INDUSTRY'S NEGATIVE APPROACH TO HARRINGTON IS STILL ENCOURAGING

It is an ill wind that blows no good: another way of saying Harrington's lack of success in attracting two large industries may not be all bad.

We dislike telling of the failure of the community to secure these industries, but it may be that publication may cause some individuals and organizations to increase their efforts to make the community more attractive.

A California pharmaceutical company was interested in the Greenway property on U.S. 13 and was not averse to the price. The State Development Department, now a division of Community Affairs and Economic Development, had worked with Mayor Burton E. Satterfield and a company representative on the site which, so it was said pleased the company.

But these things take time. At a meeting of the City Council, the mayor said he had received a phone call from the company the same evening, saying its plans of building a factory had been squashed by the stockholders. The mayor said the company would have employed 2000 persons.

Miller Brewing Company, now locating near Newark, looked at the Trane Company property on U.S. 13 south. One prominent citizen said the tract was rejected because Miller did not believe it could find 600 workers in this area. Another prominent citizen said this locality was rejected because Miller want- Dennis O. Pase ed to get closer to the New York and Washington, D.C. traffic.

APRIL SHOWERS

April washed the world last night, And hung it out to dry . . . A drowzy, sun now starts to climb The stairway to the sky.

Not only can the world be cleansed, And dressed in bright array, But April rains refresh the soul. And wash our cares away.
