, Md., and two from the Felton Lodge, with 18 including our own we had a very good meeting.

The grand master gave one of the finest talks we have ever received in our hall in a long time. He mentioned that all the lodges in his jurisdiction are showing increases with new members.

He said one of the lodges he knew of had taken in members, one was a young man and the other was older, and the young man was a distant relative of the man that founded Odd Fellowship in Baltimore over a 100 years ago, brother Thomas L. Wildey, the founder.

He also stated he thought every lodge would be bettering itself it would have some kind of program which many have already started.

He brought with him an antique door knocker he had found somewhere in an antique store, which was made of brass in the shape of three links which his grand warden used in entering the lodge.

This he stated was of great value to him and something that would remain in his mind the rest of his life for its significance toward Odd Fellowship.

The Odd Fellows Lodge is one of the oldest lodges that is still operating in the United States and one of the lodges that is still maintaining homes for the aged members.

Refreshments of homemade cake and Mrs. Smith pies and coffee were served. Our meetings nights are now the first and third Thursday evenings at 7:30. All Odd Fellows are urged to attend and visiting Odd Fellows are welcome.

Chesapeake Utilities Notes Dividends

The board of directors of Chesapeake Utilities Corporation has declared a regular quarterly dividend of 20 cents per share on each share of common stock of this corporation, payable April 5, 1971, to stockholders of record at the close of business March 15, 1971.

E. C. Burton, of Salisbury, Md., executive vice president of Chesapeake Utilities Corporation and its subsidiary, Eastern Shore Natural Gas Company, has retired after nearly 45 years of service in the gas industry. Burton began his career in Cambridge, Md., in the gas department of the Eastern Shore Public Service Company, later adding the gas company in Dover, also operated by Eastern Shore Public Service, to his responsibilities.

Subsequently, he became vice president of the Hagerstown Gas Company, and the Dover Gas Light Company, and when Citizens Gas Company, Salisbury, Md., and Chesapeake Utilities was formed, he became vice president of Chesapeake. During the late 1950's Eastern Shore Natural Gas Company, a wholly owned subsidiary of Chesapeake was formed to supply natural gas to the lower Delmarva Peninsula, with Burton eventually becoming executive vice president and director of Chesapeake Utilities Corporation and its subsidiary, Eastern Shore Natural Gas Company.

Burton, while retiring as an active employee of both companies, will continue to serve as director and consultant.

E. C. Burton, Jr., formerly vice president of both companies succeeds his father as executive vice president. Burton began his career as manager of the Cambridge Gas Company in 1949 moving to Chesapeake Utilities Corporation as operations manager in 1953, subsequently holding the offices of vice president and treasurer.

Charles C. Harrison, IV, of Philadelphia, vice president of both companies, has been elected to the additional office of treasurer.

THE COUNTY AND DOVER SHOULD PURSUE THE EVEN TENOR OF THEIR WAYS

Bad oil—The Dover City Council has passed a resolution asking establishment of a local service function budget by the county. This is a euphemistic way of saying Dover wants the Kent County Levy Court to reduce county taxes for county services the incorporated communities already have.

City Manager Francis P. Neylan says this would drop the city residents' county taxes from 44 cents per $100 assessed valuation to 25 cents.

On the other hand, the noncity county resident might have to have his taxes raised from 44 cents to about 53 cents. The current Kent tax rate ceiling set by the state legislature is 50 cents.

Rest assured, the farmer and persons in unincorporated communities are not going to stand for the Dover request, nor should they.

More bad oil—Joshua Twilley, president of the Kent County Levy Court, has been putting out a feeler on a joint administration building for the county and the City of Dover. The capital city, however, has been less than enthusiastic on the matter. Dover and the county have enough problems as it is without making things complicated.

Good oil—The Kent County Levy has established the first county employees' pension trust fund in the state. It will be funded with $50,000 from the county's other invested money. The fund, according to Twilley, would secure retiring employees' pensions and Kent is the first of three counties to establish such a fund. New Castle County, Sussex County and the city of Wilmington pay their employe pensions out of the general fund.

Good oil—The Levy Court also appropriated $6000 to the Kent County chapter of Geriatric Services of Delaware, Inc. Bad oil—It also agreed to study additional request for a yearly grant of $15,000. The county has been bailed out of the welfare business by the state; why get back into it? The $6000 we can see but not the $15,000 which will be merely priming the pump for other quasi-welfare requests.

FENCE TALK

Spring is just around the corner, and it will soon be crop time again. Of course, this means pesticide spraying will begin.

As most of you know and realize, we will not be able to use some chemicals that we have used previously, primarily the insecticide.

Some of substitutes are fairly effective, but a much better job of spraying will have to be done. This may entail better plant coverage with your sprays, and in some cases, time intervals between spraying will have to be shortened for effective insect control.

Always keep in mind while handling pesticide chemicals that many of them are as deadly toward the person using them if misused as they are against the pest they were originally designed to kill.

While speaking of pesticide safety, there is a blood test that is now available which indicates your tolerance and exposure rate to the deadly phosphate and carbamate insecticides. The test is called choline esterase inhibition and can be performed at most hospitals. It only takes a few minutes and is performed at a very nominal fee.

The best way this test can be used is to have your blood tested before the spraying season, and this will tell you your tolerance. You should then be tested once or twice during the spraying season, which will tell of you are in danger or over exposure to the chemical.

This seems like a lot of trouble, but it is your life, or maybe the lives of your farm workers, that we are concerned with.

I will be sending more descriptive and detailed information to you in a few weeks. In the meantime, if you want more information, call the Kent County Extension Office at 736-1448.

For home gardeners, we now have an ample supply of the Delaware Garden Calendar. This booklet takes you step by step through the entire growing season.

It covers time of planting for flowers, vegetables, and ornamentals; time for insect and disease spraying; fertilizer application; crop varieties for the garden; and ornamentals round the home. This bulletin also gives excellent coverage for establishing and maintaining your lawn. For your free booklet, call your nearest County Extension Office.

Farmers and other interested persons do not want to forget our meeting on grain futures on March 4, at the W. T. Chipman School in Harrington. The session starts at 7:30 p.m., and refreshments follow the meeting at 9:00 p.m. Come on out and learn what you have always wanted to know about grain futures. This will be a very informal meeting and all questions and problems will be covered and discussed at this meeting.

W. T. McAllister, extension agricultural economist at the University of Delaware, says that farmers are discovering they can increase labor efficiency with incentive programs or bonus plans.

The most difficult problem of establishing an incentive program is finding a standard on which to base bonus payments. The standards should be above current production levels, but not be out of reach.

Incentive programs based on added output are usually better than those based on an increased net income.

Bonus payments should be in cash rather than in the form of farm animals or extra vacation, and should remain separate from the usual wages. Farm help usually like incentive payments spread throughout the year rather than waiting until the end of the year or harvest time to give one large bonus.

Incentive payments aren't the answer to all farm labor problems. The effective incentive program must be preceded by good labor relationship, equitable basic wages, adequate privileges and sound buildings and equipment for workers.

Seven new flavors for butter have been introduced by a Wisconsin creamery. Chocolate, garlic, chive, cinnamon, maple, orange, and honey flavors have been incorporated with butter advertised as convenience items and priced slightly higher than butter, itself.

The garlic and chive flavors are for cooking purposes while chocolate, cinnamon, maple, orange and honey flavors are used for toast, crackers, and hors d'oeuvres.

Wintertime conditions can keep livestock from taking in enough water to maintain top gains of meat and high milk production. A farmer interested in top production should supply fresh, slightly-warm water for the animals, and it must be there when they want it.

Pre-fabricated stock fountains are available or watering equipment can be constructed of steel, wood or concrete. A heating device to maintain water temperature at forty degrees should prevent winter freeze-ups and cause animals to drink more. Experience and research show that each watering space or bowl for cattle and hogs should have a pumping capacity to furnish at least two gallons per minute, and you should furnish a watering space for each twenty animals.

List of 1971 Vegetable Varieties Available

When the first tomato starts to ripen in your garden and your mouth's watering in anticipation, it's discouraging to see the plants turn yellow and die.

Many Delaware home gardeners have this experience each year, according to Robert F. Stevens, extension horticulturist at the University of Delaware. Tomato wilt disease, like certain other diseases of home-grown vegetables, cannot be cured once it has attacked the plant. And it can remain in the soil for years.

One solution — select a variety that's resistant to this disease, says Stevens. There are many vegetable varieties that are particularly well-suited to Delaware growing conditions, he explains, and many are resistant to wilt and other plant diseases. Now is a good time to plan your garden and make your vegetable selections.

A list of "1971" Vegetables Varieties for Delaware Home Gardens" is available from the Delaware Extension Service. Copies of the pamphlet may be obtained by writing the Mailing Room, Agricultural Hall, University of Delaware, Newark 19711.

It Seems To Me

Janet Reed

Making a pants suit for spring? They're popular as ever and easy to make if you don't have too many fitting problems.

Before you invest time and money with making a pants suit, go to a store where you can try on several for ideas of the most becoming styles and lengths. There is a becoming style for everyone, but you may not find it on your first try, says Miss Janet Reed, extension clothing and textiles specialist at the University of Delaware.

The two piece suit is becoming to more figures than the one piece jump suit, and easier to fit. The jump suit is best on the slender, well-proportioned figure.

When the pants and tunic are of different colors or fabrics, it tends to shorten the figure. Belts, too, create another horizontal line which can shorten. A becoming tunic length will vary with each person's figure proportions. As you try on the pants suit, pin up the tunic hem an inch or two to visualize the proportion. If you usually have to shorten the skirt, you will probably need to shorten the tunic the same amount for better proportions.

A rounded abdomen or hip-line can be disguised if you avoid belts and if the tunic is the correct length. Avoid a tunic that is full or flared at the bottom if you are trying to minimize a hipline.

Look for a becoming neckline. The wide V-shape may need a softening scarf or you can vary the shape of your pattern. The turtle neck is best on a long slender neck. Fabrics too, will affect the becomingness. A soft, slinky knit will cling to your figure and show every curve. A heavy, bulky fabric can appear to add weight. The medium-weight polyester bulky fabric can appear to add weight. The medium-weight polyester doubleknits are suitable for most figures, comfortable and easy to care for.

Straight pants should cover the ankle and hit the top of the shoe in back. The fuller pants should end where the heel points the shoe in back.

Once you have found a style that looks great on you, make careful note of lengths, fabrics and fashion details. You'll probably be able to find a similar style pattern, or one you can adapt, and you're on your way to a new spring outfit. You may not be able to find all the features you want in ready-to-wear, but you can have what you want when you make your own.

Choose your accessories with care to complete the look you are trying to achieve. Shoes should have rounded toes and a two-inch heel. A dressier shoe is worn with an evening pants suit.

Weed Control In Corn And Soybeans

Sound weed control measures can mean extra profits for corn and soybean growers. Competition from weeds can seriously reduce crop yields, according to E. M. Rahn, professor of plant science at the University of Delaware.

In field trials last year at the University's Georgetown Substation, selective herbicides were tested in corn and soybeans to control certain problem weeds such as nutgrass, jimsonweed, ragweed, morning glory and velvetleaf.

Rahn says the tests showed that Lasso pre-plant incorporated at the rate of two pounds per acre provided good control of nutgrass in corn. But Atrax pre-plant incorporated at five pounds per acre; Atrax applied in a combination treatment with Sutan or Lasso pre-plant incorporated, or Atrax with nonphytotoxic oil in a post-emergence treatment suppressed the nutgrass long enough so that maximum yields were obtained, he adds.

"It appears that even with a severe nutgrass infestation, corn that is well fertilized can compete and produce good yields if nutgrass is suppressed long enough to let the corn get a head-start so it can shade the weeds," explain Rahn. Studies also reveal that the use of anhydrous ammonia nitrogen to kill overwintering nutgrass tubers is not effective — even when applied at rates up to 400 pounds per acre. Furthermore, when herbicides were not used, applications of nitrogen at the high rate, either as anhydrous ammonia or ammonium nitrate, did not overcome the 2 percent reduction in corn yields due to nutgrass competition.

In soybean, Rahn found the herbicide combination of Treflan plus 2,4-DB to be the most effective control measure on jimsonweed, ragweed, morning glory and velvetleaf. The Treflan was pre-plant incorporated at .75 pounds per acre, and the 2,4-DB was applied at 0.4 pounds per acre. The 2,4-DB was used in a directed spray when the soybeans were 10 inches high so that only the lower third of the plants were covered.

Plowing Depth And Speed Important To Good Performance

With a new crop season fast approaching, farmers are reminded they can get the maximum performance with their equipment by paying attention to small details. Each machine has its own set of management requirements points out Thomas H. Williams, extension agricultural engineer at the University of Delaware.

For example, a 12-inch bottom moldboard plow is designed to plow at a different depth than a 16-inch bottom moldboard plow, he explains. The 12-inch bottom plow works best at a plowing depth of about six inches, while a 16-inch bottom plow is designed for a plowing depth of about nine inches.

By operating the 12-inch bottom plow at a nine-inch plowing depth, the furrow slice will get pinched in the turning process. When the furrow slice is pinched, the soil will not turn over properly and may pulverize. Pinching will also place a greater load on both the plow and tractor.

If you use a 16-inch bottom plow at a six inch plowing depth, you will get a peeling effect. This peeling will leave the soil slice as a continuous unpulverized ribbon with large air pockets under it.

Williams says a narrow-width bottom plow, operated at the recommended depth, will turn dry, heavier clay soils more smoothly than the big bottom plows. The large bottom plows will cover surface material better. Optimum plowing depth for most moldboard bottoms is 55 percent of the width of the bottom.

Plowing speed is also important for good performance, says Williams. Plow bottoms are designed for speeds of three to six miles per hour.

Operating at speeds below what the bottom was designed for will result in poorly turned furrows with reduced coverage and pulverization. Higher speeds waste power besides creating poor coverage and pulverization.

According to Williams, when you double the speed of turning a furrow slice, the power required to do the job is tripled. So if you plow an acre at three mile per hour with a plow attached to a 30 horsepower tractor in one hour and you want to plow the same acre at six miles per hour with the same plow, it will require a 47 horsepower tractor to do the job.

Practices That May Cut Risk Of Corn Blight Damage

Southern corn leaf blight, we feel will be present again in 1971 to what degree of infection and injury we cannot predict. Corn with (N) Cytoplasm is tolerant to Race T or Yellow Blight, while corn with (T) Cytoplasm is susceptible to both diseases. There definitely will only be enough (N) corn to plant a fraction of the corn acreage in the United States, with the deep South absorbing the majority of the (N) corn. In a severe blight infection, producers could expect at least half a crop with a 50-50 blend of (N) and (T) seed blended together. A less severe infection could mean uneven maturity in the crop causing harvest loss. (T) Cytoplasm seed, although it is susceptible to Race T disease, has the advantage of all plants being ready to harvest at the same time.

Based on seed supplies available, you will plant all three kinds (N) (B) (T). So we suggest planting (N) seed on ground that has been in corn for several years, (T) seed on ground that was in some other crop last year, and (B) corn on the balance of your acreage. This method helps fight yellow leaf blight by keeping (T) Cytoplasm seed away from possibly infected fields, also this is not the year for high population. By reducing the plant population, Race T will not be abetted by plant stress. Early planting should help reduce damage from Race

T, drought, insects, or any other plant disease.

On tillage practices, stay away from minimum tillage this year and plough your trash under early. Keep a good balanced plant food program, and if you cannot find an adapted (N) variety of seed corn, then plant Clark SX 145, SX 707, or DX 431 early in April. It has proven vigor and ability to come through on cold ground. Our corn is only in the (T) form, but we know if you have to plant a (T) corn, ours is the best you can use. Our seed has been cold-tested as well as Florida-tes.ed.

According to the USDA, 22% of the Hybrid Seed Corn usable for planting this year is (N), 38% is blended and 40% is in the (T) form. We feel this is a very accurate estimate after talking with many seed producers throughout the Mid-west.

Switching to soybeans? At the present time it looks as if certified soybean seed is going to be in very short supply. Due to the unfavorable harvesting condition this fall, the majority of the soybean seed is very much below the minimum germination standards for certified seed, not only in our company, but many others we have talked to. So the time for decision is now. Protect yourself by buying Clark's Hybrid Seed Corn and Soybean Seed now. Contact your local dealers for prices, Clark Seed Co., Inc., Kenton, Delaware

Delaware Food Market Report

by Anne Holberton

Bacon goes with eggs, crumbles, in salads, tops the casseroles, makes tasty sandwich fillings, and even wraps the frankfurters — just to mention a few things that bacon can do. This strip of meat and fat has great popularity here in America.

Good flavor, rather than outstanding nutritional value, is bacon's chief contribution to good meals. It does provide a limited amount of protein and some vitamins, but flavor is its point for popularity.

If your family is even close to being typical, you can expect each member to eat 152 slices of bacon this year. If you allow 22 slices per pound which is a good average, this means each person will eat nearly 7 pounds of bacon during 1971. No wonder you seem to have bacon on your shopping list.

Now that you have a good idea how much bacon you will need, are you tempted to buy the whole supply and freeze it when bacon is on sale? It isn't a good idea at all, because bacon changes quality rather quickly when frozen. This is due to the high fat content. It's really best to buy enough bacon for only a week or ten days then buy more as you need it.

When buying bacon it's wise to know what the words describing it mean. Generally, packers provide three or four selection of sliced bacon. The top grade or selection contains uniform slices which have the best ration of fat to lean. When the package is open, the bacon slices look exactly alike. Bacon slices from the lower selections have the same factor as the first, but the slices are less uniform in size. They may also be less tender or have a coarser texture.

Ends and pieces are just what you would expect—broken slices. They have the same flavor as the top selections and are ideal for crumbling in scrambled eggs, making peanut butter and bacon sandwiches, using in casseroles and salads.

How many slices of bacon you get to the pound depends on whether it is cut thin, regular or thick. There are up to 36 slices per pound when bacon is cut thin; 22 slices per pound for regular sliced bacon, and up to 18 slices per pound when bacon is sliced thick.

When cooking bacon regardless of whether it's pan broiled, oven broiled or oven baked; use low to moderate temperatures — never high temperatures. When oven baking (an excellent way to cook a large amount of bacon) use a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit); bacon requires no turning and little attention until nearly done. If you do not use a rack in your pan, then pour off the fat twice during cooking. To oven broil, lay slices on broiler rack and adjust rack to about 3 inches below source of heat. Broil slowly and turn once or twice during broiling. Pan broiled bacon requires turning also. For best results put slices of bacon in a cold skillet, cook over low heat and turn two or three times so bacon broils evenly. Drain off fat when about half done. Regardless of how you cook bacon, remember slow cooking always gives the best flavor.

Simple Home Repairs

Long, cold winters and stormy springs often cause sticking windows and squeaky hinges. "Why not prevent large repair bills by doing the job yourself?" asks Miss Coral K. Morris, extension home management specialist at the University of Delaware.

A squeaky door probably means a lubrication job. For squeaky hinges, simply a drop of oil. Rub the oil over the inside of the hinge and wipe off any excess. Use powdered graphite if the hinge pin cannot be removed. Hinged doors that refuse to close are another problem, weather stripping is one possible cause. Carefully straighten bent weather stripping with small nose pliers and renail the strip in place if it's loose.

Of course, doors may also stick because they're sagging at the hinges or swelling from moisture, says Miss Morris. Simple tighten the hinge screw or plug the old screw hole and drill new ones. But if the screws are worn, replace them with ones a half inch longer and one size larger.

Sliding doors that stick will need a drop of oil on the bearings or a thin film of petroleum jelly on the metal track. However, lubrication will not help if the sticking is due to warping or if the track and doors are out of line.

Sticking windows may also need some lubrication. Open the window and rub paraffin or soap on the side grooves where the window slides. If your problem is caused by excess paint, simply scrape or sandpaper the problem areas. Swelling due to moisture, however, requires refitting the window by a carpenter.

Drawers that swell with dampness are easier to repair, says Miss Morris. Sand or plane the binding edges, depending on the amount of wood to be smoothed down. After the drawer has been smoothed, use paraffin, paste wax or soap on the runners. Lubrication may also help drawers that stick only slightly.

If drawers stick because the joints are loose, reinforce the drawer by regluing. Or, use small metal corner plates to add strength.

If the bottom of the drawer has slipped from the groove, fit the drawer back in place and secure it with small brads.

Door locks often need simple repairs, too, explains Miss Morris. If a lock is hard to turn, puff powered graphite into the lock and around the latch. Don't use oil because dust will then stick to the lock and make it difficult to clean. Remember, taking care of little repairs yourself can save large bills from a serviceman.

Northeast Science And Education Workshop

Those who wish to express their views on the future direction and emphasis of the research and extension programs of the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the Land-Grant Colleges and Universities should plan to attend the Northeast Science and Education Regional workshop, March 9-10.

Organized by the USDA and the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges in cooperation with the National Agricultural Research Advisory Committee, the workshop will be held at the Hotel Syracuse Downtown, 500 South Warren Street, Syracuse, New York.

The workshop is open to all persons or organizations having an interest in agribusiness research and education programs. Key decision makers from the USDA and the universities will be present to hear the ideas and suggestions presented by the public sector.

Registration will take place on the 10th floor of the Hotel Syracuse downtown starting at 9 a.m., March 9. At 11 a.m., a general session will be held to set forth the purpose and format of the workshop and to provide participants some insight into agricultural and policy opportunities with emphasis on the Northeast region.

Tuesday afternoon, the workshop will be divided into 10 section work groups to consider the opportunities, problems and needs in the following general areas: dairy, poultry, fruits, vegetables including potatoes; ornamental horticulture, human resources including food and nutrition, environmental quality, natural resources including forestry, marketing, and agricultural financing. Program advisors, appointed by the Secretary of Agriculture, will conduct the section meetings, analyze the information presented and develop recommendations for the future direction and emphasis of research and extension programs. Their recommendations will be presented in a general session on Wednesday.

Program advisors from Delaware include Dr. John C. Hammond, Swift and Company, Bridgeville; Richard W. Harris, Jr., Barnyard Gardens, Inc., Hockessin; Robert F. Rider, O. A. Newton & Son Company, Bridgeville; W. T. McAllister, farm management specialist, University of Delaware, and Dr. William J. Benton, chairman of the department of animal science and agricultural biochemistry University of Delaware.

The workshop offers individuals or organizations an opportunity to present problems for discussion and to suggest areas where research and extension programs can help to overcome problems.
